Last Tuesday night, April 23rd, a few of us met and organized Seagrove Methodist Protestant church, with about 20 members, and elected the following officers: Trustees, H. D. Smith, James Walker and L. A. King; class leaders, Mrs. D. J. Johnson, Mrs. James Walker and Mrs. Nettie Allen; steward, Noah Williams.

We are hoping much good will be accomplished by this organization and we are hoping to be able in the near future to erect a new building. We are few in number and that seems an almost impossible undertaking, but we believe there will be a way.

Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, was with us last Sunday and made a good talk, but owing to the rain there were only a very few present.

We are having a good Sunday school with Mr. C. E. Stuart as superintendent. He is faithful and efficient and presents something new almost every Sunday in the way of black-board exercise. This interests the children very much.

We have choir practice two nights each week under the splendid management of H. D. Smith.

We are planning to organize a Ladies' Aid Society in the near future.

Pray for us that we may succeed and much good be accomplished.

MRS. NOAH WILLIAMS.

Worthville, Randleman Charge.—Our revival began April 14th, ending April 24th. We had a great meeting, having 32 conversions, with 16 joining the church. Rev. J. D. Williams, of Greensboro, assisted our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. Brother Williams gave us good sermons from first to last, and we all appreciate the good work he did here.

Our prayer meeting will start again next Thursday night, which has been closed since the flu epidemic.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Brother Arthur Ferree.

Our pastor, Brother T. A. Williams, is doing good work here and we all appreciate it.

On the second Sunday of May our church will observe Mother's Day and Home-Coming Day. There will be an all-day service, with dinner served on the grounds. President S. W. Taylor will preach that day. We want everybody to come that can.

Mrs. L. P. Foust, who has been in failing health, is confined to her bed at this time.

Mr. Reuben Giles, who has been confined to his bed, is able to be out now.

MRS. LEONARD WARD, Reporter.

Moriah.—Our Sunday school attendance has been a little below normal for the last month, but we are getting some contests started among the classes and hope soon to be going strong. The young ladies' Bible class painted their class room last week and the young men are working on theirs this week. While the paint brush is in motion we hope to get all our class rooms done over.

A lot of work has been done on the church grounds this spring. We are very proud of our nice, green lawn and shrubbery, some of which is already blooming.

The C. E. Society gave a sock party on last Thursday evening. Each person was asked to multiply their size by two and give toward helping pay the expenses of one of our young people so that they might take a leader's training course at High Point this summer. We made about $7.

Miss Madge Smith, of High Point, recently presented the church with 100 new Hymnals. There was nothing at this time that we needed so much as new hymn books, and we are very grateful to Miss Smith.

Our pastor, Rev. H. C. Carmichael, has been seriously ill for the past week, but we are glad to report that he seems a little better.

Mrs. L. Lewis and Mrs. Tom Curtis have been ill now for some time. We trust that our Heavenly Father may comfort them and that they may all soon be back in their places at the church.

Miss Maude Curtis was married recently to Mr. Glenn Whitmore, of Greensboro. We wish these young people much happiness and a long and prosperous married life.

High Point.—Last Sunday was a full day for the First church. Beginning with Sunday school, then the Junior church services at 11 o'clock, with Rev. E. L. Ballard leading, the adult congregation worshipped in the auditorium at the usual hour. Mr. Blake Harrison, lately of Littleton, N. C., but now of High Point, sang a beautiful solo in his unusually sweet tenor voice. Rev. R. I. Farmer brought the message on the subject, "The Gift of Substance," from the text in I Chronicles 29:14: "But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willing after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee." This passage was the statement of David. Religion is to be the mightiest force in the rebuilding of man. The true test of religion is its fruitfulness. The kingdom of God is not one of aesthetic enjoyment, but of work. There is something practical and productive for each of us to do. One of our own periodicals contains in a recent issue the statement that the Jews give the largest amount per capita for philanthropic purposes—$7,000,000 last year, or $50 per capita. So often a way is opened by which we are enabled to pay our tithes when we least expect it. Dean Charles R. Brown, of Yale University, is fond of telling the story when, early in his ministry, he was trying to build a new church, and he pledged $100 to the fund, when he had not a dollar for the purpose. An invitation came from a prominent high school to deliver the commencement address, for which he was paid the sum of $100, thus enabling him to pay his pledge. We must not sit in ease, but must work as laborers with God. There are some things to do besides pray. We cannot withdraw into our shell, and pray the Lord to take care of the world. "All ye are brethren," and we are related to the whole world. We do not ride in ox-carts or read the Bible by tallow candles as our forefathers did. There is a new day of new wealth, and we must consecrate it to the glory of God. Dr. Emerson Fosdick says that the American people are riding for a fall, and our wealth is more dangerous than the poverty of Europe. The new education is a challenge to the Christ-life. We need a new consecration to go out and do the work of evangelizing the world. This Methodist Protestant church needs to be about our Father's business and to go forth in His might, for we are bought with a price, the blood of Christ.

At 2 o'clock p. m. a mass meeting, which was called by President S. W. Taylor, was held in First church, when addresses on the subject of Evangelism were delivered by Dr. John W. Moore, pastor of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, and Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington.

At the evening service the high school glee club sang very beautifully, "Softly Now the Light of Day," and made a good impression on the audience. Rev. Mr. Farmer brought another powerful and eloquent message on the subject, "Bought With a Price."

The board of stewards will be hosts at a complimentary dinner on this (Tuesday) evening. There will be music, speeches, and an important matter will be discussed.

Immediately following the mid-week prayer service Wednesday the second quarterly conference will convene. Written reports from boards, auxiliaries, and societies are expected, and nominations for delegate to Annual Conference will be made.

A cantata, "The Morning Star of the Dark Continent," will be given next Sunday evening by the Junior church chorus.

A concert for the benefit of the Woman's Auxiliary is being prepared by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, the Choral Club and Orchestra of the college, assisted by other soloists. This concert is dated for Tuesday, May 7th, and the tickets will be sold for your own price.

Communion services will be celebrated next Sunday morning, May 5, when the Junior church will unite with the adult congregation in this solemn service.

A delightful recital by piano and voice pupils of Prof. Ernest B. Stimson was given in Roberts hall last Thursday evening. These pupils acquitted themselves in a charming manner, and with great credit to their excellent teacher. The large audience was highly pleased with this beautiful concert.

In connection with May-day festivities next Saturday morning, a marker in memory of Jamestown Female College will be unveiled. This college was the property of the N. C. Conference, and Mr. John S. Ray was the first president, who was succeeded by Mr. George W. Hege, who after the first which destroyed the building, went to Yadkin College, where he taught for several years.

Earl Teague, of Durham, spent last Sunday with his brother, Lester B. Teague.

We were pleased to see Mrs. P. T. Crawford and son, R. Lynn Trout, in the city for a few days last week.

President S. W. Taylor worshipped with us last Sunday morning.

Harmony, Yarbrough's Charge.—The Harmony W. F. M. S. met Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. H. Balentine, Jr. An interesting program was rendered on the subject, "Stewardship." After the program, refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its regular meeting Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. There was a good attendance considering the bad weather. An interesting program was rendered.

Our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, filed his regular appointments Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. He delivered two very good sermons. The text for the morning service was "Be not deceived for God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The subject for the evening service was "The Value of the Soul."

We are very sorry to learn of the sickness of several of our friends in the community. Among these are Mr. Jim Stone and Miss Suddie Medlock. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Harmony May 12, at 3 o'clock. We are planning to have with us President S. W. Taylor. We hope that he will preach for us Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Shiloh C. E. Society, North Davidson Charge.

—The C. E. Society is doing good work. Every one seems to be very much interested. The society held its regular weekly meeting at the home of Mr. Clena Koontz. Mrs. Clena Koontz had charge of the program. The subject was "The Triumphs of the Bible on Mission Fields." This was a very interesting lesson and all that were asked to take part gladly responded. The C. E. Society is going to give a Mother's Day program on May 12. The pageant that we are going to give is entitled "A Mother's Devotion."

The society has adopted a little girl from the Children's Home. We are very proud of little Edith Byrd, our little adopted daughter.

Under the leadership of our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, I feel that our society is going to do a much greater work. On last Sunday night our pastor presented each member of the society with his picture and a very interesting description of what the Bible should mean to us. We were all proud indeed that our pastor was interested enough in us to do this for us.

We ask that you pray for us that we may be so directed by the Holy spirit to do greater work in the service of the Master.

MRS. P. L. KOONTZ, Reporter.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Our fifth anniversary exercises have come and gone. They are now part of the history of Calvary church. And they will long be cherished in the memories of those who were privileged to take part in them.

The anniversary services began on April 25, the date on which the organization was effected five years ago, with a Thanksgiving prayer meeting. There were many expressions of gratitude and thanksgiving for what the church had meant in the lives of the folks who spoke.

On Thursday night we had a "Covered Dish Supper." There were between 150 and 175 present to partake of a bountiful meal and to enjoy the evening. Reports were given by various organizations of the church, and the pastor gave a comparative summary of the growth of the church as recorded in the Conference Journals.

The climax of the week's celebration came with the services on Sunday. Even the rain did not keep us from rejoicing in a great day for our Zion. The Sunday school attendance reached 260, one less than the record. (I am informed that one of the classes in the Hut was not counted, so we really beat the record). It was a case of standing room only for some of the classes.

At the hour of morning worship, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, the first pastor of the church, brought the anniversary sermon. It was a helpful and encouraging message. In spite of the rain the auditorium was filled. The church clerk, Miss Mary C. McCulloch, called the roll of the membership, and 130 responded. All the charter members sat in a body. Little bouquets of white carnations were given to the relatives of the charter members who have fallen on sleep since the church was organized.

In the afternoon we had a Fellowship Service. Rev. J. D. Williams, pastor of West End church, and Rev. Ronald J. Tamblin, pastor of Grace church, brought fraternal greetings from their congregations. A number of the members of their churches were present also. Rev. S. K. Spahr, who was pastor of Grace church when Calvary church was organized, brought the principal address. Rev. J. F. McCulloch gave a short history of the church since its beginning.

The celebration of the day was brought to a close with the evening service at which Rev. S. W. Taylor, the Conference president, preached. This service was also largely attended, and the people were greatly helped by the message.

During the day the choir helped greatly with special selections. I wish here to make my acknowledgements to them for the service they so gladly and freely rendered.

And I do not wish to close this account of the fifth anniversary without expressing thanks to the men and women who gave themselves unstintingly to getting the church building and the church grounds ready for the celebration. They scrubbed, and swept, and polished, and painted until things were spick and span. And others brought flowers in profusion until the auditorium was altogether beautiful.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Glen Raven.—Nearly all of the Sunday school here went to the home of the superintendent, Mr. P. E. Troxler, last Saturday night and enjoyed a sandwich supper and weiner roast.

The Philathea class is planning for a Mother and Daughter banquet to be given Saturday night preceding the third Sunday in May. On the following Sunday Mother's Day will be observed.

We are planning for all-day services the third Sunday in June when our revival begins. This is to be a home-coming day. Former pastors will be invited, and all former members and friends living elsewhere will be urged to attend.

On last Friday night a surprise birthday supper in honor of Mrs. Herbert Thompson was given at her home. There were 31 present. It was an enjoyable occasion.

WM. H. NEESE.

Lexington, State Street.—The revival service which closed a week ago last Friday night was one of the best in every way ever held in Lexington. Dr. Stone's forceful preaching had its influence over the whole town and community. There were a good many conversions; some have not come into the church yet, but we are expecting them. A few joined other churches of the city.

The meeting at South Lexington is going forward in a very encouraging way. Already there have been a large number of converts and much interest is shown at every service. Bro. Garner is doing fine preaching.

No service was held at our church at 11 o'clock or in the evening, that our folks might worship with South Lexington.

Bro. Bethea goes to Caroleen—the first charge he served—tomorrow to assist Bro. Carson in a special meeting. He will be away until the last of next week. Mrs. Bethea will accompany Bro. Bethea.

The Christian Endeavor Society will meet Wednesday night after a two weeks' suspension on account of the revival meeting.

REPORTER.

Liberty Hill Church, Anderson Charge.—We held our Easter service the fifth Sunday night in March. The children did especially well. The offering was not as good as it should have been.

Our pastor was with us yesterday; the congregation was good for such a rainy day; there were 73 present for Sunday school.

The singing at the night service was excellent. Our people seem to enjoy a service of this kind.

Our pastor announced that there would be prayer meeting immediately after Christian Endeavor on the first and third Sunday nights. We haven't had a prayer meeting regularly here for some time. Am glad to see the church take this forward step.

ROMAINE POOLE, Reporter.

Mizpah, Haw River Charge.—Our revival began Easter Monday night and lasted ten days. Rev. N. Brittain, from Greensboro, came at the beginning and did some earnest and faithful preaching throughout the meeting. His sermons have been highly complimented and I'm sure the result will be better church folks. The people of the church and community learned to love him and his wife. We shall be glad to have them with us again. We had a good meeting. There were several reclamations, professions, and three joined the church.

Rev. J. L. Trollinger was with us the third Sunday afternoon and gave us one of his good sermons. His sermon was enjoyed by all.

Friday night, April 26th, the people met at the home of Mrs. F. E. Jones and organized a Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Society. Much interest is being shown and we hope and pray that in the future our society will be able to accomplish great things.

The first Sunday in May will be observed as Mother's Day in our church. Come and be with us in this service. Dinner will be on the grounds—and everybody is invited.

We are glad to report that our Sunday school is increasing and we hope it will continue to do so.

MEETING OF MINISTERS

We are requested by Rev. R. J. Tambllyn to announce a meeting of our ministers in and around Guilford county at High Point College next Monday at 1 p. m. It is to be a fellowship meeting and all are invited and expected to come for a one-o'clock luncheon.

GOOD NEWS

We have our first pledge for the baby cottage at the Children's Home. A friend, who wishes his name withheld, writes that he will give $500 toward such a cottage if we raise the necessary money before building.

The first pledge for the building in which our girls are now housed was a $500 pledge, made by the now sainted Dr. J. R. Reitzel, and the people responded to his challenge until we have what we do at the Children's Home.

One of our greatest needs here now is a baby cottage. Who will be next?

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

THE "PEOPLE" OR THE "EMPEROR"?

The Kellogg treaty to outlaw war still awaits ratification by Japan before it can become effective. All the other 14 nations that helped to make that treaty have ratified it. The delay by Japan has been caused by opposition to the phrase in the treaty, "in the names of their respective peoples." Some Japanese say that this is a slight to the Emperor, who is the real ruler of Japan. However, Japan is strongly in favor of the Kellogg treaty and will probably ratify it eventually without asking for a change in the disputed phrase.—Current Events.

DECIMAL POINT FATAL

Three boys at a London hospital after being treated for ringworm died immediately and under such peculiar circumstances that an investigation was ordered. It was found that a misplaced decimal point in the prescription was the cause. Where it was intended to prescribe .25 of a gram of a drug the prescription showed 2.5—just 10 times as much as was meant. A coroner's jury decided that the boys, ten, seven and five years of age, had died of poison accidentally administered.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Jennings

Funeral services for James Madison Jennings, who died at his home near Muir's Chapel, were conducted from the late residence. Rev. H. L. Powell, pastor of Muir's Chapel, was in charge. Interment was made in Greene Hill cemetery, and members of the J. O. U. A. M. conducted the graveside services.

Mr. Jennings was born September 19, 1854, in Randolph county, and was therefore in his 75th year. He was united in marriage first to Miss Amelia Frances Harpie, who died at the age of 39 years. To this union were born six children. Later, Mr. Jennings married Miss Dora Woodburn, who survives him. To this union one child was born, Mrs. W. Jackson, of Muir's Chapel.

The deceased was a member of the Methodist church, having remained a member of the Bar Falls church since he was 16 years old. He was a consecrated Christian of the best type, a splendid citizen and a neighbor who will be greatly missed.

He leaves 21 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Helms

Mrs. Lula Widenhouse Helms departed from this life February 3, 1929. She was born in Cabarrus county December 26, 1887. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Widenhouse, of Concord.

Surviving are her husband, Rev. L. S. Helms, and four children, L. S., Jr., Paul, Mah and Louise. Also three stepchildren survive. They are: Mrs. Prue Brown, of Condale; Mrs. Taylor Bradley, of Caroleen; and Clifton Helms, of Connelly Springs. She first joined the M. E. Church at Center Grove quite young and remained in that church until February 7, 1920, when she moved her letter with Rev. Helms to the M. P. Church. She was a member of Shady Grove M. P. Church at the time of her death. She was happily united in marriage to Mr. L. S. Helms February 7, 1920.

Her funeral was conducted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the M. P. Conference. She was assisted by Professor Hinshaw, of Connelly Springs, and her body was laid to rest at Shady Grove cemetery to await the day of reunion.

Mrs. Helms was loved by all who knew her. She was a good, faithful wife and mother. She will be greatly missed by the community, church, and more so by her family. Little Louise was only a little over one year old. She will never know a mother's love, but God knows best and will provide for His children.

JUST A FRIEND.

His death angel entered the home of Mrs. A. Shearin and claimed our dear grandfather on April 2, 1929, at the age of 80 years, 1 month, 29 days. He had been in declining health for several years, although bore his suffering patiently. He was on death bed only a short time. He visited his old home place Sunday before he died on Tuesday. When he came back he made the following expression to grandmother: "I shall never see my old home again unless some one takes me there." He said we can't live always and one time is just as good as another. It is hard to give him up, but the Lord knows best. He doeth all things well. We would not call him back if we could from that sweet and happy rest he now is enjoying. During his illness he was constantly calling one of his granddaughters. He had something to tell her, but he never could. He will tell her if she lives a pure life and is prepared to meet him in heaven. His place is vacant, no one can fill it. We miss his sweet and happy face to greet us as we come into his home. On April 14, 1874, he was married to Miss Temperance A. Hawkins. To this union were born seven children. Three preceded him to the grave years ago. The following are living ones: M. W. and Ida Shearin, of Thelma, N. C.; Mrs. J. T. Jenkins, of Littleton, N. C.; Mrs. G. W. Gaither, Rocky Mount, N. C. His wife, one sister, and 22 grandchildren also survive. He was laid to rest in the family burying ground. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Mr. Smith, assisted by his former pastor, Mr. J. B. O'Briant.

Dearest grandfather, we give you up,
Though shed we many a tear;
We little thought when we last met
The parting was so near.
Yet when we think God knows best,
We try our tears to dry,
For we know if we are faithful,
We shall meet him by and by.
He faded as gently as a flower,
Loved ones saw that he must die.
His aching form returns to dust,
But his home is in the sky.
His earthly trials are over,
No more he'll feel a pain;
No more he'll know a sorrow,
But with Jesus he will roam.
One by one we are called away
And our bodies return to clay.
One by one we shall see Jesus
And dwell with him for aye.

A devoted granddaughter,

O. J. S.

Kistler

In the death of Bro. J. J. Kistler, Pleasant Hill Church lost one of its most loyal and devoted members. He was not only devoted to his church but his family as well. Bro. Kistler was a good citizen and was one of the community's best neighbors. He was loved by all who knew him. We, the quarterly conference of Cleveland Circuit, extend to family and friends who mourn his loss our prayers and sympathy. May the great Comforter who is able to console the bereaved. May the living take warning and remember that death is abroad and is calling the children of God home. The conference will miss Bro. Kistler. His place will be vacant, but we realize his passing is his gain. Bro. Kistler had reached a ripe age, he had kept the faith, he had fought a good fight, and had finished his course. He is now gone to receive his crown and reward.

Resolved, that the quarterly conference bow in humble submission to the will of the Father who doeth all things well;

Resolved, that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and a copy be sent to the Cleveland Star for publication, and a copy be entered in the conference minutes. Done in order of conference and signed by same, April 28, 1929.

Parks

Mrs. Pattie Perkins Parks departed this life February 23, 1929, aged 76 years, 5 months and 7 days. While in her teens she gave her heart to God and united with the Eden Methodist Protestant Church. There she remained a faithful and zealous member the remainder of her life. In the truest sense of the word she lived a beautiful Christian life. Sometimes we look about and find it hard to find some one living the kind of a life we think a Christian ought to live. Aunt Pattie lived that kind of a Christian life which confirms the reality of religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. She was a happy Christian even unto old age. She went to church because she loved the services. While in her lifetime she did not travel very far away from the place of her rearing, yet the influence of her noble Christian life has traveled far and wide.

She leaves to mourn her passing a daughter, Mrs. Henry Neal, of Enfield, and a son, Mr. Jesse Parks, who is a guard on the State Prison farm near Halifax, N. C. She had one living sister.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, assisted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery of the church of her choice.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Miss Janie Garrett

Miss Janie Garrett departed from this life April 19, 1929. Miss Garrett would have been 78 years old had she lived until the 17th day of August, 1929. She has been an invalid for 18 years, but has been confined to bed only five months. She was a lovable old lady and had many friends. Two brothers and three sisters survive her.

Miss Garrett had been living with her niece, Mrs. S. O. Gossett, for over three years. Mrs. Gossett was a very dear friend to Aunt, and was grieved very much over her death. Mrs. Gossett and family are due much credit for the splendid care of their aunt.

Sister Garrett was not a member of any church but professed to be a Christian. When it was her pleasure to enjoy health she was a faithful attendant of my church (Yarborough's Chapel). She was a cheerful giver to charitable purposes, and always found time to help the needy and sick.

She will be greatly missed by Mrs. Gossett, family and friends. During my absence from the community Miss Garrett passed away from this life and was buried. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Spear of the M. E. Church.

and on April 9, 1929, while he was plowing in the field, his summons came. February 1, 1881, he was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Hanner, a sister of Brother J. E. Hanner, who with eight children survives: Charles, Vernon, Gurley, Peter, Cecil, Dewey, Mrs. W. M. Smith and Mrs. W. T. Neese. Four brothers and one sister also survive: J. C., W. C., C. O. and N. E. Reynolds and Mrs. Dora Neese.

When a young man Brother Reynolds united with Tabernacle Church and to this church he was loyal until death. He will be missed in the home, in the community and in the church where he worshiped. But we believe that our loss will be his eternal gain. The members of Tabernacle Church are going fast of late. May the Lord help us all to get ready when our time comes.

The writer, assisted by Rev. J. M. Millard, conducted the funeral at Tabernacle Church on Wednesday, April 10, 1929. His body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery. H. L. ISLEY.

Fox

Orlando R. Fox, son of the late T. D. and Patience Allred Fox, was born in Randolph County, N. C., December 1, 1856, and departed this life April 20, 1929. His first marriage was to Miss Mary Josephine Redding, December 24, 1878. His second marriage was to Mrs. Milton Cox in April, 1921. The first marriage was blessed by five children, four of whom survive.

Many years ago he professed saving faith in Jesus Christ and united with the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church where his membership remained until his death. For many years he was a faithful and active steward of the church and for the past several years had been a parsonage trustee. He was regular in attendance at church and in his declining days attended sometimes when it seemed that he was not physically strong enough to justify the effort. He had been in failing health for a year or more but only for a few weeks was he confined to his room. A faithful member of the church and a good citizen has gone.

The funeral service was held at the church on Monday afternoon, April 22, and was attended by a large number of people. The floral offering was immense and in a measure testified to the high esteem in which he was held in the community.

The surviving relatives are his wife and three daughters, Mrs. N. M. Cranford and Mrs. J. T. Pugh, of Asheboro, and Mrs. Millard Allred, of Randleman; one son, Ludolph G. Fox, of Rockingham, N. C., and three grandchildren, Jack, Glenn Fox and Josephine Pugh, all of Asheboro.

TWO CASES OF RESTRICTION

I. Restriction in Diet

Garden and orchard and vineyard combined, With fruits and flowers and leaves intertwined,

Made Adam and Eve a very rich range; They roamed at will and never felt strange.

They ate what they chose and chose what they ate,

Their breakfast and dinner never were late. As happy as birds in ripe cherry tree, They lived as merrily as merry can be.

One day, out walking, they chanced to see A gorgeous, crimson, glorious tree With flaring, glaring, flaming sign: "Taste not, touch not—I'm not thine!"

And this to them brought a stunning blow: Was there some place where they couldn't go? Was there one thing they shouldn't eat, And this one thing a thing so sweet?

Their bill of fare was still a mile long, But all their wealth wasn't worth a song, Because their freedom was cut in two By a single thing they mustn't do.

They had no thought that the good Landlord By flaming sign and warning word Was trying to save for them their breath By leading away from the tree of death.

II. Restriction in Drink

By drinking and thinking through all the years

The wise have come to feel great fears Of drink that brings both ruin and death By poisoning the blood and stopping the breath.

Appealing to the people to amend their laws By adding a strong protective clause, They've brought it about through much ado, The nation's as dry as a very old shoe.

But drinkers of poison and sellers of rum Are tearing their hair and saying, "By vum!" Swearing that life is no longer worth while Since they can't live in the old drunken style. —J. F. M.

SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCES

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago has announced its usual summer Bible conferences. The eight already named are located at convenient points reaching from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains. Eminent Bible teachers and evangelists have been secured to build programs for each conference that will prove both highly instructive and inspirational. Attention is also given to work with children and young people, and as heretofore skilled leaders of the song program have been assigned to each gathering. Nearest to us, Hendersonville, N. C., July 28 to August 11.

STUDENTS HONOR JAMESTOWN COLLEGE

The students of two literary societies of High Point College will erect and unveil a marker to Jamestown Female College. The marker is to be placed on a beautiful spot on the High Point campus and will be dedicated Saturday morning, May 4th, about 10:30. Jamestown College, as the readers no doubt know, was destroyed by fire in 1861 after only a few years of operation. It will be a splendid thing to have these two institutions connected with this dignified marker. It will perpetuate the history and memory of the old institution that was opened at Jamestown by the Methodist Protestant Church in 1859.

It is expected that many Methodist Protestants and other friends of these educational institutions will be at High Point next Saturday morning for the dedication ceremony. All are invited to attend.

By coming early you may also enjoy the annual literary program given by these societies in the auditorium of Roberts Hall. This program will precede the services at the marker. All are invited to this program also. P. E. LINDLEY.

—Bro. Gurley O. Coble was taken to a hospital last Sunday for treatment. It is hoped that he will not have to stay long.

Faith Lost and Found

In childhood days, at mother's knee,
With heart so pure and mind so free,
In simple faith he learned to walk—
At greatest marvels did not balk.

Nor Noah's ark nor Jonah's whale
To him was bunk or old wives' tale;
The greatest fables to him were real.
He questioned not, nor doubt did feel.

A God so great would work His will,
And men had only just be still
And see the way for them made plain
As seas roll up and make dry lane.

With such a creed he enters the swirl
Of mad cross currents that form the world.
He's swept away and soon cast down
And sure it seems that he must drown.

He strains and struggles and gains his feet:
A grinning imp makes haste to greet
With words that sound to him quite odd:
"O where, dear sir, is now thy God?"

Another imp with solemn mien
And long-drawn words that friendly seem Declares his God an ancient myth
And bids him help himself forthwith.

"All things are yours, take what you like,
Rush in ahead, first man on pike;
Be man, not slave, your will's the law.
Drive straight ahead and don't seesaw!"

His mind confused, the way not clear,
He roams about and wonders where
In all the world his soul can rest
From terrible struggle within his breast.

To simple faith he can't go back,
Nor save himself from fresh attack
Of imps and fiends with words so fair
They seem to make the truth quite clear.

He tests their word, he plunges in,
And finds himself in mire of sin.
He loathes himself but finds no way
To break his chains and end his stay.

He cries aloud in near despair:
Can none deliver from the snare?
Can no one save from body of death
That he must bear and breathe its breath?

In answer to his soul's outcry
There comes a voice from out the sky:
"Come unto Me, ye seekers of rest,
I'll show the way of life most blest.

"Come learn of Me, and on you take
My easy yoke for others' sake.
I've trod the way, I know the course
That leads to joy and its high source."

He heard the voice, it stirred his soul,
It gave new hope far greater than old.
He heeded the voice, he tried the plan,
And now he's happy as any man.

Dr. Ward's Proposal

We print in this issue a proposal or suggestion from Dr. A. Norman Ward looking to an enlarged circulation of church papers. That is a consummation much to be desired. If all our people were regular readers of our church papers, there can be no question that the life and activity of the church would be stimulated and the achievements of the denomination enlarged. How to bring about the general reading of our papers is the problem.

Dr. Ward's suggestion will not be new to our Annual Conference. At least twice has it been presented by committees on church literature and has every time been emphatically rejected. If everybody were taking the church paper that could take it, perhaps there would be little objection to the plan. But many who are well able to take the church paper do not take it because they have not become sufficiently interested to take it. There are, say, 40 families in a church. Ten of them subscribe for and read the church paper, and these ten pay far more than their proportion of the church budget. Shall they add to the budget the cost of church papers for the other thirty families and also pay that? They do not think so, and would not think so any more if the thirty were to vote for them to do so. Paul exhorted the Galatians to bear one another's burdens, but a little later declares that every man shall bear his own burden. Paying for his own church paper in the case of the well-to-do man seems to be a part of his own burden.

The early disciples for a little while and in a small space "had all things common," but this did not long continue. The disposition of some individuals—perhaps we should say all individuals—to have some things to themselves always interferes with the operation of the plan. Dr. Ward refers to the prevalent plan of distributing Sunday school literature—giving it out freely to all. But he overlooks perhaps the custom which amounts almost to a law of the children bringing in their pennies for the Sunday school collection. If some means could be devised by which all families could

THE CHURCH PAPER

In submitting these observations for the consideration of the readers of our church papers, I am keeping faith with my lamented friend, Dr. Benson, for so long the gifted editor of The Methodist Protestant. I promised him a few weeks before his death that I would write for the Protestant certain ideas I have long held concerning the circulation of the paper among our people, ideas upon which he and I were in agreement.

There are two observations I wish to make. The first is one that Dr. Benson and I had discussed together many times during the past ten years or so. In the last conversation I had with him he asked me to write out without delay a suggestion that we had often talked about, and I agreed to do it. I wish I had prepared this article before his death, so that he could have followed my suggestions with editorial notice. The second observation, or suggestion, is one about which we talked the last time I visited him at his office. We had come to no agreement upon this second point, but he saw possibilities in the suggestion. It was with the first suggestion that he was most interested.

The last General Conference, while celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Protestant Church, entered upon some bold ventures. It seemed to have the courage of its convictions, and was not afraid of making some changes, radical as some of them seemed to be to many people. Among the most important pieces of legislation enacted by the General Conference was the merging of the two denominational organs, The Methodist Protestant and The Methodist Recorder. This had been under consideration for a number of years, but always something prevented. Both papers were ably edited, and the editorial policies of each reflected great credit upon the denomination. But both papers were more or less restricted in their operations because there was not room in the Methodist Protestant Church for two great publications. There was, and is, room for only one great paper. One paper, appealing to the entire denomination and carrying the news and the enterprises and the program of the church to all parts of the church, can do more for the extension of the church and its general interests, and for the unifying of our people in one great denominational purpose than can two papers appealing to two different sections of the church. The General Conference did a great piece of legislation in merging the two papers.

1. I have a suggestion to make to our people. I make it in all seriousness, for I have given much thought to it, even from the early years of my ministry. It is this: I think the church paper should be placed in the local church budget, so that every family in the church should get the paper. The grand objective of a church publication is to get certain things across and into the minds of every member of the church, and not alone to those who may be interested sufficiently to subscribe for the publication. The church needs to have its business, its program, its evangel, its propaganda, to reach every one connected with the church. The church paper is the great advertising agency of the church, its one channel which can flow the appeal for everything for which the church stands as an organization. The church could afford to give the paper, free of charge, if necessary, if by so doing it could get its message, in all its entirety, across and into the minds of the people. The church as an organization must have a mouthpiece by which its voice can be heard by all and its ministry reach everybody. And the budget can provide for this, if rightly gone after. If necessary, some other things could be left undone if this thing could be done as it ought to be; for if this were done, the other things could be better done than they are now being done. The paper is the most important agency of the church, and the editor is really the most important official of the church. The editor is more necessary than any other official of the organized church, in my opinion. Rather than have the paper go halting and limping along, like as old man on crutches, as is often the case, the church could afford to pay the salaries of its editors out of the General Conference budget, just as the salaries of the General Conference president and the secretaries of the various boards are paid, and with the same propriety and for the same reason. The General Conference officials, traveling by day and by night all the year through, can at best reach but a limited number of our people; but the church paper could visit every member of the denomination fifty-two times a year, and spend a whole week or longer at each visit. The work done by our General Conference officials is necessary and highly important, but not so necessary or as important as the work that may be done by the church paper.

With a greatly increased circulation, it might be possible to lower the price, for certainly the receipts from advertising would be considerably augmented. There are fifty or sixty thousand families in the denomination. Send the church paper into every one of these homes and a miracle would be performed in every activity of our denominational life! With a circulation of fifty thousand or more, with the Methodist Protestant Recorder going into every home and carrying the message of the church to every fireside, the results for good from every conceivable standpoint would be incalculable.

It is becoming apparent to most thoughtful people that a very serious situation is developing throughout the country with respect to the attitude of the daily press towards moral and religious questions. Nothing seems sacred any more to the great dailies published in the large cities. There is a flaunting of ridicule upon everything the church stands for, and only now and then do we find a great daily that is fair to the church or to any moral reform. Everything is garbled and twisted and stretched, and mountains become mole hills and mole hills mountains, as may be necessary to produce thrilling headlines and sensational reading for the public.

The church paper may be the last line of reserves for the forces of righteousness in the battle for the right. The religious press is the last resort of moral issues when they seek a hearing before the people. Nowhere else can they secure a fair hearing. If our children are to get the right perspective toward life; if the people are to hear the other side of great moral issues when great issues are at stake in both church and state, then the religious press must come into its divine right to give the people a wholesome outlook upon life and be saved from the damning materialism of our times.

What I am pleading for would not be a difficult thing to do. It is easy of calculation to get at. If there are fifty families in the church, let the church in the local church budget place the amount needed to put the church paper in every home. If there are a hundred families, let that church act accordingly, and so on. Then we shall see what will happen. The stimulation given to religious and denominational interests will result in making it vastly more easy for every denominational agency to be heard and supported, to say nothing of the spiritual impulses that may be strengthened and sustained in the home life of our people. The Methodist Protestant Church needs to see to it in some way that The Methodist Protestant Recorder shall be placed in every home in the denomination.

Any church can try this out. This is real church work. And it need not wait upon a conference or a convention or an elaborate debate or a solemn conclave of some sort to get this thing started. Find out how many families are in your church, then put the paper in the budget, and raise the money as you raise the money for the budget, local or general. If this should be done in every church in our connection, the missionary and educational activities of the denomination would grow by leaps and bounds. Every pastor knows that he must depend largely upon the readers of the church paper in his congregation for the most important enterprises accomplished by his church.

2. I would go a step further. Sunday schools place their literature in their budgets. They do not ask Sunday school scholars if they will subscribe for the Sunday school papers, the Journal, the Intermediate Quarterlies, and the like. The Sunday school takes up its collection every Sunday, and from this collection every member of the school is supplied with the Sunday school leaflets, or journals, or whatever it may be.

It seems to me that the church could do the same thing with regard to the church paper. But here is my second observation, or suggestion. With an enlarged circulation and an increase in the number of pages, the church paper could give four or five pages, or as many pages as may be necessary to the Sunday lesson, using in the main the same material and provided by the same writers as is furnished the Sunday school through its Lesson Helps. The main outlines and general information covering the lesson, for the quarter, could be given in the church paper; and the paper coming regularly in the mails once a week is more likely to reach the homes of the people than by the present method of distribution. Most of these lesson helps could be provided in the church paper. The present method is rather expensive, for in handing out the literature for the quarter at the beginning, most of it is lost before the quarter is half over.

This need not interfere with the publication of the Sunday school supplies, as at present arranged for. With the additional stimulus given to the study of the lesson by the weekly church paper, a greater field would open up for the preparation of a class of Sunday school literature that would more and more adapt itself to modern methods in the modern Sunday school.

I would like to see the Methodist Protestant Recorder become the greatest religious publication in America. We have a great mission to fulfill as a church, great ideas and ideals to promulgate. When we plead the cause of a liberal Methodism, we plead the cause of the Methodism of the future, for all Methodism is moving in the direction our fathers pointed. Given the resources, the enlarged circulation, our church paper can become a greater force not only in our Methodism but in all Methodism and outside of Methodism.

If we need a paper at all, it ought to go into every home in our church. It would be good business to see that this is done. It would be the greatest single step that could be taken by the church; and we do not have to wait until the next General Conference convenes to get the machinery in motion that would place the church paper in every home in the Methodist Protestant Church. Let us try out this experiment and see what will happen!

A. N. WARD.

GOD'S SUFFERING SERVANT

When I opened my Sunday school quarterly to study the lesson on April 28 and saw that it was the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, I felt like saying to the whole Sunday school family, "Take off your shoes, for you are stepping on holy ground." After reading the comments in the quarterly I felt that some one should "cry aloud and spare not."

The lesson committee has classed "The Suffering Servant of Jehovah" as an individual, the nation, or the personification of the devout element in the nation and adds "just which is not definitely known." My, my, surely the committee had not read Acts 8:35! The Ethiopian eunuch riding in his chariot centuries ago from Jerusalem to Gaza was reading this same 53rd chapter of Isaiah and asked the question, "Of whom speaketh the prophet this, of himself or of some other man?" Then Philip, the divinely inspired evangelist, "opened his mouth and began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus."

The Servant of Jehovah is Jesus. His meat was to do the will of God. He is also referred to in the prophets as "The Branch." In Isaiah 11 He is "The Stem of Jesse." Read this whole chapter—a prophetic picture of the future Kingdom. Let us not be slack concerning the prophecies. "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Again Peter says, "We have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed." In the walk to Emmaus our Lord "beginning at Moses and all the prophets expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has called the talented editor of the Methodist Protestant, Rev. Frank T. Benson, D.D., from labor to reward, thus entailing a great loss upon the denomination to which he had given his life, and which he served so faithfully and so well; and

Whereas, the Executive Committee of the General Conference recognizes its loss in the death of this fellow servant in the gospel, a man who was always loyal to every interest and every institution of the Methodist Protestant Church, and to the Kingdom of Jesus Christ—wise in his words of encouragement to the right, and fearless in his denunciation of evil true to his convictions;

Therefore, be it resolved: That while we bow our heads in submission to the will of Him who is too good to be unkind, and too wise to err, this Executive Committee is deeply grieved because "A Prince and a great man has fallen this day in Israel."

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves anew to the great task of promoting the denomination and the Kingdom, to which he devoted his life;

Resolved, That our hearts go out in tenderest sympathy to the family so suddenly bereft of a loving husband and father, and that we commend them to God for comfort, remembering Him who said, "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you."

Resolved, That this expression of our sympathy be published in the denominational press and a copy forwarded to the family of our deceased brother.

Signed for and in behalf of the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

CHARLES H. BECK, Secretary.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The spring meeting of the Executive Committee of the General Conference was held in the book room parlors at Pittsburgh on Thursday, April 18, 1929. All of the members were present except Rev. Aldon J. Allen, D.D., of Pittsburgh, who was detained by other important duties. The worship period was in charge of Dr. E. C. Makosky, of Baltimore. Much of the work of the day consisted of routine matters, quite important in themselves, but of little interest to the readers of our church papers.

The report of the President of the General Conference shows that Dr. Broomfield is giving himself unreservedly and whole-heartedly to the work of his office. This report is being published, and need not be reviewed here. The interpretations of church law as given by the president were approved by the committee. These dealt with matters of local interest in every case, and are not therefore being included in this report.

An item presented by the New Century Service Commission of the North Carolina Conference was carried over to the annual meeting of the committee for final decision.

The form of the Statistical Report was also left to be decided at the next meeting, the secretary and other members of the committee to give the matter consideration in the interim. A communication was received from Dr. Burton, general secretary of the Congregational churches, in reference to a proposed union of churches. Inasmuch as the proposal seems to suggest but little more than we already have in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Executive Committee did not deem it wise to give the proposition any extended consideration. Plans for the Missionary Rally to be held in Pittsburgh May 12 were approved, and the details referred to President Broomfield for development. The secretary was directed to prepare suitable resolutions in reference to the death of Dr. Frank T. Benson. Closing devotions were led by Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, N. C.

CHARLES H. BECK, Secretary.

"HE IS FAITHFUL THAT PROMISED"

Every promise of Scripture is a writing of God, which may be pleaded before him with this reasonable request: "Do as thou hast said." The Creator will not cheat his creature who depends upon his truth; and, far more, the heavenly Father will not break His word to His own child. "Remember the word unto thy servant, on which thou hast caused me to hope," is most prevalent pleading. It is a double argument: "It is thy word, wilt thou not keep it? Why hast thou spoken of it if thou wilt not make it good? Thou hast caused me to hope in it; wilt thou disappoint the hope which thou hast thyself begotten in me?"—C. H. Spurgeon.

HE CHANGES NOT

God's immutability which is expressed in the uniformity of natural law age after age is the rock on which His changeable creatures can assuredly rest. But for His unchangeable truth, the qualities of matter would play us foul, and water might burn us, and the sun rise in the west, or north, and every sequence of causes be upset, to the utter ruin of all life and happiness. The Scripture says, "It is because God changes not that the sons of men are not consumed."—Geo. D. Watson.

he brought to bring in three or four cents every Sunday for the church paper, then it might be sent to all families.

Some will object to Dr. Ward's plan on account of its paternalism. It would make men feel themselves children of the church, entitled to live off of the bounty of the church. It would make some burdens that ought to be burden-bearers.

Then we may ask, How is the plan to be put in operation? The General Conference has no authority to make it a law, though some seem to think the General Conference can do whatever it wants to do. The Annual Conference has no legal right to make such a law for its own district. The members of a local church have no authority to impose this practice on the individuals composing the membership. The only way it could become a reality would be through the voluntary assumption of the expense by enough people to pay for the whole body.

Yet we believe Dr. Ward will accomplish good by bringing the matter to attention. It may induce members of some churches to league themselves together voluntarily in the effort to make their churches thorough readers of the church papers, all paying who can, and the many strong uniting and paying for the few weak who cannot pay for themselves. We thank Dr. Ward for the article.

THE SURRENDERED LIFE

Let us not forget that every one on earth is living a surrendered life. Every one is surrendered either to sin or to righteousness, either to Satan or to God. There is no such thing as living a life not surrendered. We can choose to which we will surrender, but we must live a surrendered life. The one who surrenders in Romans 6:13 yields unto God because he is alive from the dead.

In Romans 12:1 we read: "I beseech you, brethren"—that is, believers—"by the mercies of God"—why? Because you have received the mercies of God, you are born again—"present your bodies"—make a presentation of your bodies. Make a present of your whole body unto God. That is the meaning of surrender, "living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." It is the reasonable, the only logical thing to do, on the part of the Christian who has been raised from the dead by God. It is the logical thing, and anything else is unreasonable, anything else is ungrateful, unthankful, on the part of one who has received all that God has to give, when He wants us to give him all that we have to give, that is, ourselves. It is your spiritual service.

Have we noticed just what precedes the twelfth chapter of Romans, in the thirty-third and thirty-fifth verses of the eleventh chapter? Paul is speaking of the marvelous purpose of God. "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! . . . Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?" God gave Himself first, we read at the end of the eleventh chapter; and therefore at the beginning of the twelfth chapter: "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God," that you give yourselves to Him. Is it not blessed and gracious and wonderful of Him always to do more for us than He asks us to do for Him?

Some people are afraid of the will of God. Think of it! Afraid of the will of God, the one who gave His only begotten Son for us! In a prayer meeting a Christian woman prayed, "We are afraid to do our will, Lord, for fear of the consequences. Teach us thy will." We do not often hear that prayer, but do we not often hear Christians say, "Lord, I am afraid of your will, won't you let me have my will in this little thing?" Let us be afraid of our wills. God's will is safe. It brings heaven into our lives.

Hannah Whitall Smith tells of a Christian woman who, asked to surrender everything to the Lord, frankly said she was afraid of what it might mean in her life. Afraid of what God might do to her! She was a mother, and she had a little boy. Mrs. Smith said to her, "Have you ever asked your little boy to do what you wanted him to do?"

"Yes, many times."

"Has he ever refused to do it?"

"Yes, I am sorry to say, sometimes."—Selected.

THE PENDULUM OF DUTY

If you wind up the weights of a clock, and point the hands to the proper figures, and go away, you will find them in the same place when you come an hour later. What is needed? The pendulum should swing so that the clock will keep time. I am continually setting Christians, but when I look again I find them just as I left them. What all such need is to swing the pendulum of duty. The heart must be always ticking, if one would keep time with the Sun of Righteousness. —Selected.

WHAT IS A BOY?

"He is the person who is going to carry on what you have started.

"He is to sit right where you are sitting and when you are gone attend to those things which you think are important.

"You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they will be carried out depends on him.

"Even if you make leagues and treaties, he will have to manage them.

"He is going to sit at your desk in the senate and occupy your place on the supreme bench.

"He will assume control of your cities, states and nations.

"He is going to move in and take over your prisons, churches, schools, universities and corporations.

"All your books are going to be judged, praised and condemned by him.

"All your work is for him, and the fate of the nations and humanity is in his hands.

"So it might be well to pay him some attention."—Meadville, Pa., Kiwanian.

THE VOICE OF HISTORY

Skeptical scientists and philosophers of this day are much given to affirming that faith in a Supreme Being and a future life is not necessary to the development of majestic manhood and to large, unselfish service. It was to try to sustain this contention of rationalists that Prof. Leuba, of Bryn Mawr College, sent out to scientists his famous questionnaire and wrote his book, "Belief in God and Immortality," which so shocked the evangelical Christians of the country. Over against this view, we place these words of Canon Farrar: "In all the histories of the nations you can scarcely find one man of epoch-making usefulness who has not believed in the God who is not far from every one of us, since in Him we live, and move, and have our being. Are we not, then, entitled to say with confidence, as all the best, greatest, and wisest of men have believed, that God has not resigned His care for the creatures of His hand to the exclusive working of what are called 'natural laws'?"—Selected.

A DAY AT A TIME

"I can't understand why you always send my allowance in such small amounts," wrote a college youth to his father.

"I don't like to have to ask so often for money. I am sure you could send all I need for a month or two just as easily."

"What you say is quite true," wrote the father in reply, "but I am thinking of you rather than myself. I want you to keep me in your mind and thoughts these busy college days. When you write often, as you do under this plan, you tell us about your pleasures and experiences, your plans and purposes, and that's a good thing for a boy to do. Perhaps if you didn't need me so often, I shouldn't know as much about you as I do."

Possibly a question that troubles many Christians will find its answer in the father's letter. Our heavenly Father might give us all we need at one time; but he does not want us to forget Him. He wants us to talk to Him often. Prayer is a great privilege which we as His children enjoy; but the consciousness of a daily need is often a strong reminder of that privilege.—Forward.

Littleton

May 4, Saturday.—This date was given to this charge in an all-day program at the church in Littleton. The attendance was good, with all of the churches represented. This was our first pastorate twenty-two years ago. A goodly number who were faithful in the work then have their places now in the church triumphant. Others are still in their places, active and dependable now as they were then. It was refreshing to see them again, and to spend the day with them in work and worship. We found, too, a hopeful and encouraging sign in the active young life of the charge. Workers are being developed that give hope and promise for the years ahead. We preached in the morning. Dinner was served in the shade of the oaks on the church grounds, and the quarterly conference followed at 2 o'clock. The reports revealed a general condition of hopefulness throughout the charge, with special encouragements at some points. The pastor's salary is behind some, but not beyond that of the average charge. But little has been paid to date on budgets. The budget apportionment was raised, so as to include the total amount for all purposes, and this in turn is to be allotted to the individual member. We trust that the officers of each church will see that this is done. The charge has splendid parsonage property located at Littleton. Some slight repairs are needed, which the conference ordered made. Pastor Smith, heartily seconded by his wife, is winning the confidence of the people and is gradually and tactfully acquiring his place of leadership among them. He is very happy in his first work, and the people are likewise happy. The indications point to a year of progress for this field. We are confident that the charge would do well to come together periodically, at the Littleton church, in an all-day rally program, such as we had on this day. Do it brethren; it will pay.

We were glad to see Bros. Spencer, O'Briant and Cowan at this meeting, also Bro. Shelton upon our arrival at Triplet, Va., the home of Bro. Cowan.

Greensville

May 5, Sunday.—Bro. Cowan met us at Littleton and conveyed us over to his work, where we spent Sunday and Monday. Sunday was a very busy day, with three services at as many churches. We were at Philadelphia at 11 a. m., Matthews Chapel at 3 p. m., and Wesley's Chapel at 8 p. m. The congregations were good at each place and the response to our efforts was pleasing. The church buildings on this charge are well kept, and will rank favorably with our rural churches throughout the conference. Wesley's Chapel and Matthews Chapel have recently been painted inside and out, and new carpet and aisle tracking has been laid in the Philadelphia church. Matthews Chapel is indicated to the stranger by a roadside marker, and one is to be put up soon at Philadelphia. Wesley's Chapel is located on a much traveled highway, and we trust that a suitable marker may be placed here also. One can not but be pleasantly impressed with the neatness of this building. Its simple beauty is conducive to worship. The membership of the charge is representative of the established, sturdy, well-to-do citizens of the community. And a promising group of young people are coming on to take the places of their faithful fathers and mothers. Pastor Cowan is serving his first year here, and he and his family are very happy in their new location. The people also are equally pleased. With this first essential of a successful pastorate met, we see no reason why this should not be another year of growth for this charge. We shall be greatly disappointed if this is not so. The pastor has arranged to hold three Mother's Day services next Sunday, and is making plans now for the special meetings of the charge. We urged the allotment of the budgets to the individual members and we trust that the stewards will see that this is done. The rightful place for this charge is on the conference Honor Roll. Put it there, brethren, and give yourselves the joy of doing this needful thing for God.

While on this charge it was our privilege to have a brief visit in the home of the mother of Bro. M. P. Chambliss. She bears her sickness with becoming Christian fortitude. We trust that she may have the minimum of suffering, and be restored soon to full health.

Our visit with each of these charges was greatly enjoyed by us, and we leave them in the confidence that the work will be pushed for the largest results, both spiritual and material. We are indebted to Bro. Cowan and his family for the generous and extended hospitality of their home, and to others who ministered readily to our necessities.

Children's Day

The programs are ready, and June is the month. Send orders to Dr. Haddaway now, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore. He will send programs postpaid. Begin at once to plan for the observance of this day. Let's make this the best "Children's Day" year that we have ever had. And here's the key: Every pastor and every superintendent see that it is the best yet on his charge.

Pastors' Reports

Several are in already. They are thoughtful and comprehensive. We hope to have the remainder on our return home the latter part of this week. A digest will then be made and the results given to the church through the HERALD.

Public Worship

We are sure that much should be made of this, both in attendance and in the form of worship. We are convinced that the most important thing a Christian can do is to be a regular worshiper in the public services of the church. We can not enlarge upon this here, except to say that we have thought about it a great deal, and the more we have thought the more our conclusion has been confirmed. Christians should unflinchingly go to church.

The essentials of public worship should receive much attention, and the program should be thoughtfully prepared and earnestly and pleasingly executed. Reverence is an essential. The very place of public worship should suggest reverence. It is God's house, and God is in his holy temple. Surely there should be reverence in His presence. Quietness is essential. A babble of voices immediately preceding public worship does not seem to us to be conducive to worship. Quietness, and heads bowed in a moment of meditation and prayer seems far more fitting. The reading of the Word of God is an important part of public worship. It would seem fitting therefore for late comers to avoid disturbing the reading by waiting at the door until it is finished. An active participation by the people in the worship is essential. Jesus was an active worshiper. "As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read." The most pleased and helped worshipers are active worshipers. The worship program, therefore, should provide for this. Responsive readings, singing by the congregation, the Lord's prayer in concert, the Apostles' Creed, the offering—all these afford opportunity for congregational participation, and are helpful to public worship.

The developing and the enriching of public worship is an important factor in church life and progress, and the pastor who succeeds in this has wrought much for the church.

Don't, Pastors—

Forget that little notice of last week. It was really an S. O. S. Please "Save Our Ship." A little remittance from each church will do it; but we do need that "little" so much. Please "Save Our Ship!"

EASY COME, EASY GO

There was the young man who lost his job. He had several other jobs before that one. But he seemed able always to get another without difficulty. And when I remonstrated with him after letting him have "a couple of bucks," he smiled confidently. "I can always make money," he assured me, at which he went out, bought some baubles which he sold to others of his type, and soon returned, his pockets jingling with coin.

There are men who are cursed with the ability to make money without effort. To such men there is no incentive in thrift. At this moment, I can think of a dozen—yes, two dozen such men, every one of whom ended his years in poverty—some dire, others just plain poverty. The young man with whom I opened this subject finally decided to settle down in life and study a profession. He entered college with nothing to spare after paying his tuition fee for the first semester, worked his way through and graduated with honors. He made money for he ranked well in his profession, lived up to all he made—and his widow is now working behind a counter to support herself and child.

There is nothing startling about this account, nothing dramatic. We all know of such people and some of us recognize in them our counterpart.

To have confidence in one's ability to make money, or to accomplish a purpose that we set out to do is an admirable trait. But unless that confidence is accompanied by at least a little misgiving, we walk in danger of meeting mishap and being lost beyond recovery.

The young man in the office that adjoined mine was in business for himself. I, too, was in business for myself as an illustrator of mediocre ability, earning just about enough to keep body, soul and landlord together. My neighbor, however, was an excellent salesman who always made money but never seemed to have any. The reason this young man stands out in my memory is because of the habit he had of asking me for the loan of a dollar from my scanty purse and then proving himself a good fellow by inviting me to lunch that was paid for with the dollar. He had no misgivings as to his prospects in life. On many occasions he confided to me that he would be a leader in his industry. This confidence was undoubtedly a factor in his success as a salesman. But lacking caution and forethought, that same confidence was also a factor in his failure to advance in life, for he spent without restraint, he put nothing aside, and today, after three decades and his youth gone, he is farther away from his goal than he was when he invited me to lunch on the dollar that he would borrow from me.

The newspapers have made rather a hubbub of Mr. Ford's advice to young men that it is wiser to spend what they earn than it is to save. As to whether Mr. Ford was correctly quoted is beside the mark. I have always believed, and I still believe, that no matter how little one earns, some part of that earning should be laid aside, not so much as a fund upon which to build, but rather to serve as a life-net in case one finds himself falling.

It is quite true, I believe, that Benjamin Franklin's advice to be thrifty above all else would not carry a young man as far these days as it did in Poor Richard's day. Nor does his proverb, "He that goes a-borrowing goes a-sorrowing," hold good in present-day business. Thriftiness is not an absolute essential to success in life and perhaps that is the thought Mr. Ford wanted to convey when he offered to the young men of this generation the advice which appeared to be diametrically opposite to that of wise old Benjamin Franklin.

To our plant superintendent came one of the furnace-men. He was a hefty young man, with muscles in his back and arms as hard as the metal piled about him. He had just finished puddling a charge at one of the big furnaces. The towel with which he wiped away the perspiration that streamed from his face was wringing wet. It was two days to pay-day, he was flat broke and wanted "two bucks" to tide him over. "What do you do with all your money, Bill?" asked the superintendent with assumed seriousness. Bill shrugged a shoulder, lifted an eyebrow and smiled, "Easy come, easy go," he replied nonchalantly.

The amount of money and valuables lost through robberies in the course of a year will total millions of dollars. The amount of money made by crooked methods will amount to even more millions in the same period. Yet, how many gangsters and crooks have any of the money shortly after their haul or crooked deal? "Easy come, easy go—there's more where the other came from." That's the thought in the mind of the crook. All confidence—no room for a bit of misgiving. That's the thought in the mind of the salesman who "can always go out and cop a couple of orders" to pay a pressing bill. That is what was in the mind of the successful practitioner who left his wife and child penniless. It was in the mind of the sweating furnace-man who believed his strength would never give out. And it is that same thought that rules the mind of the business man who is always expanding his business to the limit of his resources—always climbing—and no life-net below.

Easy come, easy go.—United American.

OUR STORY PAGE

I'M SORRY

"Oh, I'm so sorry. It was stupid of me. I hope you'll pardon me."

Nettie Lowe had, through thoughtlessness, pushed another girl's elbow and caused her to spill on her new dress some of the tea she was drinking. The girl jumped to her feet quickly, a retort on her lips. But, at the sight of the look of contrition on Nettie's face and the words of apology, she forced a smile.

"Of course, I guess there's not much harm done. It will dry out all right."

Nettie's face cleared and she walked on. But behind her the girl who had accepted the apology looked thoughtful.

"I wonder how many times a day Nettie says that?"

"It's certainly Nettie's favorite expression. Last week she said those words no less than twenty times to my knowledge."

There were several exclamations.

"Why, Belle, how do you know? Have you counted them?"

"Yes, and written them down in a book, with the reasons therefor. I thought it might be interesting to check up on her and I've done so. She'd be surprised if she should see it."

"She might," the others agreed, "and then again she might be mad."

Belle Brown nodded.

"Well, anyway, I'm going to show her the book," maintained Belle. "I think it will do her good to see it whether she likes it or not."

Later on Nettie was seen walking down the street.

"Here, Nettie, I thought you might be interested in this," Belle said. Then, without giving the other girl a chance to reply, she turned and walked away.

Nettie opened the book wonderingly. As she turned the pages her look of wonderment increased. For this is what she saw:

"The I'm Sorry Record. This contains the number of times Nettie Lowe is sorry."

Then appeared entries like these: "Forgot to bring the book she promised Natalia Clark and caused her inconvenience. Was sorry, but that didn't help matters any." "Bumped into Hilda Foote because she failed to look where she was going. Was sorry, but that didn't keep her from crushing the eggs that Hilda carried."

So she read on, item after item. Every one of them recorded an accident that might have been avoided with a little more care. When she had finished the reading she closed the book hard. Her face was a trifle red and she appeared to be angry. Going to her home, she shut herself into her room. But when she next appeared the angry look had been replaced by a thoughtful one.

That afternoon she went over to Belle's house. Belle saw her coming and was a bit apprehensive. Had she blundered after all and taken the wrong method? It was only her honest attempt to help Nettie that had made her do this thing, but perhaps she had been wrong about it. She hoped that Nettie had not come to break off her friendship.

But Nettie was not at all angry. Instead she smiled as she handed the book back.

"You must have put a lot of work on this, Belle," she said. "I am returning it to you. I wish you would keep on making a record every time you hear of my saying I'm sorry because I have done something that I would not have done had I had my wits about me. I promise you that I'm not going to make your duties very heavy."

Since that time there has not been a single new entry in the book.—Selected.

HOW LINCOLN HELPED A LITTLE GIRL SAVE HER MISSIONARY MONEY

Once upon a time there lived a little girl in a little town in New York State.

She lived with her father and her mother and her brothers in a real, old-fashioned, homey home, where guests liked to come. One of the guests who liked to come was the great Abraham Lincoln, president of the United States. The little girl was always very happy when he came, and she used to like to sit in his lap and talk to him. She called him "Uncle Abe," and he often called her "Sissy," though her real name was Julia.

One time when the president was visiting at Julia's house Julia was counting the money in her missionary box. Mr. Lincoln watched her for a moment and then asked:

"What are you doing over there?"

"I'm counting my missionary money, Uncle Abe," replied Julia.

Mr. Lincoln put his hand in his pocket and pulled out something and held it toward Julia. Julia drew back her box.

"Oh, no, I can't take that, Uncle Abe," she said earnestly;

"I have to earn all the money I put in this box."

The next day when he was ready to start for the train he said to Julia:

"I wonder if you couldn't walk down to the depot with me, Julia?"

As they started down the street together, Abraham Lincoln shifted his valise to the other hand. It was an old-fashioned valise with two handles.

"Do you suppose," he said, "that you could help me carry my valise? It's pretty heavy."

Julia took hold of one of the handles, and they carried it between them all the way to the depot, talking gayly as they went. At the depot the president took the valise and pulled a shining coin out of his pocket, holding it out to the little girl.

"There, Julia," he said, "now you've earned your missionary money."

"Oh, thank you, Uncle Abe!"

And then he went away on the train, and Julia ran home with the shining coin clutched tight in her hand. She thought it was the very brightest penny she had ever seen and she hurried to put it into the missionary box, where it would be safe and sound.

The next Sabbath the missionary boxes were opened.

"How much money did you have in your missionary box, Julia?" asked the superintendent.

"Eighty-two cents," answered the little girl without any hesitation.

"Are you sure that was all you had? Where did this come from?" she was asked, and she saw the bright penny that the president had given her.

"Oh, that's the money Uncle Abe gave me!" she answered eagerly. "I earned it helping him carry his valise."

The shining coin was a five-dollar gold piece, and this is a true story of how Abraham Lincoln helped a little girl to earn her missionary money. I know that it is true because the little girl, who is a little girl no longer, told me the story herself.—St. Nicholas.

THE TWINS GO INTO BUSINESS

"I guess it wasn't such a good idea, after all," mourned Dick, looking around the boathouse that he and his twin sister had fitted up as a locker room for the boys and girls who used Long River for skating.

"The idea is all right," replied Dorothy. "But I think the boathouse is too far away from where the people want to skate."

"It is on the wrong side of the river, I'll admit," agreed Dick. "But the ice is just as good over here. I'll bet if they knew what we had ready for them in this old place, they'd come all right."

"Well, we advertised," reminded Dorothy. "But I guess people won't get out of the habit of skating where they want to skate just because we have opened up a boathouse."

"If they would only come near enough to see the sign!"

There were plenty of skaters on Long River that afternoon, but as Dorothy had pointed out and as both of the twins could see, they were all skating close to the opposite side. So far, only one man had seen the new sign, "SKATERS' CLUB AND PAVILION," that had been put up over the door, and he was a man who had watched them move everything in the week before. So far as business was concerned, he didn't count.

The twins stood in the doorway watching the great crowd of skaters as it moved up and down the river. Suddenly they noticed a small group dart away from the others and race toward the creek that led to the sawmill. Somebody had fallen in! There was a moment of excitement. The twins could see that they were pulling somebody out of the water; then they saw two men coming across the ice to where they were standing. These men were dragging a sled behind them, while on the sled was a bundle wrapped in an overcoat.

"Whoever it is," cried Dick, "they're bring him here. Quick, Dorothy, put a couple more pieces of wood on the fire, while I fix the cot and get out the blankets."

The twins hustled to get the boathouse ready for its first customer, and by the time the men had reached the spot, the cot was ready and the blankets were being warmed by the fire.

"It is a little girl," explained one of the rescuers. "She fell through the thin ice into the sawmill creek. We saw smoke coming out of your chimney and thought that this would be the best place to bring her."

They brought her in, dried her with one blanket and wrapped the other around her. She hadn't swallowed much water, but she was so cold that she was shivering. They dried her clothes by the fire, and while they were drying, Dick opened the faucet on the coffee percolator and filled up a cup for the girl, who by this time was feeling very much better.

Then one of the men said that he would see that she got home safely.

"I guess she should have died if you hadn't everything right here the way you did," he said. "By the way, what is this place, anyway?"

"It's a club room for skaters," replied Dick. "We've just opened it up, and we're trying to get people to skate on this side of the river. The ice is as good."

"It's better. Over on the other side there are bad spots that don't freeze over properly, and people are always falling in. I'm coming back here after I take this little girl home and I have some friends who would like to come too."

"Bring them along," invited Dorothy. "The more the merrier."

"By the way," spoke up the second man. "Do you sell that coffee?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'll take a cup. What else have you got?"

"Hot dogs, sandwiches and pie."

"Give me a hot dog. Wait a minute."

He opened the door and shouted to some other people who were gathered in a group talking about the accident.

"It's not private," he called. "Come on in. It's a rest room. Hot coffee, sandwiches and everything."

"Oh, boy!" said one, as they all entered the boathouse.

"And they've got a stove, too. This is great!"

"And are these lockers?" asked another.

"Yes, sir," answered Dick, looking up from the counter where he was tending to the "hot dogs." "You can leave your shoes here while you are skating and leave your skates here when you go home. We keep them clean for you and sharpen them once a week or whenever they need it."

"How much does a fellow have to pay for all this?"

"Fifty cents a season."

"It's worth it. Do you know," he continued warmly, "whoever thought of this had a mighty good idea!"

Dick looked at Dorothy and Dorothy looked back at Dick. Neither of the two said anything; but as Dick dropped the first dime into the box they were using as a till, he figured that maybe the fellow who made the last remark was right.—Selected.

HIS UNFAILING PROMISE

Many years ago Spurgeon said in one of his sermons, "If you take a Bank of England note to the counter of the bank, in an instant that bit of paper turns to gold. If we take a promise of God to the mercy seat, it turns to what is better than gold—to our own good and the glory of the Father," he concluded.

Thus a beautiful truth is expressed in a beautiful way. There are many Christians today who can testify to its veracity out of their experience. The trouble with some of us is that we are not willing to test these promises. They seem too wonderful and too impossible of fulfillment for us even to put them to the test. Nevertheless is not God continually inviting us to do this very thing? Some one else has said: "There never was a run on heaven's bank which was not promptly met. No creature in all the world shall ever say that he draw a draft upon heaven, and that God dishonored it."—Selected.

IMMORTALITY

Who does not feel that it would change everything if he believed with his whole soul in his immortality? It would supply him with a totally new standard of values—many things which the world prizes and pursues he would utterly despise, and many things which the world neglects would be the objects of his most ardent pursuit.—James Stalker.

Hints for the Leader

This is the second of a series of nine topics under the general heading of "Youth and Leadership," and you may mention the timeliness of such a subject, coming as it does on "Mother's Day;" refer to the home as a divine institution; give incidents in the life of Jesus showing His love for home life; ask the question as to whether or not the parents and the children realize the far-reaching value of home life; and comment on such a splendid opportunity given for the discussion of such a subject.

Questions to Be Answered

1. At what age does one cease to be influenced by leadership training in the home?
2. What leadership training is given in the home that is not given in the church or the school?
3. How much do you think that heredity has to do with the preparation for our life's work?
4. How does regard for parents tend to insure success?

Topics for Discussion

1. The best way to discipline children in this day and age.
2. The influence that has been greatest in my life.
3. The modern home compared with the home of 20 years ago.
4. The effect that respect and tenderness for parents have upon those who show such virtues.

Appropriate Quotations

"The best theological seminary in the world is a mother's knee."—Christian Work (Emporia).

"I read within the poet's book

A word that starred the page:

'Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage!'"

Yes, that is true, and something more:

You'll find, where'er you roam,
That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.

But every house where love abides,

And friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home, sweet home;
For there the heart can rest."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EXTENSION OF WORK

(Read at Branch Meeting)

Remembering that "more things are wrought by prayer than the world dreams of," let us pray regularly for the work and workers. Therefore, we recommend:

1. That each district chairman strive to secure the co-operation of the pastors in her district in enlisting every woman in the church as a working, contributing member of the auxiliary.

2. That at each executive meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary the program of the denomination be so presented as to enlist the active interest of every circle leader to the end that she may educate and gain the active interest of every member of her circle.

3. That at each district meeting both the home and foreign study books be reviewed; that the date for this meeting be in September; and that all phases of the New Century Service be presented.

4. That the secretary of literature strive to have either the Missionary Record or some church periodical carrying missionary information in each home represented in the auxiliary, and that the securing of subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald and to the Methodist Protestant be added to her duties.

5. (a) That we ask Mrs. Maier to include in her duties the publishing in the Herald each week a daily prayer calendar including the calendar outlined by the Board of Missions; (b) at each auxiliary meeting a stewardship study be presented. The committee recommends the stewardship study prepared by Mrs. Stephenson and published in the Missionary Record.

6. That each auxiliary be asked to observe a special day known as "Guest Day," presenting a day's program that will be inspirational, educational, and in every way helpful, using pageants wherever possible; and that all auxiliary, and representatives from churches not having auxiliaries in the district be invited.

7. That in rural communities where there are not preaching services every Sunday that the auxiliary plan its meetings to immediately follow the Sunday school hour.

UP-TO-DATE RESULTS—APRIL NEW CENTURY SERVICE

Here are the figures for our New Century Service returns for Up-to-Date and April-Tithing Month. And they are not so bad.

Conference	April, 1928	April, 1929
Alabama	$ 563.91	$ 683.39
Alabama (Colored)
Arkansas	117.11	387.33

W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S. bal. from March		1,820.78
.....	$71,822.90	$57,128.49
Total W. F. M. S.	$30,095.67	$13,476.12
Total W. H. M. S.	$ 7,244.86	$ 8,273.36

Note 1. Almost $2,000 came in just too late to be included in our receipts for April. We kept our books open until Friday noon. A special gift of $500 is still in addition. Our total receipts from all sources was nearly $60,000.

Note 2. Notice the difference in Maryland. Last year a conference session was held in April. This year it will be held in June. Many Maryland churches hold back till Conference time.

Note 3. Notice the difference in W. F. M. S. whose totals are included in those credited to conferences. This year's figures represent what was sent to the General Conference treasurer and do not include monies sent Mrs. East, the amount of which I do not know.

Note 4. If all W. F. M. S. monies could be counted above and had the Maryland Conference met this April (as before) our total in all probability would have been increased by probably $16,000 in each case, making a grand total of about $90,000—an amount far beyond any April's receipts.

Note 5. It has been a great "Up-to-Date" appeal. I have had letters from all over the church voicing the finest sort of co-operation. "April-Tithing Month" is still producing fruit.

Note 6. I hereby express my sincerest appreciation for the great response the church has made, and all of us give grateful thanks to our Heavenly Father.

Yours, for New Century Service.

JAMES H. STRAUGHN, Treasurer.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

We are sorry that an oversight occurred in the material sent out from the college last week for the pastors to use at the High Point College day service. The cost of the gate dedicated by the class of 1928 was $1,000. This was given by the students themselves who graduated last year. Then the fountain that is being donated by the class of 1929 will cost $750. This information should have been supplied last week but we failed to insert it at the proper space in the material sent out.

Since the material was prepared two literary societies have erected a splendid marker on the campus in memory of the Jamestown Female College. This memorial cost $45. Really, the students have always shown a remarkable loyalty to our college and we are profoundly grateful for their devotion to the institution.

The marker referred to is made of brick and stone. It bears a bronze tablet with appropriate lettering to indicate the history of the early institution. The marker contains brick from the building of the Jamestown College. Last Saturday morning the monument was dedicated with impressive ceremony.

We are glad to make the above correction and to express again our pleasure at the fine spirit manifested by our students.

P. E. LINDLEY.

—A rooster is in line for a prohibition officer's job. An unusually vociferous vocal demonstration by Chanticleer led California law enforcement to a hidden cache of liquor recently. At a well known roadhouse the raiders were unable to find the liquor supply. A rooster, sitting atop a barrel began to crow violently. He was so active that he attracted attention to the barrel which contained bootleg liquor. The Portuguese keeper of the roadhouse was arrested and fined $350.

—Bro. Ward, of Calvary church, is in Clinic Hospital with mastoid trouble.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield.—Our Ladies' Aid held its regular meeting Monday, the 24th. It was voted to retain present officers for six months. The annual election to take place in October so as to coincide with our Annual Conference. We have planned to have a yearly report of our society to be sent in at time of Annual Conference.

We had a very good attendance at this meeting and much interest was shown. We were very glad to have Mrs. Lillie Whitaker meet with us again after an absence of a few months. This good member always adds inspiration. We were also glad to have one addition to our membership. As yet, we have planned no definite way of increasing our funds, but hope to soon be busy on some profitable plan.

Our pastor, Mr. Auman, gave us two very helpful sermons last Sunday which we appreciated very much. We love and appreciate this good man and wife anyway; and why wait until he has passed on to voice it? He is ever busy among us, trying as best he can to do good both in and outside of church. He has organized a splendid Christian Endeavor for both seniors and juniors. Let us all join in this splendid work and help keep these societies active.

The young people, under Mrs. Eli Bellamy's leadership, are doing a splendid work in the Christian Endeavor. "We love these young girls and boys." "We are proud of them." Let us fall in line with them.

Mrs. Cecil Matthews, who has recently undergone an operation, is at home and doing fine. We miss her and hope to have her in our midst again soon.

Mrs. Eli Bellamy isn't very well, has not been able to attend all of our meetings for a good while. We hope she, too, will soon be well and strong. We wish every one could be well and strong, especially at this beautiful season, so as to better enjoy the beautiful colorings of flowers and trees and skies and everything which God has so greatly planned for us. H. S.

Gibsonville Church.—Last Sunday was a very good day for us in spite of all the rain. There were something near one hundred and fifty folk present and nearly all of them stayed for preaching service at eleven o'clock. This was about half of our regular crowd when the weather is good, but it was unusual for a rainy day.

The second quarterly conference will be held Sunday evening, May 12th, at 2 o'clock.

On Thursday evening of last week at 8 o'clock the Young People's Christian Endeavor met with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Williams at their home on Joyner Street. Games directed by Miss Lena Faucette were being enjoyed by all when Jasper Randolph, a member of the social committee, representing an officer of the law, declared that every member present was guilty of some crime and would be tried before a court. A "mock court" was held. Mr. Glen Evans acted as the judge while Dwight Davidson, Jr., played the part of solicitor and "Bob"

Gilmer Lucas was the clerk. Much amusement was created when the trial began; every member present was tried and found guilty of the crime for which he or she was charged. This was a means of the social committee to raise funds for refreshments. And it served as a splendid entertainment too. About $3.25 was realized from the persons accused. The hostess, assisted by the members of the social committee, served lemonade and cake. REPORTER.

Haw River Mission.—We held our second quarterly conference Sunday, April 28. There was a good number present, and good reports from the officers were given. Mr. K. B. Williamson and Mr. W. W. Crutchfield were elected delegates for the Annual Conference.

Our Sunday school is improving and attendance increasing. There has been a new class of children put on with Miss Janie Trulinger acting as teacher, and much interest is being taken in this class.

Rev. Mr. Chambliss gave us two very helpful sermons Sunday. We were glad to have with us Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wortham, of Henderson, N. C., and we are always glad to welcome visitors to worship with us.

Our pastor was a visitor in his home town in Virginia for a few days last week.

Our prayer meetings seem to be taking on new interest. Mrs. Nell Bullard is leader for Thursday night. An extra program has been planned and we are hoping for a large attendance.

Pray for us in this work so that when our work here is over we may hear that tender voice say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

With best wishes to the Herald.

Gibsonville.—For some time I have wanted to write a report from the Gibsonville church. The people there are so faithful and full of optimism that it is a pleasure to work with them. Our Sunday school is running at remarkable pitch and the other activities of the church are moving nicely, too.

Last Sunday we had a splendid day. The attendance was fine. It was an inspiration to speak to such a large and responsive congregation and we all felt greatly pleased at the general spirit of the hour. Special music both at Sunday school and church added much to the program.

There will be no service next Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour since the commencement sermon will be given at the high school at that hour. It is customary to cancel the local church services for this annual event. This year Rev. Mr. Conrad, of the High Point Lutheran church, delivers the baccalaureate sermon.

I take this opportunity of thanking the Gibsonville people for their co-operation and fine spirit shown throughout the year. Let us look ahead for still better things as the year passes to a close. Whenever the report is read from Gibsonville you will hear that the church has been active and that the people have supported nobly every good cause of the denomination.

P. E. LINDLEY.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—A large congregation greeted the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, and listened to his splendid sermon on the rich young ruler. We thank the group from the First church, Burlington, for two well rendered male quartets. We also thank Mr. S. A. Sharpe for the good music he gave.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor are moving on, though the attendance sometimes is not what it should be.

The third Sunday in May the annual memorial service will be held. Dinner on the ground. All interested are invited.

May 21st at 8 o'clock the missionary auxiliary will give a program in the church.

REPORTER.

Mount Pleasant Circuit.—This report is late, but not too late. We held our second quarterly meeting April 6. The usual business was transacted. Finances slow, but we have hope. Bros. W. G. Causey and S. R. Stafford are the nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference.

Since our last report we have received helpful things from Mrs. L. L. Bowman, Mrs. L. B. Clapp, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Mrs. Lineberry (Andrew), Mrs. Ada Amick, Bro. J. E. Stafford, Mrs. I. L. Trogdon, of Tabernacle.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along in a very effective way. Much interest is manifest. Since most schools are coming to a close we as the teachers are looking forward for an increase in our classes and more interest because the children are more interested in the Sunday lessons.

Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, delivered a very earnest and forceful message yesterday on Love. Love seems to be the greatest thing that anyone can have for his fellowman. His subject was taken from the 13th chapter of Corinthians.

We are to have worship with us our pastor's sister, Miss Lillie Mae, and her friend, graduate from High Point College. Hope these girls will come again.

Our revival will be held the third Sunday in June with Mr. Gerringer as pulpit help. We ask you all to join us in earnest prayer for a great revival at this church.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Byerly's Chapel next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The stewards are planning to make every member canvass to raise our pastor's salary.

Miss Elizabeth Davis, one of our members, underwent an operation last week for appendicitis at Dr. Long's Hospital at Statesville. She is getting along nicely. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Denton Church.—Denton C. E. Society was favored with a visit from Bro. W. D. Reed's Lineberry C. E. last Sunday night. We were glad to have them visit us and welcome them again.

Dr. P. E. Lindley delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the senior class of Denton high school last Sunday, the 28th of April. Despite the inclement weather, a good sized crowd enjoyed Dr. Lindley's fine message. Many compliments were heard on his sermon, and we are assured that there could have been no one more capable to deliver it than Dr. Lindley.

The pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, announced Sunday that there would be a series of revival services beginning on next Sunday. Rev. J. R. Anderson, of First church, Albemarle, will be here on Monday until the close of the series of services.

Last Sunday was "Old People's Day" at our church. Cars brought those who did not have ways of transportation, and a good crowd was out to enjoy the service. Rev. Mr. Bingham preached on a topic especially fitting the occasion. The service was unique in that the old-fashioned way of singing was carried out. Mr. Bingham "lined" the hymns and the choir leader led the singing, without use of piano. This method was new to the majority of younger people, but not so with the older people, whose minds wandered back to childhood.

Such hymns as "How Firm a Foundation" and "Amazing Grace" were used. A mixed quartet sang "Never Grow Old," which was also in keeping with the theme.

Three of our C. E. members received their diplomas from Denton high school last Tuesday: Miss Blanche Hoover, our C. E. president; Mr. Clinard Sexton, and Miss Kate Sexton. These young people are planning to enter college next fall.

W. M. SEXTON.

Hollister.—Our Sunday school attendance has been very good the past month.

Yesterday the baccalaureate sermon of Hollister school was preached in Hollister church by a minister of Wake Forest College. (I can't recall his name).

An announcement has been made by our pastor that our revival will begin the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, will assist in the revival. We hope to have a great revival.

Preparations are being made for a Mothers' Day program to be given next Sunday evening. Mrs. W. E. Knight, Miss Estelle Ellington and the writer have charge of the program.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet next Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage with Mrs. Spencer as hostess.

Mrs. T. A. Smith, of Union Church, is very sick.

The nominees for delegate to Annual Conference are Mr. J. R. Taylor, of Bethesda church, and Miss Winnie Burt, of Eden church.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN,
Reporter.

Thomasville.—Our work is moving along. Our Sunday school attendance was off somewhat yesterday. What we need in our church is interest. If we church-goers are not interested in our church and what it is doing, how can we help it to go forward. Not anyone can do his best work if he is not interested in that work. Lack of interest never accomplishes anything. We ask ourselves, "How can we get people to attend church?" I say if we get people interested in church work, they will be anxious to attend.

Our prayer service is moving along nicely, but not as many people attend as we would like. We are hoping to have a large crowd out Thursday night.

The regular Sunday evening C. E. Society was held Sunday evening. The president, Mrs. Bertie Lloyd, had charge of the program. The topic discussed was "Service a Way to Leadership." The program was much enjoyed by those present.

The second quarterly conference was held on Tuesday night, April 30.

On last Sunday morning the regular monthly communion service was held. Our pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, delivered a fine talk on the Lord's Supper. The attendance at the night service was off somewhat, and some missed a good sermon.

Every one is looking forward to next Sunday, which is Mother's Day. Our church will give a special program in the evening at 7:30. Every one is welcome to this service.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—The Missionary Rally of District No. 2 held its semi-annual meeting at Spring Valley church Friday, April 26. Miss Crystal Bobbitt, district chairman, presided at the meeting. During the morning session, the Rev. Mr. O'Brian conducted the devotional service, after which Rev. Mr. Minnis, our returned missionary from India, gave us a most helpful and instructive talk on our missionary activities in India. Mr. Minnis is a very interesting speaker and left with us much needed information and inspiration as well as a better understanding of the work, its difficulties and needs.

After an enjoyable lunch at the noon hour the afternoon session opened with Mrs. W. O. Ellis conducting the devotional. The roll was called, minutes of last meeting read and approved, and then followed a round table discussion. Also reports from the delegates who attended the Branch meeting; namely, Miss Lucy Rogers, of Rehoboth; Mrs. Leach Davis Overby, of Union Chapel, and Miss Crystal Bobbitt, of Rehoboth. It was decided to hold the October meeting at Flat Rock church. Rev. H. E. Fogleman closed the meeting with prayer.

The April meeting of Rehoboth Auxiliary was held with Mrs. W. H. Greenway. A very interesting program was given and a large number of members were in attendance. After the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

The regular preaching service was held at Rehoboth church on the first Sunday in May. This service was well attended and the pastor gave us a very good sermon.

REPORTER.

High Point.—On Tuesday evening, April 30, a delightful complimentary dinner was tendered to the congregation by the board of stewards in the assembly room of the church. Judge Lewis Teague acted as toastmaster, and introduced the after dinner speakers: Dr. A. G. Dixon, who was pastor of First church for nine years, spoke on the "Past of This Church" in reminiscent vein; Mr. C. C. Robins, prominent and influential layman, spoke of the "Present of This Church;" Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College, spoke on the "Future of This Church;" Messrs. Richard H. Shaw, Jr., and George T. Penny told something of the needs of the church at present. Pledge cards for subscriptions to the building fund were distributed. This delicious dinner was prepared and served by a group of the Woman's Auxiliary, and was enjoyed by a large number of our membership.

On Wednesday evening, May 1, after the usual mid-week prayer service, the second quarterly conference convened with Rev. R. I. Farmer in the chair. The pastor's report was a splendid one and revealed the fact of the addition of 37 new members since last conference, the present membership being 723. Mr. E. L. Douglas, superintendent of the Sunday school, gave an interesting report, and said that one of the crying needs of the school is for teachers for boys' classes. The average attendance is 368, and there has been a gain of 59 new members for the last quarter. Rev. E. L. Ballard reported an average attendance at Junior church services of 100. Mrs. Pickens on behalf of the Woman's Auxiliary reported that their pledge of $50 monthly to the building fund has been paid to date. Our women and girls are working zealously, and are most optimistic for the future. Messrs. R. H. Shaw, Jr., and E. L. Douglas are nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Last Sunday morning a delightful and impressive communion service was observed in which the members of the Junior church united. An unusually large number observed this holy rite; in fact, almost the entire congregation. Prior to the celebration of the Lord's Supper, Master "Billie" Vance, bright and promising young son of Mrs. C. W. Vance, spoke to us on behalf of National Boys' Week, as other boys were doing in the other churches of the city at the same hour. It was a genuine pleasure to hear this splendid boy's message, who acquitted himself in an admirable manner. The transfer of membership of Mrs. M. W. Harrell, North Hamilton street, from First Methodist Protestant church of Winston-Salem, was announced by the minister, which gave us much pleasure to learn.

At the hour for the evening worship a lovely cantata, "David Livingstone, the Morning Star of the Dark Continent," was presented by members of the Junior church in a most admirable manner. Miss Sarah Everhart was reader, and Miss Ernestine Vuncannon, the accompanist. There were five beautiful choruses, which were well rendered, a solo and chorus, "I Have Been Alone With Jesus," were given by Miss Ruth Beam and choir; a duet, "Saving Grace," was sung by Misses Sue Everhart and Dorothy Beam; a boys' group and chorus, "With Happy Heart," was well rendered. The sextette, "I Shall Have Glory Untold," sung by Misses Sue Everhart, Julia Elizabeth Coe, Flora Coble, Ruth Poole, Dorothy Bowen, and Ruth Beam, was particularly beautiful and rendered in a charming manner. These children of the Junior church are being well trained, and are the most valuable assets of our work and equipment. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman says that he would prefer to receive 50 children with all their untold possibilities into his church than 50 millionaires!

The executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon at the church. It was decided to use the Mission Study Book, "The Desire of All Nations," by Egbert W. Smith. The Question Box will also be used in the circle meetings. The executive committee will hold its meeting on the first Monday of each month, the general meeting of the Auxiliary on the second Monday, and the circle meetings at the homes of members on the third Monday. The Junior Mission Circle will meet on the fourth Monday as heretofore.

Miss Edna Nicholson, of Mebane, a talented student in piano at High Point College, gave a lovely recital on Monday evening.

The Choral Club and Orchestra of the college, under the capable direction of Prof. Stimson and assisted by Miss Virginia Frank and her violin pupils, and other local artists, will give a benefit concert Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary at the church. C. L. Gray, Jr., and Miss Dorothy Hoskins, young vocalists of much promise, will appear on the program.

Special observance of Mother's Day, which has grown to be nation-wide, will be held next Sunday, May 12th, and all the mothers of the congregation are urged to sit with their daughters at the morning service. This beautiful custom of observing one day in the year in honor of our mothers was inaugurated by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, about 25 years ago, and the idea has gripped the hearts of the world so strongly that Mother's Day on second Sunday in May is universally celebrated.

The Brotherhood will hold a meeting next Thursday evening at 6:45 o'clock, and supper will be served by Mrs. D. A. Neese's group.

The Nikanathan and Thalean Literary Societies of High Point College united in celebration of their anniversary last Saturday. The feature of the exercises of the morning was the annual alumni address by J. Elwood Carroll, class of 1928, a ministerial student of Duke University, who spoke on "Literature in the Age of Science." He advised his hearers to begin now to accumulate a library of their own by degrees, for books are now available to all classes of people. Miss Willie Fritz, of Lexington, gave a charming reading in an artistic manner, and Miss Vera Smith, of High Point, sang a beautiful solo. The celebration began at 6 o'clock Saturday morning with the annual May day festival on the lawn in front of Woman's Hall by the Nikanathan Society for girls, when the old-time May-pole dance was given. Following the exercises in Roberts Hall, the audience went to the campus for the dedication of a marker in memory of Jamestown Female College, erected in 1859 and destroyed by fire in 1861. An interesting history of the institution was read by Miss Claire Douglas, the presentation to the college was made by Mr. Grover Angel, president of the Thalean Society, and President Andrews accepted the marked in behalf of the college. These worthy young people have performed a meritorious act in erecting this memorial to an institution, which is but a memory in the minds of a few older people of our community. It is a pretty granite boulder, built on a base of original bricks from the old college, with a bronze tablet containing the inscription. An interesting feature on this occasion was the presence of Mrs. C. W. Tilden, of Jamestown, a daughter of Rev. Alexander W. Robbins, one of the trustees, and her daughter, Miss Sophie Tilden. The members of the Literary Societies plan to erect a marker similar to this one in memory of Yadkin College; this will be done next year.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard left Sunday night for Baltimore, where he will stop to visit his parents, and Mrs. Ballard will go on to Pittsburgh, Pa., to attend an executive board meeting. Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, of the Children's Home, are also in attendance at this assembly in Pittsburgh.

Davidson.—For some time we have been sitting under the juniper tree. Therefore, but little has been said in print from this work. Meantime we have not been still, but trying to dig up something.

Now, since we have held our second quarterly conference, which was full of encouragement, we are going with renewed strength and at full speed. I think I was never in a quarterly conference that gave stronger evidences of loyalty than did this one. There was not a dissenting voice to any resolution offered, though some were strong—even pledging to underwrite pastor's claim if not met in full by last of May. A. C. B. is beginning to ebb, and the response to our appeals for subscriptions to the Herald is going beyond our fondest expectation. We will be greatly surprised if soon there are not twice as many people reading the Herald on this charge as ever before. The bulletin board shows increased attendance at Sunday school as well as increased collections.

The apparent slothfulness in finances on this work is not due to a lack of interest, we think, but because former pastors have been well-to-do and had no need to press early contributions.

The big Rally Day on Davidson charge is going to be held the third Sunday in May. There will be more people there than some have ever seen. Your kinfolk will be there from far and near. All ex-pastors are invited to attend and all others who can. There will be an all-day service and dinner will be served on the grounds—oodles of it. A fine program has been prepared. Come on, then, and enjoy a soul feast with us. So say we all.

W. D. REED.

Cid, Denton Charge.—On the first Sunday in April Rev. Ed Hill filled Rev. E. A. Bingham's appointment at Cid, owing to the death of Mr. Bingham's father. Mr. Hill delivered a soul-touching sermon. We trust and believe it was good food for some sin-sick soul. Come again. Our pastor, Bro. Bingham, filled his appointment at Cid on yesterday. He was accompanied by his wife and children. He gave us a Mother's Day sermon, which was beautiful as well as touching. Mrs. Bingham acted as organist in the absence of Mrs. Hedrick.

Mrs. N. W. Lanier, Mrs. M. J. Wright and Mr. Author were appointed a committee on the church budget plan.

We began our Sunday school on the first Sunday in April.

The nominees for delegate to annual conference are John Delk, of Piney Grove, and Charley Cranford of Denton.

Bro. C. M. Craver's health is not so good, we are sorry to note.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—There have been several deaths and quite a lot of sickness among our membership during the winter. Our pastor has been faithful to his trust. He has occupied the pulpit at every regular appointment and has been very attentive to the sick.

Our Missionary Society met with Mrs. J. M. Barnes Friday night, May 3rd. It was a stormy night and the rain poured, but we had nine members present and a very good meeting. Mrs. Cappy Edwards, chairman of Circle No. 4, had charge of the program. We opened the service by singing "Faith of Our Fathers." The scripture lesson was read and Mrs. Russel Overby offered prayer. Mrs. J. M. Barnes read an article on Missions. Mrs. Overby, our delegate to Branch meeting, gave a splendid report and Miss Emily Floyd told something of our work among the foreigners in the Ohio Valley and also about the work at Pittsburgh. Mrs. Owen Edwards conducted the question box. During the business period many matters of importance were discussed and at the close of the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

We paid our budget of $215 last year and held 12 inspirational meetings. Our societies merged some time ago and we think this plan is going to work fine. There are many women in the church that have never taken any part in the missionary work and we believe that if we furnish them literature and ask for their prayers and contributions they will become interested in the work.

Miss Mildred Miskimen was with us some weeks ago and told us some of the interesting facts about her work in India. There is nothing quite so helpful to a society as having a missionary bring the facts direct from the foreign field.

The district meeting of the missionary societies was held at Spring Valley church on April 26th. Miss Crystal Bobbitt, chairman of District No. 2, had prepared a very fine program. Mr. Minnis was with us at the morning service and brought us a message from India. He told us of the educational, medical and evangelistic work among the people of India. This talk was appreciated and enjoyed by the largest number we have ever had present at a district meeting. We had a business meeting in the afternoon and reports were given by the different churches. Mrs. Russell Overby, from Union Chapel, gave a report on the young people's work at Branch meeting and Miss Lucy Rogers, of Rehoboth, read a very fine paper on co-operation. We will have another district meeting in the fall.

We have had good attendance at C. E. all the winter and the young people have taken much interest in the work. We appreciate very much the services and co-operation of the teachers of Zeb Vance High School. Many of them have led or taken some part in C. E. and they will be missed when school closes.

The quarterly conference met at the parsonage on April 26th. After the business had been transacted our pastor, Mr. Fogleman, invited all present into the dining room where a very fine dinner had been prepared for the members. This was a very pleasant surprise to us.

Something has been said about celebrating the 100th anniversary of our church in October, but no definite plans have as yet been made for this celebration.

Henderson.—Time goes on, very rapidly, it seems, and although I have not sent in a report for the past few months, we are keeping pace with time. With the coming of spring and the awakening of nature's beauty, we can feel the reviving also of the spiritual beauty and a deeper longing in the souls of God's children to serve Him better. Through the various organizations of our local church this is being shown by many of our leaders and their influence and enthusiasm helping to strengthen in us all a real desire to serve.

The Young Ladies' League met with Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh April 18th, with a good attendance and President Mrs. H. A. Jordan presiding. Mrs. Clyde Finch conducted the devotionals. Reports for the year were given and approved. The two circle leaders, Miss Myrtle Trogden and Mrs. R. A. Hunter, reported their points, and Miss Trogden proved the winner by only a small margin. The amount raised by the two circles for the three months was $74.85. As this was the first meeting of the missionary year, Mrs. F. R. Harris, delegate from the Branch meeting, gave a very interesting report of that meeting and also explained to the league the meaning of the new merger which will include all ladies of the church as members of this new auxiliary. A motion was made, seconded, and carried that the Young Ladies' League become Circle No. 4 of the Missionary Auxiliary, functioning with its same officers, and Mrs. H. A. Jordan, circle leader. A special effort is to be made by this circle to get all young business ladies and other members of the church who can not attend the day-circle meetings to attend this circle, which meets Thursday night of every month after the second Sunday. Due to the lengthy discussions and reports the program of the evening was omitted. The hostess served a lovely salad course.

The Missionary Auxiliary of the M. P. church held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon, April 22, with Mrs. S. R. Watson. Mrs. W. M. Young was assistant hostess. Mrs. L. R. Gooch, retiring president, called the meeting to order, and following the devotionals, turned the meeting over to the new president, Mrs. S. R. Watson. Mrs. Watson took up the business of the Auxiliary by first reading the names and duties of the executive committee. Reports from secretary and treasurer were read and approved. Interesting reports were then given by Mesdames S. R. Harris, L. R. Gooch, F. R. Harris, and Rev. R. A. Hunter, of the Annual Branch meeting which they attended in Asheville.

This being the first meeting of the missionary societies, which have been united with the Ladies' Aid into the Auxiliary, much enthusiasm was shown by the circle leaders and the large number of ladies present.

Circle leaders are as follows:

Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. B. Fox; Circle No. 2, Mrs. S. R. Harris, Circle No. 3, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, Circle No. 4, Mrs. H. A. Jordan.

The program for the afternoon, "Our Homes for the Aged in Maryland and Ohio," by Mrs. Hunter had to be postponed. A rising vote of thanks and appreciation was given the ex-president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch. Rev. R. A. Hunter dismissed the meeting with prayer. The guests were then invited into the dining room where refreshments were served.

The Brotherhood of the church had a very interesting meeting on Thursday night, April 25th, in the basement of the church. The president, Mrs. Clyde L. Finch, presided. An attractive supper was served by the ladies of the church and greatly enjoyed. The program was composed of contests and stunts, which afforded a great deal of merriment. Miss Elizabeth Fox sang in her pleasing manner two well chosen selections. Mrs. J. B. Martin accompanied her. REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. Mr. Smith gave us a good sermon today. Yesterday was a great day for the Littleton church, as Rally Day services were held there. President Taylor preached at the 11 o'clock service. Dinner was served on the grounds. After lunch we held our second quarterly meeting. All churches were represented. Nominees for delegate to Annual Conference were Mrs. B. F. Morris and Mr. T. W. Duncan.

We were very glad to have with us yesterday Rev. and Mrs. J. B. O'Brian, Rev. C. L. Spencer and Rev. and Mrs. Cowan.

It seems that some of our official body are getting very careless and unconcerned about attending our quarterly conference.

Since our last report one of our members was claimed by death, Mr. Sampson Walker. He had been confined to a hospital for several months prior to his death. Our deepest sympathy goes out to his mother and other relatives in this sad hour.

On the fourth Sunday in May at 3 p. m. our annual memorial service will be held at this church. M. J. MORRIS.

May 5, 1929.

Flat Rock.—Memorial day service will be held at Flat Rock church, Flat Rock charge, May 26, 1929, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Short but interesting talk will be given by Mr. B. L. Fentress, Rev. W. F. Kennett, and our pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg; also special music appropriate for the occasion.

We extend a cordial invitation to every one to be present at this service, which will conclude with the morning program.

MRS. H. L. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

May 7, 1929.

Pleasant Hill, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment here Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Brother Trogdon rendered a splendid sermon. He always has interesting and helpful messages for us. He took his text from St. Mark 3:1. He brought out the following points very plainly: 1. A withered mind; 2. A withered heart; 3. A withered soul. He made his sermon so plain that anyone could understand it.

There is to be a singing convention here next Sunday. Also a memorial service the first Sunday in June; all-day service.

REPORTER.

Concord.—The second quarterly conference was held following the mid-week prayer service Wednesday evening. Messrs L. R. Wensil and L. M. Williams are the nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

The Sunday school attendance was off some Sunday, owing to a good deal of sickness among our people, there being only 307 present.

Our pastor preached a wonderful sermon at the morning hour. He used as his text Phil. 3:13, 14: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Mr. Hendry emphasized the great need of forgetting any unkind word or anything that may have been unpleasant, but remembering every good deed that others do and press onward and upward in the great work of the church of saving souls. The sermon was very appropriate to the occasion as announcement had been made that a vote would be taken at this service on plans for a new auditorium, which our official board has had under consideration for some time. The plan carried by a large majority and everybody seemed happy. The plans call for a building 40 by 64 feet, with a basement under the entire building; it will also have a balcony. The cost will be approximately $12,000. The first unit of the new church was completed last year in the building of the new educational building. When the new church is completed the plant will be one of the best in this section of the city. It is planned to start work as soon as practical and rush it to completion.

At a meeting in our church called by President S. W. Taylor on Thursday, April 25, a Brotherhood for the ministers and preachers of the district was organized with Rev. N. G. Bethea, chairman. The following preachers were present: Revs. Taylor, Bethea, Hendry, Lowdermilk, Short, Hill, Harrison, Anderson, Love, Henderson, Morgan, Morris, Isley and Garner. It was decided to have their meetings once a quarter on the third Mondays. The next meeting will be held at Shelby.

Mr. E. B. Blanton, father of Mrs. Hendry, and Mrs. T. A. Blanton, of Clearwater, Fla., have been visiting at the parsonage for several weeks. Mrs. Blanton returned to her home last Thursday. Mr. Blanton will spend the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Hendry.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Tabernacle church on April 13, a fairly good number of the officials being present. The usual business was transacted in harmony. Brothers Cecil M. Fields and J. S. Devine were elected as nominees for delegate to our next Annual Conference.

Tabernacle church was pleased to have Calvary C. E. Society visit us recently and give a helpful program. Their coming was an inspiration to us. Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates and Rev. T. F. McCulloch accompanied them. Our C. E. Society at Tabernacle meets every Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The members at Julian have just made some minor improvements on the church building. Here we have a faithful and loyal band of people, working together harmoniously.

Miss Lizzie Harden and Mrs. Eli Royal have returned from the hospital much improved.

Bro. P. A. Hardin, who was kept from church several Sundays, is again occupying his pew.

Mrs. Ila Sharpe Coble recently joined Tabernacle church by letter.

H. L. ISLEY.

Lincolnton Station.—We held our second quarterly conference on May 3. Pastor reports eight new members since January. The Sunday school reported an average attendance of 116; average collection, $13.00. We have three Christian Endeavor societies. Report of attendance: Juniors, 8; Intermediates, 16; Seniors, 16.

We are very sorry to lose one of our members, Mrs. Leonard, who is going out west.

A Request

Mr. G. J. Cherry, Charlotte, S. C., one of the trustees of the Home, informs us that Mr. Enoch Ledford, recently deceased, left to the Home a part of his estate. The amount is not yet determined, but it is expected that there will be several hundred dollars coming to us. Mr. Ledford was a Baptist and his wife was a Methodist Protestant. So the estate is to be divided, part going to the Children's Home in Thomasville, part here, and part to the Baptist church in Plymouth. It is cheering thus to be remembered.

Mrs. Dixon and I must be away from our children for nearly a week attending All-Boards meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa., May 7 to 12; so if there is no report in the Herald next week you will understand why.

We are still appealing to our friends to help us catch up. It seems very difficult to climb the hill, but one of these days we will be "over the top" and then the going will be easier.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

ANOTHER PHILANTHROPIST

A cheerful giver when giving to himself, He scatters his coin both right and left. He pays for rides, he pays for shows, He pays for that that makes red nose; He burns cigars, he guzzles soft drink, He spends all told more'n you'd think.

"A liberal giver," it may be said, And placed on tomb when he is dead. He'd think it a shame to die very rich, He'd much prefer to end in a ditch. So all his money and all his pelf He's rapidly spending on himself.

WHERE SHALL WE EAT?

Sure, that's a matter of some concern To most of folks in all the world, And traveling far you will discern It sometimes set the world awirl.

The man who finds no place at all To set at ease his hunger pang Must not be blamed if he should call At your own door and loudly bang.

But most distressed and most forlorn Of all the folks on this big globe Are men and women who adorn The second place at festal board.

—J. F. M.

—Grace Church, Greensboro, celebrated its 38th anniversary in a congregational supper last Wednesday night. All living ex-pastors except Bros. J. S. Williams, T. M. Johnson, and R. M. Andrews, were present and took parts in the celebration. Speeches were made by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, who advocated the new building, Dr. S. K. Spahr, who was pastor during the building period and who advised building the complete plant at one operation, and Rev. R. J. Tamblin, on whose capable shoulders has fallen the burden of raising the means to pay the debt incurred in building. Miss Charlie Hunter told of the beginning of the church in a little Sunday school in an upstairs room over a grocery store, and gave merited credit to Bro. J. Norman Wills, then a curly-haired youth, the first Sunday-school superintendent and for a long time the only Sunday school superintendent, for the existence and progress of the church enterprise. The present church is the third building occupied since leaving that upper room, and it is one of the most beautiful in the whole country. It requires strong, united effort to pay for such improvements, but the time will come when the congregation may rejoice in the possession of such a plant free from debt. The thing to do now, if we may be pardoned, is for all to pay cheerfully what they can, and be patient with those whose inability, real or fancied, prevents their taking generous part in the good work of paying for what they use. The celebration was continued on Sunday with morning sermon by Dr. Spahr and evening sermon by Rev. R. I. Farmer, of High Point.

—In the meeting of ministers at High Point College last Monday a ministerial association was formed which is intended to include all our ministers in the Piedmont section of the State. Rev. H. W. Maier was elected president and Prof. Paul S. Kennett was elected secretary. The object, we understand, is mutual help in the common work of all. Success to the organization. There were about 15 ministers present in this meeting, a good beginning.

—Brother A. D. Wagoner, of Calvary church, has gone back to Burlington to rest awhile and regain his health. He has been very active in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society, and will be much missed. We hope for him good success in the effort to regain health.

—Bro. P. W. Mock writes from Union Ridge that they will begin a revival meeting on May 22 to continue ten days or two weeks in which Rev. R. C. Stubbins will assist the pastor, Bro. Kinnamon. They are praying for a genuine revival and hoping for accessions to the church through the gateway of repentance.

—Mr. Sinclair, millionaire oil man, is now in jail in Washington, serving his 90 days' term. His prison experience may help to show him and others that money is not the strongest thing in the world.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews was starting home from Concord last Sunday night when his auto collided with another, damaging both machines but doing little personal injury fortunately. A blinding rain explains the occurrence.

—In the death of Charles W. Bradshaw, of Greensboro, Mrs. Jennings, of Gibsonville, loses, we believe, her last brother. Another brother died a few months ago.

Mother's Day

"A very great day was Mother's day,"
The sons of men all join to say;
Great Mother's day of long ago
Will ever shine with bright halo.

Good Mother was queen in that great day,
With magic power she e'er held sway;
What Mother said was always law,
In her we found no fault or flaw.

Our hurts she healed with loving kiss,
She soothed our souls with fond caress;
Her every touch a touch of love,
With all the grace of gentle dove.

An angel from the skies was she
Who came to bless our infancy;
She brought the message of love divine,
And then she left in Heaven to shine.

Thank God for Mother, the brightest light
That ever shone in our earth's night.
She showed to us, we'll show to others,
How good is God who made our mothers.

False Prophets and True

In Old Testament history we find false prophets appearing along with the true, and sometimes the false have more influence upon the course of events than do the true. The people of course are to blame for hearing the false rather than the true if they share the dishonesty of the false prophets. The false prophets make it easier for people to pursue the wrong course because they give them a pretext for claiming that they have the divine sanction of their course. But God cannot be mocked and ultimately the people have to suffer the dreadful consequences of voluntarily believing a lie. In the long run the true prophets are vindicated because God is behind them. Both classes of prophets have their following and their influence, but the false perish with their errors and the true, while perishing in body, live on eternally with the truth they have proclaimed.

In the New Testament we see the same phenomenon—the false teacher beside the true. Much of the writings of John and Paul is given to combating the teachings of false prophets.

In our own day we see the false prophets as well as the true, and in many cases the false are louder-voiced than the true. Error provides itself with the most effective means of propagation; it uses press and pulpit and radio and personal appeal. It takes advantage of freedom of speech and freedom to print to send its baneful message everywhere. Those to whom error is more palatable than the truth will imbibe its teachings with avidity, and if only they were involved we might be reconciled to the thought of the end to which they voluntarily go. But the misfortune to be deplored is that many truth-loving souls will be deceived and led astray. The true prophets must spend much of their strength in combating false teaching that ought never to have appeared. If you or I had made the world, it might have been impossible to tell a lie. The effort to tell one or write one might have been followed instantly by paralysis of the vocal organs or the hand that would write. But God saw fit to give freedom to do wrong as well as to do right, and we have the liar and the deceiver opposing us when we try to make clear the truth.

But error and truth are irreconcilable, and the freedom of error to assert itself can never win for it any right to be heard. It can speak, but we can and should close our ears to its teachings. But we can exclude error effectively only by having our minds filled with the very truth that error would displace. Truth and error are both trying to make us their subjects. Subject to truth, we are free. Subject to error, we are in hopeless bondage. Each one must decide for himself whether he will hear the prophets of truth or the prophets of error.

Bridge Again

Some months ago we advertised for a substitute for the game of Bridge on the strength of a statement of a Greensboro clergyman that "there's nothing in Bridge." We were at once taken to task by our brother in Wilmington who arose to the defense of the game.

Our part was that of an inquirer. The impression made by the daily paper reports of social doings is that most of the ladies are playing Bridge most of the time. Perhaps the reader's imagination is active in leading to this conclusion. Elijah thought all the Israelites were worshipping Baal, whereas there were seven thousand who had not bowed to that divinity. It is notable that our discussion in the HERALD did not call forth a single word from a single woman (or a married woman). Only three men were involved in it and one of them was only an inquirer after truth. Our inference from the two testimonies received was that Bridge under certain conditions may be an allowable game and even a commendable game, but that it is very much overdone; too much time is being given to it.

We find our conclusion confirmed by a high authority in the social world. In a recent meeting of North Carolina club women an address was made by Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore, president of the general federation of women's clubs. She is credited with the following dictum:

"The habit of playing bridge enthusiastically, even madly, to the exclusion of all other interests, is to be deplored, for the world is crying out for a finer and more profitable use of leisure than that."

What do women think of a bunch of men who spend the greater portion of their time in playing some kind of a game with cards or other devices?

"I CHOOSE JESUS"

The Conversion of a Witch Doctor

She stood before them in all her witch-doctor's adornments. With her hair done up in black clay and ornamented with inflated goats' bladders, and with a seemingly endless number of charms and medicine pouches hanging from her neck and arms, Sangoma, witch-doctor of witch-doctors, raised in the air her wand and tiny cowhide shield, crying:

"I am tired of it all! I am tired of deceiving the people! I choose Jesus."

The awe-stricken little congregation in Mziplace, an outstation of Umzumbe, Natal, South Africa, fixed their eyes upon the distinctive witch-doctor's insignia which crossed the chest and back of Sangoma, and marvelled:

"Can this be true? A witch-doctor choosing Jesus! A teacher of witch-doctors repenting! A witch-doctor giving up all the goats and cattle she has been earning!"

For Sangoma, of whose conversion writes Mrs. George B. Cowles, missionary under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions since 1893, is no ordinary person. She stands as far above the common variety of native physician as a great specialist stands above a young interne.

"Do we all not know her? Have we all not feared her?" thought the group of native Christians. They hardly dared whisper. Surely the Holy Spirit was near.

Sangoma turned suddenly after taking her stand as a Christian. With goat bladders bobbing and skin kilts flapping, she disappeared down the grass path which led to her hut.

Soon she returned with her drum and other medicine pouches. Tearing the goat bladders from her hair and wrenching off her leather scarfs, she laid them all "at the disciples' feet." Soon a solemn procession headed by Majoze, the Zulu evangelist, filed out of the small church. A fire was built, and one by one the pouches, the bladders, and all the other paraphernalia of superstition were fed to the flames. The drum, the wand, and the scarfs were about to follow when Majoze, the evangelist, stepped forward and, raising his hand, said imperatively:

"No. I want these for our missionaries. I think these should be sent to the 'American Boodie' (American Board) in Boston."

And they were sent to accompany this truly remarkable story of the conversion of the great witch-doctor, Sangoma. They rest now upon a table in the rooms of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions on Beacon Hill—a far journey from the heart of Zululand.

Like all really good stories, this one has a sequel. A few weeks later Rev. George B. Cowles was called to Mziplace to conduct a communion service. Witch-doctor Sangoma—no longer a witch-doctor, however—was there. They had washed the black clay and grease out of her hair. In the place of dirty cowhide kilts was a neat cotton dress. Cleansed within and without, she sat happily "at Jesus' feet."

What makes this story even more appealing is the fact that Mziplace is one of the smallest of missionary preaching places in Umzumbe. Work started there very recently, and it was only a short time ago that the head man of this little village put in a plea for a school teacher, saying:

"Even though we are so small, should not a place where a witch-doctor was converted have a teacher?" Did they get one? They certainly did.

American Board people in Africa think this conversion is a really momentous thing, and will have unbelievable influence in that section of the country.

Both Rev. and Mrs. Cowles hail from New Britain, Conn., and Mr. Cowles is a member of the First Congregational Church of that city.—Boston Transcript.

FORD'S BALANCE SHEET

The annual balance sheet of the Ford Motor Company has been filed with the Massachusetts Commissioner of Corporations. The profit and loss surplus statement of December 31, 1927, showed a decrease for that year of $42,786,000. The balance sheet for December 31, 1928, shows a further reduction in the company's surplus of $72,221,000. Thus these reports for two years would indicate that adaptation of the Ford plant for production of the new Model A has up to the first of the present year cost the Ford Company not less than $115,000,000. There is probably no business concern in the world outside the Ford Company which could take a loss of $115,000,000 in two years and yet go on as though nothing unpleasant had happened. It is the only business concern in the world which could take a jolt like that and still spin on down the shining road singing tra-la-la-la-la. Ford has been described as a business wizard, but even the shrewdest of men is sometimes caught napping. The necessity for a new type car should have been anticipated sooner and provision made for its production without almost totally stalling the entire Ford business. The transition period in the Ford concern gave competitors an unparalleled opportunity, an opportunity which they utilized to the utmost. Ford has lost a practical monopoly in the low priced field of cars. The competition he now faces is the keenest, the most alert and powerful ever faced by any modern business man. The bones of myriad defunct "lizzies" rattle in their tombs with ghoully glee. The millions they piled up are being dissipated by the flapper cars which succeeded them.—The United Presbyterian.

SAVED FOR WHAT?

For what are we saved? Every true believer answers at once, "We are saved from being lost forever and ever." For this God sent His Son into the world "that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." We are therefore saved from wrath, from judgment and the guilt of our sins, because the Lord Jesus Christ died for our sins and tasted death in our stead. We are also saved to live a holy life unto God. The people whom God has redeemed He has redeemed unto holiness. Furthermore, we are saved to serve and to walk even as He walked. Above all we are saved for glory.

Glory is connected with God's calling. "Ye know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you as a father doth his children, that ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto His Kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2:11, 12). The Lord of glory appeared unto Abraham (Acts 7:2) and called him; even so "the God of all grace hath called us unto His eternal glory, by Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 5:10). He called us by the Gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is the reason why our Lord said to His Father in prayer, "The glory which Thou hast given me I have given them" (John 17:21).—Selected.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

THE WESTMINSTER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, FORTY-SIXTH COMMENCEMENT

The forty-sixth commencement of the Westminster Theological Seminary was held May 5-7, beginning with the baccalaureate sermon in the Methodist Protestant Church, Westminster, on Sunday morning by President Elderdice. This was Dr. Elderdice's thirty-second annual sermon to the graduates and students. He brought a very appropriate message on the theme of "Lawlessness," using as a text Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision the people cast off restraint: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." Special music was rendered by seminary students, including an anthem, "Praise ye the Lord," and a solo, "The Lord Is My Shepherd," by Mrs. Bernard I. Barnes.

The annual alumni sermon was preached on Sunday night, May 5, in the Methodist Protestant Church, by the Rev. Harry Heffner Price, A.M., D.D., pastor of the First Methodist Protestant Church, South Side, Pittsburgh, Pa. His subject was "The Master Passion," based on John 13:34, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." This was Dr. Price's first visit to the seminary at commencement since his graduation in 1902. Those who heard his excellent sermon hope that he can come again.

The special contribution of the students to commencement week was the presentation of the famous fifteenth century morality play, "Everyman," under the direction of Miss Dorothy Elderdice, head of the department of Public Speech and Religious Drama in the seminary. The play was an excellent reproduction of the English drama in its beginnings. In particular, the audience was much impressed with the religious appeal of the play. The atmosphere was of the fifteenth century, and the religious concepts were of the same period, but the timeless challenge to "Everyman" was very forcefully presented. The following roles were very ably taken by the students: The Doctor, Roy Du Val; Adonai, Albert A. Pierce; Death, J. Paul Lambertson; the Lad, Owen Prince; Everyman, Frank L. Shaffer; Fellowship, Edward James Robinson; Kindred, Eugene C. Woodward; Cousin, Ptylla E. Bingham; Goods, Wesley O. Lynch; Good Deeds, Frances Hovermale Barnes; Knowledge, Frances E. Prince; Confession, T. Glenn Madison; Beauty, Lillie A. Brown; Strength, William B. Howard; Discretion, W. Arne Roberts; Five-Wits, Snowden G. Brown; the Angel, Vera Gibbons.

The graduating exercises were held in the Methodist Protestant Church, Westminster, on Tuesday evening, May 7. The address to the graduating class was delivered by the Rev. Chauncey Caryl Day, A.M., S.T.D., pastor of St. Luke's Methodist Protestant Church, Philadelphia. Using II Timothy 4:5 as a New Testament foundation, the speaker selected the word "Minister" as the appropriate title for the man ordained to the special work of the church. He spoke of the minister in his community among other workers for the common welfare, the minister in the parsonage and especially in his study, the minister as a church leader, as a pastor and as a preacher. The address was full of interest for the students, and particularly so because the speaker is found in the list of somewhat recent graduates of the seminary, being a member of the class of 1913.

The following diplomas and degrees were awarded:

The Diploma of the Seminary: Louis Alexander Bangerter, Elkhart, Indiana; Lloyd Graham Davis, Ellicott City, Maryland; Arthur William Garvin, Hagerstown, Maryland; Julia Vera Gibbons, Peabody, Kansas; Harold Moses McAdow, Columbus, Ohio; Harvey John Mitchell, Fairmont, West Virginia; Frank Leroy Shaffer, Liverpool, West Virginia; William Everett Wade, Annamoriah, West Virginia.

The Degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology: Douglas Robson Chandler, Mooers, New York; Yoshio Ito, Nagoya, Japan; Paul Emory Rhinehart, Manchester, Maryland.

The Degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology: Wan Yu Chang, Peking, China; Paul Ellsworth Holdcraft, Baltimore, Maryland; John Samuel Hollenbach, Manchester, Maryland; Fred William Paschall, Asheville, North Carolina.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Our annual Leadership Training School will be held at High Point College, High Point, N. C. The date of the school is July 13-20. The detail work of the school is getting into definite shape now and we hope to announce the full program at an early date. We are seeking to offer to the people of our church the most pertinent subjects. This year we are offering different courses and a greater variety of courses than those of the previous year. The faculty is composed of competent teachers, people who know the problems of our church and who are ready to give of their best thought to their solution.

The Board of Young People's Work endeavors to finance the Leadership Training School through the fees received from registrations. We are hoping that the registrations will be sufficient this year to take care of the total expense of the school. Rev. N. M. Harrison, 501 Central Avenue, Charlotte, N. C., is the director of this campaign. He has set as a goal 1,500 registrations, a very small figure in comparison with the membership of our conference. We can easily reach this goal and I challenge you to do it!

FRED W. PASCHALL, President of Board.

GOD'S HELP AND OUR WORK

In some special sense we are just entering on a new season of Christian work. That work demands the best that is in us. The mind, the heart and the body must all be laid on the altar. Many fail because of lack of downright earnestness and thoroughgoing industry. But often when we have done our level best failure awaits us unless God comes to our help. It is not merely human work, and therefore it cannot be done with merely human strength. It is God's work and it cannot be done successfully unless God works through us. To try to accomplish anything apart from God is to invite certain failure. Let our dependence be on God, and our expectation be from Him. Let us remember that God will not work through unclean instruments. If we expect His help we must be clean in His sight. Our motives must be right. Christ will not use the man who is selfish and self-seeking. He will use us largely if we are in the work for His honor and glory. Let all Christian workers go apart for a season of self-examination. Then let us call mightily on God that we may be made "meet for the Master's use."—Watchman-Examiner.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Pittsburgh

May 7-10.—This date was given to a meeting of Conference Presidents and Treasurer, called by Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D., President of the General Conference, and held in the First Methodist Protestant Church, Pittsburgh, Pa. The purpose of the meeting was to consider the programs of the church, as represented by the various boards and agencies, and to secure the largest measure of interest and co-operation throughout the denomination in realizing the things that are necessary to our life and progress. Representatives were present from the various sections of the church.

Another interesting and important phase of this meeting was the Missionary Convention held in connection with it, and which continued over Sunday, May 12. This was a history-making occasion. The Boards of the two Societies held their annual meetings, and in addition to routine matters, each Board acted upon the merging of the women's work, as provided by the last General Conference. The women have not been agreed as to the wisdom of this legislation, but the overwhelming decisions of these two Boards was in favor of the merger. The legal phases of the merger were anticipated by each Board, and action taken to put the Societies in complete harmony with the new order. The women are having but little difficulty in our conference in adjusting themselves to unification, and the commending comments that we hear indicate increased results through this larger co-operation. Let us be imbued with the mind of Christ, and hope and pray that we may come to see "eye to eye" in a matter that is so vital to His kingdom.

Worthville

May 12, Sunday.—We were with the pastor and people of this attractive new church in an all-day program, preaching at 11 a. m., and making a Mother's Day address in the afternoon. We regretted not to be able to stay with them through the entire program of the day. It is always a pleasure to go to this church. The people impress us as being earnest and forward-looking in their work, and ready in their response to our messages. They are rejoicing now in a splendid revival just held. We believe that this church and this charge will have a prosperous year. People and pastor seem happy in their relationship with each other, and there are no problems that appear to us to prevent the progress of the work. We enjoyed the day with them.

Herald Subscriptions

Thirty new ones have been sent in, up to May 9, on the goals allotted to the various charges April 25. Orange, Rev. B. M. Williams, pastor, is the first charge to reach the goal. This charge reports nearly double the number of subscribers reported by any other charge. Davidson leads in the number of subscribers sent in on the new goal, with Haw River Mission next. We very much hope that the subscriptions sent in last week may greatly augment the number already reported. Seventy-two charges are blank at this writing. The campaign is to continue through May and June. Pastors and charges will do a big piece of work by getting this paper into the homes of their people. Push the matter, brethren, until all goals are realized.

May Nineteenth

This is "High Point College Day," as designated by the Annual Conference. We presume that all pastors have received information from the college that will be helpful in the programs of the day. The purpose of this day is to "boost" the college among our people and to foster and enlarge interest in the institution. Let us see that this is done in every church where a service is held on this day.

"Treasurer's Corner"

It was quite pleasing to find a good deal in it last week, and a payment to every budget cause. Friendship station and Community church tie in the largest contribution for any one purpose, with $50 each to the college. Orange is next, with $31 on G. C. B. Thomasville, First, and Reidsville tie, with $25 each on G. C. B. Halifax and Mebane tie, with $25 for the former on college, and $25 for the latter on A. C. B. Concord, Saxapahaw charge, is a close second, with $23.30 on G. C. B. Cleveland charge has eight places in the "Corner," the largest number of any charge reporting. The territory included in this "Corner" begins with Weaverville, dips down to Yarbrough in South Carolina, then back east as far as Halifax. But for all this, there is yet room. Let's fill it up, brethren. Let's crown the "Corner," and force the treasurer to sue for larger quarters. Thank you for what you have done, and thank you again for what you are going to do. And now, please; for we need it so much!

In Hospital

Our Brother Hall, pastor of Mecklenburg charge, is in the Presbyterian Hospital, Charlotte, N. C. This is his second or third hospital experience this year.

Bro. Carmichael, pastor of Moriah charge, has been critically ill, but is reported better at this time. These brethren have our sympathy and prayers.

Death

Word came to us yesterday of the passing of Bro. J. F. Alexander. We understand that he was buried May 1 at Harrisburg, N. C. His passing removes from us a good man. He had not been long in our ministry, but long enough to impress us with the integrity of his character. We would have attended his funeral had we known of his death. An obituary committee will be promptly appointed, and due honor paid to his memory in our conference memorial service. Our fraternal sympathy is hereby extended to his loved ones.

District Rallies

We published last week in the HERALD a program designed to suggest what seems to us to be proper topics for discussion in our District Rallies. We tried to comprehend the entire work of the church, and at the same time make the program sufficiently elastic to suit local needs and conditions. We want it understood that it is not published as an official program, but only suggestive. Where districts prefer to make up their own programs, they, of course, will not hesitate to do so. By the kindness of the editor, we are running this program again this week, so that it may be available for any who may want it, and who failed to see it last week. This word to District Chairmen: Whether you use this program or one of your own making, please do not fail to hold a district rally.

Pastors' Reports

Quite a number are yet to be received. We trust that all may be in this week, so we may give a digest in our letter next week. These reports should contain information that will be both interesting and valuable to the church, and we are anxious to have it as complete as possible. Pastors will co-operate, we are sure, by letting us have their reports with the minimum of delay.

"The Bible Champion"

This is the official organ of the Bible League of North America. It is a monthly magazine of sixty pages. The price is $2.00 a year. Single copy, 20 cents. It is valuable for all readers, and especially for ministers. We suggest that you send 20 cents for a sample copy to the publisher, Frank J. Boyer, Reading, Pa. You will be pleased with the paper.

BY PRAYER

It is said that John Wesley spent two hours of each day in prayer, and on many days more than this. He began to pray at four o'clock in the morning. One of his associates said of him, "He thought prayer to be more his business than anything else, and I have seen him come from his place of prayer with his face shining."

Martin Luther, the monk who so stirred the world, said: "If I fail to spend two hours in prayer in the morning, the devil gets the victory through the day." The saintly Francis Ashbury was in the habit of rising at four a. m. and spending two hours in praying and meditating in the Word. The godly Robert M. McChesney spent two hours in the early morning and one hour after tea in prayer. Adoniram Judson could pray for hours at a time, and who can doubt that much of the success that the Gospel has had in Burma has been due to the earnest petitions that he sent up to heaven. David Livingstone knew how to pray and literally died upon his knees.

These men prayed, God answered, and things were brought to pass. Is not prayer, mighty prayer, our hope in these distressful and barren times on which we are fallen? Will not Jehovah still answer by fire? We can see no other help for Church or nation in these perilous days than the strong arm of Jehovah, and that arm is moved by prayer. Therefore, "to your tents, O Israel."—Selected.

A SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM FOR DISTRICT RALLIES

1. Evangelism—The Heart and Hope of the Church. (a) Through revivals; (b) through the Sunday School; (c) personal evangelism; (d) continuous evangelism.
2. Financing the Church. (a) Through definite financial allotment to every member; (b) by apportioning the budgets along with the pastor's salary; (c) by the use of envelopes, and regular weekly and monthly payments; (d) by proportionate giving; (e) through information (facts about "New Century Service"); (f) a treasurer for each church.
3. Our Conference and the Rural Church.
4. Promoting the Programs of the Church Through Organizations.
5. The Relationship of the Local Church to the General and Annual Conference Programs.
6. The Essentials of a Growing Church.
7. The Pastor and the Absentee Member.
8. How to Awaken Interest in Inactive Church Members. (Round Table Discussion.)
9. Our Institutions. (a) What and where they are; (b) our obligations to them.
10. Our Church Papers.
11. The Church and the Young People.
12. "Go ye into all the world." (a) Is this command obsolete? (b) Who must obey it? (c) How must it be obeyed? (d) The reward of obeying it.

DEVOTIONAL COMMENT

One of the most sobering truths that each one of us must face—and one of the truths that is most fearsome to him whose faith is weak—is the truth contained in that noble saying of Pascal's, "I shall be alone in death." Man is a social being. He lives with others; he works with others; he prays with others; he sins with others. But in death he is solitary. Friends and relatives may be about his bedside, doing all that love and grief and sympathy make possible to alleviate pain, and to comfort and console. They may go with him to the very gate of death; but at last he must part from them. When the pageant of this world fades away and the unknown magnificence and splendor of the next breaks upon his sight, no one can share that experience with him.—Rev. E. H. Eckel, Jr.

FURNISHING THE MIND

"Instead of making your mind a garret crowded with rubbish, make it a parlor substantially furnished, beautifully arranged, in which you would not be ashamed to have the whole world enter."

These vivid words from the pen of T. DeWitt Talmage, the great Brooklyn preacher, help us to get a new conception of the mind and what it ought to contain. When Paul enumerated things true, honorable, just, pure, lovely, and of good report, he besought his Philippian readers to think on them.

We must be selective in our thinking. We may clutter our minds with refuse, or we may furnish them with fine things. Each of us is responsible for the condition of the room over which he presides.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE ASSISTANT LIFE-SAVER

Once upon a time Robert was coming home from an errand late in the afternoon when he saw a large, black, curly-haired dog. The dog was so beautiful that Robert wanted to pat him, but his mother had told him never to pat a strange dog; so the boy remembered and obeyed her, though he wanted to hug the great fellow. Any one could see the dog was an honest, friendly animal, not at all snappy. He looked as though he were smiling at Robert, and his eyes were so soft and joyful that it was all Robert could do to keep from hugging the noble fellow, then and there.

The dog must have felt that Robert loved him, for without any coaxing he followed the boy all the way home.

"Oh, Robert," said his mother when she saw the dog trotting up to the door, "haven't I told you never to pay any attention to dogs? What made you bring this one home with you?"

"I didn't try to, mother—honestly, I didn't!" cried he. "I didn't speak to him, nor pat him, nor anything! He just came anyway!"

"Well, he mustn't come in," mother replied firmly. "He's a beauty, but it won't do to let him in. He is some one's pet and will find his way home. Come in quickly, and let us close the door. He'll go home as soon as he is alone."

But long after supper, when Robert opened the side door to put out the milk bottle, up trotted the dog, and before Robert could get inside the house, a great shaggy head squeezed in close to the boy, and it was impossible then to close the door.

"Oh, mother!" called Robert. "Come in a hurry! He's getting in! I did not know he was there at all!"

It was so funny a sight to see the dog's delight at finding himself partly inside that Robert's mother said, "Well, let him in! He has a collar on and I'll see if it has his owner's name."

But she had to tell him to "Lie down, sir!" many times before she could examine the collar, he pranced so with joy at being inside with friends—at least he felt they were friends. And she even had to give him a bit of sponge cake—he refused plain bread—before he would quiet down. But when finally he threw himself upon the rug close to Robert's chair, she found not only the name of the owner of the dog, but his address and telephone number, as well, and also the dog's name.

"Why!" she exclaimed. "We have for a visitor Rover himself! Rover is a good old-fashioned name. And he belongs to Mr. Harvey Dale, who bought the Avery house on the Green two years ago. I'll call him right up." And she did.

Mr. Dale laughed and thanked her. He said Rover would come home by himself if she would put him out-of-doors. The dog made many friendly calls, but never failed to come back at bedtime.

It was hard to have to put the fine fellow out, for Rover was so contented; but the night was not cold, and Robert's mother coaxed him to the veranda by putting another bit of sponge cake there for him. And next morning when she called up the Dales to find out if River was safe, Mr. Dale said yes, and that Rover joined him in many thanks for the pleasure of the evening before. Rover hoped to meet his kind hosts again sometime, and Mr. Dale wished to thank them once more and hoped, himself, to meet those who had been so good to his wonderful dog.

Then a happy thing happened the next summer. Robert's family bought a summer home on the Sound, and one day Robert dashed into the living room exclaiming: "What do you think! Here's Rover Dale! I'm sure of it! He knows me, and mayn't I let him in?"

There was no doubt that it was Rover—they did not have to read his collar this time. He bounded up to Robert's mother as she opened the door. Of course he knew them!

The Dales' summer home was but a short distance down the beach; and as the new little summer colony became established and the members met often at tennis and other sports, Robert's family soon met the Dales, and had happy times as the families became better acquainted.

Dogs were not encouraged among the colonists but every one so loved Rover that he never was banished. Bathing for children was considered safer for them when Rover was there. The Life Guard had little to do, himself; for if Rover saw any child in danger, he reached the child as soon as the Life Guard—and sometimes sooner.

Now it happened one day that Rover cut his foot badly. No one seemed to know how the accident had happened, and the beach was searched for any possible broken glass that might be dangerous. Nothing could be found on the shore or even out beyond the lowest tide mark, and as far as one could wade to carry on the search. The only thing they could think of was that perhaps Rover might have stepped upon something in the street when he accompanied the family back to town one day on errands. At any rate, he limped badly, and yet nothing could keep him from swimming out to the float when the children were there. The paddling was not easy for him, but Mr. Dale said the dog would be unhappy if chained up, and perhaps the salt water was the best thing for the sore foot, after all.

It was while the foot was still making Rover limp that the dog made a rescue when one of the children who could not swim waded so far out that an inrolling wave made her lose her poise, and the undertow drew her out where she could not touch bottom. The Life Guard was out upon the raft. The wind was blowing the wrong way for him to hear her cry out at first, as she was not opposite the float, but further down.

But Rover knew in a moment. Limp or no limp, he made a dash from the spot where he was stretched out near her sand toys on the beach, and before the Life Guard reached her, the dog dragged her up upon the dry sand, where her big brother soon had her in his arms, none the worse for her bad few minutes.

A visitor came upon the scene just after the rescue, and heard the details from one of the children on the float. The visitor wanted to see Rover.

"There he is!" cried Robert. "He's still down the beach, 'cause they forgot to take in her toys. He's guarding them. He probably thinks she will be out soon, and he knows she will be safer if he is there. That's the only reason he isn't here with us. He knows we have the Life Guard, and she hasn't. When we're all out here he paddles out to keep his eye on us. But if any one of us is alone along the beach, Rover sticks to the lone one. Just you pretend to fall in and call out, and see what happens!"

The visitor did so. He even sank out of sight once, and acted as though unable to swim. And tired as he was from the rescue of the child, Rover never hesitated. He made a rush, and, as fast as his injured foot would let him, paddled out to where the Life Guard was pretending to have trouble getting to the shore.

"Good fellow!" exclaimed the supposedly drowning man, as he felt the dog's firm grip on one leg of his bathing suit.

The visitor was more than sorry when he learned about Rover's hurt foot, and said if he'd known of it nothing would have made him put the dog to that test.

But the newcomer examined the cut. He knew exactly what to do for it; so he was able to pay his debt to Rover by taking that injured foot in charge until the cut was properly healed.

If ever you should visit that place, you might notice the sign:

"The only dog allowed on this beach is Rover Dale, assistant life-saver."—Congregationalist.

THE PERFECT EASTER

It was after church on an Easter Day in a quiet town that the Cater twins, Jim and Jane, walked carefully along the street in their new white clothes. The day being cool, Jane wore her white coat trimmed with white fur, and Jim wore his white serge coat with a couple of white flowers in his lapel.

"Oh, Jim," said Jane, "this is the most perfect Easter I can remember. It was so jolly before church, and so solemn and beautiful at church and now we're going to Grandpa's for dinner!"

"Hope we get there safely," said Jim.

There was no danger threatening. Jim meant that he hoped their clothes would reach their grandfather's without being soiled in any way. There was pavement all the way, but some of it wasn't very clean. The twins went so very carefully that hardly a speck showed on their white shoes.

Their Grandfather was one of the founders of the town and he owned the mills, and the twins thought he was the most wonderful man in the world, except, perhaps, the president. It was a very important part of Jane's perfect Easter that they were going to Grandpa's for dinner.

When they were only three blocks away, somebody called to them. It was Jim's friend, Bob Cassidy.

"Did you ever see an egg that would bounce," asked Bob.

"No," said Jim.

Bob held a blue egg in his hand, and out he ran to show it to the Cater twins. After he had let them see it, he threw it down hard on the pavement and it bounced right back into his hand.

"Aw, it's a rubber egg!" cried Jim. "Wish I had one. I'd like to play a joke on Grandpa."

"I'll lend this one to you," said Bob, "if you'll bring it right back."

"I may have to keep it quite a while," said Jim, who was particular about the promises he made.

"Well, bring it back when you can," said Bob.

Jim and his sister walked the rest of the way, Jim bounced the rubber egg once in a while. When he got in sight of his grandfather's he put the egg into his pocket.

The old gentleman stood on the porch waiting to welcome his little guests.

"Well, well," he greeted them. "Happy Easter! How did the Easter rabbit treat you today?"

"Wonderfully!" replied Jane. "We had eggs hidden all over the house and I got four white cotton rabbits pulling a baby carriage with a chocolate egg with my name on it and Jim got four cotton rabbits with carrots in their mouths, pulling a wheelbarrow full of jelly beans and a chocolate egg with his name and address on it."

"Well, well!" exclaimed Grandpa. "I think he left something here for you too."

"May we roll eggs on the lawn after dinner?" asked Jim.

"It's kind of muddy," said Grandpa. "But I have no objection."

"I think an egg eating contest would be kind of fun—all try to see how many Easter eggs we can eat," said Jim.

You see, he was trying to fix it so he could fool his grandfather with his rubber egg.

"I can't eat any hard-boiled eggs any more," said Grandpa.

"Well, we could play catch with them then," said Jim.

His grandfather looked puzzled. He had never heard of playing catch with Easter eggs, but he said he would try it after dinner.

"In the house there was a very pale skinny boy named Larry, who was a kind of cousin of the twins. He lived in another town, but was spending his Easter vacation with Grandfather. The twins had been told that he was weak and sickly and they must be careful not to play too hard with him.

After dinner Jim wanted to start right in playing, but Grandpa said he would have to have time to digest, and he sat down in a big chair with a cigar.

"Grandpa says he can't eat hard-boiled eggs any more," said Jim. "So let's have our egg eating contest while he is resting."

He gave Jane a wink so she would understand that now he was going to play a joke with the rubber egg. There were plenty of colored eggs around the house, eggs of every hue, and the children spent a merry hour hunting them. Then they sat down in the sun-parlor and began their contest. Each had eaten four eggs, when Jim slipped his rubber egg in the pile of eggs.

"You know," said Jane, "some of the dye seems to have soaked right through the shells. I hope it isn't poisonous."

"Oh no," said Larry. "I'm sure they wouldn't allow the stores to sell poisonous dyes."

"Well, here's a blue one all shelled," said Jane, reaching into the pile.

Jim watched her hand the blue egg to Larry. Larry dipped it in the salt and took a big bite. They expected to see him look surprised and spit out his mouthful, but no, he chewed it up and swallowed it. Jim's eyes bulged as he watched Larry eat every bit of the rubber egg. Then he looked stealthily at Jane, and she was staring at Larry with a very scared expression.

"Jane!" laughed Jim.

"Oh, it might kill him!" said Jane.

"What?" asked Larry, growing rather pale.

"You ate a rubber egg," said Jim, getting scared too.

"Oh!" cried Larry. "Ouch! Help! I think I'm dying!"

The twins were scared stiff. They ran to Grandpa and told him what had happened.

"I'll send at once for Dr. Moore," said Grandpa. "Dear!

Dear! I never dreamed you children would start eating hard-boiled eggs right after a big dinner."

Larry lay groaning on the floor, and Jane, looking first at him and then at the window box full of hyacinths and daffodils and tulips, felt that her Easter was quite spoiled.

"It's all my fault," she said sadly.

The sun-parlor was in an awful mess. Egg shells of every hue lay on the floor, as well as the eggs. Jane meekly got a green and purple Easter basket and began gathering up the eggs, and Grandpa gathered up poor Larry and held him tenderly while they waited for Dr. Moore.

The good doctor was not long in coming and when he heard that the boy had eaten a rubber egg he pulled his stomach-pump out of his bag and looked pretty grim. Larry yelled with fright.

Just in the nick of time, Jane gave a loud shout.

"Wait!" she cried. "It is a happy Easter after all. Here's the rubber egg. Larry must have eaten a good one."

She held it up and the doctor looked at it, and then bounced it on the floor. It was the rubber egg. Larry sat up and wiped his eyes.

"Well, little man, how do you feel now?" inquired the old Grandfather.

"Much better," said Larry, beginning to grin.

"Oh, Larry," said Jane. "This came near not being a perfect Easter!"—Selected.

◆◆◆ "DEAD WORKS"

A principle recognized in the courts and elsewhere is that the motive is part of the act. According to that principle how many dead deeds there must be! What heart-searching that principle should cause in the best men of action!

When a man does lesser good acts to excuse his rejection of God's Son, our Savior, are those not deeds of death? "The good is the enemy of the best." Nowhere is that dictum more applicable than to the so-called good deeds of those who reject the Prince of Life, and who quiet their consciences with the opiate of their morality. Like one of Spenser's characters, men "slave their infamies with noble deeds." What is more infamous, when God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son—what can be more infamous and death-dealing than to reject that gift and the eternal life which He brings?

What we have just said was said in his own way by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews (6:1; 9:14). "Repentance from dead works" is something the disciple of Jesus should class among his elementary lessons—like his A-B-C. "The blood of Christ shall purge your consciences from dead works to serve the living God."

If it is true that only dead things can issue from the dead, then it is a question how one who is dead in trespasses and sins (dead also because rejecting the Life-Giver) can bring forth good deeds that really live.—Selected.

◆◆◆ "OH, YE OF LITTLE FAITH"

Men render the power of God inoperative and valueless in their lives because of their unbelief. Lack of confidence in God deprives us of the most powerful ally we could have and leaves us helpless to fight the battle of life. For a life triumphant we must have confidence in ourselves and faith in God. Then we will know that our souls are unconquerable.—Selected.

THE BROKEN PINION

I walked through the woodland meadows,
Where sweet the trushes sing;
And I found on a bed of mosses
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old sweet strain,
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared so high again.

I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art;
And, touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took him to my heart.
He lived with a noble purpose
And struggled not in vain;
But the life that sin had stricken
Never soared so high again.

But the bird with the broken pinion
Kept another from the snare;
And the life that sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.
Each loss has its compensation,
There is healing for every pain;
But the bird with a broken pinion
Never soars as high again."

◆◆◆ THE CUMULATIVE POWER OF SIN

In all regions of life, exercise strengthens capacity. The wrestler, according to the old Greek parable, who began by carrying a calf on his shoulders, got to carrying an ox by and by.

It is a solemn thought this of the steady continuous aggravation of sin in the individual character. Surely nothing can be small which goes to make up that rapidly growing total. Beware of the little beginnings which "eat as doth a canker." Beware of the slightest deflection from the straight line of right. If there be two lines, one straight and the other going off at the sharpest angle, you have only to produce both far enough, and there will be room between them for all the space that separates hell from heaven! Beware of lading your souls with the weight of small, single sins. We heap upon ourselves, by slow, steady accretion through a lifetime, the weight that, though it is gathered by grains, crushes the soul. There is nothing heavier than sand. You may lift it by particles. It drifts in atoms, but heaped upon a man it will break his bones, and blown over the land it buries pyramids and sphinx, the temples of the gods, and the homes of men beneath its barren solid waves. So with every soul that it under the dominion of these dying desires, it is slowly rotting away piecemeal, "waxing corrupt according to the lusts of deceit."—Alexander MacLaren.

◆◆◆ VILLAINY

Villainy that is vigilant will be an overmatch for Virtue if she slumbers on her post: hence it is that a bad cause has often triumphed over a good one; for the partisans of the former, knowing that their cause will do nothing for them, have done everything for their cause; whereas the friends of the latter are too apt to expect everything from their cause, and to do nothing for themselves.—Selected.

The above is our financial report for two weeks. There are a few things to report under clothing and other gifts, but we will get that ready for next week's paper. Thank you, one and all, for your thoughtfulness of us.

We have some good news in the shaping. Will tell you when it is fully worked out. We also thank those who have kindly remembered Miss Eloise Beam, our high school student who is graduating from the Jamestown high school this week. She will write her own notes of thanks, so we will not list that in Herald.

Faithfully yours,
A. G. DIXON.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Grover L. Angel

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MAY 19: "WHY IS JESUS THE WORLD'S GREATEST LEADER?"

John 15:9-16; 12:23-27

Plans for the Meeting

Plan this as a birthday party, celebration of the 1899th anniversary of the founding of the church. It was just 1899 years ago on Pentecost Sunday, seven weeks after Easter, that Peter preached his great sermon and Christ's church was launched. Invite the entire membership of the church to attend as your society's guests at a great birthday meeting.

Points for the Leader

This is the third of a series of nine topics under the general heading, "Youth and Larger Leadership." We are celebrating in connection with this topic the 1899th birthday anniversary of the church. Christ came to establish this church on earth. The topic this evening fits ideally into a discussion of this glorious history, since Christ is the leader of His church, and it is through His church that His leadership has made itself so great a power in the world. You might ask the question, "Why is Jesus the world's greatest leader?" The answer is four-fold: He is the world's greatest leader, first, because of His purpose; second, because of His preparation; third, because of His methods; fourth, because of the results of His leadership. He shall now have these four topics discussed by individual members of our society.

Suggested Program

Quiet music.
Call to worship.
Responsive reading: "God Our Keeper and Shepherd," (Hymnal for American Youth).
Hymn.
Prayer.
Announcements.
Offering.
Leader's talk.
Discussion of Topics:
a. The Leader's Purpose.
b. The Leader's Training.
c. The Leader's Methods.
d. The Leader's Results.
Answering of questions.
Poem.
Hymn.
Sentence prayers.
Talk by adult on "The Founding of the Church."
Mizpah.

Suitable Songs

"More About Jesus."
"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."
"Come, Thou Almighty King."
"I Walk With the King."
"He Leadeth Me."
"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."
"Anywhere With Jesus."
"Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Helps for Participants

A. The Leader's Purpose: Great leaders must of necessity have great goals. The greatest goal ever fixed by anyone in the world's history was set by Christ, the winning of the whole world to His divine plan of salvation and to His divine gospel of love.

B. The Leader's Training: He who leads must first submit to leading. Obedience is the first law of training. Jesus was Master of Himself and of His subject before He accepted the reins of leadership.

C. The Leader's Methods: Christ is the world's greatest leader because He used the most effective methods. Jesus commanded His disciples to serve, and set the example by serving. He always found time to serve individuals.

D. The Leader's Results: The results of Christ's leadership placed Him on the throne as Lord of lords and King of kings. He won the greatest victory that one can win, the victory over life and death. He has been a blessing to individual lives so thousands and thousands of people testify.

Questions That Might Be Asked

1. Is service in the church and in Christ's name the only unselfish service?
2. Who is the greater leader and why—The highly educated and trained surgeon who saves lives by his skill, but does not profess Christ, or the humble, uneducated Christian whose chief purpose in life is to serve Christ?
3. Can a college graduate do more for Christ than one who is not a college graduate?
4. What definite training is offered to those who would serve in Christ's kingdom?
5. Give one commandment of Christ which He also taught by example.
6. What advantages do we private individuals have which a president or a king does not have?
7. Does the size of an army indicate the greatness of its leader?
8. Which is the greater result of Christ's leadership: The freeing of slaves, the erec-

Christian Endeavor Society Officers at High Point College for the Coming Year

The above students have been elected as officers in the Christian Endeavor Society at High Point College for the school year 1929-1930: (1) Elizabeth Hamner, of Julian, President; (2) J. Taft White, Olin, Vice-President; (3) Olive Thomas, Mars Hill, Secretary; (4) E. C. Glasgow, Castalia, Treasurer; (5) Graham R. Madison, Jennings, Chorister; (6) Francis Pritchett, Burlington, Pianist; (7) Talton J. Whitehead, Snow Camp, City-Union Council Representative. Other officers are Sue Morzan, Farmer, Assistant Treasurer, and Truth Isley, Graham, Assistant Pianist. The society is the largest and perhaps the strongest student organization at the institution.

Leader of High Point College C. E. Society During Past Year

Grover L. Angel, of Mars Hill, member of the Senior Class at High Point College and president of the Christian Endeavor Society, has successfully led our college in winning the banner for the most efficient C. E. work in the city of High Point during the past year. It is very possible that his reports will win the banner of the State Christian Endeavor Union at the annual conference this summer for the best society in North Carolina. Mr. Angel is active in all student organizations and is one of the best all-round students at the college.

Appropriate Quotations

"Christ is come to be my Friend,
Leading, loving to the end;
Christ is come to be my King,
Ordering, ruling everything.
Christ is come. Enough for me,
Lonely though the pathway be."

—Anon.

"A man may go to heaven without health, without riches, without honors, without learning, without friends; but he can never go there without Christ."—John Dyer.

"He is a path, if any be misled;
He is a robe, if any naked be;
If any chance to hunger, He is bread;
If any be a bondman, He is free;
If any be but weak, how strong He is!
To dead men life He is; to sick men,
health;
To blind men, sight, and to the needy, wealth;
A pleasure without loss, a treasure without stealth."

—From "The Excellency of Christ," by Giles Fletcher.

Poetry to the Point THE ETERNAL GOODNESS

"O, Friends! with whom my feet have trod
The quiet aisles of prayer,

Glad witness to your zeal for God
And love of man I bear.

"I walk with bare, hushed feet the ground
To tread with boldness shod;
I dare not fix with mete and bound
The love and power of God.

"Ye praise His justice; even such His pitying love I deem:
Ye seek a king; I fain would touch
The robe that hath no seam.

"Yet, in the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixed trust my spirit clings;
I know that God is good!

"I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.

"And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care."

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

MYSTERY EXPLAINED

I had a dream—not all a dream—
Quite wide awake at night:
The sweetest music filled the air,
My very soul's delight.

But whence it came was mystery,
There was no harper there.
I thought I heard the purr of wings,
A-rustling through the air.

Could it be true the angels came
To play on earth a song?
It surely seemed most likely thing:
In that what could be wrong?

But now the wonder's quite all gone,
All about it now I know:
For it, they tell in words quite plain,
Was simply radio.

In the tropics, where birds are agents in pollinating flowers, scarlet is much commoner than other shades.—Exchange.

His Progress

An old Southern planter met one of his former negroes whom he had not seen for a long time. "Well, well!" said the planter. "What are you doing now, Uncle Amos?" "I's preachin' of de gospel." "What! You preaching?" "Yassah, marster, I'se a-preachin'!" "Well, well! Do you use notes?" "Nossuh. At de fust I use notes, but now I demands de cash."—New Success.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point. On May 6 at High Point College, Prof. E. B. Stimson presented Miss Edna Nicholson, of Melrose, N. C., in her junior piano recital and she was assisted by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, soprano, and the College Orchestra. Miss Nicholson's program was pretentious, but well-selected, and contained a Chopin group, a Bach number which was well executed, and a modern group which was very pleasing, especially, "The Music Box." The most difficult number was Mendelssohn's Concerto Opus 25, when Miss Nicholson was accompanied by Miss Alma Andrews at the piano and the High Point College Orchestra. This number was played with ease and brilliancy, and shows promise of a true artist. Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, who is a voice pupil of Professor Stimson, possesses a clear, sweet soprano, and rendered her number with most pleasing effect. The audience was charmed with this delightful recital given by these talented sisters.

On Tuesday evening, May 7th, a beautiful concert was given in the assembly room of First church by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson and his College Orchestra, assisted by Miss Virginia Frank's string quartette, and a number of local artists. Prof. Stimson has developed a most creditable orchestra and chorus, whose numbers were given in a beautiful and pleasing manner, and the audience was delighted with their rendition. "Deep River," a spiritual by Burleigh, was particularly pleasing and well rendered by the chorus. C. L. Gray, Jr., who is a great favorite, sang two numbers in his charming tenor, and Mesdames J. H. Allred and J. C. Whitesell sang as a duet "O That We Two Were Maying!" to the great delight of the audience. Mrs. J. H. Allred sang "The Wind's in the South" in a charming, vivacious manner, and "The False Prophet" was rendered most beautifully by Miss Dorothy Hoskins, of High Point. Much praise is due to Prof. Stimson for this delightful concert, which was presented under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary.

A number of our people went to Winston-Salem Thursday and Friday evenings to attend the sessions of the State Baraca-Philanthropy Convention.

Mother's Day was beautifully and appropriately observed on last Sunday. A number of families had seats together, as well as many mothers and daughters. At the morning service Prof. Stimson sang "Little Mother of Mine," by Burleigh, with impressive effect, and the organ prelude was "Songs My Mother Taught Me." The choir rendered the anthem, "The Lord Is King." Rev. R. I. Farmer chose as his text for a beautiful sermon on "A Portrait of Mother" the memorable words of Jesus as He hung suspended on the cross, "Behold Thy Mother." These words were spoken in the closing scene of His life to John, the beloved, when His mother was in danger. In this tragic moment, in the presence of sorrow and strain, Jesus made a climax to the scene by choosing the only one whom He thought was worthy to be entrusted with the care of His mother, and said, "Behold thy son!" What is the standard of motherhood and why Mother's Day? This hour would be idle if it means only flowers and candy sent to our mothers. It means, beyond everything else, that we realize the love and sacrifice of mothers. The ideal attributes of motherhood are expressed in I Cor. 13:13: "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love." Mothers must have faith in God, for it requires faith to accomplish His purposes. In a recent survey of broken homes in Kansas City, 3,000 in number, there was not one where both the father and mother were active Christians, and only 12 where one was a Christian. Mr. Farmer made an eloquent appeal to the women of the Methodist Protestant church, reminding them that they owe everything to the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in this new feminism God is expecting you to be true to Him. Mothers should talk personally to their children about the things of the spirit before they go out to fight the battles of life. Look how this mother love pervades all the world,

Besides faith, mothers have hope. Augustine's mother prayed for his conversion for 30 years, and was finally rewarded with her heart's desire. Nancy Jane McConnell, a widowed mother of Ohio, had such faith, hope, and love that she sent out from her home three noble sons to grace the world as ministers, one of whom, Bishop McConnell, will in a few weeks deliver the Baccalaureate sermon at Duke University Commencement. All sweet things of earth, a child's smile, the beauty of a flower, the glory of sunset, vanish away, but the love of a mother abides eternally.

"The bravest battle that ever was fought? Shall I tell you where and when?

On the maps of the world you will find it not:

It was fought by the mothers of men."

At the Sunday evening service the Boy Scout Troop, Mr. Holt McPherson, Scoutmaster, received their charter from Troop No. 4

JAMESTOWN COLLEGE MARKER

This memorial to the Jamestown Female College was erected near Woman's Hall, High Point College, by the Thalean and Nikanthan Literary Societies, and was dedicated by them on their annual Society Day, May 4. The foundation contains brick taken from the old college.

of Wesley Memorial M. E. Church. This was an impressive service for the boys and their friends.

The Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting and enthusiastic meeting at the church Monday afternoon with an attendance of 32. Mrs. S. S. Coe presided, and Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr., read the minutes of last meeting. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. J. G. Snipes, who read Prov. 31. A motion to hold a bazaar and two meals on one day the latter part of October or November was carried and Mrs. Ben Moore is appointed permanent chairman of the committee in charge. A breakfast for the Community Chest workers will be served by Mrs. Rankin's Circle next week. A dinner was served to the Rotary Club by one of the Circles last week. The treasurer reported a balance of $120 in the treasury and after reports from the chairmen of Circles it was found that the proceeds from a rummage sale, tickets for the concert and pledge money amounted to the sum of $127.00. We have sent the amount of $77.45 to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer for Student Loan Fund and General Fund in Foreign Society. It was decided to contribute a whole scholarship of $100 to the High Point College Student Loan Fund. A prize of $5.00 will be given to the Circle contributing the largest amount from the little aprons sent out for waist measures, and this will be awarded next Monday. A prize of $5.00 is also offered to the Circle maintaining the largest attendance for six months. Mrs. Whitesell, leader of the Junior Mission Circle, reported the amount of $3.69 contributed by this group of children, to be divided equally between Home and Foreign work. It was voted to dispense with refreshments at the general meetings. The Auxiliary was then dismissed with prayer by Mrs. C. L. Whitaker.

The C. E. Society presented a Mother's Day pageant at their meeting Monday evening.

A party composed of Prof. Stimson, Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer and Mrs. R. M. Andrews motored to Chapel Hill Monday to pay a visit to the grand old University.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Last Sunday our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, brought to us a very interesting and helpful Mother's Day message. A good sized congregation greeted the pastor for this service.

Sunday school is doing fine here now. Glad to see so many taking so much interest.

Children's Day service will be held here the second Sunday in June, all day service, dinner on the grounds.

ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Lexington.—Mr. Bethea was back with us again Sunday after an absence of about a week conducting revival services at Caroleen.

Mother's Day was observed at the 11 o'clock hour. A beautiful and touching tribute was paid to all worthy mothers by Mr. Bethea. Mrs. Potts sang an appropriate solo in her delightful and appealing way. The special music rendered by Mrs. C. L. Koonts at the piano was beautiful and inspiring beyond description. Every one present was helped and uplifted by the service. At the evening hour our pastor gave us another splendid address, the title of which was "Finished Structures."

Just after the evening service the second quarterly conference was held, Bro. Bethea presiding. At this meeting Mrs. D. C. Potts was elected conference secretary following the resignation of Mrs. J. F. Cox, who had served as secretary a short time following Mrs. H. S. Lanier's resignation. Mr. J. A. Walser and Mr. J. W. Lindsay were nominated for delegates to the Annual Conference. Good reports were made from all branches of the work.

The workers' council will hold their regular meeting at the close of the evening service next Sunday.

Two Bibles have recently been bought by the C. E. Society and were carried to the jail last Wednesday night by members of the society. This was a much-needed gift as there was no Bible in either the men's or women's ward.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Charge.—The revival at the South Lexington church began April 21 and continued until May 2. The engaged help was Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of the Randolph charge. Brother Garner gave us sermons of a high order, convincing and forceful. The singing was in charge of Professor Yokley and was an important factor in the meeting. As a result of the efforts put forth 44 conversions and 25 accessions to the church occurred. We are sure that the good done exceeds even the visible results and that in the days that are yet to come there will be revealed results of this meeting that cannot now be seen. The co-operation and assistance of Brother Bethea, who called off his services for the meeting, is greatly appreciated.

An enjoyable occasion was had on Thursday evening, May 9th, when the Ladies' Aid Society met at the beautiful and attractive home of Mrs. Guy Barber. Ways and means of raising funds were discussed. After the business of the evening had been transacted, refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served. The work of the society has proved to be a great help to the church here.

At Mount Carmel there continue to appear evidences of progress in the work of the church. Attendance in the Sunday school and at the preaching services is good. The Christian Endeavor Society has been reorganized and the young people are manifesting much interest in the work.

We are thankful for the indications of growth on the charge, and for the interest of the people in the work of the Lord.

C. G. ISLEY.

Mount Lebanon, Randleman.—Since my last report our Sunday school and church work has been moving along nicely.

On last Sunday the Junior Philathea class opened Sunday school with a Mother's Day program. It was a splendid program and was well presented.

On the first Sunday our pastor brought us a message based on the parable of the Prodigal Son, his subject being, "The Prodigal Away From Home; the Sinner at Home." Brother Williams always brings us very fine sermons, but this was one of his best. The splendid work he is doing here is appreciated, not only by his own members, but by members of other churches as well. This is evidenced by the steady increase in church attendance.

Our special series of revival services begins the third Sunday in June. On that day also we expect to have our Home-Coming Day. Announcements concerning both will be made later, but please keep them in mind and those of you whose church home has been Mt. Lebanon are urged to be with us then.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Neese and daughter, Sara Marie, of Glen Raven, were in our town one day last week. We are always glad to see our former pastor and family.

REPORTER.

Gravelly Hill Union Sunday School.—We have organized a Sunday school here. We have on roll 88. We have for the superintendent Mr. L. H. McAdams; assistant superintendent, Mr. A. W. Lloyd; secretary-treasurer, the writer; teachers: Mr. L. E. Sykes, Mrs. C. C. Davis, Mrs. C. E. Squires, Miss Nannie McAdams, Mrs. E. E. Brown.

We are asking the prayers of the church members.

We are going to have preaching here just as soon as we can find some pastor that will give us a sermon.

Union, Halifax Charge.—On Tuesday, April 30, 1929, we organized our first Ladies' Aid Society. Due to the fact that we are just a small church and have such a few members, we have had no Ladies' Aid Society before now. But we decided that a faithful few can do a great deal, working together in the capacity of a society.

Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, conducted our first meeting, and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. E. A. Smith; vice-president, Mrs. N. W. Cousin; secretary, Ruth Lewis; treasurer, Mrs. H. G. Lewis; membership committee, Mrs. E. V. Neville, Louise Lewis, Lessie Mae Taylor; program committee, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. C. L. Spencer, Mrs. Martin.

It was decided that our next meeting should be held Friday before the fourth Sunday in May at 3:30 o'clock in the home of our president, Mrs. E. A. Smith.

We now have only 11 members, but we are hoping to add more at our next meeting. We extend an invitation to the members of all Ladies' Aid Societies on Halifax charge to come to our society. We will surely appreciate your advice and help at any time, for we are beginning with few in number, and with practically no experience.

Asheboro.—Our revival services which began April 28 came to a close on Wednesday night, May 8. Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Winston, came to us on Monday after the meeting started and remained to the close, preaching twice each day, the services during the week being at 3:30 and 7:30 p. m. The services were well attended and much good was accomplished. Brother Surratt made a fine impression on our people and his sermons were of a high order. He is one of the few preachers who are at their best at every service. His delivery is pleasing and his presentation of the truth is forceful, making him one of the leading preachers in our conference, according to this writer's opinion. Some of the results were a real revival among our members and about 50 boys and girls to decide for Christ in the decision service. Yesterday morning there was a beautiful sight when 21 boys and girls gathered around the altar of the church, taking the church vows, 20 of them joining on profession of faith and one young lady joining by letter. On Saturday afternoon the pastor met the children who wanted to join the church and gave them instruction concerning the Christian life, baptism and church membership. Really, it was the most satisfactory meeting of the kind this pastor has ever had. The children seemed to come to learn and they meant business. And in the service yesterday there seemed to be a seriousness on their part which indicated they were in earnest about the matter. For the benefit of other who may want to join next Sunday the pastor will be at the church on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock to give instruction and counsel.

The entire morning service yesterday was given over to the reception of members and to giving advice to the new members and the old ones, saving the Mother's Day sermon for the evening hour.

Memorial service for all the deceased members of our church will be held on the fourth Sunday morning in this month.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—Our church is moving along very nicely with our Sunday school and church.

The memorial services will be held on the fourth Sunday in May. There will be an all-day service. Rev. S. W. Taylor will assist in the pulpit at 11 o'clock, and Mr. R. T. Pope, a Methodist church worker, will speak in the afternoon. Every one is cordially invited to attend.

REPORTER.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Bro. Reed preached for us the last third Sunday, giving us a good sermon. The congregation was fairly good.

Most all the old people take part in prayer meeting. We hope more will come to Sunday school. We have 80 on roll, but we need you all there.

Rally Day at Chapel Hill the third Sunday. Everybody is invited. We will welcome all our former pastors back. We invite all singers.

Mr. Mayberry Russell is sick. His children were called home yesterday morning.

We are looking forward to the third Sunday in September. That will be our camp meeting. We ask prayer. We need a great revival.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school is running well over the hundred mark new with increasing interest.

Bro. Edgar Lane, of High Point College, and one of his college chums, Mr. John Easter, were with us in Sunday school today.

On Wednesday night the choir will meet to rehearse some songs for memorial service next Sunday. This will be an all-day service with dinner on the grounds. You are invited to be present with plenty of flowers and food.

Our teachers' meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. E. S. Stone on Saturday after the third Sunday.

Next Friday morning there will be a meeting of the members of Mount Zion for the purpose of cleaning the cemetery and church grounds. If it is not fit to work on Friday, come Saturday morning.

Last Sunday was a good day for us. Mrs. George Thomas, a very spirited Sunday school worker of Trinity M. E. church, came and taught our women and young women's class, and it was a treat. After the lesson period Mrs. Thomas told the small children a beautiful Bible story, which they enjoyed very much. At 8 p. m. a very fine service was held, sponsored by our Sunday school, conducted by the faculty of Pinnacle High School. Prof. W. C. Dutton preached and Mr. White, another one of the teachers and a natural born singer, conducted the singing, with several other teachers singing in the choir and Miss Mary Sullivan at the piano.

Next Saturday at 1:30 p. m. the third quarterly conference will meet at Mt. Zion.

Bro. Hunter filled his appointment the last fourth Sunday night. Mrs. Hunter was able to be out again. We are glad to report her improvement. Mrs. Mabel Carson (Watson), daughter of Mr. T. O. Watson, of Pinnacle, died at a Mount Airy hospital last Saturday. The funeral will be conducted at Ebenezer M. E. church, after which she will be buried in a Pilot Mountain cemetery.

Looking for you at the memorial service next Sunday.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Mother's Day services were held yesterday at Chestnut Ridge and Hebron. The day was fine; large congregations present at each church.

Dean P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, preached the commencement sermon at Effland High School at 8 p. m. yesterday. A large congregation was present. Dr. Lindley was at his best, which is saying enough. The following of our Methodist Protestant young people are finishing high school this year: Hillsboro High School—Taylor Bivins, Lucile Bivins, Dorris Bivins, Janie Blackwood and Hazel Snipes; Effland High School—William McAdams, Warren McAdams, Samuel Pender, Gordon Brown, Erwin Taylor, Annie Jones and Annie Belle James. Congratulations to one and all.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth.—The pastor regretted that he had to be away from the charge last Sunday, being called to Burlington on account of the serious illness of a brother. We are thankful to Rev. D. C. Norman, of the M. E. Church, South, for his kindness in meeting our appointment at Union Hill Church Sunday morning. He has preached there before and I presume the people enjoyed his visit with them again last Sunday.

On the first Sunday in this month we were at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches for the regular appointments. At Baltimore church we were met by an unusually large congregation, some of whom were visitors, members of other churches. We were invited to the splendid home of Bro. W. H. Kelly for dinner. Mrs. Kelly and her daughter, Mrs. Odell Lakey, have our thanks for a good dinner. A large congregation was present at Stony Knoll church in the afternoon, and it was a pleasure to speak to these people. They decided to begin their revival meeting the first Sunday in August. We will have Rev. J. D. Cranford, pastor of the Kernersville Charge, as pulpit help.

The writer was privileged to be in Burlington last Sunday morning. We went to Fountain Place for the preaching service, to worship with the congregation of this church, and we thought, to hear their popular pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, preach. But we were disappointed in this, as we could not resist the kind, gentle persuasion of Bro. Chambliss to have the visiting minister speak. It was a pleasure to be with and try to speak to the congregation of Fountain Place Church, which is apparently growing and becoming a force and power for righteousness in that section of Burlington. Bro. Chambliss seems popular with his people and the work there is apparently in splendid condition.

We learned this morning (Monday) of the illness of one of the older members of Pleasant Hill church, Bro. U. Walter Long, but his neighbors and friends are hopeful that he will soon recover. Mrs. Polly Whitman has been confined for more than two weeks on account of a fall. Her relatives and friends hope for her a complete recovery. She was 90 years of age last November.

We wish to thank some of the people of Pleasant Hill church for gifts brought to the parsonage recently. Bro. Ellis Long has our thanks for some nice honey, and Mrs. Arthur Long (member of another denomination) has given us milk. We appreciate these gifts very much.

Our services next Sunday will be with Pleasant Hill church in the morning and Tabernacle church in the afternoon. The Lord's Supper is to be observed at each church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—We began our C. E. Society again the second Sunday in April with 45 members on roll. We have our meetings every Sunday night beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. E. L. Edwards was our leader for Sunday night, May 12th. The topic, "Appreciating Our Parents as Leaders," was thoroughly enjoyed by those present.

President S. W. Taylor was with us last Sunday and brought to us a helpful message. Our congregation was very good. We had some people from other churches to worship with us. I'm sure all enjoyed his message.

Since our last report we lost one of our members, Mrs. Robert Taylor, of Vineland, Va. Her remains were laid to rest in her family church cemetery on April 9. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, assisted by Rev. L. E. Harrell, of North Emporia.

On Sunday morning, May 5, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Clary and took from them their infant son, William Henry. May God bless and comfort the bereaved family.

REPORTER.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Our pastor preached at this place the second Sunday morning, delivering a very impressive sermon. It being Mother's Day, there were many flowers in evidence, both white and red. There was a considerable increase in the congregation at this service.

After the sermon, at the invitation of the pastor a goodly number went forward and pledged themselves to a more loyal life of Christian service.

Our Young People's C. E. Society met in the afternoon at 3:30 with Miss Mabel Hawkins leading the meeting. This was the first meeting they have held for some time. They re-organized, electing Mr. Lorenzo Pittard as president. The pastor urged the young people to their best. Their next meeting was announced for next Sunday at 11 a. m.

Our Sunday school attendance is much better than it was some weeks ago, and we hope

In his passing the church, the community, the home has lost a friend indeed. I wish, above all things, that when I pass I may have lived so that the fine things that were said of this soldier of the Cross can truthfully be said of me. And that the officiating minister can speak with the ease, and almost no reservation with which his pastor could have spoken. May his ranks be filled, and may his mantle fall heavily upon sturdy shoulders among his dear children, who will bear it with a double portion of his spirit. Praying for the abiding presence of the One who comes in when all the world goes out, upon the grief-stricken home with the vacant chair

Jones

Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Jones was born July 10, 1839. In her 89th year she was released from her suffering and carried to that Home beyond the skies, where the weary find rest and pain and sorrow are no more.

In her early girlhood she was converted and joined Zion M. P. Church and remained a member there until a few years before her death. She then transferred her membership to Concord M. P. Church.

Mrs. Jones was very widely known, as she took an active part in all church work wherever she attended. She never let an opportunity pass for trying to win souls to Christ. In the beauty of her spirit and in her good deeds she will live in the hearts of those who knew and loved her.

She served as matron of Guilford College for 14 years and was connected with the Oxford Orphanage for several years before going to Guilford.

Mrs. Jones was twice married, first to Mr. Holmes and later to Mr. J. G. Jones. To this union were born two children, Mrs. Z. I. McEane, Saxapahaw, N. C., and Mr. C. M. Jones, Mebane, N. C. Both, with 13 grandchildren and the great-grandchildren, survive; also two sisters, Mrs. Alson Pickett, of California, and Mrs. Simon Thomas, of Franklinton.

The funeral services were conducted at Concord Church Sunday, May 5th, at 3 o'clock by her pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, assisted by T. F. Andrews and W. T. Hurst, and interment was made in the church cemetery.

The floral offering and crowded church at her funeral testified as to how "Aunt Camie" was held in esteem.

The flowers were carried by her granddaughters and near relatives.

Glenn

W. A. N. Glenn died May 4, 1929, being 85 years, one month and 13 days old. On June 16th, 1867, he was married to Julia Ann Perry, who preceded him to the grave more than 11 years ago. To this union were born the following children: W. A. Glenn, R. A. Glenn, C. S. Glenn, D. D. Glenn, A. B. Glenn, J. O. Glenn and J. F. Glenn. About seven months ago R. A. Glenn preceded him to the grave.

He joined Center M. P. Church when a young man and remained a consistent member to his death. To his family, his church and country he was loyal. The world is better for his having lived, and heaven is richer for his having departed.

Funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer, and body laid to rest in Center cemetery.

J. A. BURGESS.

McVey

Sadness was brought to our community at Saxapahaw when the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McVey and gave Dewitt, their son, a summons to go out of this world into the eternal realms of God.

Dewitt was a young man near the age of twenty years. We regretted to see him go so young, yet we had to submit to the will of Him who makes no mistakes.

The funeral services were conducted in Saxapahaw Union Church by his pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, assisted by Dr. P. E. Lindley and Rev. H. L. Isley, his former pastor, after which the body was laid to rest in Moore's Chapel cemetery.

O. C. LOY.

Jenkins

On April 9, 1929, a very sad death took place in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Paris, of Salem community, and took from their midst the soul of their daughter, Mrs. Joy Jenkins, who was making her home with them.

It seemed hard for her to go so young, yet she went bravely trusting in Him who never doeth any wrong.

Funeral services were held in Salem M. P. Church, of which she was a member, by her pastor, O. C. Loy. After the funeral services the body was laid to rest under a beautiful mound of flowers in Salem cemetery.

—The new church at Concord will present an imposing appearance if built according to plan. We hope to receive a cut of it that we may present it to our readers. Our next Annual Conference is to meet in this splendid church.

—The Orlando, Florida, First Christian Church is now occupying its new church building. The Endeavorers donated song-books, gave a Bible to the minister, arranged the minister's study, donated four plants and ten shrubs for the church lawn, graded the lawn, sowed grass-seed, and set out the shrubs.

—Bro. Roscoe Causey, near Pleasant Union church, had the misfortune to lose thousands in a fire one Saturday night. His barn and its contents, including horses, cows, grain, feed, meat, machinery, all were destroyed while he looked helplessly on. The building was enveloped in flames when the fire was discovered, about 11 o'clock. How the fire started is unknown. The building was wired for electric currents, but seemed safely so. Last August Brother Causey had an accident on the road which seemed a great misfortune. Now this. But losses will come as well as gains, and sometimes the losses are worth more than the gains. All depends on the way they are borne.

—In company with Bro. Taylor we went to see Bro. Carmichael yesterday. He was sitting propped up in bed and talked cheerfully of his condition. We hope he will continue to improve until he has his usual health.

—Dr. Macfarland of the Federal Council of Churches had the misfortune recently to fall over a low fence and break both his arms.

—Dr. T. H. Lewis asks in a recent editorial: "Is not Jesus as much disappointed in a church that turns a member out for not paying as He is with a member that does not pay?" The doctor would not turn a member out until much effort has been made to reclaim him.

—Rev. S. J. Satterfield of the West Virginia Conference is dead.

—It was reported in Greensboro a few days ago that Rev. O. C. Loy had been severely poisoned and was lying at the point of death. Earnest prayer was offered for him in the West End revival meeting. Then Bros. Taylor, Williams and Gerringer drove down to his home beyond Graham to see him—perhaps for the last time. They found him out in the garden digging bait to go fishing. He had not been poisoned at all. The mystery is how the rumor started. Like the report of Mark Twain's death, as applied to Bro. Loy, it was somewhat exaggerated.

—Rev. Lawrence Little, chairman of M. P. Advisory Committee on Near East Relief, sends out a strong appeal for money to complete the loving work of caring for orphans in the Near East. Are there not some among our readers who can and should help in this? Money may be sent to Near East Relief, 151 Fifth Ave., New York City. As small a sum as one dollar may turn the scale and save some life.

What Does Sunday Bring to You?

Sunday was made for man,
Therefore was made for you:
Please tell me, if you can,
What good it brings to view.

Does it help you clearly see
That this small earthly ball,
When seen in wider view,
Can scarcely count at all?

Does it impress your mind
With fleetness of this life,
And show you how to find
Your way to noble strife?

Does it lead on your thought
And make you clearly know
The battles here you've fought
Determine where you go?

Does it make soft your heart
With love for fellowmen,
And show to you your part
To help God's message send?

Does Sunday bring you rest
And also bring you strength,
And make your life more blest,
And give it greater length?

Sunday is sent from Heaven
To needy men on earth:
It is best day in seven
If you but know its worth.

Problems Everywhere

We all have our problems and are keenly aware of it, but we do not know so well that problems are met everywhere. Some positions look easy from the outside. They seem to be sinecures. But hear the men who occupy them tell their stories and you will see quite otherwise. Hard problems, perplexing problems, vexing problems are found everywhere. There is no escaping them. You may flee to another church or pastoral charge. You will find them there. You may run away to another denomination. You will find more of them and greater ones. We may choose for ourselves light and pleasant duties. Providence chooses for us heavy and painful duties. We all have our problems because it is good for us to have them. It is not only God's way of doing His work, but it is His way of developing the character of His workers. God does not want us to remain nobodies. He wants us to become somebodies, and He sees to it that we have a chance. It is our problems that make us if we do not let them break us. Our burdens are fitted to our backs. We can bear them by the strength and grace He gives us. If it were not for the divine help our problems would crush us and overcome us. But thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory. We have only to labor on in faith. At length we will see our last problem solved and hear the invitation to rest from our labors here and enter into the more delightful labors of a more delightful life. From work and struggle and strife we will be called to sure reward and to higher opportunities. Painful problems are promoting exercises. They bring to us health and strength of soul. Thank God for the problems He will help you solve.

If There Were No God—

Then there could have been no creation and the world and all things in the world always existed. Is the world at bottom one thing or many things? If one thing, by what power did it become differentiated into so many things? If many things, how came these to be assembled into one orderly universe? The materialistic philosophers can give no satisfactory answer to either question.

If there were no God, there was no power to impose design on the material world. The atheists can evade this point only by denying the existence of design. The eye is an accident. The ear is an accident. All parts of animal bodies are accidents. They serve a use but not a purpose. They had no planner. They just happened to fall into shape. By similar reasoning you can prove that a house had no intelligent builder. The wind and sun blew the bricks together out of the clay and baked them hard. Then in a great hurricane the bricks were swept up into a pile in the form of a house. Another storm blew down trees and split them into shingles and spread them out for a roof and then shaped nails out of the iron ore and with mighty force drove them in, holding the shingles in place. This is no more absurd and improbable than the atheistic accounts of the formation of parts of the world.

If there were no God, of course there would be no divine providence. But it would be quite impossible for the atheist to show how there could originate in the world a being that would feel the need of divine providence. How could the human soul spring out of matter? How could the dead bring forth life? The atheists are hoping to find that life is inherent in matter, but they have never found it. If they did find it, they would but add to the evidence of a marvelous creative power. Such a discovery would not eliminate the thought of God, but would magnify the power of God. The atheists cannot lay just claim to being brilliant thinkers. If there were in the world no more intelligence than they exhibit, it would not be very difficult to believe that there is either no God or at best a very inferior and unsuccessful one.

THE LAYMAN COMPANY, WHAT AND WHY?

The Layman Company is a great idea put into practical everyday operation. "Layman," who founded the company, believed that the surest and cheapest way to reach everybody with the truth about tithing was to make possible the scattering of that truth in print, at the smallest cost, and often.

It is well within the facts to say that "Layman" did more than all other men of his generation to teach tithing without reference to the immediate money necessities of any church or benevolent enterprise. He hammered away at the principle, leaving its application to the conscience of the individual Christian.

Who was "Layman"? He never carried on the work under his name, but in private he was Thomas Kane, a Presbyterian elder, a Chicago business man, as successful in his own business as he was in his advocacy of the tithe as a Christian privilege and duty.

Thomas Kane, born in Indiana in 1837, was in business in Chicago for more than fifty years. He dealt in school furniture, long ago, and at one time was the chief producer of the red-felt bordered "noiseless slate," dear to the school children of an older generation. During the last years of his active business career he was president of the American Spiral Pipe Company.

This remarkable and influential man has been better known to millions of American Christians by the name of "Layman," which he chose half a century ago, when he began his great work for tithing.

It is safe to say that not a single great advance in American church benevolence during the last generation could have succeeded as it did, if it had not been for the quiet, persistent, highly intelligent work of this Presbyterian elder.

When he began, fifty years ago, because he could find no simple pamphlets that suited his purpose, he wrote them himself, and today, after half a century, his "What We Owe" group of writings is still the oftenest reprinted and in the steadiest demand. Later he secured other writers, and now the list of Layman pamphlets includes thirty-five clear and convincing discussions.

When Mr. Kane was about eighty, he saw that if his work were to continue he must make some provision for its management after his death. With this in mind he invited a group of men to join with him in organizing the Layman Company. For six years he served as the company's president and manager.

He had long occupied an office in Chicago's "loop," to which he drove every business day, where, with two salaried assistants, he carried on the work of the company up to two weeks before his death, which occurred on September 26, 1924, at the age of eighty-six.

Mr. Kane created a trust, with the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago as trustee, to which he conveyed a considerable sum, the interest of which was to pay the office force and provide other necessary expenses of the work. This interest is regularly paid by the trustee to the Layman Company. It is not large, and the work could be much extended if the trust fund were increased.

But this fund, modest in amount though it is, makes possible the circulation of more varied tithing truth at a lower price than any other agency has been able to provide. It produces large results with an amazingly small outlay of cash.

It is doubtful if any gift, whether of one dollar or ten thousand, could produce larger or more lasting results than it would in enlarging the activities of the Layman Company. Such a gift would serve all the churches. It would make tithing truth accessible to the smallest and poorest church. And we have abundant evidence that when a church's people adopts tithing the church ceases to be poor.

The directors who were chosen by Mr. Kane to continue his life work act under a charter from the State of Illinois, as a corporation not for profit. Directors now serving are as follows:

Rev. C. B. Althoff, pastor Lorimer Memorial Baptist Church; Rev. Norman B. Barr, superintendent of Olivet Institute (Presbyterian); Rev. Dan B. Brummitt, editor Northwestern Christian Advocate (Methodist); Rev. Frank D. Burhans, pastor Trinity Congregational Church; Rev. W. O. Carrier, pastor Third Presbyterian Church; Mrs. Theodosia Kane Eshbaugh (emeritus); Rev. G. W. Griffith, editor The Free Methodist; Rev. C. G. Kindred, pastor Englewood Disciples Church; Rev. Luther E. Lovejoy, secretary of stewardship (Methodist); Mr. O. O. Montague, real estate (Baptist); Mr. James L. Saylor, attorney at law (Presbyterian); Mr. E. H. Smith, retired (Presbyterian); Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor Fourth Presbyterian Church; Dr. R. J. Wade, secretary World Service Commission (Methodist); Mr. O. R. Williamson, journalist (Presbyterian).

WHAT HANGS ON TOMORROW

"The final decision as to the beverage alcohol problem will be made not today but tomorrow," says Dr. Cherrington. "The final solution of this problem will not be in the hands of those who were responsible for writing the 18th Amendment into the Constitution but of those who knew very little about the struggle leading up to that momentous decision.

"There were practically fifteen million voters eligible to vote in the presidential election of 1928 who were in their teens when national prohibition was adopted. There were approximately a million men and women in the colleges and universities of the nation who were 8, 9, 10 and 11 years old when national prohibition came. There are four million boys and girls in the high school today who were four, and five, and six, and seven years of age when the 18th Amendment was ratified. There are twenty millions of children in the grades and almost twenty millions more outside the public schools, most of whom were unborn when national prohibition was incorporated into the American charter of government. These are the men and women who tomorrow at the ballot box, in the legislature halls, in administrative positions and in the courts will determine the permanent policy of the nation as to the 18th Amendment and beverage alcohol. The great factor therefore is not the next general election; it is the next generation."

THE PEW TO THE PULPIT

Saith the Pew to the Pulpit: "Speak to me of things eternal. Things temporal I know well enough; but strike thou for me the note of the eternal. Warn me of the temptations which shall assail me, and do not hesitate to pronounce the divine judgments upon sin. Tell me of Him whose death on a cross makes atonement for sin. Open for me the window into heaven and let me behold the land that is very far off. Speak thus to me, and I shall not have listened in vain." —The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

"DO SOMETHING UNTIL IT HURTS"

Some one has said that the seven deadly sins are these: Policies without principles; wealth without work; pleasure without conscience; knowledge without character; commerce and industry without morality; science without humanity; worship without sacrifice.

As I understand the meaning of this meeting here, it is at least in one of its phases to fit this last of the seven deadly sins, namely, a worship that is without sacrifice, a Christianity without a cross. And I believe if there is any meaning to World Service it means this: That we are trying to put at the heart of our worship a cross, something for which we see no immediate return, asking for nothing save the privilege of giving, doing the thing not because we are compelled by a program but impelled by a Person, something that we cannot escape because we are in fellowship with Him and we must do because we feel that inward compulsion.

This church, and other churches, has taken upon itself a great World Service program to give the world a chance. It is the biggest business under Heaven.

This meeting here has a meaning too deep for tears and too wide for horizons; it stretches to the last human need, and will not stop until they are all in, at home and abroad.

If we shall be tempted during these days that we are together here just to pluck some beautiful thought or some fine idea or some beautiful plan that shall be put before us to take the esthetics of Christianity, the beauty, art, literature, oratory, architecture, a sterner voice calls to us today as a great group representing Christianity, and that sterner voice says, "Turn a moment from the esthetics. Do something else motivating it and Christ shall come down in the midst of it and hold it and use it, and will turn toward it."

If out of this great meeting here, a meeting the undertone of which I sense as the very undertone that beats at the heart of Christianity, I believe if we deliberately, one by one, go and say, "I am going to take it on myself; it shall not end in a plan, but in the personal taking it on myself to see that my vision meets its obligation and its opportunity through this great passion of World Service," that we will accomplish.—Selected.

WHY I GO TO CHURCH

I go to church because I want my children to go to church. I want them to know something more of this life than business, sport, and selfish amusement. I know only one institution that will teach them that they are divine. The church will interfere with their pleasures at times, but their mother and I sometimes have to do that, and we hope that they will love us none the less because of it. The church will mystify and puzzle them and seem irksome to them now and then. But all things worth while demand something of us in sacrifice. I believe that the church and the things it stands for are necessary to our well being.—Edgar A. Guest, in American Magazine.

THE LARGER OUTLOOK

"And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven!"

The tent was changed for the sky! Abraham sat moodily in his tent; God brought him forth beneath the stars. And that is always the line of the Divine leading. He brings us forth out of our small imprisonments and He sets our feet in a large place. He desires for us height and breadth of view.

For "as the heavens are high above the earth" so are His thoughts higher than our thoughts, and His ways than our ways. He wishes us, I say, to exchange the tent for the sky, and to live and move in great, spacious thoughts of His purpose and will.

How is it with our love? Is it a thing of the tent or of the sky? Does it range over mighty spaces seeking benedictions for a multitude? Or does it dwell in selfish seclusion, imprisoned in merely selfish quest? How is it with our prayers? How big are they? Will a tent contain them, or do they move within the scope and greatness of the heavens? Do they just contain our own families or is China in them, and India, and "the uttermost parts of the earth?" "Look now towards the heavens!" Such must be our outlook if we are the companions of God.—John Henry Jowett.

ONE STEP AT A TIME

In accomplishing your day's work you have simply to take one step at a time. To take that step wisely is all that you need to think about. If I am climbing a mountain, to look down may make me dizzy; to look too far up may make me tired and discouraged. Take no anxious thought for the morrow. Sufficient for the day—yes, and for each hour in the day—is the toil or the trial thereof. There is not a child of God in this world who is strong enough to stand the strain of today's duties and all the load of tomorrow's anxieties piled upon the top of them. Paul himself would have broken down if he had attempted the experiment. We have a perfect right to ask our heavenly Father for strength equal to the day; but we have no right to ask him for one extra ounce of strength for anything beyond it. When the morrow comes, grace will come with it sufficient for its tasks or for its troubles.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

HELPFUL INFLUENCE OF PRAYER

If a sorrow comes upon you, and you omit prayer, you fall out of God's testing into the devil's temptation; you get angry, hard of heart, reckless. But meet the dreadful hour with prayer, cast your care on God, claim Him as your Father, though He seems cruel—and the degrading, paralyzing, embittering effects of pain and sorrow pass away, a stream of sanctifying and softening thought pours into the soul, and that which might have wrought your fall but works in you the peaceful fruits of righteousness. You pass from bitterness into the courage of endurance and from endurance into battle, and from battle into victory, till at last the trial dignifies and blesses your life.—S. Brooke.

DUTY

"If you have a duty to perform and you have the opportunity, now and not tomorrow is the time to do it. You cannot keep your self-respect by putting off the performance of duty. Put off duty, and it will soon cease to command you, and conscience will soon cease to perform its function. Have you an apology to make, a pardon to ask, a debt to pay? Can you do it now? Then do not be a coward; go at once and do your duty."—Selected.

THE CHRISTIAN'S SABBATH

The French infidel Voltaire realized that there is some stupendous force back of the Christian's weekly day of rest and worship. He said: "We shall not destroy the Christian faith till we have killed the Sabbath day."—Selected.

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Pastors' Reports for Second Quarter

Of the 94 charges in the conference, reports have been received from 56 pastors. From these reports the following facts are taken: Number of conversions, 135; accessions, 184 (this is for six months); new churches organized, 1; new church buildings, 1; new parsonages, 1; new churches in contemplation, 3; parsonages, 1; huts, 1; churches adding Sunday school rooms, 2; churches repaired, 2; charges paying G. C. B. in full to date, 4; A. C. B., 2; college, 7; individual churches on charge paying G. C. B. in full to date, 2; pastors paid in full to date, 3; charges apportioning budgets to members, 16; do not apportion, 30; charges that apportion salary to members, 18; do not apportion, 22. Several reports do not give this information. One charge reports G. G. deficit paid in full. A few charges report "Loyalty" churches enrolled. A number of reports show gratifying attendance at Sunday school and preaching services. One pastor reports: "Trying to make our churches more beautiful within and without." A few charges are hopeful of better budget receipts this year than was realized last year. One pleasing fact of these reports is the note of hopefulness that they all sound. There are problems, of course, but they are being met with faith and courage. The reports indicate hopefulness of a good year. One brother says, "Encouraging work in all departments of church here." Another says, "The spiritual condition of the charge was never better."

An Appreciation

One pastor writes to thank us for recommending The Bible Champion. He says, "It is a valuable monthly magazine for me. I could not very well do without it." The June number has just come to our desk. "Dr. Clarkson Arouses a Furor Among Evolutionists," "The Third Temptation of Jesus," "Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible Is the Very Word of God," are some of the interesting captions. We again heartily recommend the Champion to our people.

Registration

Rev. N. M. Harrison is the registration agent for the Leadership Training School to be held at High Point College July 13-20. He is calling upon the pastors to lead out in this registration. Let us do it, brethren. His address is 703 Central Avenue, Charlotte. The registration fee is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Davidson

May 19, Sunday.—It was our good fortune to be with Pastor Reed and the people of this charge in an all-day homecoming program at Chapel Hill church. For many years this church has been the camp meeting place for this charge. The pastor announced Sunday that the meeting would be held in September. We are told that many people go annually to this meeting. A large arbor on the church grounds is used for this purpose. The services Sunday were held under it. This is a section of our conference from which several of our preachers have come. Those that we recall now are the two Ridges, the two Surratts, and Bro. C. H. Hill. It is also the home place of Bro. J. W. Frank, for some years our missionary in Japan. Our church is well established in this section of the conference, and the prospects are encouraging for continuing growth. The attendance Sunday was large, though not so large as usual, we were told, and a full program had been arranged for the day. Some of the local brethren were on with us in the morning. In the afternoon Rev. N. G. Betha, pastor of State Street Church, Lexington, and Mrs. Koonts (sorry that we do not have the initials), of the State Street Church, were the principal speakers. Their messages were timely, earnest and helpful.

Bro. T. F. McCulloch, who was pastor of this charge several years ago, attended us on this visit, and responded in the afternoon to a request by the pastor for some remarks. We were glad to have him with us, and the people were pleased to see him and hear him again. We enjoyed our visit to this charge, and we are sure that the day's program will be helpful to the work. Bro. Reed is in his first year of his present pastorate, and is giving himself diligently in an effort to promote all the interests of the charge and the conference. We trust that this may be a very happy year for him and his people, and that their report to the conference this fall may be their best ever.

Abbreviated

Because of the crowded schedule that takes us away from home for most of this week, our report must be abbreviated. But perhaps that isn't bad, since "brevity is the soul of wit."

Our appointments are as follows:

May 19, Sunday.—Chapel Hill, Davidson Charge.

May 20, Monday Night.—With the auxiliary of the Burlington First Church, Burlington.

May 22, Wednesday.—Stallings Church, Mecklenburg Charge, 8 p. m.

May 23, Thursday.—New Hope Church, Pageland Charge, at 8 p. m.

May 26, Sunday.—Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.

June 2, Sunday.—High Point College commencement.

June 9, Sunday.—Denton Charge, 11 a. m.; Albemarle, 8 p. m.

June 21-23.—Attending District Rallies on our South Carolina fields.

June 30, Sunday.—District Rally in First District. Place to be announced later.

"Grace be with you. Amen."

—Moriah Church near Greensboro celebrates its hundredth anniversary next Sunday. See the program elsewhere. This promises to be an interesting occasion. This is one of the churches in which the people were commanded to cease reading Mutual Rights, a paper that advocated lay rights in the church. They didn't cease, but they seceded.

—High Point College commencement exercises will come May 29 to June 3. See the program in another column. We thank the faculty and senior class for an invitation which we hope to be able to accept.

—You will note from an announcement elsewhere that some changes will be made in the plan for the combination of the two church papers. The time has been advanced from November 1 to August 1.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

IMPRESSIONS OF A WONDERFUL WEEK

REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D.D.

The period from May 7 to 12 will, in my judgment, go down into history as one of the very important periods in our denominational life. It was the occasion of the annual meeting of the Executive Boards of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, the Board of Missions, the Board of Education, and the presidents and treasurers of the annual conferences. The perspective of the future will cause this period to stand out as a veritable watershed in the range of our church history.

The period began in the First Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Tuesday morning with a joint devotional service in which the members of the Board of Missions, and of the Board of Education, along with a few visitors, participated. The leader of the service urged all of us, in view of the grave situations to be met during the week, to pray earnestly for four things—guidance, loyalty to our church vows, courage and initiative in line therewith, and especially for the spirit of Christ in all our attitudes and activities.

Looking back over the week with its anxieties, misgivings, problems, and clear-cut decisions, I am of the firm conviction that the prayers offered in the above service were definitely and fully answered.

The balance of the day, even to a late hour in the night, was spent by the Boards in reviewing their work during the past year and laying definite plans for the ensuing year. During the day members of the Executive Boards of the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S., as well as the presidents and treasurers of the annual conferences, began to arrive.

It was not difficult to note, in the midst of the warmth with which each greeted the other, a deep sense of seriousness. All seemed to be wondering what the outcome would be on Wednesday and Thursday. Consequently, when the annual meeting of the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S. opened on Wednesday morning, there were present not only the forty or more members of the Board, but the presidents and treasurers of many of the annual conferences, reaching from Arkansas to Alabama, and Iowa-Missouri to Eastern, as well as the thirty members of the Board of Missions, and the Board of Education, with their secretaries. It was truly a representative gathering, and looked like a session of the General Conference.

After hearing reports from the various departments of their work, and getting everything out of the way for the introduction of new business, a resolution was presented pledging the loyalty of the members of their society to the Methodist Protestant Church and its program. By an overwhelming majority the resolution was adopted. A second resolution was presented approving the plan submitted by the Board of Missions, whereby the merger of their work, as directed by the General Conference, might become effective. This resolution was also adopted by an overwhelming majority. Other resolutions of similar nature were adopted without a single vote against them.

What was done by the women of the Foreign Society on Wednesday was done by the women of the Home Society in their meeting on Thursday with corresponding decision and with even larger majorities.

As I look back to these two Board meetings I am convinced that while the women of our church may differ in their opinions and judgments as to methods of procedure in carrying on our work, they do not differ in their loyalty to the church itself.

By almost unanimous vote both executive boards passed over to the Board of Missions all of the functions they have hitherto exercised in initiating, directing and supervising the missionary activities of the women of our church.

With the same unanimity of spirit they entered together on Thursday evening into the new "Woman's Annual Missionary Convention." The Board of Missions had prepared a program for this first convention, but hereafter the convention, and all that pertains to it, will be absolutely under the direction and control of the women themselves.

The convention organized by electing Mrs. E. B. McRoberts, of Glenshaw, Pa., president; Mrs. Arthur Hinkle, of Fairmont, W. Va., vice-president; and Mrs. Marie Thompson, of Baltimore, Md., recording secretary.

As the convention proceeded it became increasingly evident that the desire of the women was to support the whole program of the General Conference, and this desire was clearly revealed when they voted to ask the Board of Missions to apportion to them $100,000 of the General Conference Budget for the coming year.

It was my privilege on Sunday morning to preach the annual missionary sermon, and on Sunday evening, in a union service of all our churches in Pittsburgh, in which a masterly address was delivered by Rev. Hugh Thomson Kerr, D.D., pastor of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, this great and successful convention came to a close.

Conversant as I am with the history of our denomination, I am of the opinion that the week through which we have just passed will be regarded in the future as possibly one of the most important since the memorable week May 11-18, 1877, when, in old Starr Church, Baltimore, our divided church was united.

We began last week with anxiety and misgivings; we closed it with joy and great assurance. God bless our women in their new alignments.

WINSTON-SALEM LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The fifth local Leadership Training School to be held in the Methodist Protestant Church came to an end Friday evening, May 17, after an intensive week of study on the part of some thirty faithful church school workers.

The school was attended by two pastors of that area and the students were drawn from their work principally. Rev. R. C. Stubbins and Rev. Freo Surratt were these two ministers. Mr. Surratt taught the course in Church School Administration in addition to entertaining the school. He was assisted graciously in the entertaining by his good wife and Winston church folk.

Rev. J. Clyde Auman, our returned missionary and pastor of the Enfield church, offered the course in Missionary Materials and Methods; Rev. J. Earl Cummings, Laurel, Del., and Rev. N. C. Clough, Seaford, Del., also offered courses. All the faculty gave of their time and effort free gratis to the Board. Such leaders make this work possible and we appreciate their help so much.

There were many who contributed to the success of the school, but we feel like saying "thank you" to the pastor and his wife, along with Brother Stubbins, for what they did in this respect. The Winston-Salem church is on the upward trend under the wise leadership of its present leaders and we feel that the constructive work done in the past week will be of much help in the onward march to greater things.

Yours for a better trained leadership,

F. L. GIBBS, Assistant Secretary.

BRANCH TREASURERS TAKE NOTICE

There have been many questions asked concerning the sending of money raised by the branches and auxiliaries. The action of the General Conference reads as follows: "The associate executive secretary of the Board, whose duties shall be those now performed by the corresponding secretary, the treasurer of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the editor of the Missionary Record, the secretary of scholarships and native workers, and corresponding officers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society." Under this action all moneys should be sent by the branch treasurers to Mrs. Marie Thompson, 516 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., who will make a record of them and forward them to J. H. Straughn, the treasurer of the General Conference.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE

Christ has no hands but our hands

To do his work today;

He has no feet but our feet

To lead men in his way;

He has no tongues but our tongues

To tell men how he died;

He has no help but our help

To bring them to his side.

We are the only Bible

The careless world will read;

We are the sinner's gospel.

We are the scoffer's creed;

We are the Lord's last message,

Given in deed and word;

What if the type is crooked?

What if the print is blurred?

What if our hands are busy

With other work than this?

What if our feet are walking

Where sin's allurements is?

What if our tongues are speaking

Of things his lips would spurn?

How can we hope to help him

And hasten his return?

—Annie Johnson Flint.

—Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, who has been preaching for about twenty-five years in Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, announces that he will retire from service on August 29, his 70th birthday. He will still preach occasionally but will devote most of his time to writing some books which have taken shape in his mind. His books ought to be worth reading, so rich is the content of his mind.

THE WIDESPREAD UNREST

The unrest of the world increases every hour. Men and nations display an unquiet spirit that threatens physical and social health with destruction. Anti-capitalistic teachings are spreading still among different peoples, in spite of the apparent failure of the reckless attempts of Soviet leaders to establish a non-capitalistic regime. Their devilish propaganda among other nations still threatens the peace of the world. But this is only one form of the unrest eating at the heart of the world. Men and women everywhere have turned from faith in God and their souls know no peace. The mad rush after pleasure, the domestic unhappiness of multitudes of men and women, the growing popularity of brutal fights and of other forms of amusement or mental dissipation, the increase of terrible crimes—all reveal a deepening unrest in the whole of human society. All this is reflected in the titanic struggle of the nations of the earth to hold on to their possessions or to increase them. Back of it all is indicated an intense activity in the demon world to lead men astray and to bring the world under the dominion of doctrines that deny God and rule Christ out of the life of men.—Jewish Missionary Magazine.

TAKE YOUR CHILD TO CHURCH

Extracts from an article by Hon. Thomas C. T. Crain, Justice Supreme Court, State of New York:

"The Church is the pillar and ground of truth. Worship is the feeling of admiration and homage towards God which expresses itself in religious reverence, praise, prayer, thanksgiving and the offering of what we have and what we are. On Sundays we meet together in God's house to hear His holy Word, to ask those things necessary for soul and body and to lift our hearts to Him in praise and to seek a blessing at His hands. We should not forsake such assembling and such an assemblage ought in large part to be composed of family units. Children at the hour of prayer should not be kept from the house of God. Fathers should say with Joshua of old, 'As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.'

"Give your child a chance to praise God with you in His temple, for out of the mouth of babes and sucklings God has perfected praise. . . . The open Bible, the bent knee, the uplifted heart, the prayer-answering God—this is religion and religion is life-power.

"There are six concurring reasons why you should see to it that your child shall worship with you at the Sunday service: (1) For the sake of your own soul. (2) For the sake of the child. (3) For the sake of the Church. (4) For the sake of the State. (5) For the sake of civilization. (6) To speed God's Kingdom.

"Do not send your child to Church—take him."—Selected.

THE MAIN CURRENT

When the love of God has taken possession of the soul, and the whole man is consecrated to His service, life loses its fragmentary character, and one guiding stream seems to run through it. Many a little rock or eddy that early in its course would turn it aside, are, as it becomes more powerful, swept away or passed over. And still more, perhaps, are the very hindrances that thwarted, turned into ministries to help its course. The stronger and more fixedly the soul is set upon one object, so much the more does it find power to overcome all difficulties and despise all that may be only outward or accidental.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

A ROLLING STONE

School had been open for some days when one morning a tall odd-looking boy came. He was barefoot, he had loose, long pants on, patched at the knee and seat, and he wore a rusty black coat which looked as if it had once been a frock coat belonging to some old parson back in 1880.

One would expect such a strange boy to come shambling in with a shamed look on his face, but not this boy, not Amos Jones. He came marching in like a general, his chest out, stomach in and toes straight, and faced the stares of the school without a quiver.

"Well, how do you do, sir," smiled the young teacher, Miss James. "We're glad to see you. Coming to school here?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the boy. "They say you got a college education. Reckon I ought to be able to learn something from you."

The class began to laugh, and Amos grinned. When he told the teacher his name, the class snickered. There was only one vacant seat, a little one, and when Amos sat down at it he certainly did look funny! He had to stretch out his long, thin legs to get them under the low desk. This made some of the boys go into choking fits.

Amos did not seem to mind having fun poked at him. Nobody offered to be friends with him, so he studied alone. He came all the way from Lansdown to school.

"You must rise very early to come so far," said Miss James.

"Oh, not so early," smiled the tall boy. "I walk fast."

He was soon to be the champion of Turnpike School. There was a private school called Thompson's at Manchester, and every year the Turnpike boys met the Thompson boys and had all sorts of contests to see which school had the best athletes. Usually Thompson's beat Turnpike, because the Thompson boys had a gym teacher and every chance to train, while the Turnpike boys had nothing but a lady teacher who taught them everything, and a little school yard.

But this year they had Amos! My, how those long legs could kick up the dust! They could jump like a kangaroo and run like an ostrich! Turnpike licked Thompson's at nearly every contest which was held at Thompson's Field with a good crowd of friends and relatives looking on.

After that Mr. Thompson spoke to Amos and asked him if he would like to come to school there.

"Thank you very much, sir," said Amos in his honest way, "but I guess I better stick to Miss James and Turnpike. Ma says 'A rolling stone gathers no moss.'"

One of the Turnpike boys saw the gentleman and he told the others that Thompson's was trying to get their champion away from them.

"We'll have to jolly him along or he'll go somewhere else," said Jim, one of the boys. "We'll need him again next year, and maybe we can get up a ball team."

Amos found things mighty different at school after that! The little boys listened respectfully whenever he spoke, the older boys chummed with him and Miss James knitted him a fine sweater to wear instead of his black coat. It had a yellow felt T stitched on the breast.

"I'll make one for any boy who does as well as Amos in both studies and athletics," said the young teacher. This made the boys hustle!

One fine day in late fall Amos did not show up at the little school house, so after school some of the boys went to his home to find out if he were sick. His mother said, No, he had started for school same as usual that morning. They knew Amos was not the kind to play truant. Something must have happened to him. The word spread quickly and pretty soon every Turnpike boy was out hunting for Amos. The girls did their share, too, and before evening the grown-ups had joined the hunt.

Meanwhile Amos was having adventures. As he was walking briskly to school that morning he was overtaken by a large car. There were three men in it and they kindly offered Amos a lift. He noticed that the car had a number of satchels inside. He climbed on the running board and off they started. They had gone a mile when the car suddenly stopped. One of the men got out and looked inside the engine. Then they all put their heads together and whispered.

Amos began to wonder what sort of men they were with all that whispering and those satchels. Maybe they were bootleggers!

They seemed to have come to some agreement. They motioned to the boy and one of them said, looking him searchingly in the eye: "Do you want to earn some money?"

"Sure," said Amos. "I'm always ready to turn an honest penny."

"This is honest all right," grinned the man. "Just give us a lift with these bags. We gave you a lift, you know."

"All right," agreed Amos.

Two bags were handed to him. He joggled them a bit and they gurgled. They were plenty heavy, too!

"I was on my way to school," he said. "Maybe I better go along. I've never missed or been late."

"Nix," said one of the men. "You agreed to help us and you got to stand by your word. S'pose now you take us along some nice back way through the woods to the railroad station. We'll pay you well for your trouble."

"And s'pose I won't?" asked Amos.

The man sized the boy up shrewdly. Somehow he knew threats wouldn't do.

"You gave your word and you're an honest boy, so we don't have to figure on your going back on your promise," he said.

That got Amos. He marched right along and led the men along a short cut he knew through the woods to Manchester.

It was a weary walk laden with the heavy bags, but after some hours he pointed out the little town below them in the valley.

On they went till they were quite near the town—but not too near! Then one of the men cried: "All right!" and they jumped on their young guide, gagged him and trussed him up, tying his arms behind him and his legs together. Then they took the bags, there were eight of them, and left. But first they placed a roll of bills in the boy's pocket, thanked him for helping them and hoped his friends would soon find him.

Imagine the surprise of the people of Manchester when they saw a queer dark object come rolling into their town just at dusk. It turned out to be Amos, very dirty, scratched, torn and exhausted. He had not waited to be found. His captors hadn't tied him to a tree and he had managed to roll over and over until he got to town.

There was more excitement than Manchester had seen since Revolutionary times. The sheriff came post-haste. Poor Amos could scarcely speak. But he panted: "Bootleggers. Train." After a rest and a drink of milk he was able to tell his story.

Well, the bootleggers were caught, thanks to a telegram which the sheriff sent off. They had brought a lot of whisky over from Canada, and they would have made a bunch of money if they had only figured on Amos. They thought he would stay where he was put and he was not likely to be found until the next day.

Amos had to go to Albany to identify the men, and then he gave them back the money they had left on him.

"Not honest enough for you, eh?" grinned one of the men.

"Nope," replied Amos. "Ma says, 'A rolling stone gathers no moss.' I reckon I'm the rolling stone and this is the moss I'm not a-going to gather."

His joke brought a laugh. One of the men called him a fool, but that was his opinion, and he took it with him to jail. The folks back in Manchester and thereabouts felt differently about Amos. That was why they took up a subscription to send him to college when he would be ready.

"Guess I'm born lucky," chuckled Amos.—Selected.

THE NEED OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

When Jesus left the world he intended for man to have as a representative the third person of the Godhead, the Holy Spirit. So he sent him when he left and is in the world now.

The first Christian church had the Holy Spirit in the right proportion and was an example to all churches down the ages. The need of the Christian church today is the full power of the Holy Spirit, which must come into the individuals and be expressed in the church.

We can not believe in Jesus without the Holy Spirit coming to us to help us to Him but in that act he is just with us and that is very important. He is with every man, woman and child in the world at all times, showing them to Jesus and helping to get us to accept Him.

After we accept Jesus as our Savior and Redeemer from all our sins and are saved, then it is we need the Holy Spirit within us, and for what? This we will try to answer as the main thought of this subject. To preface our statements, let us say we need the Holy Spirit in this world after we are saved. When we get to Heaven Jesus will take care of us and here He has sent him to take care of us.

We need him for power as of ourselves we can not overcome sin. We all realize how powerless our lives are of our own efforts and how unsatisfactory. The coming in of the Holy Spirit is worth the sacrifice if he did nothing else but give us power over sin and temptations. Then he gives comfort which we so badly need. Comfort in disappointment, in bereavement, in sorrow and sadness. Our people are killing themselves with work and worry looking for comfort, when it can come only from within, supplied by the Holy Spirit.

We need him as our teacher, for without him we can not interpret the Scripture aright, we can not see Jesus and be brought to know him. Again we need him as our guide. He will guide us into all truth and in all our ways he will instruct us. We have to acknowledge our ignorance and lack of the knowledge of the truth, both of which the Holy Spirit will supply that we may know the way to go in this world.

If we would have power, comfort, a guide, a teacher, we have to let the Holy Spirit into our lives.

How may we know when we have him? We may know by the results produced by him in us as we have enumerated above as well as by the peace these virtues bring and the joy so much needed.

With him in the midst of sorrow we can have within peace and joy the world knoweth not of. By their fruits ye shall know them, and by the fruits of the Holy Spirit we shall know we have him and others shall see our witness-bearing and will not be satisfied till they have the power, comfort, peace and joy they see in us. Applied to the church at large, see what we may expect.

How may we get the Holy Spirit? Make room for him by a surrendered life and he will not need the second invitation to come in.

He is no impersonal influence but is a Person with influence and power beyond the carnal mind to grasp, but can be experienced.

All the spiritual giants down the ages with influence and all the power and influence exerted in the churches today are the result of him and none is produced by the man who has him not. May the day speedily come when all God's children will not be satisfied without him in his fullness of power.—M. M. Inabinet, a Layman.

THE BEAUTY THAT WILL NOT FADE

"How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Lives there a man or woman who does not admire beauty in others, and covet it for him or herself? The possessor of beauty too often yields to vanity and spends hours in self-admiration. Such beauty, however rare it may be, the tooth of time will not spare. All flesh is as grass, and the rarest beauties are merely flowers in the field; even before the grass has withered, the flower has begun to fade.

But there is a beauty that time cannot wither. Let your imagination play for a little while on the names of famous beauties. Then call to mind such names as Florence Nightingale, Mary Moffat (the wife of David Livingstone), or Mary Slessor. The portraits of their faces we have forgotten, but the portraits of their characters are burned into our souls. The world can never forget what they did! Their beauty was not localized in their features; their very feet were beautiful. I think God gave Abraham Lincoln to the world as a demonstration that the unfading soul beauty within can transfigure any face. Covet earnestly the beauty that comes of service, for whosoever will may attain it.—Selected.

WORLDLY PASTORS

Do not some pastors neglect the essential thing in their visiting, and thereby diminish their own influence and bring discredit upon the office they hold? Such an omission on their part is more noticeable, and for that very reason more blameworthy than a similar neglect by a private Christian. A brief anecdote will illustrate: In conversation today with a man of business I inquired, "How do you like your new pastor?" "I like him well," was the reply. "He is smart in the pulpit and out of it. He seems to be posted up in all sorts of business. He visited at my house the other afternoon, and we had a good deal of talk. He knows all about the railroads, and where good locations are. He has a great notion of going west, because, he says, he can get twelve per cent for his money there. But he didn't say a word about religion all the afternoon." Whether pastoral visits of this character do good or hurt, deserves to be considered.—Selected.

LETTERS OF SYMPATHY

To congratulate a friend on a happy event is comparatively easy. Words of cheer fall trippingly from the pen as from the tongue. A letter of sympathy requires more care, more delicacy, greater comprehension and fuller recognition of the friend's character and environment. Many people hesitate to write a letter of sympathy. The impulse is strong to reach out a hand in the dark and give the warm clasp which means "I am sorry;" "I would help you if I could." There is a hesitation about writing. Perhaps we think we are not well enough acquainted. We do not feel like thrusting ourselves forward when there is danger of reopening a wound. Our tender impulses are crushed. We pray for our friends, but do not speak to them.

In most cases silence is a mistake. Sometimes it is better than speech, but such cases are rare. A letter of sympathy, if short, earnest and sincere, is an olive branch of promise coming as a messenger dove of peace. The simpler it is the better. There are great possibilities along this line. In times of sorrow you want to be helped. Help others who are in sorrow. A peace will steal into your heart and glorify your life.—Christian Union Herald.

WHY DEFENSE IS NECESSARY

It is a mistake to assume that the Christian religion does not need to be defended. It is not because any evangelical believer thinks for a moment that Christianity can be destroyed by the gainsayers. Christ's promise is: "Fear not, little flock; it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Of His church He said: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." But this is the reason why defense of the truth is needed: Many people are being led astray by specious and plausible errors. If nobody corrects those errors and upholds the truth, how shall these persons be led back to the fold of Christ? The welfare of souls is imperiled. We must try to make known to them the saving truth of the gospel. When our Lord was accused of casting out devils by the power of Beelzebub, He pointedly and immediately corrected the error and revealed the truth. His logic was invulnerable and silenced His opponents. Is He not our example? —The Bible Champion.

THE UNKNOWN TEACHER

I sing the praise of the unknown teacher. Great generals win campaigns, but it is the unknown soldier who wins the war. Famous educators plan new systems of pedagogy but it is the unknown teacher who delivers and guides the young. For him no trumpets blare, no chariots wait, no golden decorations are decreed. He keeps the watch along the borders of darkness and makes the attack on the trenches of ignorance and folly. Patient in his daily duty, he strives to conquer the evil powers which are the enemies of youth. He awakens sleeping spirits. He quickens the indolent, encourages the eager and steadies the unstable. He communicates his own joy in learning and shares with boys and girls the best treasures of his mind. He lights many candles which, in later years, will shine back to cheer him. This is his reward. Knowledge may be gained from books, but the love of knowledge can be transmitted only by personal contact. No one has deserved better of the Republic than the unknown teacher. —Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

MOTHER

Gentle hands that never weary toiling in love's vineyard sweet,
Eyes that seem forever cheery when our eyes they chance to meet.

Tender, patient, brave, devoted, this is always mother's way,
Could her worth in gold be quoted as you think of her today?

There shall never be another quite so tender, quite so kind,
As the patient little mother; nowhere on this earth you'll find
Her affections duplicated; none so proud if you are fine.
Could her worth be overstated? Not by any words of mine.

Death stood near the hour she bore us, agony was hers to know,
Yet she bravely faced it for us, smiling in her time of woe;
Down the years how oft we've tried her, often selfish, heedless, blind,

Yet with love alone to guide her she was never once unkind.

Vain are all our tributes to her if in words alone they dwell,
We must live the praises due her; there's no other way to tell Gentle mother that we love her. Would you say, as you recall
All the patient service of her, you've been worthy of it all?

—Edgar Guest.

COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE

Companionate marriage in any form is not among Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's alleged unorthodoxies. He has produced in one of those single remarkable sentences which make his written and spoken discourse so fascinatingly clear this admirable description of the matrimonial relation:

"The complete sex experience means falling in love, learning the secret of staying in love, mastering the art of growing up in love, enlarging the lovelife into a family of children, until within the green cups of a physical relation grow the flower and fruit of a spiritual union."—N. Y. Advocate.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

First Church, High Point, $34.90; W. D. T. Gaster, Sunday eggs, $1.12; Center, Alamance, $4.20; Hickory Ridge, Forsyth, $6.20; Graham, supporting child, $10.00; Liberty, Liberty-Siler City, $3.00; W. J. Spainhour, Mount Carmel (we think), $1.00; Creswell, Creswell, $5.00; Bethel, Alamance, by Mrs. W. H. Foust, $4.55.

Thank you for these offerings. There are about three items in this we are not fully sure about the church and charge. Please name your church and charge in sending checks to us, and then we will report accordingly. If there is a mistake this week you can help us to correct we shall thank you.

Clothing and Other Gifts

On quilt top, Mrs. S. R. Watson, for Henderson Auxiliary.

Belmont C. E. Society, four dresses, three pairs of socks, three slips and three pairs bloomers for little girl; also $4.00 for shoes (reported last week).

Mrs. L. R. Pearson, flower plants.

Sunday school class, Winston-Salem, pangee dress and two gowns for little girl.

Mrs. C. F. Garrett, for Sunday school class, Calvary, two dresses, two pair bloomers, one coat dress, two slips, and two handkerchiefs for little girl.

Mrs. Ora Lewis, one dress for her little girl.

Miss Elsie Gates, of High Point, came out on Mother's Day with one of her pupils, Elizabeth Satterfield, and gave a Mother's Day recital for the children. They appreciated it very much.

Mrs. J. D. Gallagher, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds, English Street, flower plants.

Mrs. R. M. Andrews, flower plants.

Mrs. L. R. Gooch, one pot and flower plants.

Mrs. Lizzie Cranford, Chapel Hill, Davidson, one quilt.

Several of our friends have sent Octagon coupons, and we thank you. Coupons from any and all Octagon products, if sent to Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Children's Home, High Point, will help us to install an electric refrigerator. Such a refrigerator here would be a great saving to the institution. We will appreciate this help.

Our high school commencement is over and Miss Eloise Beam graduated from the Jamestown High School, and will be leaving us soon. We shall miss her. Edward Kennedy reached his 18th birthday a few weeks ago and now that his school is out he has gone to make his home with Mr. John S. L. Patterson, near Friendship, Mount Hermon, with a view of continuing his school work at Friendship School next fall. We shall miss him also. We come to love the children here very dearly, so it hurts our hearts when time comes for them to leave us.

Our primary and grammar grades are preparing for school closing here in the Home, which will take place in just about two weeks.

Thanking you for your helpfulness, and asking your prayers that we may be wise in our work, and also asking that you will continue to help, we are,

Yours in the Master's service,

A. G. DIXON.

It will not be long until the notes for $2,000 on account Gratitude Gift will be due, and I have precious little on hand for this purpose. What are we going to do about this matter, brethren?

Since I have been Conference Treasurer and have had to worry over debts made by the conference, I have about reached the conclusion that the conference ought to adopt the "Cash and Carry" plan and stick to it. To say the least, it is a safe plan.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Graham.—A Mother-Daughter banquet was given on last Wednesday evening at the church. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out very effectively in the decoration and menu. Pink and white roses were used for the table and rose-shaded lamps and tall pink tapers well arranged shed a warm, pink glow over the whole interior.

Miss Mary Tome Hughes, as toastmistress, representing the daughters, made the address of welcome. Mrs. J. H. McPherson responded on behalf of the mothers. A delicious two-course dinner was served after thanks were returned by Mrs. M. H. Rogers. Between the courses Miss Lavona Black read "Mother," and Miss Elva Ausley sang a song of "Mother." In a few well-chosen words, Mr. Minnis gave a very interesting talk on "The Relationship of Mother and Daughter," at the conclusion of the meal, after which the assemblage was dismissed by Miss Blanche Fuller.

Music was rendered throughout the evening by Misses Annie Thompson, at the piano, Lavona Amick and Lucile Jordan, violins.

Seventy mothers and daughters were present.

Sunday being Mother's Day, Mr. Minnis chose as his topic, "The Ideal Mother," which was indeed helpful and instructive, especially to the mothers.

Music was furnished by the male chorus and a quartet composed of Messrs. Glenn Coble, John Frederick, C. E. and P. B. Core.

A pageant of real beauty was given at the evening hour, portraying the charm of motherhood and the power of a mother's prayers, with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Brown, Mrs. H. M. Rogers and small grandson, Willard Wilson, Mrs. S. S. Holt and the pastor, Rev. J. F. Minnis, taking part. REPORTER.

High Point.—Last Sunday was observed as High Point College Day by First church. A pleasing feature of this service was a lovely flute solo, played by Miss Miriam Sloan with organ accompaniment by Prof. E. B. Stimson, and the beautiful duet, "Over the Stars There Is Rest," sung by Mesdames Allred and Whitesell. Rev. R. I. Farmer chose as the subject of his discourse, "The Lure of the Unfinished," and his text was I Cor. 3:9, "For we are laborers together with God." Mr. Farmer called attention to the hearty co-operation and loyalty of the student body to the college, as exemplified by the gifts of the different classes and societies, the memorial to Dr. Whitaker by the class of '27, the gate at the entrance to the campus by the class of '28, the fountain by this year's class, and the Jamestown Female College marker erected by Nikanthan and Thalean Literary Societies. Mr. Farmer said that all life is a partnership between man and God, and greatness is the right use of what God has given us. Let us never forget that they who are with us are far more than they who are against us. Two travelers who were crossing the southwestern part of our United States were much impressed with the irrigation system in that arid desert region, and one of them exclaimed, "After all, isn't it wonderful to think what God has left us to do?" For this very same reason men work with flowers and trees to propagate new ones, explore new and undiscovered lands, causes men to be ministers and missionaries, building upon foundations commenced by others. Men and women who bear the burden of church work in the homeland are fellow-workers with God. Mothers who perform the menial daily tasks of the home to make it sweet and comfortable for those they love, are working as fellow-laborers with God, and in rearing and training the men and women who will grace the world of tomorrow, surely they are working under God's leadership and co-operation. The Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina has built this splendid college, and it is her privilege to help this institution fulfil her high mission as fellow-laborers with the Master Teacher.

At the evening hour a special service for the nurses of the city was held, which was attended by almost 50 of this profession. Rev. Mr. Farmer gave a beautiful discourse on "The Fellowship of Love and Suffering," and paid eloquent tribute to the memory of Florence Nightingale, Angel of Mercy in the Crimean War. Edward Young said: "Among my blessings infinite, stands this the foremost, that my heart has bled." Christianity has always been interested in human suffering. It is the spirit and life of Christ which has raised the profession of nursing to higher levels. It now calls the highest type of womanhood into its realm of service. The church and the hospital, the preacher and the physician, the evangelist and the nurse, have been suffering together and have ministered to the suffering. Blessed are those who belong to the fellowship of all who love and enter into the service of all who suffer.

The Auxiliary Circles held their monthly meetings on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the following homes: Circle No. 4, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, chairman, with Mrs. A. A. York on Montlieu avenue; Circle No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. Ernest L. Auman, on Montlieu avenue; Circle No. 6, Mrs. P. S. Kennett, chairman, with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, West College Drive; Circle No. 7, Mrs. Ben Moore, chairman, with Mrs. James T. Ryan, on Parkway, and Circle No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, with Mrs. D. E. White, on Lindsay street. There was a fine attendance in spite of the very disagreeable weather. Good reports of various activities were made and many plans for future projects were discussed. Another rummage sale will be held, and a Musica Tea is planned by two Circles at Mrs. Geo. T. Penny's lovely residence on Greensboro road in June. The study of "The Desire of All Nations" has been begun in the different Circles.

The two Circles of Business and Professional Girls, of which Misses Mary Young and Nellie Martin are chairmen, will meet this (Tuesday) evening at the home of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., on North Main street, with Misses Ruth Welch and Lucille Pickens joint hostesses. Mrs. R. I. Farmer's group of High School and College Girls will meet with Miss Annette Pickens, 704 West Broad street.

We are sorry to announce the illness of Miss Vista Dixon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, in the High Point Hospital.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard returned Thursday evening from a delightful trip to Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Washington, D. C.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. McPherson upon the arrival in their home of a little son; to Mr. and Mrs. Wray W. Ward, who have a young son, who will be called Wray, Jr.; and also to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hammond, who are rejoicing over the advent of a baby son, W. C., Jr.

The first annual banquet of the Alumni Association of High Point College will be held on the evening of June 1 at the Sheraton Hotel, this city.

English Street.—A very good attendance greeted Pastor Reynolds last Sunday at both morning and evening services and they were not disappointed, for Bro. Reynolds always brings us interesting and helpful messages, but especially Sunday evening from the subject, "Christianity Written on the Heart." He told us in his appealing way many ways it could be written on the heart that perhaps had not been thought of by many before.

The Senior Christian Endeavor held their regular business and social meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bowers Friday night, May 10. After the business was looked after the young folks enjoyed a "hard time" party, funny games were played, after which dried beans, corn bread, molasses cakes and coffee were served.

The Junior Endeavor president, Mrs. Hunycutt, is doing good work training the juniors. Last Sunday they sang for church services, which was very good. The children like her and it seems her field of work is unlimited.

Our Ladies' Aid met this month with Mrs. A. N. Lineback with a good number present and some visitors. The ladies are selling aprons, skiddo, children's clothes, fancy work and other things. There are many pretty things donated and put in the traveling basket for sale each month. At our last meeting a former member donated two useful handmade rugs for which the Aid society was very grateful. Mrs. Lineback knows how to serve good old-time eats.

We shall have a new cradle roll member, as there was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred McSwain a nine-pound girl, Annie Lee, May 15. Mrs. McSwain before her marriage was Miss Annie Boswell.

Last Friday night the Jennie Lee Philathea class and several visitors met at the home of Misses Louis and Virginia Swann. A truck was called, fifty bottles of lemonade, heavy boxes of food, the young folks, their teacher, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bowers, all went to Jackson Lake. A big fire was built, and after roaming around at this beautiful place for a while supper was spread. Everybody returned home reporting a good time.

Pray for us that we may go forward in the Master's name.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Gibsonville Church.—Our attendance at Sunday school and the preaching hour has been off somewhat for the past two Sundays, due to the special services that are being conducted in the surrounding communities. We hope to reach the 200 mark again within a few Sundays.

Mr. J. L. Spencer and daughters, Eva and Elizabeth, of Liberty, came over last Sunday and worshipped with us. We were very glad to have them with us and to learn they were going to move to our town.

Since my last report we have lost by death one of our most attentive members, Mr. Rankin Zimmerman. His death came as a surprise to most of us. About two weeks before he died he was at Sunday school and seemingly as well as usual, though his general health had not been good for some time. He was always present at church when possible. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

REPORTER.

Laurel Hill.—Memorial day service was held at Laurel Hill Sunday. There was a large crowd present. The cemetery was beautiful. The relatives of the deceased ones which lay in the cemetery got trucks and wagons and hauled white sand and put on the mounds, which added much beauty to the cemetery. It is a fine thing to remember our loved ones and friends, but let's not forget to scatter flowers along their pathway while they are with us.

We were very glad to have with us Sunday Rev. Joe Morris, who delivered a very earnest and effective message. Everyone enjoyed the message and we hope Bro. Morris will visit us again.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely, but we are trying to improve it. The church as well as the Sunday school are missing our Sunday school superintendent, Bro. A. A. Sain. Mr. Sain has been in the hospital for almost a month, but through our prayers and by the help of God he was carried back to his home Friday. We all miss him in the church, even the little children miss him. Join with us in prayer that our dear superintendent will soon be back with us.

Some good ladies of our church met at the church Thursday afternoon and planted and fixed some flower beds. We thank these ladies very much.

We have preaching every second Sunday morning at 11 and every third Sunday evening at 7:30. Every one is cordially invited to come and worship with us during these hours. We all expected good messages at this time from our good pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, and we are never disappointed.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers,

L. E. W., Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Children's Day services have been planned as follows: Union Grove, first Sunday in June, 11 a.m., dinner on the grounds at preaching at 1:30 p.m. Second Sunday in June, 11 a.m., Chestnut Ridge, dinner will be served here and preaching in the afternoon. Third Sunday in June, Effland, 11 a.m. Fourth Sunday in June, Hebron, 11 a.m.; after dinner Rev. J. F. Minnis will speak.

The vote for candidates for delegate will be taken at each church as follows: Union Grove, first Sunday in June; Chestnut Ridge, second Sunday in June; Effland, third Sunday in June, and Hebron, fourth Sunday in June. Vote will be taken following Children's Day services at each church. The candidates are Pros. C. A. Divins of the Effland church and D. A. Pender of Chestnut Ridge church.

We were glad to receive into the Effland church last Sunday Sheriff W. L. Sloan. Bro. Sloan comes to us from our Melane church.

We were delighted to have Brother Ivey Crutchfield preach for us at Union Grove the first Sunday p.m. He brought to us a splendid message which was well received.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Rehoboth.—On May 12th a Mother's Day service was beautifully observed at our church. Our pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox, was with us. The morning service was very interesting and helpful. The evening service was on "Fishers of Men." Appropriate music for both services was rendered by the choir.

Mrs. Lillian Everett came for membership from Norfolk Baptist church. She is a citizen of Norfolk, Va., and was once a member of Rehoboth with her husband, Thomas Everett, who is buried at the Rehoboth cemetery. Mrs. Everett joined the Oak Grove Baptist church several years ago, moving her membership to Norfolk. Her son, Mr. Vernon Everett, joined the church Sunday morning with his mother.

The baptismal service was held in the church. The Lord's Supper was observed with quite a number taking the supper.

After the opening, little Miss Margie White sang a solo.

In the afternoon the Skimmersville District Sunday school convention met with us. A large number of delegates from all the churches was present.

MISS EVA V. WHITE, Reporter.

Harmony-Yarborough Charge.—The second quarterly conference was held at Harmony, Sunday, May 12, at 3 o'clock.

Our Sunday school is improving and attendance increasing. The Sunday school is planning to have a Children's day service sometime in the near future.

The Christian Endeavor Society rendered a program on "Mother," Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Many of the mothers of our community, as well as from other communities, were present. After the program, Rev. D. D. Broome gave a very interesting talk on "Mother," which was enjoyed by a large crowd.

The W. F. M. S. will hold its regular monthly meeting the fourth Saturday in May. The place of the meeting has not yet been announced.

Our pastor will fill his regular appointment the four Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

We are glad to report that the sick in this community are improving rapidly.

We are glad to have with us at this time one of our church members, Mrs. W. R. Vaughan, and little daughter, Evelyn, of Carteret, N. J. Mrs. Vaughan was formerly Miss Pauline Hughes, of this community, and we hope to have her with us for some time.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Love Joy Church, Why Not Circuit.—Mother's Day, Sunday, May 12, was observed here by a very interesting and helpful program of recitations, dialogues and songs. Thirty-eight children and young people in the Sunday school took part in the morning exercise. After the program was concluded the pastor, Brother Trogden, made a short address. At the noon hour dinner was served on the grounds to a large crowd. Brother Trogden preached at the afternoon service. At the conclusion of this service, as a token of appreciation, children shook hands with their mothers and kissed them. These services were enjoyed by an audience that overtaxed the seating capacity of the new church. The collection was an unusually large one.

Everyone is taking more interest in Sunday school and church work than ever before. The average attendance is over 100. A great deal of interest is manifested by the children and young people as well as the adults, as shown by the attendance of these.

A new piano has been bought which adds a great deal to the musical part of the worship. Also a new register has been bought. We have new books and the singing is still growing better. The songs by the junior choir are always enjoyed. We like to see children take an interest in church work because they will be the future leaders of the church.

The Sunday school rooms and choir are equipped with chairs. The seats for the auditorium have not been bought but we hope to get them at an early date. The expenses of the church have all been paid except a small amount. We are proud that the building committee has not been forced to borrow any money to finance the building of the church.

We are always glad to have visitors with us and we extend to all a cordial invitation to attend all services. Pray for us that we may continue and increase the excellent work that is being done. God has been good to us and I fear that we do not thank Him as we should.

VELLIE SUGGS, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—Memorial services were held on Sunday, May 19. A large crowd gathered to pay a tribute to the last resting-place of their loved ones.

We had only the morning service. The flowers were placed on the graves and then they gathered in the church at 11 o'clock to hear our pastor's message. It was an impressive sermon and fitted the occasion.

Our revival will begin the third Sunday in July. Services at 11 o'clock and at night.

LUCILLE WARLICK, Reporter.

Spencer.—Sunday was a good day for our work here. Three children joined our church, Arnold and Doris Jackson and Gordon Styres. Our membership numbers 41 and we had present at Sunday school 40 members; so you see we came within one of our number. Our pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, preached two impressive, helpful sermons.

Since our last report we have purchased 25 M. P. Hymnals, painted our church both inside and out. Our special meeting begins the first Sunday in June. We ask an interest in your prayers for the success of our meeting.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Enfield.—The final results of the Go-to-Church month was the awarding of Miss Mary Collins and Mr. J. R. Powers for having been in attendance at the regular services of their church more often than any other member. The Christian Century was given to Miss Collins for a year and the Christian Herald to Mr. Powers.

Recently the members of the Ladies' Aid, by having a french door placed in the front hall of the parsonage, have made it much more comfortable and attractive. The pastor and his wife appreciate the interest which has been shown from time to time by the members of the Aid in making the parsonage more attractive and comfortable.

At a recent meeting of the church a committee was appointed to investigate the possibility of the installation of a heating system for the church. This committee is to report to the church as early as possible.

Since our last report Mrs. Cecille Matthews has had to go to the hospital for a slight operation. The church rejoices that she got on so nicely and can be back with us again.

Recently one of our number, Mrs. Henrietta Pike, has had the misfortune to lose by death her son Roy. He was a druggist in Asheville at the time of his death. His sudden death came as a great shock to all who knew and loved him. He was a member of the Baptist church here and was laid to rest in the town cemetery. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the members of the family in this hour of grief.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville.—Our Sunday school is growing in number, having 116 on roll Sunday. We are hoping to have more soon, as some have been absent due to the scarlet fever.

Our pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, was with us at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, using for his subject "Motto." He made very clear and impressive a motto in a Christian's life.

Officers have been elected for our C. E. society. They are as follows: president, Alice Haynes; vice-president, Robert Swaim; secretary, Ray Collette; treasurer, Bessie Swaim. Realizing the great responsibility we are now facing, we desire the prayers of the Christian people that we may make a success in this work.

Plans are being made for a Children's Day, but we do not know just when it will be.

REPORTER.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—We are moving along, slow but sure. Several have been kept from church service by sickness. Our oldest member, Brother J. S. Crawford, fell and fractured his hip and is in a critical condition. Our pastor, Mr. Loy, gave us a splendid sermon yesterday, as he usually does.

We are planning to have a memorial service at Orange Chapel third Sunday in June, and also Children's Day service, all-day service. Everybody invited.

Glen Raven.—On last Saturday night the Philathea class of which Mrs. Neese is teacher entertained the mothers of the daughters of the class at a mother-and-daughter banquet. A four-course dinner was served. There were fourteen mothers and seventeen daughters present. The superintendent of the Sunday school, P. E. Troxler, and Mrs. Troxler and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Garrison were especially invited guests. Four girls of Mrs. Garrison's junior Philathea class served as waitresses. P. E. Troxler and the writer each gave a brief talk. These talks were followed by a recitation given by Miss Rena Maude Isley, president of the class. C. C. Garrison, choir leader, had charge of the singing. The whole program was an enjoyable and profitable affair.

A good-sized audience was present Sunday at 11 a.m. Hon. Charles A. Hines, of Greensboro, delivered a Mother's Day address. His address was fine and was heard with interest and attention. Mrs. H. W. Wade sang a solo very beautifully. Mrs. Wade is from Fountain Place church, Burlington. At the night service the writer spoke in behalf of High Point College.

Six of our young people graduated from high school this year: Thurman Troxler, Misses Pauline and Corline Troxler, Miss Kathryn Taylor and Miss Jack Barber of Fairview church, and Miss Lessie Jones of Glen Raven church. Several of these are planning to enter college.

Sunday school attendance at Glen Raven last Sunday was 130.

On Mother's Day at Fairview a fine program of songs and recitations was given.

WM. H. NEESE.

Edland, Orange Charge.—Brother Williams brought us two very helpful sermons Sunday.

We were glad to have Mrs. Lucien Young and Sheriff W. T. Sloan unite with our church recently. Mrs. Young comes to us from the Hebron church and Sheriff Sloan from the Mebane church.

The Christian Endeavor society was reorganized a few Sundays ago. Robert Williams was elected president. We hope that through this society much good may be accomplished.

Children's Day services will be held the third Sunday in June at 11 o'clock.

Our Ladies' Aid and W. H. M. S. are increasing in attendance and interest under the leadership of Mrs. O. E. Bivins as president.

We are sorry to report much sickness at this writing. Mrs. B. M. Williams was called to the bedside of her mother in South Carolina who is quite ill. Mr. W. F. Cecil and Mr. Lowe Thompson are among the sick. We wish for all a speedy recovery if it be the Lord's will.

Our Sunday school is climbing some in attendance. There were 131 present the second Sunday. Come on, folks, let's break this record. We should not be satisfied until we at least get the entire number on roll to attend regularly.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Creswell.—Rev. R. L. Hethcox held his regular third Sunday services at Creswell this month. For the morning service we were very delighted to have the Charitable Brotherhood's organization to meet with us. Rev. Mr. Hethcox preached a very forceful sermon. For the evening service he compared our life to a motor. He stated that man was a four-cylinder motor. He made the four divisions as the physical, intellectual, social and spiritual. It was a very impressive sermon and I believe all there were benefited by it.

Our Sunday school is still doing splendid work. We will not have any Sunday school the first Sunday in June due to the fact that the County Sunday School Convention will be held that Sunday. We want to urge that every member of our Sunday school will attend. It will not only prove spiritual and uplifting to you, but you will obtain some practical ideas that you may bring home with you and put them in use in your own Sunday school where they will prove beneficial. It will be held at the Mount Pleasant church.

L. LOUISE HATFIELD.

Asheboro.—What seems to have been an all-time record attendance for our Sunday school was made yesterday when there were 241 present and this without any extra effort or contest of any kind. The past three Sundays the attendance has been: 212, 223, 241.

At the morning church service yesterday seven more members were received on profession of faith, making 28 to be received for the past two Sundays. All of these have joined on profession of faith except one who came by letter.

Last evening the speaker for the service was Mrs. Ivey Clark, of Compton, California, a Friends ministers. Mrs. Clark is a daughter of the late Rev. William C. Hammer and sister of Congressman W. C. Hammer, of our church. Mrs. Clark is visiting relatives here and we were delighted to have her speak for us at the evening service.

Next Sunday morning we will have a memorial service for all our deceased members of our church and for the seven deceased former pastors of the church. The pastor will preach the memorial sermon and following the sermon a white carnation will be placed on a memorial wreath for each of the deceased members while the roll of the honored dead is being called. The families of all our deceased members and the families of the deceased pastors of the church are especially invited to attend the service.

At the evening service next Sunday the Intermediate C. E. Society will give a Christian Endeavor play. If there should be sufficient time the pastor will make a short address or preach a short sermon following the play.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Concord.—Appropriate services were held here on Mother's Day. Special music was rendered at both morning and evening services.

At the morning service last Sunday the pastor preached an excellent sermon on "Jonah As An Evangelist." The message was a challenge to all who are prone to leave the right way, to get back in the right road and always keep to the right, avoiding the roads that lead to discontent, unhappiness and finally destruction. At the close of the service a good number came forward for reconsecration. We were glad to have as visitors in this service Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wilson, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. Hendry preached at the Jackson Training School to about 500 boys on Sunday afternoon.

Several of our folks have been attending the special services at the Kannapolis Tabernacle for the past two weeks. The pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, had charge of the meeting and did some splendid preaching. There were several conversions and reclamations, and we believe the work there is greatly strengthened.

A marriage of much interest to many friends of both parties was that of Miss Ethel Blackwelder and Rev. D. D. Broome, which was solemnized at High Point last Thursday, May 16. Mrs. Broome is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Blackwelder, of this city, a graduate of High Point College, and for the past few years a teacher in the city schools here. Last year she taught at Kernersville. Mr. Broome is the new and popular pastor of Yarbrough charge. They are at home to their many friends at Cross Anchor, S. C.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a good day for Pleasant Hill church. A large attendance was recorded in Sunday School and a large congregation was present for the preaching services. Two extra features of the service included a brief program observing "High Point College Day," and the observance of the Lord's Supper. Four young ladies rendered the program in the interest of High Point College just preceding the sermon. Following the sermon a large number of the people, both young and old, participated in the Lord's Supper. A Children's Day service will be held at Pleasant Hill church the third Sunday night in June, according to present plans. Preparation of the program will begin soon.

The service at Tabernacle last Sunday afternoon was not as well attended as usual, due to the rain that came just at the time for the service. Those who were present gave good attention and the service was a profitable one, we think. The revival meeting will begin at this church the third Sunday in July, with Rev. D. I. Garner, of the Randolph charge, as pulpit help. The Lord's Supper was observed at Tabernacle following the sermon by the pastor last Sunday afternoon.

The pastor and family have been remembered by some of the people of Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches since our last report. We thank Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Long for another supply of nice honey. Mrs. Thomas Briggs, of Tabernacle church, has our thanks for the gift of a hen and 15 baby chicks. The little Ways were delighted with the baby chicks. Mrs. Mary Long presented us with the first apples of the present season, for which we are thankful.

We regret to report that the condition of Bro. U. Walter Long does not improve. He remains in a rather serious condition. Also Mrs. Polly Whitman, who has been confined to her bed for several weeks, does not improve.

Our services next Sunday will be with Harmony Grove church, and we are expecting to observe the Lord's Supper in connection with the service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

South Lexington Church.—The work at our church is moving along very nicely. Brother Isley filled his appointment Sunday morning. He always brings us very helpful messages.

The meeting closed with very much success. About 25 new members were received into the church, this making about 37 new members since Easter. We are very glad to have these members. May we all work together and make this the best year of our church. There is a work for all to do and help us to do.

The auxiliaries of our church are doing many things for our church in raising money for different purposes. We are very proud of these, and may we give them our heartiest support.

The second quarterly conference met with the people of Mt. Carmel church Tuesday night, May 14. There was a large crowd present and the business was transacted. May the entire work take on new life.

REPORTER.

Bethel, Mocksville Ct.—Since my last report the Sunday school work has been moving on nicely under our efficient superintendent, J. W. Cartner. New pupils are coming in every Sunday. We have on roll 106, with 91 present Sunday. We have seven classes. The teachers and pupils are doing good work. We gave a measuring party with some refreshments and made a little purse of about $18 toward Sunday school rooms. We are very anxious to be able to build Sunday school rooms in the near future.

Mother's Day was beautifully and appropriately observed. A pageant, "A Mother's Devotion," was given in a beautiful and impressive manner. Those taking part in the pageant were Mrs. W. M. Howard, Mrs. Willie Foster, Miss Janie Martin, Alton Howard, and little Miss Clara Poplin and brother, Oscar Lee, who sang so beautifully "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again" as a duet. The special music rendered by the choir, the quartet, and solo were beautiful and impressive. The large audience was delighted and everyone present was helped by the service. A beautiful and touching tribute was paid to all worthy mothers by our pastor, J. W. Braxton. As long as life shall last here, and as long as humanity shall be called upon to struggle with the problems set before it, great mothers will be the world's greatest treasure.

The bravest battle that ever was fought—

Shall I tell you where and when?

On the maps of the world you will find it not,

'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Our annual memorial service was held Sunday with a large number of people present. Hon. E. S. W. Dameron of Burlington gave a splendid address at 11 o'clock. In the afternoon Rev. W. F. Kennett gave character sketches of the ministers gone out from our church, and Dr. J. F. McCulloch gave some early recollections of Tabernacle church.

Among the visitors for the day we were glad to have Bro. J. D. Williams of West End, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson of Mebane, and C. L. Jones of Burlington. Bro. J. E. Hanner was absent Sunday on account of a crippled foot. We hope to see him back in his accustomed place soon.

Our Sunday school superintendent was able to attend services Sunday after a few days' illness.

Next Sunday will be observed as High Point College day in our church here.

REPORTER.

Gideon's Grove, Flat Rock Charge.—Our pastor has been on a little vacation, but will be on now. We like our pastor and Mrs. Pegg very much and think our work is progressing under their leadership. Brother Pegg always gives us good, deep and practical sermons, and I think to love our pastor and his good wife more is to know them more, and our prayers go out for them that they may be blest in the revivals which will commence soon, for the fields are white unto the harvest. Let us give earnest heed to the work of the Master. Let everyone be awake to the fact that there are greater possibilities than ever before for the day school teacher, the Sunday school teacher, and father and mother to teach the Bible and to impress the fact that the Bible teaches the purest code of morals the world has ever known.

Our Sunday school is getting along very nicely, but could be a great deal better if more of our good sisters would put more interest in the work. No one can put life in our Sunday schools like our good women folks. We are planning to have memorial services the first Sunday in June and want everybody to come and bring some flowers. Please come and enjoy the services.

Pray for us that we may be better and that we may have a good meeting.

F. J. L., Reporter.

Moriah.—Our attendance at Sunday school is much better. We have an automobile race on, and it seems to be creating more interest, especially among the young people.

We are planning an all-day service next Sunday with dinner on the grounds. This will be our one hundredth anniversary. We are expecting a large crowd and hope that many have-been Moriah people will make this a home-coming event.

A teacher has been secured and we are going to start a singing class pretty soon. We hope that our singers will take advantage of these lessons and that they may be a benefit to the church and Sunday school.

Mr. John S. Wood has just completed a very attractive marker. This will be placed on the highway in front of the church this week.

We are very glad to report that our pastor is much better. We trust that he may continue to improve and soon be able to take up his work again.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Davidson.—According to schedule, we held our circuit rally at Chapel Hill the third Sunday. The crowd was large and the program was fine. We were delighted to have with us on the program as laymen Bros. M. K. Surratt, Paul Fine, J. P. Elliott and Mrs. Koonts of Lexington. Ministers on the program were Rev. S. W. Taylor, President, Rev. N. G. Bethesda, and Rev. T. F. McCulloch; all these were at their best and held the audience spell-bound. Other visiting ministers were Rev. J. R. Anderson from Albemarle station, Rev. A. E. Bingham, Denton, and Rev. Robt. Short from Roberta station. We were glad to have all these with us and want them back again. We are sure that the great truths brought to us will some day bear fruit.

And now, just following the great feast of Sunday, comes the sadness of the going out from among us of our dear aged brother, Mayberry Russell. In his going a pillar of the church has been removed. The funeral will be held at Chapel Hill tomorrow, Tuesday at 11 o'clock. Our deepest sympathies go out for his splendid family.

W. D. REED.

Hollister.—Mother's Day was observed here the second Sunday evening. Pastor Spencer gave an interesting talk on The Mothers of the Bible and Mothers of Today. The choir sang "Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me," and "My Mother's Bible."

Our Sunday school is planning to have Children's Day in June.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Spencer Tuesday, May 14. The meeting was called to order by the president. The meeting was opened by singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds." The devotional was conducted by the writer. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The roll was called and 12 members and five visitors responded. After a short business session the second chapter in the study book was given by Mrs. C. L. Spencer.

cer. Mrs. Linda Arrington gave an interesting reading on our work with the foreign-speaking people in Pittsburgh. We were very glad to have so many visitors present, and hope they will come again. We were dismissed with prayer by Mr. E. T. Ellington. The hostess served delicious ice cream and cake.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION

The following statement, relative to the consolidation of our church papers, was ordered published by the Board of Publication.

On Friday, May 10, 1929, the Board of Publication met in connection with the All-Board's Meetings, in the First Methodist Protestant Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

After reviewing the business of the past year, and laying plans for the ensuing year, the Board felt that the death of Rev. F. T. Benson, D. D., editor of the Methodist Protestant, necessitated a revision of the action taken by the Board in its meeting on February 26, 1929, relative to the consolidation of the church papers.

By unanimous vote of the Board, Rev. L. E. Davis, D. D., LL. D., editor of the Methodist Recorder, was elected editor of the new paper—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder. After the election of Dr. Davis the accompanying report from the committee appointed to work out the details incident to the consolidation of the papers, was unanimously adopted.

C. L. DAUGHERTY,
J. C. BROOMFIELD.

Report of Special Committee on Merging of the Papers

To the Board of Publication of the Methodist Protestant Church:

The undersigned committee appointed to supervise the merger of the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Recorder, recommend:

First: That the date of the merger be changed from November 1, 1929, to August 1, 1929.

Second: That this Board assume the expense of the necessary visits to Baltimore by Dr. Davis in arranging the merger and of his removal to Baltimore to take charge of the editorship.

We have asked, and Dr. Davis has readily consented to propose and submit to our committee a dummy or plan of construction of the new paper for our consideration and collaboration with him in its initial make-up.

A STATEMENT AND AN APPEAL

A few years ago through the solicitations of Rev. C. W. Bates the brethren contributed enough money with which to buy an adding machine for the use of the annual conference officials. During Brother V. W. Idol's term as conference treasurer he used his own machine, and the conference machine was loaned to the college and was used by the officials there until a few days ago. I had no machine of my own, except a very imperfect and unreliable one concealed somewhere back in the mysterious recesses of my cranium, and it became necessary for me to rob the college and cart our machine over to my sanctum. So much for the statement.

The college needs an adding machine and must have one. Therefore I am appealing to the brethren of the conference—preachers and laymen—to contribute the price of an up-to-date adding machine and give it to the College. This is the appeal. Here is an opportunity for all of the financial "minnows" in the church to do something worthwhile for the College. Please do not wait for another appeal. Send your contributions to me at once. If you should contribute more than the machine will cost, I shall be glad to give the extra amount to the college to be applied on other much needed equipment. All amounts will be reported in the Herald. Get busy, brethren, and keep me busy.

Broome-Blackwelder

In a ceremony of simple beauty last Thursday evening, May 16, Miss Ethel Virginia Blackwelder became the bride of Rev. Dewey D. Broome. The marriage was solemnized by Dr. P. E. Lindley at his home, 833 Circle Drive, High Point, N. C. Only a few special friends were assembled to witness the formalities.

Mrs. Broome is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Blackwelder, of Concord, N. C. She is a graduate of High Point College, being a member of the first senior class. Since her graduation two years ago Mrs. Broome has been teaching. She was a member of the faculty of the Kernersville city school, Forsyth county. In religious education and community leadership also she has become well known. In Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and general church work Mrs. Broome's talents found cheerful and valuable expression.

Rev. Mr. Broome is also a former student of High Point College. While in that institution he made many friends among the faculty and students. He took a foremost place in religious activities on the campus, also entering freely into the forensic contests fostered by the literary societies and the college. At present Mr. Broome is in the active service of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant church, and holds the Yarbrough pastorate in South Carolina.

The young couple will make their home at Cross Anchor, South Carolina. Their many friends wish for them joy, health, length of days and a life filled with happiness.

MEMORIAL DAY AT TABERNACLE

This came last Sunday. The cemetery was beautiful with its gleaming monuments, its new floor of sand and the profuse display of many colored flowers brought by friends to decorate the graves. The congregation almost filled the large church. The pastor, Rev. H. L. Isely, had prepared a complete program. The songs of the choir were spirited and touching. The address of the forenoon was by Hon. E. S. W. Dameron, of Graham, a lawyer and judge of Alamance county, a man of oratorical parts, and, above all other qualifications, a sincere Christian. He spoke approval of the custom of observing a day in memory of those gone before. It is in keeping with the universal belief in immortality. There is no death; so-called death is but transition, and for those who have lived well it is transition to a more blessed and glorious state. The metamorphosis of the worm into a beautiful butterfly is a type of the change undergone by man when he lives true to the divine purpose. He spoke much of the importance of right living and condemned some of the glaring evils of the time, dishonesty, gambling, lawlessness. The church's best and mightiest influence is needed to purge society of the vices of the time. It was the case of a Christian lawyer in the pulpit, preaching a telling sermon. The Tabernacle people were glad of this opportunity to hear Judge Dameron and feel the sympathetic touch of his spirit in the effort to make better the world.

The addresses of the afternoon were by two of Tabernacle's boys, now somewhat advanced beyond the age of knee-pants, but not far enough advanced to lose interest in Tabernacle and Tabernacle's doings. W. F. Kennett and J. F. McCulloch. The former spoke of the ministers who have gone out from Tabernacle church and showed surprising retentiveness of memory in being able to give subjects and texts of sermons preached in his boyhood days. He also showed the most generous spirit of appreciation of those of whom he spoke. We thank him for the generosity which led him to so great an exaggeration of our part in the work of the church. His large faith in other folks has no doubt helped him to inspire them to try to do better. It fell to our lot to speak of the laymen and laywomen who have passed on from this church. We regret that the shortness of available time did not permit us to go into the subject. Several interesting and inspiring character sketches might be drawn of the men and women who lived and labored about Tabernacle a half century and more ago. Their contemporaries knew and honored them and their influence remains in the community to this day.

The congregation included people from Greensboro and more distant points as far away as Mebane, whence came Bro. Henry Nicholson and wife, the daughter of Rev. W. D. Fogleman, who went out from Tabernacle.

Tabernacle has been a progressive church in the past. Each generation has forwarded the work and the equipment of the church. The present opportunity with the multitude of young people is, we believe, better than any preceding opportunity. It is up to the present generation to take its step forward. They have a mind to go forward with the addition of Sunday school building or rooms, and we trust they will unite their strength in this worthy enterprise, and succeed in the Tabernacle way.—J. F. MORIAH ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

The one hundredth anniversary of Moriah church will be celebrated on May 26. The following program will be rendered:

10:00 A. M.—Sunday school.

11:00 A. M.—Sermon by Rev. R. J. Tambllyn of Grace Church, Greensboro.

12:30 P. M.—Lunch on the grounds.

2:00 P. M.—Devotional, by Dr. J. D. Williams, of West End Church, Greensboro.

"Early History of Our Church," by Prof. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point College.

"Later History of Our Church," by Rev. T. M. Johnson.

"History of Late 1800 and Early 1900," by Mr. J. Norman Wills.

"Recent History," by Rev. J. A. Burgess.

Five-minute talks by all former pastors present.

We extend a cordial welcome to all former members and all friends of our church to come and spend the day with us.

A table will be provided that will hold all the good things that you can bring in a big basket.

A few days ago I sent out letters to subscribers to the Endowment Insurance Fund, asking that a payment be made as early as possible. The premiums on the life insurance are now requiring payment. The insurance has been building up a cash reserve against the indebtedness of the college, due the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company. It is hoped that all those who have received these letters will give them prompt and earnest consideration, as it is exceedingly important that we receive a substantial sum within the next few days. Brother Edland has set the example. I trust others will follow promptly.

ABSENT-MINDED

A very queer mind he has!

When he needs it here it's there,

When he wants it there, alas!

It's gone to some other sphere.

Things to be done are forgotten,
Those who trust him disappointed,
Because his memory strings are rotten,
Or his thinking machine disjointed.

His mind needs a rope or chain
To keep it where it should be;
Or, maybe, to speak quite plain,
He needs a new mind entirely.

"Nearer, My God, to Thee"

Nearer to Thee
That Thou mayst be,
O Lord of Life,
Nearer to me!

Nearer to me
In tempter's hour,
When sin assails
With subtlest power.

Nearer to me
When comes the storm,
When fury rages
And fears take form.

Nearer to me
When shadows fall
And darkness grows
To funeral pall.

Nearer to Thee
Through all the days,
To have Thee near
In all life's ways.

The Things That Matter Most

When President Coolidge lost his son by accidental blood poisoning, he felt that the glory had departed from his high office. He reflected that in all probability his son would still be living if he had not come to Washington, and he felt that in exchanging his son for the presidency he had made a disastrous bargain. What he had gained could not begin to compensate him for what he had lost. A son has greater value than all the honors and emoluments of the highest office. Family relations are more vital and important than political relations.

Many men are brought to a realization of the value of health as compared with wealth. Endowed with abounding health they start out in the race for wealth, not knowing either the danger of losing health or the futility of wealth to produce happiness or even contentment. They sacrifice health in the race. They may or may not gain wealth; but if they do they realize that they have exchanged the far greater for the less. Their frantic and unavailing cry is, "Take my wealth and give me back my health!"

Jesus pointed out an exchange that is still more disastrous—the exchange of spiritual good for worldly good. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The dread possibility of such a loss for any gain whatever should startle us and cause us to look to our ways daily. In the world's exchange we may ere we know it sell the pearl of great price for something that will not profit. In our merchandise let us have a true sense of values and not be imposed on by showy displays.

"One World at a Time"

This statement contains one of the moral fallacies employed to mislead the simple. It would dismiss from the mind all consideration of the state of existence that follows this and reduce one's life to sheer worldliness in a sense not much above beastliness. It would dehumanize life. Taking away the lofty outlook of enlightened mankind, it would narrow the vision to things of sense. It would reduce consciousness to the low plane of stupid brutishness. It would lull men to sleep regarding the supreme realities. It would direct men to the course diametrically opposite to that of true wisdom. It is a worse error than that of those who would have us utterly ignore the present world and give our whole thought and interest to the world to follow this, for the "one world" it would have us recognize is this world. It would have us pursue life's journey without any thought as to whither it leads us. It would make us as men who walk in their sleep and fall over precipices to their destruction. The wise man will pray for more wisdom. The enlightened man will seek more light. He will wish to know all he can about the future so far as that future depends upon the present. He will wish, if possible, to lay up treasures in the future state. He will ponder all the intimations of his immortality. He will prize beyond measure the great revelation of Him who brought life and immortality to light. He will keep his windows ever open to the light that streams from the glory world where we may ever be "with the Lord."

Did Paul Mean to Limit the Christian Service of Women?

A cursory reading of the New Testament will lead to the opinion that he did. We believe that a close study of all his writings will lead to the judgment that he did not. We cannot conceive that the Apostle would have felt himself authorized to reduce the sphere of woman's service. On the contrary, he must have prized the co-operation of good women in the work of spreading the gospel as wise ministers prize their help now. In his epistle to the Philippians he writes: "Help those women who labored with me in the gospel." It is true that in a passage or two in epistles to the Corinthians and to Timothy he seems to impose certain restrictions upon women, but our conclusion is that he did so out of regard to laws and customs of the times or the special conditions of the women referred to, and that he had no thought of limiting the freedom of women universally.

—The death of Miss Dela Bustin, of Enfield, is reported. She once lived in Liberty and later was a compositor in the HERALD office. We were impressed with her good qualities and are sorry to hear of her death.

THE GAME OF BRIDGE

Mr. Editor:

I had no desire or thought to make further comment on bridge, but since the Editor on the front page of his paper charged me with taking him to task for his conclusions as to bridge, I should be permitted to explain that all I did was to state some of the merits of bridge, having been invited by the Editor to do so.

The Editor originally asked for a justification of bridge—or a substitute. I therefore set forth reasons in justification. Those arrayed on the other side have condemned bridge but have offered no substitute.

Any one writing in a church paper in defense of cards must be aware that the sentiment of the readers is against him. The difficulty of furnishing sufficient evidence to change preconceived views is fully understood. There are some things which we cannot prove which we know, and know full well—know by experience.

It would be difficult to tell how sweet music gives pleasure to a lover of music. The Editor formerly derived keen delight from solving abstruse mathematical problems. I do not believe he would be willing to place Q. E. D. after a course of reasoning as to how or why solving abstruse mathematical problems produces keen delight.

One must experience the delights of bridge to know them.

I agree that bridge may be played to excess. Some play when they should not—others attempt to play when they cannot—should have more regard for those who can.

I am not so resigned, as the Editor, to the dictum of Mrs. John F. Sippel, the club woman from Baltimore. I am not acquainted with the attainments of Mrs. Sippel, nor the laudable work she may be carrying on. I, however, agree with her that bridge should not be played "madly," nor to the exclusion of all other interests. I do believe, however, that when bridge is played it should be played enthusiastically.

I would not care to have one accept an invitation to dine with me unless it was accepted with enthusiasm.

I have wondered if diminished attendance at Mrs. Sippel's club meetings, due to absence of enthusiastic bridge players, may not have caused her pronouncement on bridge.

Wilmington, N. C.

C. E. McCulloch.

(Since I quoted a certain minister as saying, "There's nothing in bridge," another minister has been heard from. He thinks ladies play bridge enthusiastically, not because of the merits of the game, but because of the value of the stakes. This puts a very ugly face on the matter, if his surmise is correct. Gambling is condemned by law. There can be no question that betting is wrong. We presume, however, that our Wilmington brother is not defending that accompaniment of the game, but the game in itself as a pastime. We regret that he questioned Mrs. Sippel's motive. Her judgment might be correct, even if her motive were unworthy. His motive might also be questioned. It might be assumed that he is trying to justify the game to ease his conscience for having played it. We do not, however, entertain such a suspicion. We can see how he can use a little of his small amount of leisure in playing some game and find diversion and rest in doing so. But we submit that his case is very different from that of the person who is so fascinated with the game as to make it an almost exclusive occupation. There can, we think, be no serious question that that is a perversion of human life from its true divine purpose.

Money-mad men ignore God in their work. Bridge-mad women ignore God in their play. If you can and must play bridge, play it in moderation, remembering that playing bridge is not the chief function of life.—EDITOR.)

REV. C. M. COMPHER TO OAK RIDGE GRADUATES

Each man selects the materials of the world in which he will live and builds the structure of his own environment. He lives among the canons of art, or the theories of science, or the devices of political bargaining, and as man chooses, so he becomes.

To know with accuracy, with thoroughness, with a keen sense of proportion and relation, is the greatest force in this world. With it, noblest possible works are assured. Learning should always lead to thinking, because thinking is far more important than knowing in the making of a man. We are not to be a bigot, but I confess that I have the greatest admiration for a man who can do his own thinking. It altogether depends upon what I think.

There is none to whom the world pays greater tribute or is more afraid than the thinker.

Again, a keen sense of duty is a great factor in the making of man as well as a race. The keen appreciation of duty is a marked characteristic of the English-speaking people. We should never forget that religion is a mighty force among any people. In your attempt to answer the challenge of the undiscovered you should never forget that the Christian religion is the mightiest force for making the modern nation or the individual man.

Today, the challenge of the undiscovered in the educational realm is without precedent. There is nothing like it in history. Man is soon overwhelmed by the weight and wonder of the knowledge he has discovered. He has charted and measured the heavens, weighed the earth and moon. He has learned the nature of the elements, dissected material into atoms and electrons. He reaches into the clear atmosphere to draw from it what he wills—music, lectures, educational talks, sermons or market reports. And in the face of all this, he tells us that it is only the beginning. Thomas A. Edison, on his eighty-second birthday, said, "We only know one-tenth of one per cent of what is to be known." Man has learned to correct many of the organic troubles of the body, performing miracles almost as wonderful as Christ's. We are reminded of His words, speaking of His own achievements: "Greater works than these shall ye do." On the pinnacle of his own achievements man stands, dazed, bewildered, afraid, realizing his own insignificance as he is made to know that all this is but a beginning. The unachieved possibilities tax the imagination of the world. The challenge is still there. It offers to you thousands of opportunities.

Today you are launching from "life's school" into the "school of life," the opportunities of the undiscovered are given only to those who are wide awake to grasp them. It rests alone with the individual to determine if our knowledge is going to make us better or worse men.

The challenge of the undiscovered is also true with reference to modern science. You are standing at the open door of a great force which is remoulding our civilization.

Is it not true that science is either devil or angel? It depends wholly upon the purpose to which her achievements are put. Science will heal or destroy with equal ease and without prejudice. What now is greatly needed, in season and out, is a motive that is high and pure, a strong humanitarian spirit, a high moral purpose. Put in action by such agencies science will help alleviate the sufferings and miseries of man. Into such fields the world is calling for you to enter and make other discoveries.

Another field in which the challenge of the undiscovered is loud and strong is that of making progress for world peace. It is a task for our generation. The passing generation has not yet learned. Many honest men sincerely believe that the only way to promote peace is to prepare for war. But you and I have seen that victory cannot bring peace. With modern war methods no side can win. Both sides lose immeasurably and forever. The damage done cannot be measured in terms of gold. The world has reached that stage of civilization when war should be outlawed by all nations and reason employed to settle disputes and quarrels.

No nation can today weaken another without weakening itself. We are living in an international day. All nations have contributed their share to the world's classic music, and contributed to the world's art. We cure our sick through the discoveries of Americans, French, Germans and Japanese. Commerce is international. The postal system reaches to every nation. Christianity has been interpreted to all nations. Now the world is asking that warfare be abolished forever, and international arbitration take its place.

There is yet another phase to which I wish to call your attention and that is that the challenge of the undiscovered is especially strong in the realm of the spiritual. All of us wish to be full rounded men and women; no one can neglect the development of his soul and not pay a tremendous price for it.

To live means more than merely earning enough to keep the spark of life in your body; to live means to make a life—the best possible life. It includes your vacation as well as your vocation. An education is to give ability to live largely, and enjoy all the hours greatly. You have commenced, but it is only a beginning you have made.

In whatever field you may begin your life's work, let me remind you of the inevitable law of life. It is this: "He that soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully, and he that soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly." Take away from your mind the thought that you will reap without sowing. No man ever did.

Even religion comes purchased at a tremendous price. That salvation is free, is true; but it cost the life blood of the Son of God. Christianity may mean much to you or nothing; it depends on how much you invest in it as you proceed in life. The investment which Jesus made was large. But what an abundant harvest.

The great task of making your life is your own. You may wreck it if you will, but by answering this great challenge you can make it great. Lord Kelvin, one of England's greatest scientists, was asked one day what he considered the greatest discovery he had ever made. Without a moment's hesitation he replied, "The greatest discovery I ever made was when I found in Jesus of Nazareth my personal Saviour."

The greatest men of our day are those who have made the discovery, and are proud to acknowledge Him. To neglect to find Him, or to scoff at His challenge, "If any man will let him come unto Me," is to make a wreck of all that you hold dear in this life.

For you, ladies and gentlemen, in answering the challenge of the undiscovered it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God.

YOU AND YOUR CHURCH

We have entered upon a new epoch in the work of the church. It is a time when unparalleled opportunities for the extending of the kingdom of God challenge each of us to do the heroic. These opportunities are demanding of us sacrificial giving of life and money. God has bountifully supplied the Christian church with adequate resources for the task, but how to make these resources available is the problem in many congregations. The attitude of many church members toward the financial side of the church life is entirely non-Christian and detrimental.

To aid your church in meeting her financial responsibility you should enter heartily into the plans approved by your church. You should co-operate in this part of your church life. Because you have deliberately chosen this church, you have pledged your loyalty and willingness to contribute toward its support when you joined. You are a part of it, and are so regarded by your neighbors. If its debts are unpaid, you share in its disgrace. Its work on the mission fields is your work. It is your chosen agency through which you expect to carry blessings to the whole world. Its prosperity will be your great joy. By the weekly duplex plan the objects supported by your church will be better provided for and their success safeguarded. You can aid by making your offering regularly week by week, both for the congregational expenses and the benevolent work of your church.

Every One Giving

The New Testament plan is every one of you "as God hath prospered him." There are those who excuse themselves from contributing because their offering of necessity must be small. They feel that what they are able to do is not worth while. Your offering from every standpoint is worth while. The spiritual effect on yourself, the moral effect on others, and the financial benefit to the work of the church require it. If your offering can be but five cents a week for the giving of the gospel to others and one hundred members of your church would do the same, there would be $260. Or if there are only fifty members in your church and thirty of them would give five cents and the other twenty ten cents each week, your church would have $182 in the offering for the year.

Each worshiper, young and old, rich and poor, is expected to bring an offering week by week as God has prospered him. The very best way to systematically carry forward this system is by the use of envelopes.

Weekly Giving the Easiest Way

You can readily see that a small offering, week by week, can be more easily complied with by the majority of members than to give thirteen times that much once a quarter. Limited resources compel the adopting of methods that will make possible the obtaining of best results.

Liberality

In fixing upon the amount of your offering, especially for others, you should consider your obligations to Him for all the benefits He has bestowed upon you. You should think of the amount you are spending on yourself. You should ask yourself the question, "Have I increased my offering unto the Lord in proportion to the blessings received, temporal and spiritual?"

Your offering may mean self-sacrifice, but you should remember the servant of old who said, "Neither will I offer to the Lord my God of that which will cost me nothing."

The Benefit

This is a system that will relieve your church officials of many anxieties and perplexities and your congregation from the multiplicity of collections and appeals.

By making this system effective in your church, children and young people will be trained in the grace of giving. Unless the habit of giving is formed in early life, it will be next to impossible to establish it when old. A New York millionaire said recently, "Do not expect much benevolence from a man after he has become a millionaire."

This system will prove spiritually beneficial to you; it will associate your giving with your worship. The regularity that the weekly offering demands will frequently call for self-denial and the crucifixion of selfish desires. It will enlarge your sympathy and love for others as they come week by week before you in your giving.

The writer in his last pastorate had a nurse who was frequently detained from the service. On one occasion I remember she was taken on a trip abroad, and when she returned, at the first service she deposited sixteen envelopes, each containing the amount of her weekly offering.

It will be a serious mistake for you to fail in regularly putting aside your weekly offering. The accumulated unpaid pledges will embarrass you and make it next to impossible to spare such an amount from any week or month's income. On the other hand, your withholding will embarrass your church treasurer, and also compel conference and general treasurers to borrow money and pay interest, thereby using money that should go for the extending of the kingdom.—Rev. J. S. Kendall, D.D.

PAUL'S HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED LETTER

The Pentecostal Herald has credit for this discovery. Here is the letter:

"Dear Sir and Brother: Doubtless you will recall the invitation you extended to me to come over into Macedonia and help the people of that section. You will pardon me for saying that I am somewhat surprised that you should expect a man of my standing in the church seriously to consider a call on such meager information.

"There are a number of things I should like to learn before giving my decision, and I would appreciate your dropping me a line, addressing me at Troas.

"First of all, I should like to know if Macedonia is a circuit or a station. This is important, as I have been told that once a man begins on a circuit it is well nigh impossible to secure employment in station work. If Macedonia embraces more than one preaching place, I may as well tell you frankly that I cannot think of accepting the call.

"There is another item that was overlooked in your brief and somewhat sudden invitation. No mention was made of the salary I was to receive. While it is true that I am not preaching for money, there are certain things that need to be taken into account. I have been through a long and expensive course of training; in fact, I may state with reasonable pride that I am a Sanhedrin man—the only one in the ministry today.

"The day is past when you may expect a man to rush into a new field without some idea of the support he is to receive. I have worked myself up to a good position in the Asiatic field and to take a drop and lose my grade would be serious.

Nor could I afford to swap 'dollar for dollar' as the saying is among us apostles.

"Kindly get the good Macedonian brethren together and see what you can do in the way of support. You have told me nothing about Macedonia beyond the implication that the place needs help. What are social advantages? Is the church well organized?

"I recently had a fine offer to return to Damascus at an increase of salary, and am told that I made a very favorable impression on the church at Jerusalem. If it will help me with the board at Macedonia, you might mention these facts, and also some of the brethren in Judea have been heard to say that if I kept on, in a few years I might have anything in the gift of the church. For recommendations write to the Rev. Simon Peter, D.D., at Jerusalem. I will say that I am a first-class mixer and especially strong on argumentative preaching. If I accept the call, I must stipulate for two months' vacation and the privilege of taking an occasional lecture tour.

"My lecture on 'Over the Wall in a Basket' is worth two drachma of any man's money.

"Sincerely yours,

"PAUL."

THY KINGDOM COME

Thy kingdom come—on bended knee
The passing ages pray;
And faithful souls have yearned to see
On earth that kingdom's day.

But the slow watches of the night
No less to God belong,
And for the everlasting right
The silent stars are strong.

And lo! already on the hills
The flags of dawn appear;
Gird up your loins, ye prophet souls,
Proclaim the day is near.

PRUDENTIAL WARRIORS

There are some orthodox persons in the churches who are quick to make war on evils that have no votaries with power to strike back. Against such, what a parade of valor they make! But never a direct word do they speak with tongue or pen against the entrenched Modernist machine. They know that if they should do that, there would swiftly come blows in return. They remind us of the characterization by Shakespeare of one type who was of this prudential warrior type:

"You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valor plucked dead lions by the beard.

GOD NOT INDIFFERENT

It sometimes looks to our dim eyes as if God had forgotten to be just, but He never forgets. For reasons of His own He often allows to wicked men ample scope for the development of their wickedness. But this delay is only for a season. It will end by and by in the overwhelming demonstration of God's righteousness.—Selected.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

Held in First Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., May 7-9, 1929

The meeting was called to order by President G. H. Miller. After the devotional service and the roll call the Recording Secretary was asked to read his report concerning the merging of our missionary work, and upon motion the work of the Secretary and the Executive Committee during the year was approved.

Communications were read.

The Constitutions and By-Laws provided for the Board of Missions, the Branches and the Auxiliaries were approved.

Mrs. George Tillotson presented a recommendation from the Ohio Branch for an amendment to the Constitution and By-Laws to read, "There shall be two Thank-Offering services, one in November and one in February, which shall be divided between the Home and Foreign work on a percentage basis allowed by the General Conference." This will be acted upon at the next annual Board meeting.

The Board approved the charter secured by the Executive Committee.

The resignation of Rowland Watts was accepted with regret.

The request of the Japan Missions for the privilege of purchasing additional ground for the school at Eiwa Jo Gakko was referred to the Executive Committee.

The Japan Mission was given permission to use $1,500 to buy ground on which to build a kindergarten in connection with the Chigasaki Church, provided they have the reserve funds on hand with which to make the purchase.

The appropriations for the mission fields were made the same as last year.

The Associate Executive Secretary and the Committee on Education elected by the Missionary Convention were asked to prepare report blanks, certificates of membership, etc.

G. H. Miller presented a recommendation from the Cambridge Auxiliary concerning the use of envelopes for monthly offerings in the circles.

Mrs. Marie Thompson read her financial report which was adopted.

The Board appropriated $300 to be distributed pro rata among the Mission Councils, one-fourth to each.

Miss Mildred Miskimen addressed the Board concerning her work in India, and the date and details of her return were left to a special committee.

Paul Cassen, our missionary in India, was authorized to begin the erection of his bungalow as soon as the Executive Committee approves of his plans.

Mr. A. L. Cook, of Kansas City, presented the needs of Gordon Place Church in Kansas City as they relate to their proposed new church, and Drs. Broomfield and Haddaway were asked to confer with the officials of the church concerning the matter.

Committees were appointed to secure from the proper source a schedule of the salaries paid by various denominations to their missionaries while on the field and while on furlough.

On motion the Branch Treasurers were asked to send only even dollars when making remittances to Mrs. Thompson, the new treasurer of the Woman's Work.

On motion the Executive Committee of the General Conference was asked to interpret the financial objectives of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary.

Rev. E. D. Howland, president of the Board of Church Extension of the Onondaga Conference, brought good news to the Board concerning the fine progress being made in the building of the church at Rochester, N. Y., and thanked the Board in behalf of the Conference for the aid they had received.

The salaries of the Executive Secretaries were increased $300 for the ensuing year.

The purchase of a lot for the Nagoya School was left in the hands of the Executive Committee for investigation. This also applies to the lot which is desired for the girls' school.

Mrs. Mills brought a recommendation from the Alabama Branch concerning a new orphanage, and the matter was referred to the Alabama Conference.

A bill of $500 for services to date was ordered paid to Attorney J. P. Patterson.

Appeals and recommendations were considered relative to the following churches and individuals: Capital Heights Church, Montgomery, Ala.; J. A. Wade, Magnolia, Ark.; the Florida Mission Conference; W. A. Clower, President of Arkansas Conference; San Angelo, Tex.; Somers Point Church, N. J.; Fort Smith Church, Quinton Church and President M. L. Matthews, of the Fort Smith-Oklahoma Conference; J. K. Worrell, Chatham Church, Chicago; F. E. Rueckert, President Illinois Conference; Grace Church, Indianapolis; A. E. Clower, Kahoka, Missouri; C. R. Green, Newton, Iowa; W. M. Snyder, Stephen's Memorial Church, Kansas City; C. H. Reed, West Height Church, Kansas City; First Church, Detroit; H. L. Watkins, Harger Memorial Church, Detroit; Quittman Church, Mississippi Conference; Calvary Church, Greensboro, N. C.; I. M. McVey, Mt. Lookout Church, Cincinnati; First Church, Columbus, Ohio; Middletown, Ohio; G. O. Weaver, Rochester, N. Y.; D. E. McVey, Paris, Texas; W. L. Hoffman; Seaview Church, Seattle, Washington; Parkersburg, W. Va.

The action of the Board in regard to all of the above cases will be communicated directly to those involved.

The officers elected by the Board were as follows:

President, G. H. Miller; vice-president, Mrs. Henry Hupfield; recording secretary, J. W. Hawley. To fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Rowland Watts, Mr. Dan Baker, Jr., of Baltimore, Md.

Board of Foreign Missions: G. H. Miller, L. B. Smith, G. D. Jones, J. Norman Wills and Dan Baker, Jr.

Board of Home Missions: J. P. Turkleson, J. W. Hawley, C. J. Kerlin, A. C. Rogers and O. J. Whitesell.

W. F. M. S.: Mrs. Henry Hupfield, Mrs. E. B. McRoberts, Mrs. Clyde Barbe, Mrs. C. S. Kidd and Mrs. George R. Brown.

W. H. M. S.: Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Mrs. B. W. Gilligan, Mrs. A. G. Liebelt, Mrs. R. T. Lewis and Mrs. George R. Tillotson.

Executive Committee: G. H. Miller, Mrs. Henry Hupfield, J. W. Hawley, Mrs. A. G. Dixon, G. W. Haddaway and Mrs. Marie Thompson.

The following suggestions were made by the Executive Secretary and approved by the Board of Missions:

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Burlington

May 20, Monday.—On this date we were with the First Church, Burlington, in a meeting of the Auxiliary. A large number of women were present, about sixty, we believe, and the meeting was full of interest from start to close. The new order has necessitated a change in some phases of the work to which the women here have been warmly attached, but they are accepting the change with becoming loyalty, and we predict that they will be pleased with it when they become adjusted to its workings. The Auxiliary now has seven circles, and plans were on to organize another circle to be composed of the young business women. The women of this church are a potent factor in all that the church undertakes. For many years they have been well organized, and through their organizations they have rendered invaluable help to the work. It is our opinion that this will go on through the new order, and in increasing proportions. More women, we believe, will be enlisted in their work, and the good results in other particulars will soon win their hearty approval of the merger. Pastor Gerringer and his efficient wife are giving every possible assistance in making the readjustment. We are confident that Burlington will continue at the front in women's work. Mrs. Taylor was with us in this meeting, and each of us greatly enjoyed the visit.

Pageland

May 21, Tuesday.—We met the people at this charge at New Hope Church at 8 p. m. Each of the three churches was represented, the Bethesda people traveling as much as fifty miles to be present. The large number of persons present at the meeting indicated marked and pleasing interest in the work. Our visit at this time was largely of a business nature. Bro. Phillips had asked to be temporarily relieved of the pastorate, and our visit down there was to make arrangements with the charge for a supply for the remainder of the year. This we were able to do promptly and satisfactorily. Bro. T. Glenn Madison has been assigned to the work, and will enter upon his duties the first of June. We predict for him the full support of the people, and a happy and successful pastorate with this charge.

Mecklenburg

May 22, Wednesday.—The appointment on this charge was at Stallings, and at night. Here again every church was represented and fine interest indicated by a splendid attendance. Our visit to this charge at this time was prompted by the continued illness of the pastor, Rev. C. H. Hall. We found him in the Presbyterian Hospital, this being his third treatment there this year. We were glad to find him resting in some comfort Thursday morning. His disease responds but slowly to treatment, though he seems to be receiving every possible medical aid. He is making a brave fight, and we hope that permanent relief may soon be realized. He has the assurance of our sympathy and our prayers, and likewise his wife and four children. The people of the charge are very sympathetic and are trying to provide for his necessities. Bro. N. M. Harrison has been very comforting to Bro. Hall and very helpful to the charge. Pastors of other churches have rendered aid also in holding services. Bro. Harrison will look after the work while Bro. Hall is unable to do it, making provision for regular preaching services and for the special meetings. He hopes to arrange for an all-day rally on the charge to be held the fourth Sunday in July. Pastor Hall and the people are quite satisfied with the work in Bro. Harrison's hands, and though it will entail an extra responsibility upon him, he gladly renders his services in this emergency. We are sure that the work will be well cared for.

Shelby

May 24, Friday.—A business meeting was held with this church Friday night and some adjustments made that will help, we trust, in promoting our work there. The ministers' conference for this district is to be held here on Monday after the fourth Sunday in June, so we understand from Chairman Bethea. This should, and will, we believe, be stimulating to the church. The need for a church in the part of the city where we are located is evident. The field is there, and we are in it, and by proper insight it would seem that we should be able to establish a useful church there. We are hopeful that this year may reveal signs of the better things that lie ahead.

We are indebted to Bro. Carson and his people and to the people of the other charges for their hospitality and kindness to us while among them.

Two New Parsonages

This itinerary of nearly a week gave us an opportunity to see, for the first time, two of our new parsonages. One of them is our parsonage at Charlotte, where we were the guest of Bro. and Sister Harrison for a brief stay. It is built hard by the church, and is of red brick structure. We were favorably impressed with the architectural design and with the full and wise use of all space. There are eight or nine rooms and a large basement, part of which is to be fitted up for a Sunday school class. The large heating plant in the basement gives promise of complete comfort in the coldest of winter weather. The building is well constructed, and is the best parsonage in the conference that we have seen. Bro. and Sister Harrison were just moving in, and were to keep open house Friday afternoon and night.

The other one is on the Cleveland charge. This is a brick veneered building, with seven rooms, closets, back and front porches, and a roomy basement with cement walls and floor. The well is just outside the kitchen door, and is sheltered by the back porch. The house is not occupied by a Shunammite family, but the "man of God" has quarters there. One room is designated "The President's Room." We enjoyed occupying it, and we bequeath it to others who come after us. This parsonage, like the one at Charlotte, is well built, well designed and well located, and Pastor Ridge and his family are very comfortable and happy in it. It was a great pleasure to us to be with these two families in these new homes, and we most heartily congratulate these charges for building so wisely and well.

Mount Pleasant

May 26, Sunday.—This is the Mt. Pleasant church on North Davidson charge. We were with them through the day in a memorial service, preaching at 11 a. m. and speaking again in the afternoon. Upon our arrival we found the Sunday school just closing. The services of the day were well attended, and a fine spirit was in evidence. One of the leaders of this church is vivid in the recollections of our early days. We refer to Mr. Alfred Lindsay, father of Bro. J. W. Lindsay of State Street Church and Mrs. O. O. Sapp of the Winston church. He has other sons and daughters, and probably some of them still retain their membership at the old home church, though we do not have information as to this. His remains rest in the church burying ground. Other leaders that we had no opportunity to know were spoken of in the afternoon service. Among them was Captain Hoover whose remains are also interred here. Attention was called by Bro. Stone to the chair which was his favorite seat in the services, and which has been the property of the church for probably fifty years. A new and attractive church, with several Sunday school rooms, occupies the ground on which the old church stood in which the fathers and mothers of Israel worshiped in the bygone days. "Their works do follow them" in this better church building. Bro. R. S. Troxler, the popular pastor of this church, was present, and through the Troxler quartet (himself, his wife, a son and daughter) made helpful and pleasing contribution to the program. We also enjoyed the address of Mr. Pope, of Thomasville. Our impressions are that the day was well worthwhile.

We regretted to miss the centennial memorial service at Moriah, but our appointment with Mt. Pleasant made it impossible for us to be there.

District Rallies

Plans are going forward for these in some of the districts, and one pleasing fact in some instances is that they are to be held with the weaker charges. This is true in the eleventh district, Rev. C. E. Ridge, chairman. Their rally is to be held at Shady Grove Church on the Connelly Springs charge. This may reduce the attendance somewhat, but it will be a great boost to this weak charge. We trust that every district will hold a rally; there is merit in bringing our people together in this way.

Children's Day

Please let no charge fail to observe this day, and to take an offering for New Century Service. Your local church will be helped by it, and the denomination will be helped in carrying out our missionary program. Dr. Haddaway will furnish the program for the asking. It is not too late yet to prepare for this service. Do it, brethren, and let us make this the best Children's Day year in the history of our conference.

Herald Quotas

These are not being reported as rapidly as we would like to have them. However, we know that it takes time to do this, and, too, pastors have many things to which they must give attention. But we do urge that this be pressed. A reading church will be an interested and a responsive church. The committee designated May and June as the months in which these quotas should be secured. We are now designating the fifth Sunday in June as HERALD Sunday. We hope on this day to have a conference-wide effort that will take us "over the top" in subscription goals. What is not done up to that day, we hope to complete then. Everybody ready, now, to make this thing a big success. It can be done if we all say so.

Appointments

June 2, Sunday.—High Point College commencement.

June 9, Sunday.—Denton Charge, 11 a. m.; Albemarle, 8 p. m.

June 12, Sunday.—Gile's Chapel, Richland Charge.

June 21-23.—Attending District Rallies on our South Carolina fields.

June 30, Sunday.—District Rally in First District. Place to be announced later.

July 13-20.—Pastors' Conference and Young People's Training.

July 28, Sunday.—Mecklenburg Charge, in District Rally.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

BEARING THE CROSS

Smoothly along we cannot sail;
One day the calm, one day the gale,
Ever the rocks on either side,
Ever the prow against the tide.

Shorter the life, by every breath;
One day disease and one day death—
Ever the falling shades of night,
Ever the grave in open sight.

Nearer the port by every wave,
Be strong, my soul; my heart, be brave;
Theirs is the gain who suffer loss;
Theirs is the crown who bear the cross.

A BEAUTIFUL FATHER

"Tell your mother you have been very good boys today," said a school teacher to two little new scholars.

"Oh," replied Tommy, "we haven't any mother."

"Who takes care of you?" she asked.

"Father does. We've got a beautiful father; you ought to see him!"

"Who takes care of you when he is at work?"

"He takes all the care before he goes off in the morning, and after he comes back at night. He's a house painter, but there is not any work this summer, so he's doin' laboring. He leaves us a warm breakfast when he goes off and we have bread and milk for dinner and a good supper when he comes home. Then he tells us stories and plays on the fife, and cuts out beautiful things for us with his jack-knife."

Before long the teacher did see the home of that father. The room was a poor one, graced with cheap pictures, autumn leaves and other little trifles that cost nothing. The father, who was at the time preparing the evening meal for his motherless boys, was, at first glance, only a rough, begrimed laborer; but before the stranger had been in the place ten minutes the room became a palace, and the man a magician.

His children had no idea they were so poor, nor were they so with such a hero as this to fight their battles for them. This man, whose grateful spirit lightened up the life of his children, was preaching to all about him as effectually as many a minister. He was a man of patience and submission to God's will, showing how to make home happy under the most unfavorable circumstances. He was rearing his boys to be high-minded citizens, to put their shoulders to the burdens rather than to society in the days that are coming. He was, as his children had said, "a beautiful father" in the highest sense of the word.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

STUDY

Bob Richardson was nearly driven wild. It was nearly the end of the summer vacation and he had not made up the school work which he had missed in the spring.

"If I don't make it up I'll be put back in the fourth grade!" he moaned.

"Well, why don't you use your will power?" said his older brother, Joe.

"Why don't you find a quiet place on the beach?" advised his sister, Alice.

Bob insisted that he had used his will power and he had gone to quiet places on the beach.

"There're people everywhere," he complained. "I have will power enough but Mother says I got to be polite."

"You're just lazy and won't concentrate," said Joe severely.

This was not quite fair, but he was partly right. The warm, pleasant days filled with little pleasures, the swimming in the ocean, crabbing parties, and now their new boat on the bay. The days were hardly long enough to hold so much play and fun. In the evening sometimes there were beach fires and walks or movies in the little village, and if one stayed home to study one got very sleepy and nodded over one's books. "The light attracts the mosquitoes," Aunt Sarah would grumble.

One day a very bold plan came into Bob's head. Seeing the lone fisherman in his little boat out in the sea about three miles or so from the beach put the idea into his head. He went to see the fisherman as soon as he had a chance.

Ben was the man's name, and he was sunburned a deep leather brown from the sun and water. Bob unfolded his plan.

"Can I follow you in our little boat? I want to sit out there where it isn't too crowded and study," he said.

"I'd be glad if you would," said Ben. "Y' know, a fellow gits lonesome-like out all day long thet a-way."

Bob's heart sank.

"I won't be much company," he warned. "I got to study."

"Fine! Fine!" cried Ben. "Studyin' is good fer boys. I allus says to my boy, 'Bill,' I says, 'Bill, you'd orter study.' And what may you be studyin'?"

"History mostly," replied Bob.

"Fine!" cried Ben. "Good fer you! History is a good thing fer boys to study."

Finally Bob got away from Ben with the promise that he would row out to where he was the next morning.

"It ought to be nice and quiet out there," Bob told himself. "But maybe Ben will keep on talking to me about his boy Bill."

When the rest of the family heard of Bob's plan they each and every one wanted to go along, especially Joe.

"He can't row out there by himself," Joe insisted. "I'll just have to go to look after him."

So Joe went in spite of Bob's pleas, but he took a book along and promised not to disturb his brother.

Poor Bob! It was worse than on shore. Ben invited Joe to come into his boat and they circled around trolling for bluefish. Ben told Joe all sorts of fascinating things about fishing, how he used unbarbed hooks for bluefish to save time for when they begin biting they are caught by the score.

Bob finally decided that it was no use trying to concentrate. He had fastened his boat to Ben's and was being towed around. It ended by his giving up studying for that day. Tomorrow, he told himself, he would come out by himself without Joe or Ben.

But when he asked his mother about it, she exclaimed: "No, indeed! The very idea!"

"I'll read to you," offered Joe, obligingly, which was nice of him, but he read in such a drawly voice and skipped so many hard words that Bob became very sleepy and could scarcely make sense out of the lesson.

"I'm going to give up," Bob said. "I've tried staying in my room and people stand under my window and talk and talk. I've tried the porches but still I hear talking. Wherever I go people are talking. It's fierce!"

"You're talking yourself now," laughed his mother. "But don't give up yet. You haven't tried the pine woods."

"The jiggers and mosquitoes are awful there," sighed Bob, "but I'll try it."

He made great preparations. For the jiggers, he smeared himself with kerosene oil, and for the mosquitoes he brought along a bottle of "Mosquill" which was supposed to cause them dreadful headaches and chase them away. Besides this he took his books and a coil of rope.

"I'm going up to the top of a big pine and fix a seat for myself out of the rope. Now nobody is to follow me," said Bob. "This is my last try. If I'm disturbed this time I won't try again."

"For goodness sakes! let's leave him alone!" exclaimed his mother, when Joe and Alice looked interested. "You two stay away."

So it was that Bob found himself in the fragrant pine woods alone, except for some insects. A slight sea breeze had sprung up, chasing away most of the winged stingers. Bob climbed up a high tree and as he neared the top he caught more of the breeze and saw the sea lying blue and sparkling off in the distance.

As he got higher and higher, some of the branches cracked under his weight, and he went on more carefully.

Above his head was an ideal place to make his seat. Four branches stood inviting the rope to be wrapped around them and a nest to be built between. Bob stood on one branch and threw his rope around another. Just then his book slipped from the bag he had slung over one shoulder, and as the boy made a grab for it, he lost his footing. He grasped a branch nearby, but it was rotten and broke in his grip. He began to fall; crash, he went through the trees and fell with a thud on the ground.

A very sharp pain in his leg made him realize that he was hurt. He found he could hardly move, so he lay still awhile to rest. The pain in his leg grew worse and worse. He found it swollen and blackened.

"I've broken it!" he decided.

Then he wished he had not been so determined to be alone. How he would have welcomed somebody, no matter how talkative—now! There he lay crying with pain. There was a rustling on the ground nearby, and a snake glided by, a dark-colored, blotchy snake, and Bob lay very still when he saw it. It was a deadly moccasin, and he knew it.

He must have fainted then, but when he opened his eyes Joe's face was leaning over his.

"Gee!" Joe was saying. "I'm glad I sneaked after you. Mother was worried and told me to sneak in and see if you were all right. Can you get up?"

He tried to raise Bob, but Bob cried out with pain, so he left him for awhile to go for help.

A few days later Bob lay in his hospital cot feeling better. It was very quiet in his neat little ward. He was all alone! Of course, his leg hurt, it was broken all right, but just the same Bob was smiling now that the worst was over. And in his hand he held a book on American History.

"Every cloud has a silver lining," he said to himself as he opened his book.—Selected.

1. We believe that it is not wise to continue appropriations to church enterprises indefinitely when they grow gradually weaker instead of stronger.

2. Churches that have been helped for years by this Board and are not stronger, and indeed in some cases weaker than when first helped, should be dropped from our appropriations and the money used where better results will be obtained.

3. We believe there should be more concentration in our help, rather than scattering everywhere small amounts that do not help very much anywhere.

4. We should reduce all appropriations on salary, except under unusual circumstances, at least 10 per cent a year. This principle should likewise apply to churches where it is at all possible. Where there is a hopeful future this would be no injustice to any person or church enterprise and would very materially help the Board of Missions in carrying out its program.

5. In view of the fact that so very much depends on the best type of leadership, we should be very careful in the selection of missionary pastors in the home field as well as missionaries for the foreign work.

6. We should not be actuated in our consideration of individuals or enterprises so much by sympathy as by best judgment and decision in all matters pertaining to our Board and the work of the Kingdom.

7. We should not, where it can possibly be avoided, overlap or divide fields adequately taken care of by other denominations.

8. All churches accepting help from this Board should be required to use our own Sunday School and Church literature. This should be made a condition of our assistance. We have Sunday School literature that will compare favorably with that of any other denomination, and it is our own. What small profit there may be in it is used for Methodist Protestant progress.

9. We suggest a course of missionary study and training in our colleges and seminary for persons who desire to consecrate their lives to the work of missions at home or abroad.

10. We suggest that we do not spend the principal of annuities accepted by this Board. These annuities should be invested at the highest possible rate of interest with safety that might be self-carrying as far as possible.

11. Any member of the Board of Missions applying for help from this Board should be excused while his particular interest is being discussed.

12. The President of the General Conference, the President of the Board of Missions and the Executive Secretary were made a committee on emergency appropriations.

13. All fire insurance policies upon churches and properties, title to which invests in this Board, or on which this Board holds a mortgage, should be in the custody of the Secretary of the Board of Missions.

14. In some cases where the title to church property invests in this Board the local congregations become indifferent to their financial obligations and depend on the Board to carry them. We believe it would be better to have the local church hold the title to its property in most cases, which would increase its pride in its local work, and that the investment of the Board of Missions be protected in some other way.

The Woman's Missionary Convention having requested that the apportionment laid upon the Woman's Auxiliaries be $100,000 for the ensuing year, the Executive Committee met and increased the apportionment of last year twenty and one-fourth per cent, which will make $100,000.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HAWLEY, Secretary.

JEWISH VIEWS ABOUT CHRIST

Dr. Claude Monteffiore: "The most important Jew that has ever lived, to whom the sinner and outcast, age after age, have owed a great deal of gratitude."

Dr. Isidore Singer: "I regard Jesus of Nazareth as a Jew of the Jews, one whom all Jewish people are learning to love. We are glad to claim Jesus as one of our own people."

Dr. Berkowitz: "In Jesus there is the very flowering of Judaism, the noblest rabbi of them all."

Jacob Schiff: "We Jews honor and revere Jesus of Nazareth as we do our own prophets."

Dr. Gotheil: "Why should we Jews not glory in him? The crown of thorns on his head makes him only the more our brother. For to this day it is borne by his people."

Dr. Friedlander: "The Divine God of man," and "it is the glory of Judaism to have produced such a being."—Selected.

FOR DARK DAYS

Without suffering there can be no life. This has been the experience of every mother who has voluntarily bathed her feet in the very waters of death to bring immortality to light. Life springs out of the womb of pain. We are fashioned in the crucible of fire, washed clean in a river of blood, and made beautiful in a bath of tears.

While surrounded by finite intuitions and hedged in by a wall of flesh we cannot comprehend the profound mystery of suffering. We cannot grasp it, for O, it is too deep for us! It is hard for us to believe that everything, even death itself, happens for our good. But at last like the "Great truths that pitch their shining tents

Outside our walls, and though but dimly seen
In the gray dawn, they will be manifest
When the light widens to the perfect day."

Outline for Leader's Talk

Character is a subject of vital interest to every person, or should be. To say that "character is growth" is saying much. To know that character is growth should encourage us to develop a good one of our own. This also makes us realize that the burden of character-making is a thing for which we are responsible, for we can grow it. The world and God hold us responsible for our characters. In building character it is our duty to select the things in life which are high and make for true character.

We engrave on a smooth tablet; and just so our characters are determined by the impressions we allow and by the experiences of our lives. Best character comes when we strive to understand ourselves.

Questions

1. What has been the greatest contributing factor to your individual character?
2. How can we begin a constructive growth of character?
3. In what ways do prayer and Bible reading aid in building character?
4. In what ways may we help each other in the making of character?

Topics to Be Discussed

1. Christian Endeavor and its help in the field of character.
2. "Character is greater than intellect."
3. The place of recreation in good character.
4. Books as character-developing agencies.

Suitable Songs

"I Am Resolved," "Yield Not to Temptation," "Take Time to Be Holy," "More About Jesus," "Jesus Is All the World to Me," and "Throw Out the Life Line."

Poetry to the Point

Not in the clamor of the crowded street,
Not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves are triumph and defeat.

—Longfellow.

SOULS ARE BUILT AS TEMPLES ARE

Souls are built as temples are—
Sunken deep, unseen, unknown
Lies the sure foundation-stone,
Then the course framed to bear
Life the cloisters pillared fair,
Last of all the airy spire,
Soaring heavenward higher and higher,
Nearest sun and nearest star.

Souls are built as temples are—
Inch by inch in gradual rise
Mount the layered masonries.
Warring questions have their day,
Kings arise and pass away.
Laborers vanish one by one,
Still the temple is not done,
Still completion seems afar.

Souls are built as temples are—
Here carving rich and quaint,
There the image of a saint;
Here a deep-hued pane to tell
Sacred truth or miracle;
Every little helps the much,
Every careful, careless touch
Adds a charm or leaves a scar.

Souls are built as temples are—
Based on truth's eternal law,
Sure and steadfast, without flaw,
Through the sunshine, through the snows,
Up, on, on, the building goes;
Every fair thing finds its place,
Every hard thing lends a grace,
Every hand may make or mar.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Bethesda, Halifax, $2.00; Chestnut Ridge, Orange, $3.50; Chestnut Ridge Sunday school, $2.00; Friendship, Fallston, $8.41; Asheboro, $35.00; Midway, Haw River, $5.00; Maple Springs, Forsythe, $4.18; Enfield, $19.60; Flat Rock, Vance, $2.50; Gideon's Grove, Flat Rock, $2.00; Shiloh, N. Davidson, C. E. S., caring for child, $10.00; Shiloh, N. Davidson S. We have been endeavoring to get individuals, Sunday school classes, C. E. Societies and other organizations to clothe or feed, or to clothe and feed a child. This is meant to increase the income for running expenses. We call your attention to the above items from Shiloh church on North Davidson. Their Sunday school takes its regular monthly offering as before, and the C. E. Society sends $10 per month to feed and clothe a little girl. If we just had about one hundred churches doing that way our financial problems would be solved.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. C. C. Robbins, of the Robbins Hosiery Mills, High Point, 15 dozen pairs of hosiery for our children.

Mrs. O. E. Bivins, Hillsboro, flower plants.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, High Point, flower plants.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point, flower plants.

A Suggestion

Some days ago a young business man who is deeply interested in the home made the suggestion that we designate one week soon as "Children's Home Week." We are seizing upon the suggestion and are sending out letters to all pastors, all Sunday school superintendents, and a few other workers, asking that our people think about, pray for, and give to the Children's Home during the week between June 1st and June 10th; that will cover two Sundays and will give almost all our Sunday schools and churches an opportunity to give us some much needed financial help. If another Sunday in June suits you better, then of course use that Sunday.

We realize that this comes in the midst of plans for Children's Day and plans for the Daily Vacation Bible schools; but the offerings have dropped down so much during April and May that we are compelled to ask you not to leave us out during June.

Our School Commencement

On Friday evening, May 31st, our school commencement program will be rendered by the children at 7 o'clock. We are setting this hour because we plan to hold it on the lawn if we are blessed with a pretty evening. We cordially invite our friends from the surrounding communities to be present that evening. Be sure to come on time, for if we have the exercises on the lawn we must begin promptly.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

ATTENTION, MISSIONARY SOCIETIES Branch Meetings Called June 4th at High Point College

There will be a called Branch meeting of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the North Carolina branches at the High Point College, June 4th, at 10 a.m. The same delegates or their alternates as those who represented the auxiliaries at the annual branch meetings in Asheboro are requested to again represent their societies. The purpose of the meeting is for the unification of the missionary work, in accordance with the action of the General Conference and which was acted upon and carried at the recent Board meetings in Pittsburgh.

It is earnestly desired that not only societies send representatives, but that any women of the churches where there are no societies attend and hear the discussions of plans for the new program in which every woman of the church is expected to take part. Each person is requested to bring a lunch box. A picnic dinner will be served in the college dining room. In case delegates are unable to make return trip, arrangements will be made for lodging Tuesday night. This is an important meeting and it is necessary for our workers to learn of the work early in the year and plan for it in order to meet the success which has always been characteristic of the Methodist Protestant women in North Carolina.

Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, Pres. W. F. M. S.,
Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Pres. W. H. M. S.,
North Carolina Branches.

P. S.—Members of the Executive Committees are requested to meet at 9:30 a.m. in northwest class room.

I am deeply grateful to those who have responded to the emergency call sent out recently. I am one of the few who feel the financial burden most keenly. The College belongs to all of us, and if the burden could be equitably shared it would cease to be a burden. Shall we not have a GENERAL response to the appeal for payments on the Endowment Insurance subscriptions?

CHRIST WALKS WITH ME

Christ walks with me today,
Christ guides me on the way;
Christ knows my every need,
Christ helps in thought and deed.

Christ grants me power to do,
Christ makes my words all true;
Christ teaches me to give,
Christ shows me how to live.

Christ solves my darkest doubt,
Christ shuts all evil out;
Christ rules my human will,
Christ bids me, "Peace, be still."

Christ heals my ills and sin,
Christ cleanses me within;
Christ talks today with me,
Christ sets me wholly free.

Christ fills my life with love,
Christ turns my eyes above;
Christ leads me in the light,
Christ guards me through the night.

Rev. H. L. Isley, $1.50; Rev. R. I. Farmer, $1.50; Rev. J. P. Pegg, $1.00; Rev. B. M. Williams, $1.00; Rev. W. D. Reed, $1.50; Rev. E. A. Bingham, $4.50; Rev. Edward Suits, $1.50.

—Some of the counties are publishing distressingly large lists of delinquent tax-payers. We wonder where the trouble is. Are the taxes too high? If so, how are they to be brought down to reasonable size? It is another problem for the plain people.

—The State Farmers' Convention will be held at State College during the week of July 22 to 26. Every county is invited to send a delegation of its leading farmers and farm women.

—Calcium arsenate, the poison familiar to cotton growers, is the most economical and effective poison one can use to control the Colorado potato beetle or potato bug, as the pest is commonly known.—State Ag. Dept.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

State Street.—We are much encouraged by a rapid gain in Sunday school attendance since the coming of spring and fine weather. We are not satisfied, however, with the attendance as it is, but ways and means are being discussed to bring in more.

At the 11 o'clock hour Sunday Bro. Bethea gave us a beautiful and inspiring talk on "The Prince of Life." At the evening hour the subject was "The Prince of Death." This also was striking and interesting and full of warning.

The C. E. society is planning and preparing a splendid program for the meeting Wednesday night. Mrs. Bethea is leader and the topic being a missionary one, the service will be one of much interest.

We are quite proud of a large group of singers among the primary and junior children. They are being taught and directed in their singing each Sunday morning by Mrs. D. C. Potts. Mrs. Potts favors us with a solo often and we are all delighted to hear her at any time. Sunday morning she sang, "Speak to My Heart, Lord Jesus," in her usual splendid way.

We are all looking forward with much pleasure to having Dr. Dixon preach for us the second Sunday night in June.

Henderson.—The Phialthea class met May 2. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Clyde Finch. Reading of the minutes, reports from treasurer and secretary were given and approved. During the business period it was voted to change the meeting night from Thursday to Tuesday after the fourth Sunday. A motion was carried to have the term of office extend for one year. The president appointed a nominating committee to report at the next meeting. The class voted to serve the Brotherhood luncheon for the month of May. The meeting was closed by prayer.

Circle No. 4 of the Missionary Auxiliary met with Miss Elizabeth Fox on May 16. Mrs. E. C. Burchett conducted the devotionals. The program leader, Miss Katie Cooke, offered the following program: "A New Hope for China," read by Miss Margaret Wilson; a reading, "Signs of Progress in China," by Mrs. Clyde Finch. Mrs. W. B. Hight then sang a solo, which was much enjoyed. During the business session, the president welcomed three new members and appointed special committees for the following month. The circle voted to consult the other circles of the Auxiliary in helping to send a box of linens to the Children's Home. After the reports of outstanding committees the meeting closed by repeating the Lord's Prayer. Refreshing punch and wafers were served by the hostess. The Missionary Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting May 20 at the home of Mrs. F. R. Harris, with Mrs. Walter Grissom assistant hostess. In spite of the rainy weather a splendid attendance was had, and much interest was shown by the new chairmen of the circles. Mrs. S. R. Watson, president of the Auxiliary, presided. Miss Alice Faulkner conducted the devotionals in a most pleasing and impressive manner. Mrs. L. R. Gooch then gave a review of the study-book, chapter 1 of "What Next in Missions?" This was very interesting and instructive. The business session followed and splendid reports were given by the circles. The working of this new plan seems to have given new life to the organization and we are looking forward to bigger and better things in the future. At the close of the meeting the hostesses served refreshments.

A meeting of the Board of Stewards was held at the home of Mr. Clyde L. Finch on Monday night, May 20. There was a fine attendance and a most profitable meeting was enjoyed. Rev. R. A. Hunter opened the meeting with prayer. The treasurer, Mr. E. C. Kittrell, gave his report. A general discussion of the church's needs was held and Clyde L. Finch was appointed to make a talk at the morning services Sunday, May 26th. At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Finch, assisted by her daughter, Miss Lucille Finch, served delicious strawberry shortcake.

The services on last Sunday evening were in charge of Rev. W. C. Cummings, pastor of the Presbyterian church of our city. He preached the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating nurses of the local Maria Parham Hospital. A splendid congregation was present and enjoyed the helpful sermon of that hour. Special music was given by the two choirs. Since the Presbyterians are enlarging and remodeling their church they are worshipping with our church at the mid-week prayer services. These are being well attended and proving most inspiring to both congregations. Rev. W. C. Cumming will have charge of the prayer services this Wednesday evening also.

High Point.—Last Wednesday morning breakfast was served to 125 workers in the Community Chest campaign by members of Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, and the sum of $105 was realized thereby. The workers secured pledges for $26,000 for the five interests, as follows: Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts, Y. W. C. A., Salvation Army, and Public Welfare work.

It is worthy of note that the attendance at the eight Circle meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary last week reached the high-water mark of 109 women and girls, the largest number having been 25 at the meeting of Circle No. 1, Mrs. R. I. Farmer, chairman, with Miss Annette Pickens. The two Circles of Business and Professional Girls met with Misses Ruth Welch and Lucille Pickens on Tuesday evening with an attendance of 26.

Rev. R. I. Farmer announced Sunday morning that the result of tithing for the month of April was the sum of $350 for the New Century Service.

The sermon last Sunday morning was delivered by the pastor from the text, "Man cannot live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," the subject of which he called "Material or Spiritual Supremacy." He said in part that in every life there comes a test. Jesus, when he met the tempter after His baptism, was facing a test and made His decision. It is said that Confucius and Zoroaster were both tempted to renounce the religions of which they were founders. Jesus had not eaten food for 40 days and nights, and when a man is hungry he will do almost anything to get something to eat. He was alone and desolate, with no sympathetic voice near to sustain and help. The tempter said, "If thou be the son of God, command that these stones be made bread." He answered, "Man does not live by bread alone." Jesus was teaching that the soul of man is far more important than his body. Wealth, fame, position, power do not satisfy man. Bread means temporal things. Jesus says that man cannot live by material things alone. Many a man who has riches is starved in soul, and will miss heaven. What are the chief assets of High Point this morning? Not her banks, furniture factories, college, her high school, but the men and women who have been touched by God and dare to point other men and women to the Lamb of God. After all, character is the greatest thing in life, and a man's life does not consist of the things that he possesses. God is not satisfied with our making a living, but He wants each one of us to make a beautiful, well-rounded life.

At the evening service the subject of the message was "Blended Work and Worship," suggested by Millet's famous picture, "The Angelus," a copy of which was on display to feature the sermon.

On Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the members of the Junior Mission Circle were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny on Greensboro road. The feature of the program was an "out-of-season" Christmas tree for the Children's Home family. Mrs. Penny is very generous with this lovely home and delights in opening it to the church people of all ages. It goes without saying that these children enjoyed greatly the treat of Monday afternoon.

The Board of Stewards will hold an important meeting this (Tuesday) evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The Vacation Church School under the leadership of Rev. E. Lester Ballard will open on Monday, June 10, at 9:15 a. m., and will continue for at least two and one-half weeks.

Mrs. S. P. Montgomery has most kindly donated an attractive desk for the lobby of the church, and this timely gift is greatly appreciated by pastors and members of the congregation.

The offering for Near East Relief on Sunday, May 19th, amounted to $140.50.

A pillow sale will be conducted on Saturday, June 8th, at the store of Mr. W. C. Beavans by Circle No. 3, Miss Nellie Martin, chairman, when boudoir pillows, porch pillows, and pillows of all sizes and shapes and hues will be offered for sale, price not exceeding $1.00.

Rev. and Mrs. E. I. Farmer and children are planning to move into the attractive new parsonage on Colonial Drive the latter part of this week.

The Baccalaureate sermon of High Point College commencement will be delivered in First church on next Sunday morning, June 2, by Dr. George H. Miller, of Cambridge, Ohio, who is one of the outstanding speakers of the denomination. Thirty-seven young men and women are members of the graduating class, of which Misses Claire Douglas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, and Misses Inez and Irene Reynolds, twin daughters of Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds, are prominent and talented members.

Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews, according to their annual custom, were hosts to the senior class of the college last Friday evening at their home on West College Drive. They were assisted in receiving by Dean P. E. Lindley, who is class adviser, and Miss Mary E. Young, dean of women. Little Miss Jane Street, and her mother, Mrs. M. B. Street, presided over the guest book. In addition to members of the class, Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer were guests on this delightful occasion. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and daisies, the latter being the class flower. In a contest in search of flowers, Mrs. P. E. Lindley was victorious and was given a miniature Dover egg-beater, so that she might keep on "beating." Dainty refreshments, in which the colors of the daisy were predominant, were served by the hosts, assisted by Misses Rosalie Andrews and Claire Douglas. Each young lady received a nosegay of different flowers and each young man was presented a rosebud boutonniere.

We are greatly pleased to announce that Mrs. A. L. Cecil has recovered from her recent illness, and is at home in Oakwood Court. Mr. C. L. Gray, who is indisposed, is improving, his many friends will be happy to learn. The commencement sermon of High Point High School will be delivered next Sunday evening in the high school auditorium by Rev. R. I. Farmer.

Enfield.—Last week was an unusual week for Enfield. The hand of death bore down upon us hard. The death of two of our number was so sudden that we find it difficult to believe our own eyes. Wednesday morning about 9:30 Mrs. Luther (Betty) Whitaker was suddenly taken ill and had to be carried into the house from the back yard where she had gone to repair a gate. Before she could be gotten into the house she had lost consciousness and did not regain it but a time or so. She died about 6:30 in the afternoon. She remarked before she was carried into the house that she believed she was dying and indeed she was. These last moments on earth were so brief, and before her loved ones hardly realized it she had bid earth goodbye and had passed on to be forever with God, to whom she had given her life early in childhood. She left behind her 76 years of noble Christian living. The number who came to pay their last respects was a testimony to the kind of a life she had lived during her earthly sojourn. It can be truly said of her that she spent her latter years on earth going around doing good. She lived next door to the writer and his family. We can truly say we have never had a better neighbor in all of our wanderings. She was considerate, honest, kind, gracious, and, most of all, a woman of highest Christian character. She leaves to mourn her passing three sons, two of them residing in Enfield and the other in California, and a host of friends.

The other was Dela Bustin (better known as Lady), a niece of the deceased mentioned above and a daughter of Mrs. Cordelia Bustin. Miss Bustin was in Enfield the afternoon that her aunt died, inquiring about her condition. On her return home, which was just a little while before her aunt passed away, she complained of having a severe headache. Her condition did not improve, so about 9 o'clock she became so serious that a doctor was called. On the arrival of the doctor she was found unconscious. Dr. Ray, the family physician, called Dr. Nicholson to consult regarding the seriousness of her condition. About 2 o'clock in the morning she was taken to Rocky Mount Hospital with the hope that something might be done to spare her life, but nothing availed and she passed to her reward about 6 o'clock in the morning. While it was not the privilege of the writer to know Miss Bustin as intimately as he knew Mrs. Whitaker, yet I have every reason to believe that she was a Christian of the highest type. Since the death of her father and sister she has cared for her aged mother in a most commendable way. She leaves in sorrow the mother and one brother and a host of friends who had learned to admire her sterling character.

The bodies of the deceased were placed in the town cemetery, the body of Mrs. Whitaker on May 23rd, and that of Miss Bustin on May 24th.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—The work at this place is moving along nicely. The pastor preached Sunday morning. He always brings us helpful messages.

Our Sunday school is growing in attendance and interest. We are planning to have the older ones of the church take complete charge of the Sunday school some Sunday before long—in other words, an "Old Folks' Day."

An appropriate service was held on Mother's Day.

We are planning to hold our Children's Day the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock, and we hope also to have our memorial service in the afternoon. Rev. J. F. Minnis will preach at this time.

We have recently had the cemetery cleaned off, which adds greatly to the appearance.

The relatives and friends of Mrs. J. M. Thompson honored her birthday Sunday with a surprise dinner at the home of her son, Mr. Julian Thompson. Mrs. Thompson had planned to take dinner with her son and when she reached there from church the folks had beaten her there and it was a very pleasant surprise for her. A long table was spread on the lawn and was loaded with good things to eat. Mrs. Thompson is one of Hebron's oldest members and we wish for her many more such occasions, especially the writer, whose birthday happens to be on the same day.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Forsyth.—The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society met with their superintendent, Miss Ethel Faw, Saturday evening May 25, 1929, around a "camp-fire."

Among the many stories told were some of the famous "Uncle Remus" stories. Miss Edith Evans favored us with a humorous reading. Many games were played and wieners and marshmallows were enjoyed by all.

REPORTER.

Oak Grove.—Brother Stubbins preached here Sunday. He is serving well. A peculiar thing is that some of us could wish that he would have the same subject again the next time he preaches here. The interest was good and I now mean to say that it would be safe if he were to preach the same sermon the next time he serves at the Grove.

Over a generation ago I was privileged to hear a man preach the same sermon twice in a day. One other preacher used to preach three times in a day from one text. However,

I only heard him at once of his preaching places, but some of the boys took pleasure in riding around and hearing him use his one text three times in a Sunday. The preacher that I took pleasure in hearing use the same text twice a day (in explaining,) said that he had rather do that way, and I told him at once that I had rather hear him twice from the same text. Fifty years ago one of the presidents, that I often heard preach, said that he tried to have only about 12 sermons to use. Report is that a young man out West is able to hear a sermon on Sunday and then go next day and use same text, and preach same sermon, word for word. The report is that the peculiar effort of the young man had a wonderful effect.

The Sunday school at Oak Grove is doing well. We of old Forsyth were very glad to read the reports from West Forsyth.

W. F. GRABS.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Our pastor filled his appointment yesterday, bringing most helpful gospel messages to appreciative audiences. The attendance record is very good now considering the fact that sickness among church members has deprived some of the privilege of attending services regularly.

The Sunday school enrollment now numbers 309.

Our special revival meeting begins on Sunday, June 9th. We are expecting Mr. T. O. Pender to be with us to lead the singing. And we do pray for a real revival, an awakening of the church to real visions of Christian duty and the finding of joy in performing that duty.

Brother Edward Montgomery has our hearty thanks for a handsome bulletin board which he made and placed in front of the church. This will no doubt be a good means of increasing attendance upon the church services.

The Christian Endeavor Society has done another beautiful deed recently by placing 100 new M. P. Church Hymnals in the church.

We are grieved to report that dear old Rev. J. H. Moton continues very ill at his home. He served this charge several years about the time the present church building was erected, he and his good wife laboring with such marked perseverance and noble loyalty that they endeared themselves forever to the hearts of our people. We do pray earnestly to our dear heavenly Father for them now in the day of sickness and declining health.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—We celebrated our 100th anniversary yesterday. Moriah was the first M. P. church in this section of the state. We had a large crowd, an interesting program and a good dinner.

Rev. R. J. Tamblin, of Grace church, Greensboro, was the speaker for the morning service. He brought a very interesting and inspiring message, using as his subject, "The Church of Yesterday and Tomorrow."

In the afternoon Dr. J. D. Williams, of West End church, Greensboro, presided. A history of the church was given by J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro. Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, a former pastor of Moriah, spoke on some of the things the church had accomplished and its influence in the community.

The singing of old-fashioned hymns by the congregation and some special selections given by friends and former members of the church helped to make this an occasion long to be remembered by Moriah people.

We were all given a very delightful surprise when just at the beginning of the morning service our pastor, who has been very seriously ill, took his place in the pulpit. He was able to introduce the speaker and sit with us through the service.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—Our revival meeting began Sunday, May 5, and closed Wednesday evening, May 15. Brother L. W. Geringer, our help, came Monday and did all the preaching except the morning service of the second Sunday. The pastor and the people were delighted with and edified by the strong gospel messages delivered by Brother Geringer. The unsaved did not attend in large numbers but those who did come under the influence of the gospel were touched and 11 men and women professed saving faith in Jesus Christ. The Sunday after the meeting closed we received four members into the church and I am hoping other will join later.

J. D. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—Regular services were held at Friendship on the first and third Sundays in May. Four new members were received into the church by letter on the first Sunday, as follows: Mrs. Early Edwards, Mrs. Lena Hudson May, Mrs. Ervin Edwards, and Mrs. Susan Cates. We welcome these people to our church.

The church decided Sunday to buy the piano which has been placed in the church on trial and about half of the purchase price was subscribed last Sunday. We are proud of this addition to the equipment of the church.

Announcements Sunday were as follows: The Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. A. C. Isley Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The annual memorial service of Friendship church will be held the first Sunday in June. The program committee is preparing a splendid program and we invite you to be with us in our memorial service.

Communion service was held at our church Sunday. We welcome visitors to this service as well as to all the other services of the church.

The Bible Training Class meets each week with Rev. D. I. Offman as instructor. We deeply appreciate the time and effort which Mr. Offman has so graciously given to this work.

The time of special services at various churches is at hand, and hot weather is approaching, which usually means decreasing attendance at Sunday school. Let us urge each member to be loyal to the Sunday school and to the home church and always remember that the Sabbath is a day of worship.

MAE PATTERSON, Reporter.

Rehoboth Church, Granville Circuit.—Rev. H. F. Fogleman brought us a fine sermon appropriate to Mother's Day on May 19, as this was our regular Sunday for preaching. He read for his Scripture lesson I Cor. 13, the chapter on charity. A mother's love abides eternally; all other things may pass away. I sent a basket of flowers to a sick friend and she appreciated them so much, and said that they reminded her of my mother. So, after all, it's the little things that make up life. Why wait until a person dies to shower them with flowers and kind words.

I can say one thing for our pastor: I have never seen him at an auto exposition, circus, nor picture show. Wonder how many of us could say that!

The Sunday school seems to be increasing. Occasionally we have M. E. members to worship with us.

Under the leadership of Mrs. R. U. Harris, a play was given at Bethel school. The proceeds went to the Missionary Society.

A Children's Day program is being planned for the near future.

Helen Maxine Bobbitt, a little girl of the fourth grade of Dabney High School, won a beautiful little medal for the most improvement in music.

The graduating exercises of the Dabney High School were good. Nine members finished their course. Mr. J. C. Kittrell, of Henderson, delivered the address on this occasion.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. N. Harris. Mrs. Carey Cheatham presided. There were several in attendance and a good program was rendered.

Then the hostess invited us into the dining room where delicious cream and cake were served. This we enjoyed very much.

The next meeting will be held in June.

REPORTER.

Lincolnton Charge.—We had a very interesting program on Mother's Day, May 12, with 195 present; $10.45 collection. There were recitations and exercises during the morning. Lunch was spread on the lawn and singing in the afternoon. We had with us the evangelistic party, Rev. C. B. Cox and singers, M. B. Buckner and C. G. Rife, of Charlotte, Maiden Sisk and local quartettes. We planned a meeting in May, but because of the evangelistic party coming to town we postponed our meeting to co-operate with them. They are having a good revival, which continues until June 2. Rev. C. B. Cox preached for us Sunday morning, May 19. He preached a wonderful sermon and had six conversions.

Our C. E. Society is moving along nicely under the presidency of Mr. O. G. Carpenter.

When passing through Lincolnton, stop at the M. P. church. Visitors are always welcome.

REPORTER.

Randleman Charge.—We held our annual home-coming and Mother's Day service the second Sunday in May at Worthville. A large crowd attended, and our president, Bro. S. W. Taylor, brought us such a fine message at 11 a. m.; also in the afternoon, which was enjoyed by all present. We always welcome him in our midst.

On Friday night, May 3, Brothers A. R. Groce and Leonard Ward brought us a nice pounding, sent by these good people, and we won't try to mention each article, but will say the pastor and family appreciate it so much and we want to thank every one for remembering us so kindly.

On the third Sunday in June we will have home-coming at Mount Lebanon. The pastor will preach at 11 a. m., dinner on the grounds, and in the afternoon will have good singing from different places, also short talks from different ones.

Our special meeting starts at this time. Rev. T. H. Stimpson, of Buckingham, Va., (my father-in-law) will come on Monday to do the preaching. We are praying for a great revival. We invite all to attend these services.

The fifth Sunday in June we will hold our annual home-coming at New Salem. We wish to see lots of old friends at this time. All are urged to bring a full basket and enjoy the occasion. These people have just covered their church, also painting it, which adds so much to the looks.

The work is getting on nicely as a whole. Sunday school attendance is good, also congregations at preaching are encouraging.

I wish to thank the people of the charge for continually remembering the pastor and family by giving us good things for the pantry.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Kannapolis.—Our church is not going by leaps and bounds, but we think there is an evidence of a steady growth in interest and spirituality.

We have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting in which our pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, did all the preaching and he did it to the delight of all who heard him. Brother Lowdermilk gave us the gospel in the old-time way and while the visible results were not what we had hoped and prayed for, we do know that our church was greatly revived and strengthened. There were several reclamations and conversions. We believe we shall continue to reap from the seed that were sown. We thank Rev. G. H. Hendry of Concord and a number of his members for services rendered in the choir during our meeting. We greatly appreciate Mrs. D. A. McLaurin's help as pianist. We also thank Rev. N. G. Bethea and some of his members for their help and presence one night. They had planned to be with us more but were prevented.

On second Sunday morning we observed Mother's Day with appropriate services. Attendance was good and services were much enjoyed.

Our hearts go out in sympathy for Mrs. M. W. Henderson on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. Walker, of Charlotte; also Mrs. J. M. Gordon, because of the passing of her sister, Mrs. Craven, of Goldsboro. May He who says, "My grace is sufficient" heal their wounded hearts.

MRS. C. B. PRICE, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Good attendance and splendid attention marked the services at Harmony Grove church last Sunday. We were to have observed the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, but due to the absence of part of the provisions for the service, it was postponed until the next appointment. The matter of selecting a time for the revival meeting at this church was presented by the pastor, and after a brief discussion the members present decided on the fourth Sunday in June as the time to begin the annual revival meeting. Three services will be held on Sunday and during the week following the services will be held each evening at 8 o'clock. A day service may be arranged. The people of this church asked the pastor to do the preaching during the meeting.

The pastor and one of the little Ways were invited to the home of Bro. W. S. Bodsford for dinner last Sunday, and we enjoyed a splendid dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Bodsford are two of the oldest members of Harmony Grove church.

We are glad to report the condition of Bro. U. Walter Long, of Pleasant Hill church, somewhat better than last week. He has begun improving slowly. Also Mrs. Polly Whitman, who has been ill for several weeks, seems to be improving slowly. At Harmony Grove church last Sunday we learned of the illness of Mrs. Lula Ketner, one of the stewards of the church. She was taken ill late last week. Her condition is not serious, and we trust for her a quick recovery.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with the Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We are expecting to observe the Lord's Supper at each of the churches.

The pastor and family thank Bro. W. T. Hennings and family for a nice supply of cherries last week. We enjoyed dinner with this splendid family one day last week. We also enjoyed a visit and supper with Bro. J. O. Patterson, of Stony Knoll church, one evening last week.

— C. B. WAY, Pastor. —

Davidson.—Denton C. E. Society sat with us in our C. E. S. at Lineberry last night. The house was packed and the program was fine. At the close of the program Bro. Bingham made a splendid talk on leadership. These joint meetings are the results of a suggestion made by Bro. Bingham and we are sure that good has been the result.

Bro. Hill from Friendship and Denton Station will bring a delegation of his people to Lineberry next Sunday on a good-will tour. There will be an all-day service. The program will be entirely theirs. We are hoping all of Davidson charge will be represented, and all others who will come. We are expecting a good day.

Bros. M. K. Surratt and H. C. Russell are the nominees for delegate to next Annual Conference.

We are delighted with the anticipation of being the guest of old friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Helms, who have given us invitations to be their guest at the next Annual Conference.

Most of our churches are preparing for Children's Day services.

— W. D. REED. —

State Street, Lexington.—The efficiency of the reporter for this church causes this pastor to neglect, or refrain from reporting, as there is little of interest left when Mrs. Burkheart is on the job. However, there are some things that have been taking place that are not kept up with by her.

There are a few people here that are always reminding us that they do not forget our temporal needs as manifested in the gifts that come that are always timely and helpful; for poundings may come and poundings may go, but the hens at the homes of Mrs. F. J. Cox and Mrs. A. H. Evans lay on forever, for the pastor and family, for these folks never forget to divide liberally. And that is not all, for they often share in other things that are good.

Others that have given useful gifts are as follows: Mrs. G. C. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lanier, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Koontz, Homer Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Walser, Mr. and Mrs. Zeb Warner, T. R. Koontz, Mrs. D. C. Potts, Mrs. Wooley, Mrs. J. A. Walser, Mrs. Harkey, Mrs. Dale.

Just before her last illness Mrs. Ed Owen gave us a nice lot of preserves, walnuts and a hand-made rug. Mrs. Owen was always doing something for some one and was very thoughtful of her pastor. She is being greatly missed in the Yadkin College community.

We thank all these good people for these favors and as time and space forbid mentioning the articles, they were all helpful and we appreciate to the fullest extent what every one did.

The meeting which has been reported so well was a great help to our work here and often now we hear the great sermons, delivered by Dr. Stone, spoken of favorably by folks outside our own church.

We have received three members recently, of which we are proud and our interest, we think, is growing and our increase is of the slow but, we trust, of the healthy sort. There has been an increase of 87 members since the present pastorate began and there were 25 when I came. There have been some removals from town and our present membership is 96. And one remarkable thing, we have never as yet lost a member by death.

If all the Methodist Protestants that live here in town could see that it would be to the advantage of the Kingdom and to their own denomination to co-operate with us, our church would grow much faster, for this church is to take care of their children in the future and not try to tear down any church of any denomination anywhere, much less our own. This too is to conserve our own interest and our part of the Kingdom. Sometimes our own people are our greatest hindrance. It should not be so, but I have been asked by people of other faiths why our folks did not come to our own church, but even at times when they had no services in the country they visited other churches. I replied that it was the same old story that all denominations suffer and as a result their children would drift to other churches after a while because of the lack of loyalty to their own on the part of the parents.

These words are not written in any spirit of complaint, but simply stating a fact that exists in many communities but which is hard to remedy because we all do not see alike in these matters. But because a thing needs to be remedied shows that there is a wrong somewhere.

Our Sunday school is doing well. There were present May 26 one hundred and twenty-five. All the other auxiliaries of the church are active and doing good.

Please pray for us, for with the steady growth of this town and the coming of Methodist Protestant folks who are interested in the natural increase, the future looks bright.

— N. G. BETHEA. —

Davidson Charge.—Our Sabbath school and prayer meeting are very good, but we don't have the attendance as we should. Brother Reed and his good wife were with us in our Sabbath school yesterday. We were glad to have them with us to help us out. Bro. Reed filled his appointment Sunday and brought us a wonderful message.

Our Sabbath school is discontinued on the first Sunday on account of children's services at Lineberry.

Our special meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in July. Pray for us that there will be many souls saved into the kingdom. The harvest is great and the laborers are few.

MARRIED

Ballard-Shepard

A marriage of interest to a wide circle of friends and relatives was solemnized last Saturday afternoon, May 25, when Mr. Theodore Ballard and Miss Mary I. Shepard, of High Point, motored to Reidsville and were united in the bonds of holy wedlock by a former pastor, Dr. George R. Brown. Before the ceremony Miss Inez Reynolds, of High Point, played "Oh! Promise Me." The sister of the bride, Miss Lalah Shepard, was maid of honor, and the groom's best man was Mr. G. D. Bostian, of High Point. During the ceremony Miss Reynolds played softly "To a Wild Rose," by MacDowell. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Ballard left for a motor trip through the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia to Washington, Baltimore, and Niagara Falls. The bride is the elder daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Shepard, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Sechrest. She was born and reared in this city, has been an active and faithful worker in the Sabbath School and Christian Endeavor Society of First Church since childhood, and has held an important position with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company for the past several years. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Ballard, of Mt. Gilead, N. C., was formerly connected with the Charlotte branch of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, but recently has been transferred back to the High Point branch as a traveling salesman. After June 8th they will be at home at 316 Howell Street, this city. A host of friends of this popular and worthy young couple join in extending congratulations and all good wishes for a happy life of prosperity and usefulness.

"How do I love thee? Let me count the ways:
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height

My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of being and ideal grace.
I love thee to the level of every day's
Most quiet need, by sun and candlelight.
I love thee freely, as men strive for right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from praise.
I love thee with the passion but to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.

I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints. I love thee with the breadth,
Smiles, tears, of all my life; and if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Russell

Wiley Mabery Russell departed this life May 20, 1929, aged 70 years, 3 months and 12 days. He professed faith in Christ in early manhood and joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Chapel Hill, to which he remained faithful till his Savior saw fit to call him home. Never missed moving out to the camp meeting but two times and attended one of them.

On May 17, 1853, he was married to Priscilla Morris. To this union were born 12 children, eight of whom survive. They are as follows: Mrs. B. A. Peacock, of Denton; Mrs. J. M. Farrell and Mrs. J. D. Cagle, of Thomasville; Mr. R. F. Russell and Mrs. Joe Valentine, of High Point; Mrs. R. L. Davis, of Eldorado; Mrs. Charles Davis, of Complex; Mr. R. V. Russell, St. Joseph, Mo. Twenty-three grandchildren also survive.

I would only say to the mother and children, let us treasure up his dying words and feel that our loss is his eternal gain.

A FRIEND.

McKenzie

The death angel has visited our membership once more. On the eleventh of May about one o'clock in the morning the soul of Mrs. J. C. McKenzie departed this life. Mrs. McKenzie had been ill for several years. During the writer's stay here as her pastor she was confined to her bed practically all the time. At the time of her death she was just in the prime of life, being only thirty-three years old, but the disease finally won in the struggle.

Mrs. McKenzie was a very brave soul. She loved life; her friendliness had won for her a host of friends; she manifested an unusual devotion for the members of her family, and she put up a brave fight for life. But the disease finally won. However, she was cheerful through it all, even when she knew that she was losing in the struggle. Her struggle for health called forth the sympathy of all who knew her, yet to visit her and see the pleasant smile upon her face and note the cheerfulness of her disposition always brought inspiration to the visitor. Thus her life in the midst of her suffering was a great blessing to those who visited her.

Her husband and their two children, her father, mother and one sister remain. May these be greatly comforted by our Heavenly Father and may His comfort bring to them day by day the peace of God which passeth all understanding. FRED W. PASCHALL.

Mrs. Mary Jane Knott

Mrs. Mary Jane Knott departed this life April 29, 1929, her age being 88 years, seven months and 14 days. In early life she professed faith in Christ and united with the church. After her marriage to John Wesley Knott many years ago, she united with Stony Knoll Methodist Protestant Church where she remained a faithful member until the end of her life. It was the privilege of the writer to know Mrs. Knott only a few months during her last illness. She had been ill and confined to her bed for three years. She bore her sickness well, and gave many assurances of her strong faith in God and her implicit trust in Jesus Christ for her salvation. She said she was ready for the final summons to the heavenly world.

One splendid evidence of the unfailing faith of Mrs. Knott was that she requested the singing of "The Old-Time Religion" at her funeral, which request was granted. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Stony Knoll Church in the afternoon of April 20, and the remains of a Godly and sainted mother were tenderly placed in the cemetery of that church to await the morning of the resurrection. It was said of her that she was a good woman, whose long life of unfailing love for her Lord, and for her church, and for her family; her unselfish sacrifice for those committed to her care, and her unceasing service, bespeak the Godly character which she possessed through life. Of her it may be said in the language of John, the Revelator, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

Surviving relatives include the husband, J. W. Knott; two sons, J. H. Knott, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and H. W. Knott, of Urbana, Ill.; three daughters, Mrs. W. W. Scott, of East Bend, N. C.; Mrs. W. L. Lakey and Mrs. Ellen Welch, both of Urbana, Ill.; 27 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

C. B. WAY.

Gordon

The writer was called upon to conduct the funeral services for W. B. Gordon May 16th. After these services the remains were placed to rest in Chestnut Ridge cemetery.

Brother Gordon was a member of Chestnut Ridge church for several years. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Lamb

On Wednesday, the 15th, funeral services for Rebecca Lamb were held from Mt. Lebanon church, Randleman. Mrs. Lamb was nearly 68 years old when the end came. Her companion, Robert Lamb, preceded her nearly 18 months ago. From every viewpoint Mrs. Lamb was an exceptionally fine woman and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. For many years she was a loyal Methodist Protestant and was a member of Mt. Lebanon church at the time of her passing.

The writer was assisted in the last rites by Rev. T. A. Williams, N. G. Bethea, J. H. Brendall and J. T. Ratledge. The floral offerings were beautiful. Three sons and two daughters survive.

WM. H. NEESE.

—Moriah church's centennial celebration came off last Sunday almost as it had been planned. Dr. T. M. Johnson could not be present, but sent a letter of greeting. Prof. Paul Kennett was also absent, but he sent a historical sketch which was read by Bro. J. Norman Wills. The occasion was one of special interest and we trust helped to inform the rising generation concerning the things for which the Methodist Protestant Church stands.

—We thank Miss Virginia Clarice Younger for an invitation to the commencement exercises of Asheville High School June 7th.

—W. Polk Garrett, a prominent member of Mt. Carmel church near Henderson, died yesterday from an overdose of turpentine taken for a cold. He was recently married to Miss Ella Keyser. Bros. Fogleman and Hunter join in conducting the funeral service.

—A silent prayer (upon entering the pew): "Lord Jesus, prepare my heart today that Thy Word may be to me very sweet and precious. Amen."—First Church Bulletin, High Point.

—"What Thomas Missed by Absence from Prayer Meeting" was the subject for the mid-week service in First Church, High Point, recently.

Calls for Help

They come to us from far and near,
They come to us quite everywhere:
Sure we must leave the world behind,
If we would go where they can't find.

They call for this, they call for that:
A pair of shoes, an old worn hat,
An hour of time, a bit of money,
A little slice of bread and honey.

They call on us to purchase bonds,
They'd sell us deeds to lands or ponds,
They'd have us buy some oil or coal,
They paint great riches as our goal.

They seem to offer us great gain,
But theirs the profit, ours the pain:
Wide open eyes must we all keep,
If we'd miss trouble when we leap.

In pouring rain of many calls,
A veritable Niagara Falls,
It tries us sore to keep our feet
And same time save our temper sweet.

We dare not turn deaf ear to calls,
We cannot give each man that bawls.
We open our hearts to voice of need,
We close our ears to call of greed.

Commencement at High Point College

Commencement week is the great week at college. The public exercises, the coming of friends or parents, the separation after four years of pleasant association, all serve to emphasize the importance of the week. The commencement at High Point this year developed the interests usual on such occasions. To the students their own exercises bring keenest interest. The general public is perhaps most interested in the baccalaureate sermon and the commencement day address. This year the sermon was by Rev. George Miller, of Cambridge, O. He is a graduate of Adrian College. He spoke of the conversation between Jesus and the rich young ruler. He pointed out that Jesus put emphasis on morality but also insisted on personal devotion to Himself, the Son of God. Hence He bade the young man put away all that might interfere with his personal devotion to his Lord.

The commencement day address was by Editor Lathan of the Asheville Citizen. He declared that the graduates are going out into a very different world from that in which their grandfathers or even their fathers lived. The world has changed and is still changing. New problems have appeared for which there is as yet no solution. Statesmen are feeling their way in the dark. The situation calls for profound study and constructive effort of the wisest sort. The Interstate Commerce Commission has the power of life and death over cities and towns. The proposed farm board may be given similar powers. Men do not clearly see the thing to do. Hence the great political parties are very guarded in their platform declarations concerning new issues. The situation puts great responsibilities upon the oncoming generation.

We expect to publish in another column the list of those receiving degrees, medals and prizes.

Appreciation in the Pew

Preachers preach for the sake of the people in the pews. They cannot hope in any one sermon to make a profound impression on every one in the so-called audience. But they do hope that some present will receive at least a part of their message. No one may respond with a word indicating that such has been the case, but still the preacher tries to believe that his effort has not been an absolute failure. Congregations should not leave the preacher in doubt as to their hearing and appreciating what he says. The person in the pew should keep a look-and-listen attitude. This means more than merely directing your eyes toward the preacher. You may do that and only be admiring the length of his nose or the beauty of his cravat. Your countenance will show the quality of your thought, and should indicate to the preacher that you are entering with him into his theme. There is such a thing as good pulpit manners, and there is also such a thing (or should be) as good pew manners. How inspiring to a preacher is a whole congregation of earnest listeners. And how depressing to the man trying to preach is the sight of a collection of sprawling, sleeping or half-sleeping human forms. There is much jesting about people sleeping in church, but it is no joke, but a very serious matter.

After the sermon is over, you may show your appreciation of it by speaking to the preacher about the sermon as a whole or some part of it. Just a few people who appreciate can bring wonderful help to their minister by intelligent and sincere references to some of his utterances. How can the preacher who sees no signs of appreciation really know that he is appreciated? And if he cannot sense the appreciation of at least a few, how can he have the heart to preach on? People who sit in pews, think of these things.

A Question for Students

In Robert Browning's "Soliloquy of the Spanish Cloister" we find these verses:

"There's a great text in Galatians,

Once you trip on it, entails

Twenty-nine distinct damnations,

One sure, if another fails."

To what does the poet refer? Your opinion would be interesting, if you do not positively know.

YADKIN COLLEGE HOME-COMING

The one-time citizens, teachers and students of Yadkin College are planning a home-coming there June 13. The day will be spent in social intercourse in which the delightful fellowships of bygone years will be renewed. Interesting addresses will be made also by some members of the clan. Let us go back in large numbers, and live over again for one brief day, at least, the life that we knew there when Yadkin College was about the most important place to us in all the world. Don't forget the basket, and see that it is well filled, too. Every member of the clan on the old stamping ground June 13!

INSPIRATIONAL TEACHING

Our changing civilization has led to a tendency to test thought before accepting it. It seems clear that this attitude is surely permeating the general intellectual attitude of our time. In this principle man has found a new faith. More and more does he look out with changed eyes upon a new world. Old ideas no longer hold as to certain proprieties. Questions as to the justifying why of things are being asked. The old fundamental tendency to accept external authority has been questioned. This changing attitude has largely come through evolution and the higher criticism of the old verbal authority of the Bible. Right here may we ask are we giving the younger generation a fair deal? Are we giving to them a foundation to support them through the surging temptations confronting them? Are we giving to them fact or theory, faith or agnosticism? The difference between a man or woman of Christian faith and an agnostic explains the beauty and glory we yet may see in our present civilization. There apparently has come a period of chaos in the moral realm. The ever-growing tendency to test thought means more and more discoveries in the realm of science, so that the net increase in tested thought will apparently be in geometric proportions. Increase in invention may and will mean social change. However, there yet remain some depths, some truths so great, so profound as to bewilder the mind of the scientist. He cannot explain life, he cannot explain the smile on an invalid's face, the smile on the lips of a babe, or the abundant life. With the faith of our young people so shaken in the sacredness of the Bible they all too clearly face an unknown future. Will civilization be able to remain stable amid this increasing change? If the rate of change is to increase, will there not come a time when society will disintegrate? We see the failure of intellect and morals to adequately grapple with the ever-mounting problems—labor, capital, political, moral, social. Our political machinery as it works fails to bring satisfaction. With the ever-increasing application of tested thought there comes ever-increasing unrest and dissatisfaction. Is our present educational system meeting the demands? Should we not teach theory as theory, truth as truth, and not confuse the two? Should we not make clear to the youth that a hypothesis is a guess? Why accept guesses as truth until they become fixed laws or principles? This failure to clarify truth from theory has brought great confusion to the minds of youth and is largely responsible for the agnostic tendency.

The goal for education is to continue and enrich this life process by better thought and act; this is education. It is brains, education, character that we need, and it is not so much the need of a changed philosophy from the old. However great the changes about us may become, human nature changes not. The same impulse leading men hundreds of years ago to be noble, still may inspire their souls.

Looking upon the picture of Sir Galahad with this message proclaimed, "My strength is as the strength of ten because my heart is pure," still holds our hearts in admiration and homage. Nothing so moves or inspires one to become noble and good as to be associated with the worthy and good, seeing, believing.

The Great Stone Face standing silent as death taught a greater lesson to Ernest than the philosophers could have taught with their wisdom alone. The Great Stone Face so moved, inspired and held him, until he became like unto that which he most desired.

It is not the theory or method of teaching which is of paramount importance to meet the present need in education. The educational need today amidst all the change in evidence is not in a method of procedure so much. It is a call for souls big, strong, pure enough to touch and lift up the souls of the youth to higher, nobler aims.

To live day by day in the presence of a great soul inevitably means education of the highest type. It is not how we learn a thing so much that counts, but the question, Have we learned it? Centuries ago pitfalls were marked off by danger signs, resulting from tested and tried experiences, setting up for thinking people moral standards, holding one to the convention. Disregard for these danger signals brings disaster to the same human nature. Freedom of thought with utter disregard for what probably is called traditional is bringing upon the nation added moral chaos. Why not accept that which has been tested and tried in the realm of morals as willingly as we accept the tested and tried in science? Why not teach respect for the heroes, martyrs, and the faith that led them through suffering to plant guideposts along our way? Why discard the tried for the untried at our peril?

The same things touching the souls of men such as sympathy, pity, kindness, purity, nobility and truth, can and does inspire, leading to the building of lofty character. Inspirational teaching is something like the minister's sermon, it's the part that lingers when the text is forgotten. It is the impression made upon the young life by the power and strength of a greater soul. Youth is responsive to the finer virtues and quick to detect sham. Youth clings to and reaches out for beauty and truth. The finer virtues can and may be imparted silently and surely into the lives of the young, planted so securely as to enable them to face the ever-changing civilization with a heroism leading them to certain victory. There is no theory or method of imparting this newer or more effective than that from the Sermon on the Mount. The inspiration from this truth may be used to build character after every scientific device of man has been tried out, marked, tried and failed. This kind of teaching leads to creative action, first leading to a newly-created soul, catching visions which a soul otherwise trained may not behold.

Inspirational teaching is the teaching that has made character strong by planting ideals. We never grow above our ideals. A man is just as high as his ideals. No other kind of education can ever solve the problems of an ever-changing world. There is marked change everywhere in evidence, but some things do not change, human nature and truth.

If education is to play the part in helping to build a newer and better civilization, it cannot be through utter disregard of that which has been tested and tried, bearing the mark, traditional. The same impulses leading to true greatness centuries ago, still move the souls of men to look up and not down, and lend a hand, still lead to pure thinking and noble living. The fate of Germany might have been averted if this truth had been observed.

A MESSAGE TO THE COUNTRY BOYS AND GIRLS OF AMERICA

By One Whose Service for Them Covers Three-Quarters of a Century

Dr. Edwin Wilbur Rice began his first service with the American Sunday School Union on April 1, 1854, engaging for that season and again in 1855 in the summer missionary service in which the Union then employed students during their vacations. On April 1, 1859, he began his permanent connection, first as missionary, then as a district superintendent, and later as editor. That makes his connection with the society cover a period of seventy-five years, and his length of unbroken service seventy years. No other person in the history of the society has had so long a connection with it, and we do not know of any other person who has covered so long a period of continuous activity in connection with any other religious organization. Dr. Rice is also the oldest living member of Phi Beta Kappa, the honor society of American college graduates. Writing to headquarters on April 1, 1929, Dr. Rice said:

"It is a marvel to me to note the changes, progress, obstacles, antagonisms due to sectarian prejudice, through which the American Sunday School Union has come and won out by the grace of God."

On the twenty-fourth day of July Dr. Rice will (D. V.) have reached his ninety-eighth birthday. Anticipating that remarkable occasion, the editor, on a recent visit to Dr. Rice, asked him if he would in our July issue send a message to the boys and girls of rural America, and to those who are engaged in Christian service among them. He gladly consented, and suggested that it be put in the form of an interview, in which he would answer questions suggested by the editor. The suggested questions and Dr. Rice's answers follow:

What do you think about the value to every boy and girl of having to earn, in part at least, the expense of his or her education?

I cannot overestimate it. In my own education the value of working for it was greater than the value of the education itself. No book knowledge could equal the value of planning and executing schemes for earning money toward the cost of my education.

I was the oldest of the children in an obscure farmer's home. My father had had no opportunity for schooling—to speak exactly, he had just two weeks schooling; the rest of his book education he got from his mother—there were no free schools where he grew up. Our home was in the foothills of the Adirondacks, north of what was then Kingsboro, and is now Gloversville, N. Y.

My father said to me, "In justice to the other children, if you will stay with me and help me work this farm I will give you in fee simple the sixty-acre Wells lot when you are twenty-one. But if you choose education, you will have to earn most of it yourself, for I haven't got money to spare you very much." That gave me several sleepless nights. I did not know what to think about it. I was only about thirteen or fourteen. I told my mother about it. She said, "Don't you worry over that. You try for an education. The Lord will provide." My mother died a year or two after that, and then I had no adviser. I did not get my sixty acres, because I went after an education; but I got the education, and it was worth much more to me than the farm would have been.

What do you think about the importance of the character-building element in one's education?

All education ought to build good character; otherwise it is a damage. The right sort of education—one that is built on God and truth—cannot be a damage to any one.

Why is the best element in character-building to be had from the Bible?

That question may be well answered by going back to the old catechism: "What is the chief end of man?" "To glorify God and enjoy Him forever." We are here not for our own interests; we are here for the good of the world, and for the glory of God. I think that is the purpose God has in putting us here, and in redeeming us through the Lord Jesus Christ.

What kind of men and women does America most need today?

It would take a whole volume to answer that question fully. But America needs, first of all, men and women whose character is based on the Bible and its teachings, and especially on the teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ.

How would you compare the Sunday schools of your youth with the Sunday schools of today?

I should be inclined to think, from my experience of over ninety years, that the Sunday schools of my youth were more thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the gospel, and gave less attention to the method of procedure. They did not care so much about grading the lessons or grading the scholars. I suppose we would say that they had a haphazard method in that respect; nevertheless they put the emphasis on the spiritual side, promoting what might be called a high religious temper and disposition.

It seems to me that the whole scheme now is too largely artificial; it lacks too much the spiritual emphasis, and the Biblical training, which we used to have. Technically it is far advanced, no doubt, but the practical results do not seem to me to justify the amount of work required. We are more thorough in our process, but we are less attentive to the spiritual results.

Is more and better religious education needed today than the Sunday schools alone can furnish?

Undoubtedly; simply because intellectual instruction has six days of the week and religion only one. Another reason is, because, so far as the United States is concerned, the public values wealth above everything else; the rising generation is too eager for good living, without regard to whether or not it makes a good life.

Do you think the American Sunday School Union, with its particular work, is as much needed today as ever?

It certainly is; but it is important that it should ever adapt its methods to changing conditions. The missionary of my day could not grapple with present conditions as do the missionaries of today. Our ancestors came to America—a wilderness—to secure freedom to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. Do we care for that now? Or is it wealth we are all after? We have always centered our efforts on planting Sunday schools in pioneer settlements, and then nurturing them. We are no longer a nation of pioneers. The American Sunday School Union is still the best adapted agency for serving unchurched rural communities, and in that field we have a great task. It should be more than ever now our work to develop local leaders, who will be better qualified to manage the schools, with the counsel and aid of the Sunday school missionary. In other words, the income of the Union must be appropriated to the development of leaders quite as much as to the planting of new schools for the rising generation.

Moreover, the emphasis of our leaders should be kept upon spiritual results. The modern religious-education movement tends too much to ape the public school system, which in some of our states now forbids the use of the Bible in the schools. There is a reaction taking place against this: what will be its outcome remains to be seen. The American Sunday School Union has always put its emphasis on spiritual results and if it continues so to do, and keeps its eyes forward, it has a great work before it.

The present president of the American Sunday School Union, Dr. E. Clarence Miller, is a wise leader, and he and his fellow-managers are fully competent to guide the society in its great work. He is my warm friend, as every president of the society has been during my period of service. If I have been of any stimulus to them (as they have been kind enough to say), I am certain they have been most stimulating and helpful to me. Whatever I have done has not been through any special talent or industry of mine, but through the blessing of God upon my efforts.

What attitude do you think the rural people of America should hold toward the peace and welfare of the whole world?

The American Sunday School Union should give close attention to the forming of a more distinctive and higher Christian character in the rising generation. The future of Christianity is in no less peril now than it has been in the past. This is not merely true of the United States; it has been the subject of much discussion in Great Britain, particularly of late in connection with a new Oxford movement. The United States has become a world power, and it cannot now isolate itself; nor can it escape some responsibility in the various entanglements of Europe and of society in general. The old theory of keeping our fingers out of the entanglements of other civilized countries has gone by; as a world power we cannot escape some responsibility and some share in making, not merely America, but the whole world spiritually better: in taking a higher stand in business, in finance, and in all social progress.

What would you like to make your one chief message to readers of the Sunday School World?

It certainly does not require ninety-eight years' experience to convince any person of average common sense that no one can serve God on the first day of the week and the world and self on the other days, and at the same time have peace of mind, unless, indeed, his conscience is seared. This is no new idea. It is older than the human race. What more important message can any person send than our Lord's words, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

That Dr. Rice's mind is wonderfully clear all readers of these answers will surely recognize. They will be glad to know, also, that while his sight is failing, his general health remains very remarkable for one of his years. We can but trust that his example of loyalty to Christ, and to the American Sunday School Union, and to the rural people, young and old, for whom it works, may be an inspiration to those who are to carry forward the same line of service to which he has devoted his life.—Sunday School World.

IS IT A LOBBY?

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Sir:

It is the policy of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church to ignore many allegations intended to affect it injuriously. The board is concerned with a cause rather than with its own interest. However, we are not disposed to ignore the recently made charges that the board is a "lobby," these charges involving invidious and, to those who know the facts, ridiculous comparisons with other churches. The term "lobby" has been used in reference to the activities of special interests for so long that it has gathered opprobrium. In the attempt to apply it to the Board of Temperance, we insist that the term be defined.

If a lobby is an organization engaged wholly or principally in promoting legislation or preventing enactment of legislation, the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is not a lobby, for not one per cent of its time and effort is so directed.

If a lobby is an organization engaged in promoting legislation for some selfish reason or to enhance some material interest, the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is not a lobby, for its interest is strictly limited to the sphere of public morals. Under no circumstances do the Methodists solicit or receive from the government financial aid or in any other way accept legislative or administrative assistance in promoting the material interests of the church.

If a lobby is an organization which promotes legislation by underground, mysterious, or reprehensible methods, then the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is certainly not a lobby. What it does, it does in the open; what it says, it says where all may hear.

The board does favor and promote by every legitimate effort the enactment and enforcement of legislation to suppress the legal or illegal traffic in intoxicating liquors. The board does, by public discussion and agitation, oppose nudity, blasphemy, profanity and the treatment of revolting subjects in the American theater; it does oppose commercialized gambling, prize-fighting and the debauching of the young by publications which are indecent or which are clearly intended to excite lascivious feeling.

If to approach a member of the United States House of Representatives or the United States Senate for the purpose of petitioning that he vote for prohibition legislation constitutes a lobby, then the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is a lobby several times each year.

So are almost all of the leading church denominations. Almost without exception they have standing committees which are under instruction to solicit the support of congressional representatives in behalf of prohibition and these committees appear in Washington for that purpose whenever prohibition legislation is under consideration.

Also the Catholics have headquarters in Washington from which they do not hesitate to visit administrative and legislative officials in regard to "Catholic interests." Indeed, this work, according to an official report, "has been almost a daily task."

It will be very clear to intelligent people that the use of the word "lobby" in attempting to arouse prejudice against the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church is due solely to the fact that the board vigorously and consistently supports prohibition, a policy in controversy. It may be said in general that the Protestant church members of the country and a very large group of Roman Catholics believe that the most determined resistance to the effort to re-establish a licensed liquor trade is clearly indicated by patriotism and Christianity. No words are strong enough to condemn the effort to bulldoze the Christian people of the United States into a surrender of their sacred constitutional right to petition any legislative or administrative officer of the government against a policy which they sincerely believe to be contrary to the national welfare, an invasion of the right of the people to expect hostility on the part of their government to commercialized evils which prey upon the helpless and are an affront to the God of justice and mercy. The people do not intend to abandon government to wet propagandists, corrupt politicians and great financial interests having a profit motive in the corruption of public morals.

Respectfully yours,

CLARENCE TRUE WILSON,
General Secretary.

An Egg With a Broken Shell—a Parable

We speak in parable because we wish to be understood by a few and not understood by the many. We saw an egg with a broken shell. A little part of the shell had been broken away in careless or thoughtless handling. The contents of the shell remained intact, but part of the protecting case was gone and the egg was no longer safe. It still had all the value of an egg for culinary purposes. It could serve in cake or pudding; it could take a subordinate part in meeting the demands of men. But that egg had been a living thing with a destined place in the world of living creatures; it had had an ambition to unfold its possibilities and realize the hope of its being. But alas! Careless and thoughtless handling had destroyed its high hope and reduced its outlook. It could only become food for other creatures. If you discern the meaning of my parable, have a care!

HIS GREATEST PLEASURE

At a dinner party in Baltimore many years ago, at which were present among the guests George Peabody and Johns Hopkins, some one inquired:

"Which did you enjoy most, Mr. Peabody, making your money or giving it away?"

"Well," answered Mr. Peabody slowly, and Johns Hopkins was observed to be deeply interested in the answer, "I enjoyed making money. I think it is a great pleasure to make money. And when the idea was first suggested to me that I give money away, it did not please me at all. In fact, it distressed me. But I thought the matter over, and concluded I'd try it on a small scale. So I built the first of the model tenement houses in London. It was a hard pull. But after it was done, I went around among the poor people living in the rooms, so clean and comfortable, and I had quite a new feeling. I enjoyed it very much. So I gave some more, and the feeling increased. And now I can truly say that, much as I enjoyed making my money, I enjoyed giving it away a great deal more."—Selected.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

CHURCH PAPERS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL LITERATURE

For our conference the HERALD is indispensable, and the editor, Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D.D., has placed the conference under lasting obligations for establishing and maintaining such a splendid paper within our bounds. It is our only medium of communication with all the churches, and such communication as it affords is of inestimable value to us in acquainting our people with our programs, and in stimulating interest and activity. The charges that read the HERALD are the ones best informed and most responsive. The form of the paper is pleasing, and the reading matter always good. Our special effort during the early part of the year to increase the subscription list to 3,000 was highly worthwhile, though the goal was not reached. The present subscription list is considerably short of that number. However, the paper has come to be such a fixture with us we are confident the number of subscribers will increase from year to year.

The Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Recorder both come to our conference, and the high merit of each is fully appreciated by our readers. The Protestant is just closing a subscription campaign in our conference; we are not informed as to the result, but trust that it was gratifying. These are all splendid papers, ably edited, and always full of important church news, and the best of other matter that the press affords. The contributions of Rev. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, D.D., LL.D., are fully justifying the wisdom of the General Conference in providing for the church the benefit of his facile pen. We most heartily commend these papers to our people.

Our Sunday school literature, ably edited by Rev. Crates S. Johnson, D.D., is the best and cheapest for Methodist Protestants. Dr. Johnson is devoting himself assiduously to the task of constantly improving and enlarging our Sunday school literature, and the efficiency of his work is reflected in the high quality of our Sunday school helps. The supplies are suited to the needs of the smallest school, and adequate to the requirements of the largest, ranging, as they do, from the cradle roll to the home department. The four weekly papers are attractive and wholesome, pleasing alike to both youth and age. We most heartily commend this literature as indispensable to all of our Sunday schools, and recommend that no other be used.—President's Report to Annual Conference.

—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the world-famous missionary to India, says there are three kinds of Christians—the selfish Christian, the sacrificial Christian, and, between these two, the sentimental Christian. The selfish Christian is he who wants to do and to give, if at all, only to the upkeep of his local church. The sentimental Christian is the one to whom Christianity means no cross, but who gives a flower and a tear for "the dear missionary" or "the poor heathen," and proceeds serenely to do nothing more about it. The sacrificial Christian is the one on whose heart and soul the burden of an unsaved world bears heavily, and, with his Lord, he is willing to sacrifice and practice self-denial.—Selected.

Commencement—High Point College

It was our privilege to be present on the occasion of the baccalaureate sermon Sunday, June 2, and also on commencement day, June 3. Large audiences were present on both occasions. We congratulate the college management upon the high plane on which the commencement program was pitched, and upon the large class of promising young men and young women graduating this year. This is the fifth year of the college and the third class to graduate. The A.B. degree was conferred upon thirty-five graduates, and twelve students were graduated from the department of commerce. What has been done during these brief years is highly creditable to the college and gratifying to the conference. It is also an earnest of what may be expected of this institution in the years that lie ahead. We can make no better investment than to put something into High Point College that will help to give it permanence and power. It is well to remind ourselves here of the words of Webster: "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God, and the love of fellowman, we engrave upon those tablets something that will brighten all eternity." This, we understand, is the function of a Christian college, and with this as our ideal for High Point, surely we will give to it our full and unflinching support.

Registrations

The Young People's Training School is just a little more than a month off now, and Bro. Harrison is eager for registrations. We trust that the first published list may be a long one, and made up largely of our pastors. Bro. Harrison is calling on them to register first—a good idea. Then they can press the registration among their people. Send your registration at once, brethren, to Rev. N. M. Harrison, registration agent. His address is 707 Central Avenue, Charlotte, N. C. Adult registration fee, fifty cents; children, twenty-five cents.

Do You Know

The law of your church? When and by whom are delegates to represent a charge in an annual conference nominated? When are they voted upon? Who conducts the election and takes charge of the ballots? When are the ballots counted and announcement of results made? When and by whom is the alternate delegate elected? What is our conference election law? What is the revised law regarding selling, building, etc.? What is the law in regard to dropping members? How is full membership in the church secured? What is the law in regard to apportioning the budgets? When and by whom are church officers elected? Trustees of parsonages? Who are members of the quarterly conference? Who grants license to preach? How often is license renewed? Who can vote in a church election? What is the law regarding treasurers of local churches? How often is the Lord's Supper to be administered? These questions suggest the many things about our church law with which pastors should be familiar. The church law is the chart and compass of our ecclesiastical craft, and the pastor is the captain.

The only safe sea is that on which the chart and compass are observed. It is to be remembered, of course, that church law, like all human law, is to be administered with discretion, and that its purpose is to oil the wheels of progress for safe and successful movements, and not to clog them. All pastors should be thoroughly familiar with our church law, and direct the church in harmony with its spirit and purpose.

The revised discipline can be secured from our publishers at twenty cents per copy, postpaid. The morocco bound edition is $1.50 per copy. This is a beautifully bound book, with gilt edge, and very appropriate where the ritual is needed for public occasions. Our pastors will be pleased with a copy of each.

Fifth Sunday in June

We trust that all pastors and other readers of the HERALD saw what we had to say last week in regard to "HERALD Sunday"—the fifth Sunday in June. The campaign for new subscriptions closes on this date, and we are anxious that there shall be a pronounced effort, and a concerted effort as well, at this time to put across completely this undertaking to secure 1,200 new subscribers for this paper that means so much to the success of our conference. The publishing house, from which we received $1,200 a year for the support of the paper, has been sold, and consequently that source of income for the paper has been lost. We can't do without the paper, and must find some other way of supporting it. The increase of subscriptions will do it, provided we get enough. The other reason is to get the paper into the homes of our people, and get them to reading it. Far greater good would come from this than the mere money value that would be realized. The increase of subscriptions would help to maintain the paper; but the increase in reading would give the much larger result of increased help in maintaining all the conference programs.

We most earnestly urge pastors to push for subscriptions right on up to the fifth Sunday in June, and then by one final effort complete the undertaking by securing the full allotment.

Children's Home Week

Bro. Dixon, superintendent of the Children's Home, is asking that June 1-10 be designated as Children's Home Week, including two Sundays. He is asking that during this time special prayer and special offerings be made for the Home. The idea is a good one, and we call upon every church in the conference to help realize the purpose of it. Let us pray for the home, and then on one or both of these Sundays help to answer our prayers by an offering just as liberal as we can make. We trust that no church will fail in this.

Commended

One reporter, in HERALD of last week, says, "The Christian Endeavor Society has done another beautiful deed recently by placing 100 new M. P. Church Hymnals in the church." Well, we agree with the reporter. This was a "beautiful deed," and we most heartily commend this society for doing this worthy and needful thing. This church will be happier in its worship and stronger in its work by this addition of our hymnal. Some of the most splendid hymns that have been written are in this book. We would like to venture the hope that the worship program will be further enriched by the use of the ritual provided in this hymnal. We suspect that this is being done already.

Sick Pastors

Bro. Moton is very ill, and we fear that his condition is not encouraging. We are glad to report that Bro. Carmichael is improving, and the indications are that he will be able to take up his work soon. We have not had any word from Bro. Hall for a few days. We hope that his condition has improved. Bro. W. P. Martin has been confined to his bed for quite a while, and writes that he is not so well. All of these brethren and their families have our sympathy and our prayers.

THE SHUT AND THE OPEN HAND

We are animals so long as we live to get. We came into the world with our fists tightly clinched, and some men need an entire lifetime to get their hands opened. The shut hand is the symbol of animalism; the open hand is the emblem of the new man in Christ. Animals live to get. The lion goes forth to seek his prey. Some men are like the lion. The city is the forest in which they search for victims. The dog snatches the biggest bone and runs. His ambition is to get. The hog steps into the trough with all four feet because a hog lives to get. Man alone is capable of giving. He can stand erect with open hand, his face toward his brother's face, and can imitate the example of almighty God and be a dispenser of benefactions. You do not live unless you live to give.—Rev. Charles E. Jefferson.

YIELD YOURSELVES UNTO GOD

One of the most remarkable traits in the character of Paul is the broad, common-sense view he takes of life in all its various and conflicting experiences. Nothing goes amiss with him; whatever happens is in God's plan. "All things work together for good to them that love God." "All things are yours." It was that assurance or conviction that led him to "take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake." He was constantly under the inspiration of those high ideals, and, therefore, no matter what came, no matter what adverse wind blew, it brought him nearer his longed-for and destined Heaven.

Bishop Huntington expresses this thought finely: "In the life of faith the soul continually pursues God through all that hides him, and, if faithful, never stops in this pursuit. All roads bring it nearer to God; all things are means of leading it to him. Whether God afflicts or comforts the soul, it will equally adore Him to be indeed its Lord and its God. If we had faith, we should be at peace with all creatures, thanking them in our heart for all the suffering they cause us, because they greatly help to perfect us. The more nature rebels, the more firmly will faith say: 'All comes from God, or is allowed by Him, and therefore all is good.'"—Christian Uplook.

A PARENT'S PRAYER

O Heavenly Father, make me fit to be the parent of my child.

Bless me with health and character that I may always be a master of myself. Give me poise, I pray, and self-control. Help me keep my voice soft, and sweet, and low.

Make me sympathetic with my baby and wise enough to understand him. Help me to know how hard it is for a little child to lift his head, to sit, to creep, to walk, and to talk.

Allow me not, O Lord, to laugh, or even smile, at the mistakes my baby makes. May I listen patiently to all he has to say and always answer his questions kindly.

Teach me to let my child express himself, create and play. Lead me with him into the land of make-believe. Help me to meet his fairies and to entertain them in my home.

Help me to overlook the things which are unimportant. Blind me to my baby's wrongs and turn my eyes upon the good things that he does. Teach me the power of praise and show me how to celebrate success in my child.

Help me to teach my baby early self-control. Give me the courage to say "No," to be honest when I say it; and to employ "No" as rarely as possible. May my baby learn from me to be considerate of others and to grow up to be lovable and useful.

Make us parents humble in Thy sight, O Lord, and give us mutual love. Before our baby make us both as one.

With all Thy gifts, O Great Jehovah, make us worthy to be loved and imitated by our child.—Garry Cleveland Myers.

KEEP ON PRAYING

One James Smith, an English laborer in the navy yard on the Thames, had a little boy, Johnnie, says the Wesleyan Methodist. James was a very intemperate man. After the death of his wife, sorrow kept him sober for a while, but he took to his cups again, and, as poor Johnnie expressed it, "got badder and badder all the time."

One night the drunkard awoke, a most uncommon thing for him at such an hour, and lay very still, for he heard a sound. It was his motherless boy praying by his bedside. He heard him say, "Please, God, make daddy a better man, for Jesus' sake."

James Smith could not sleep any more. He rose very early and went to his work. He came home early that night without having drunk a drop of liquor. His heart was melted. He said to Johnnie: "What put it into your head to pray for your worthless old dad?"

Johnnie told him it was because he loved him; and besides he had been to a Sunday class where the teacher had taught him the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

"Then keep on prayin', keep on prayin', little lad," said James. "I believe God has answered you already; I've been prayin' for myself, that God would make me a better man."

The prayer was answered. James Smith reformed, and from that time lived a steady Christian man.—Selected.

THE PEARL BROOCH

He hadn't a cent in the world, and early that morning he decided that before the day was over he would select his victim and rob her. It would be a woman, of course. Women were easier prey than men.

He was sorry in a way that he had sunk so low, but money he must have, and this seemed to be the only way out. He had tramped the streets day after day asking for work, only to be turned away. Money he must have.

Little Mrs. Bethel always went to prayer meeting, and she always wore her pearl brooch. It was safer to wear it than it was to leave it at home.

Little Mrs. Bethel was small and white-haired. She lived alone and never went anywhere in the evening except to prayer meeting. She always took the car at Cherry Street and got off at Dexter. The church was two blocks east.

Little Mrs. Bethel was always a little timid, but nothing had harmed her so far, and she did so enjoy the prayer meeting. She made ready to go as usual this evening, for it was Wednesday. She looked very nice and neat in her black suit, her shining white hair showing under her hat. And in the neck of her gown she wore, as usual, her pearl brooch. Any one seeing her could not help but notice its beauty.

It had been given her by Aunt Martha, now dead. It was very valuable, for there was a diamond in the center and the rest of it was studded thickly with pearls.

She got on as usual at Cherry Street. There were only three passengers aboard, a fat gentleman reading his evening paper, a motherly woman with a baby, and a young man.

She took a seat directly across from the young man, and he eyed her keenly. The pearl pin with its twinkling diamond was plainly visible.

When the car came to Dexter Street she got off, as usual. The young man, his eyes still on the pearl brooch, got off too. He was thinking of something that was going to help him out of his difficulties.

The car went on its way, and the two were left standing on the pavement. Little Mrs. Bethel started in the direction of the church. The young man followed.

All at once she turned. Her face under the electric light looked soft and kind.

"Do you know," she said with her warm little smile, "I'm so glad you're going my way. I'm just a little afraid to walk these two blocks alone, although I wouldn't admit it to any one else. But it wouldn't be right to stay away from prayer meeting for that. Would it?"

She paused.

"However, there are so many things happening that one reads in the papers, hold-ups and the like, that it can't help making me just a little bit afraid."

The young man walked along by her side. Larry was his name, Larry Pickering, and as yet he had not committed any crime. But at this little white-haired lady's neck was a pearl brooch, and he was going to have it, have it by fair means or foul.

Mrs. Bethel went on talking in her soft old voice.

"It's so nice to have company going my way," she added. "I'm not a bit afraid now. Do you know," she went on as she smiled at him, "if I had a son I would like to have one just like you."

Larry Pickering started. "Like me? You don't know what you're saying."

Little Mrs. Bethel nodded, still smiling.

"Oh, yes, I do. I'd like to have him just like you. So tall and strong and good."

The boy, Larry, walked on. Time was passing and the moment had come to seize that pearl brooch. But he didn't do it. They were almost at the church now.

"There's my church," announced Mrs. Bethel happily. "I just love prayer meeting."

They walked up to it, and little Mrs. Bethel turned to him again.

"Thank you so much," she said gratefully.

Larry Pickering, under the electric light, began to speak. "Madam," he said, "do you know what I intended to do when I got off that car?"

"No, I don't," she answered.

"I intended to rob you of that pearl brooch," said Larry Pickering gravely. "I'd have done it too if you hadn't spoken to me so kindly. But when you said that if you'd had a son, you'd have liked him to be just like me, oh, I couldn't stand that! I lost the desire right then to rob you. Say, ma'am, don't go round wearing a pin like that at night. Put it in a bank or a safety vault or somewhere. Some guy mightn't feel as I do about you. I wouldn't like to see any harm come to you."

Little Mrs. Bethel was staring at him.

The diamond in the pearl pin twinkled and gleamed.

"You were going to rob me," she cried, "of my diamond and pearl pin? Oh, you poor boy! This is all the jewelry I possess and was given me by an aunt long since dead. I do treasure it, but I won't wear it any more if it is a temptation to others. Listen, I only brought a little change with me, but here is a dollar. Go and buy yourself some supper and tomorrow come up to my home. I believe I can get you a place at Mr. Holland's feed store. I'm going in here to pray for you, that you may be led in the right way. I live at 224 Cherry Street.

Larry stood looking down at her.

"You're a good woman," he said gratefully, "and I'll take your dollar, and I'll buy a lodging and supper, and tomorrow you shall help me, if you will. God bless you!"

They were singing as Mrs. Bethel walked into the church. There was her beloved pastor. There were Miss Hester Rice, Mrs. Stafford, and Emma Baker.

Little Mrs. Bethel took her seat. But in her heart she was saying over and over again: "Praise the Lord! Praise the Lord!"—Susan Hubbard Martin in The Christian Advocate.

BECOMING FAMILIAR WITH GOD

The president of a bank, when asked by a young clerk how he could distinguish the bad bills from the good, said, "Get familiar with the good bills, and you will recognize the bad bills at sight." By watchfulness and prayer we can so familiarize ourselves with good that we shall recognize evil the instant it appears, and thus avoid entering into temptation.—The Expositor.

Outline for Leader

What a great many times we have each heard someone say when reproached, "I just didn't think." This is one of our serious faults; we do not think. The absence of thought causes failures and disasters. Our plans fail utterly for the simple reason that we are not far-reaching in the thought-world—in other words, we fail to consider the "ifs" and "ands."

The progress already made in any field is directly or indirectly the result of thought. In all realms people have been thinking and things have been progressing—but it seems that in religion the thinkers have only begun to delve into the problems. There are and have always been religious thinkers. It is the masses who have been too willing to let things go on and on as of old.

Today, more than ever before, the world needs men and women who "think things through." We have, too long, taken things as they came and then let them go without so much as thinking about the statement whether it be true or false. Will we ever think for ourselves rather than accept and swallow second-hand the thoughts and ideas of others?

We need people who can think through the world's problems, both social and political. By thinking and challenging thought we can do our bit in developing such thinkers. Leaders will have to come from somewhere and can we not begin to develop leaders by trying to make people think? When you hear a statement, does it challenge you to think about that statement—to think and to think in reality? None of us, perhaps, can be the great stimulator in thought that Emerson was, but we can, in as far as our ability goes, "think things through."

If You Want a Debate

Resolved, That lack of thinking causes more failures than the lack of ability.

Suggested Questions

1. How may we learn to think?
2. By what standards are we to be guided in thought?
3. Why do we need to think through our plans?
4. Will thinking make us better citizens? If so, why?

5. How can deeper thinking aid in the betterment of Christian Endeavor?

Thought must precede details. A campaign not carefully managed will fail. In the great war, Germany failed to think things through.—Allerton.

We are so busy that we do not take time to think. We imagine that we must be forever on the go. Activity is only a part of life; it should be directed by thought.—Munroe.

Poetry to the Point

THE THINKER

Back of the beating hammer
By which the steel is wrought,
Back of the workshop's clamor
The seeker may find the thought,
The thought that is ever master
Of iron and steam and steel,
That rises above disaster
And tramples it under heel.

The drudge may fret and tinker,
O'er labor with lusty blows,
But back of him stands the thinker,
The clear-eyed man who knows;
For into each plow and saber,
Each piece and part and whole,
Must go to the brains of labor,
Which gives the work a soul.

Back of the motor's humming,
Back of the belts that sing,
Back of the hammer's drumming,
Back of the cranes that swing,
There is the eye that scans them,
Watching through stress and strain,
There is the mind that plans them—
Back of the brawn the brain.

Might of the roaring boiler,
Force of the engine's thrust,
Strength of the sweating toiler,
Greatly in these we trust.
But back of them stands the schemer,
The thinker who drives things through,
Back of the job—the dreamer
Who's making the dream come true!

EDITORS TAKE NOTICE OF TOBACCO

Will H. Brown

A physician wrote to the editor of the Saturday Evening Post, protesting against the practice of its story-writers in persistently bringing in subtle references to the use of cigarettes by the heroines, with the evident purpose of popularizing the practice among women. He received a reply signed, "The Editors," in which is this statement:

"It may interest you to know that the Post has just discontinued entirely, at a cost of some $300,000 a year, the advertising of cigarettes, and that while we may not feel as strongly against them as you do, we are always careful, whenever possible, to edit them out of both pictures and reading matter."

When the editors of a great magazine throw aside $300,000 per year because of some one thing, it is time for those who think that the sentiment against tobacco is not making headway, to cheer up. This one thing shows clearly which way the wind is blowing the tobacco smoke.

Arthur Brisbane, who writes for a great syndicate of papers, published all over the world, made this statement in one of his articles, after giving figures as to the extent of the tobacco business in this country:

"Probal ly tobacco is worth all the trouble and all the money. Men that have only recently learned to walk on their hind legs, and haven't yet learned to THINK, feel the need of something foolish."

The best that can be said of the tobacco habit is that it is foolish. That people are thinking about it, spells its doom.

Mrs. Kelley G. Coultrane, Level Cross, Randleman, ten or twelve pounds of lard.

On last Saturday afternoon Rev. N. G. Be-thea and a number of his workers, led by Mrs. C. L. Koontz, came over with about 30 of their children. They played games on the campus with our children for some time, then they spread a splendid picnic supper for our children and their children which was greatly enjoyed by all. Mrs. Koontz then distributed to our children some beautiful picture books which her children had made. It was a very happy occasion, and we thank them for coming. We hope many of our Sunday school and C. E. people will choose to picnic on our grounds this summer. Just let us know a few days ahead when you are coming.

A goodly number of our friends are responding to the appeal for Octagon soap coupons. We thank you, and ask that you continue this help.

Children's Home Week

A number of letters went out from this office last week asking pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and missionary workers to think about, pray for and give to the Children's Home during this week. We need your thoughts, your prayers and some of your money to help us meet the conditions here. And we thank you for your response to these needs.

Our Commencement

In last week's Herald we meant to say, our commencement exercises will be given on the campus at 7:00 o'clock P. M., on Friday, June 7th. To hold the exercises out of doors it is necessary to begin at 7 o'clock, and though this hour is a bit early we trust a number of our friends will be present to hear the children.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

In checking up on this report, please keep in mind the fact that it includes all receipts from November, 1928, to and including April 30, 1929. If any mistakes are noted, please call my attention to them at once and corrections will be made. In handling so many small items and getting them all in their respective "pews" is no easy task, and occasionally one slips in where it does not belong, and then my troubles begin. It must be located and put where it belongs before my books will balance.

Half of the conference year is gone and we have paid about one-eighth of our entire budget. Is this cause for congratulations?

Our receipts for this week are less than $100. This is the smallest amount we have reported so far in the game. The printer will not have to work overtime in this report, thereby saving wear and tear on the linotype. Space will be conserved, and that means something. But all the time our balance at the bank is growing painfully less, while demands for money keep steadily increasing. The treasurer, what is he to do? Nothing but smile and keep sweet, and hope for better things.

CHILDREN'S DAY

While a large majority of schools and churches have ordered Children's Day supplies and will observe Children's Day on the second Sunday in June, many have not yet sent in their orders, doubtless because they will hold their services later. Why not order at once before the large supply is exhausted?

Let every school in the denomination line up behind the General Conference program. Every one at it makes the work lighter and success sure.

DISTRICT RALLY

For the following charges a District Rally will be held at Bethel, Mocksville Charge, the fifth Sunday in June: Mocksville, North Davidson, Denton, South Lexington, Davidson, State Street. All these with their pastors are urged to come and make the day a helpful one. Interesting topics with live speakers will be on the program. All except the speakers are requested to bring their lunch. Good music will be given throughout the day. Come, pastors and people, and let us have a helpful day!

J. W. BRAXTON,
N. G. BETHEA,
Joint Chairmen.

--The labor party comes into power again in England by the election of last week. Ramsay MacDonald will be prime minister again.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield.—This entire community was shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Miss Delia Bustin, which occurred in Park View Hospital, Rocky Mount, on the morning of May 26, after an illness of only a few hours. Death resulted from cerebral hemorrhage. Miss Bustin was stricken about nine o'clock in the evening, physicians were hastily summoned, and she was taken to Park View Hospital, where all efforts to relieve her were unavailing, and in the early hours of the morning her spirit "crossed the bar."

She was the only daughter of Mrs. Delia B. Bustin and the late W. D. Bustin, and is survived by her mother and one brother, John B. Bustin, of Rocky Mount, and numerous relatives in this community. She and her mother lived in their home a few miles from Enfield, where she very successfully supervised their farming interests. Miss Bustin was capable and energetic, a thoughtful and devoted daughter, and her passing has made desolate a happy home.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. J. Clyde Auman, pastor of the M. P. church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Sharron of the Presbyterian church. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery. The sympathy of many friends goes out to this family so suddenly and sorely bereft.

State Street.—Friday night, May 31, about 8 o'clock, were attracted by loud talking and laughing like some merry picnickers were on their way for an outing, but we soon discovered they were on our front porch. We went to see what was the trouble and there they were all armed with not dangerous looking weapons. But the writer was so bewildered at the crowd that he did not know what to say or do, and they began to call out, "Aren't you going to let us in?" Of course we never turn anyone away that wants to get in, especially if they are friendly. To be sure these folks were. They were not on a picnic but were there to fix us at the parsonage so we could keep going on for some time, for they brought us all kinds of good eats that make all the members of the preacher's family smile.

In giving an account of the above-named occasion we are not going to try to enumerate the articles given, for the names were on but very few packages, but we did get the names of those present and some who sent articles and if any have been left out it was because those who brought for others did not give the names and we beg pardon. Taking part that we know were the following: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Walser, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Potts, H. P. Hoffman, Mrs. G. C. Myers, Mrs. C. L. Koontz, Mrs. F. J. Cox, Mrs. Ed Workman, Mrs. A. H. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Koontz, J. B. Hayworth, Mrs. Elwood Tysinger, Ella Stuart Cox, Grace Hinchaw, Dorsey and Arnold Walser, and Mrs. H. C. Rogers, who was the leading spirit in working this up. We thank her heartily and also those that cooperated with her in putting the project across.

No one but the pastor and family know what such acts of kindness mean, and especially at a time of year when there is not an over-supply of the things that keep soul and body together on our mission points, for there is nothing coming in from our Annual Conference Treasurer at this time. God bless you, dear folks. We are always glad to see you come in and when you come armed this way it makes us doubly glad.

After pleasant conversation together for a while and a prayer by the pastor asking the blessing of God upon those who had cheered us in this substantial way, the happy group left for their homes and left us to take inventory to find that we were supplied with not one thing but what will be helpful and cut the high cost of living in several ways for several weeks.

N. G. BETHEA.

West Forsyth.—We had good services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. The Lord's Supper was administered at both churches. At Baltimore in the morning we were pleased with the presence of Rev. D. C. Norman, of East Bend, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who assisted in the service. After the service we went to the home of Bro. J. S. Phillips, an invitation having been given previously. We enjoyed a good dinner and a short while spent in conversation before going over to Stony Knoll for the afternoon service. Bro. Phillips and his family are very active in church and Sunday school work. He is assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. Mrs. Phillips is teacher of the adult women's class, and their daughter, Miss Mamie Phillips, is secretary of the Sunday school.

At Stony Knoll in the afternoon we had the pleasure of listening to a sermon instead of trying to deliver one. We had with us Rev. T. O. Adams, of Winston-Salem, a minister of the Friends church, who delivered a timely and helpful sermon on the subject of keeping the commandments. He was accompanied by Rev. Mr. Caudle, a minister of the Baptist denomination, who assisted in the service.

The revival meeting is to begin at Baltimore church the fourth Sunday in July, with three services on the first day. Rev. M. C. Henderson, pastor of Bess Chapel charge, is the engaged help for the meeting.

The people of this charge continue their kindness in remembering the pastor and family with useful gifts. We thank the following for gifts since our last report: Mrs. C. G. Hunter, Mrs. Clinton Sprinkle, Mr. and Mrs. Ammon Long, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Long and Mrs. John Hunter.

The pastor was called to Baltimore church last Saturday morning to conduct the funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Long, of that church. The child lived but a short while after birth. Mr. and Mrs. Long make their home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Doub, who are members of Baltimore church and reside in the community.

We (the pastor and two of the little Ways) enjoyed dinner and a pleasant visit with Bro. S. M. Spense and family, of Stony Knoll church, last Friday. On Saturday we had dinner in the home of Bro. J. W. Doub, superintendent of the Baltimore Sunday school, who makes his home with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ella Doub, and family.

Our service next Sunday will be with the Union Hill church at 11 o'clock. We are expecting to administer the Lord's Supper at that service.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Albemarle.—Cornerstone laying and homecoming at the Albemarle First Methodist Protestant Church on the fourth Sunday in June. All former pastors and members are cordially invited to be present. There will be lunch served in the dining room of the church.

J. R. ANDERSON, Pastor.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Charge.—Although we have been deprived of the services of our beloved pastor, Mr. Hall, for some months, we are still trying to carry on our Sabbath school and prayer services as best we can. But yet we miss him so much for we feel that he is our teacher and leader. Yet God knows best and perhaps this is our great test to make us really show whether we have that little spark of the love of God in our hearts to go on in our small way, trying to do His work. Yet we are not entirely deprived of preaching. For we are fortunate enough in having Rev. N. M. Harrison from First Church, Charlotte, with us every fourth Sunday afternoon. And we surely do appreciate his services. For he brings us some wonderful messages.

Our president, Mr. Taylor, was on the work at Stallings church some time ago, and we had the privilege of hearing him. And am mighty glad we are to have him with us again at our church. The fourth Sunday in July there is to be a district rally. We are looking forward to this with great expectations.

We were to see our pastor yesterday and we are indeed sorry to say he doesn't seem to improve very rapidly. I want to ask all the Christian people to pray for a speedy recovery if it be God's will.

Our Sunday school is growing both in interest and attendance. Also we have purchased a new organ.

MRS. MAE MATTHEWS.

Enfield.—The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting Monday, May 27th, at the home of Misses Mary and Susie Whitaker. The ladies are well pleased each year in May to hold its meeting with these charming hostesses at their lovely country home surrounded by spacious lawn and beautiful blooming flowers. It is indeed quite an inspiration. We had a good attendance at this meeting and splendid attention given during the business period. It was agreed to have some necessary improvements made in our church in the near future. We were very glad to have our pastor present at this meeting. He suggested our having a weighing party at our next meeting, asking each member present to pay a penny per pound for each pound she weighed. This suggestion excited some mirth, but not so much favored by all the members. "Wonder why?" Well, maybe it's because some of our members do not believe in counting calories. Some fancy fly swatters, also flower plants, were brought by one kind lady; there found a ready sale, and we thank her.

Our hearts have been saddened by the death of one of our good members, Mrs. Luther Whitaker, also one of our church members, Miss Dela Bustin. We shall miss them.

After our business period was over, Mrs. George Parker gave us a very interesting and instructive talk on our Children's Home at High Point, N. C. We appreciated this sketch of our Home very much. After adjournment came delicious refreshments served by the hostesses.

We believe most of our sick people are able to be out again. We are glad to note Mrs. Cecil Matthews is improving rapidly although she hasn't been able to attend church or Sunday school for quite a while.

Instead of our regular sermon on last Sunday morning our pastor administered the Lord's Supper, using the entire hour with this ordinance, a very sweet and impressive service enjoyed by all. The date for our Children's Day service hasn't been set yet. We hope to have it ready in the near future. Our Sunday school is showing improvement. We have a goal set for attendance. It was suggested last Sunday not to have our annual Sunday school picnic until that goal was reached. Let us get busy and remind our outside members of this suggestion, also solicit new members.

Our C. E. Society is moving along very actively. Our meetings are well attended and much interest shown.

Our Juniors have a good program for each first Sunday night. We enjoy these programs and appreciate their work. Let us, as active Christians, help these young girls and boys continue this great work.

A HERALD SUBSCRIBER.

Handy.—The first Sunday in June Bro. Hill brought 75 or more of his good people to Lineberry, Davidson charge, for an all-day good-will service, which was fine and rendered in a fine spirit. Both the talks and songs were greatly enjoyed by our people and I am sure they will prove helpful. I want to say to Bro. Hill and those good people from Friendship and Porter who visited us Sunday that the latch string hangs on the outside to them. Come again. Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, served those people for six years and we will have to slip him up a few notches in our estimation for the loyalty shown him Sunday by a great host of those good people.

J. P. ELLIOTT, Reporter.

Yarborough Charge.—The work in general is progressing nicely in all its organizations. The attendance at all services is slowly increasing. The Sunday schools are not attended as they should be, but we are proud of the faithful number we have. We feel as if new life is taking root. The average attendance is about 30 at Yarborough's Chapel. The collection for the first Sunday, which goes to the Children's Home, was $3.60. The average attendance at Harmony is about 35.

Church services are better attended than Sunday school. I commend those who attend Sunday school for always remaining for church. We are especially proud of the attentive congregations.

One of the outstanding organizations of our churches is the C. E. Society. Both church societies are well attended. The society at Harmony meets twice a month. We are proud of the work that those young people are doing. Yarborough's Chapel Christian Endeavor, which meets weekly, has an attendance of from 50 to 80, with an enrollment of 70. The society is planning to purchase a lawn bulletin board for the church.

Our revival meetings are to be held in August with Rev. N. M. Harrison as pulpit help. He was a former pastor of this work, and is very much loved by the people in general. We are looking forward to his coming. We are asking the prayers of God's people that the Lord will send to our church a great revival. The first meeting is to be held at Harmony the third Sunday in August, followed by the meeting at Yarborough the fourth Sunday. Best wishes to all,

D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

High Point. On last Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon of High Point College commencement was delivered in the First church by Rev. Dr. George H. Miller. It is always an inspiring and impressive scene when the faculty and seniors, wearing the vari-colored hoods, Oxford gowns, and caps, file into the front pews of the church. This year there were 37 graduates. An unusually beautiful arrangement of flowers graced the pulpit, and the special music for the occasion was exquisite. Mr. Stimson at the organ, Miss Alma Andrews at the piano, and Miss Dorothy St. Clair with violin played very effectively "Meditation," by Meitzke. The anthem rendered by the choir was "Fear Not, O Israel," by Spieker, and a lovely quartette, "Holy Hour," was sung by Mrs. J. H. Allred, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, Rev. Lester Ballard, and Mr. Blake Harrison. Dr. Miller spoke to the graduates from the text found in Mark 10:17, "Good master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" He said in part that students are coming out of laboratories and searching for truth with boundless hope and dauntless courage. The minister for the morning does not come with erudition, but confident that truth always indicates itself. Man does not do much with changeless and unshakable truths but I come with 30 years' experience in the Christian ministry. Lawlessness has become the thought of President Hoover, as evinced by his recent appointment of a crime commission. In these days men of standing and character lend themselves to the flagrant violation of the law. To a man or woman who has the right viewpoint, the moral law is sacred. The moral law is the way of life. Jesus, beholding the rich young ruler, loved him. His moral earnestness appealed to Jesus. You have missed the sweetest lesson if you have failed to realize that God is looking upon you with good-will. Another thing—the God I worship is like Jesus. He is manifesting Himself with confidence and expectation. This young man said that all these things had been kept from his youth up, but when told to sell all his goods and distribute it among the poor, he went away in sadness, for he esteemed the world's riches. The young man or woman starting out in search of life will come at last to the Master. How to build a life is the most worth-while question, and distrust is the greatest drawback. Hold on to the eternal values of life, if you would succeed, and "put first things first."

The large congregation listened with earnest attention to this admirable message from a man who spoke from a heart rich with experience to these eager and buoyant youths, who are going out to grapple with the problems of life "with confidence and expectation."

Members of the First church were exceedingly proud of their pastor Sunday evening when he stood in the magnificent auditorium of High Point High School and delivered an eloquent and masterly message to that vast audience, addressing his remarks in the main to the 138 bright, joyous boys and girls of the graduating class of 1929. He chose for the basis of his discourse Proverbs 16:32: "He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city." Rev. Mr. Farmer said that he had a notion to set this question before these brave and enthusiastic young people: "Who is master of your fate, who is captain of your soul?" There is no education worth while unless it is superintended by Jesus Christ. It is not so much a question of what he or she knows, but what has he or she become? You can never have a greater dominion than that over yourself. Not scholarship alone, but character counts. Milton said: "He that reigns within himself is greater than a king." We are not mere creatures of circumstance; somehow there is within us something that sets the sail. Happy is he who realizes that he has a kingdom of the soul and order and harmony within himself. Helen Keller said, "Our own wavering spirits are our greatest foes," and anything that debases our minds is a deadly contagion. There is a great strength that is needed in these days "to choose our part and set our sail." Joan of Arc, that indomitable maiden of France, when asked what was the secret of her success, replied that she always sent her white banner ahead. Henry, author of the immortal lines, "I am master of my fate; I am captain of my soul," was pronounced when a youth a victim of tuberculosis, but he waged a valiant fight against it, and conquered the enemy, living to be 54 or 55 years of age. You must take orders from a superior officer if you would be successful in life. If you aspire rightly to be captains of your fate, you must take Jesus for your pilot. Go out into life or further preparation for enlarged service determined, by the help of the Master Pilot, to render true and consecrated usefulness and stewardship of your lives. Catch the spirit of a titlute to an aviator:

"You who have grown so intimate with stars,
And known their silver dripping from your wings,
Trod with the breaking day across the sky,
Known kinship with each meteor that swings—
You who have touched the rainbow's fragile gold,
Carved lyric ways through dawn and dusk and rain,
And soared to heights our hearts have only dreamed—
How can you walk earth's common ways again?"

Many congratulations and good wishes are extended to our happy young graduates who are receiving diplomas this week: High Point College—Misses Claire Douglas, Irene and Inez Reynolds, and Marjorie Wellborn; High Point High School—Misses Dorothy Lee Rankin, Margaret Opal Neese, Annette Pickens, Ina McAdams, Messrs. C. L. Gray, Jr., Robert Davis, William Pritchard, and J. Lloyd York; Jamestown High School—Miss Eloise Beam, of the Children's Home. The greatest asset of any city or community is its strong and virile young manhood and womanhood, and to these who have been deemed worthy to receive the emblem of good scholarship, persistent and courageous effort, and high character, we are looking for leadership in church and state in future years.

The Executive Board of the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting at the church Monday afternoon. This Board is composed of officers, circle chairmen, and secretaries. Their interest just at present is being centered on new furniture and furnishings for the parsonage on Colonial Drive, into which Rev. Mr. Farmer and family moved last week. A more extended account of this home for the pastor will be given later. It is convenient, comfortable, and well located, and we hope that the inmates will thoroughly enjoy life in its happy, peaceful walls.

Miss Claire Douglas, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, achieved distinction and a high honor when she became valedictorian of class of 1929 at High Point College commencement this week. We congratulate her most heartily on this honor, which has been won by steady, persistent effort and study through the entire four years' course, and a high standard of lovely, Christian girlhood. We bespeak for her the attainment of future success and usefulness.

The Vacation Church School opens Monday, June 10.

We are much pleased to announce that Miss Elizabeth Welch, who underwent a serious operation at Guilford General Hospital last Wednesday, is improving satisfactorily, and her numerous friends are hoping for early and complete recovery.

A called meeting of N. C. Branch of Home and Foreign Missionary Societies is being held at High Point College today. This is a very important meeting, and officers for the new merger are to be elected.

Denton Charge.—Our meeting at Denton church began the second Sunday evening in May. Rev. J. R. Anderson, from Albemarle, came to us on Monday to help in the meeting. He preached the old-time gospel with power. Twenty-two made a profession of faith and 11 joined the church. I think there will be a few others to join yet. We were glad to have Brother Anderson with us, and hope he will come again. We were glad to receive by certificate Mr. and Mrs. Coy Kearns on the third Sunday in April. We are glad our young people are interested in special music for the meeting and preaching services. Last Sunday the young men rendered one quartette at the morning service and two at the evening service. At the morning service we also had two special duets, by a Mr. Hedrick and Miss Ruth Floyd, and Mr. Glover. Mrs. Nannie Sexton and Mrs. Joe Hill are helping the children to practice children's songs two Saturday afternoons a month. We thank each of these for their helpfulness in Kingdom service.

Our Vacation Bible School started June 3, with Misses Ruth Floyd, Julia Loftin, Jewel Lanier, Sallie May Frank and the writer as teachers. Though the weather was unfavorable, we had 46 students present the first day.

We were glad to have Rev. W. D. Reed and the Lineberry C. E. Society visit our C. E. Society and worship with us the first Sunday evening in May. The fourth Sunday evening in May we had the privilege of returning the visit to the Lineberry C. E. Society. We were delighted to know that they were doing such splendid work. We believe it will encourage our people to do better C. E. work.

Canaan and Piney Grove churches have been doing some work on their church buildings. Canaan has finished four Sunday school rooms. Piney Grove has painted their church outside and inside.

President Taylor is to be with us June 9, at 11 a. m. at Canaan, and 2:30 p. m. at Piney Grove. Canaan will open their Sunday school rooms for class work Sunday. We urge all the members from the other churches to come and hear President Taylor next Sunday. Canaan Church observed Memorial Day the second Sunday in May, and Piney Grove the fourth Sunday in May. We had good attendance and worth-while services at each place. We were glad to see a number of friends who have moved from this community present.

We filled our regular appointment at Cid Sunday afternoon. Our congregation is not large at this place, but we have a faithful few. We were glad to have several visitors with us Sunday.

The nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference are Mr. Joe Delk of Piney Grove church, and Mr. M. C. Cranford, of Denton church. E. A. BINGHAM.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. E. A. Bingham, accompanied by wife and three lovely children, filled his appointment Sunday afternoon and delivered a most excellent sermon. He brought out some real facts condemning sin.

Our Sunday school is getting along real well.

Rev. Robert Short, of Roberta, was a pleasant visitor of N. W. Lanier and family one evening last week. Old friends are never forgotten by true ones. We are always pleased to have Mr. Short and family to visit us, as he once served us so faithfully and did our work so much good. We have been lucky to have other good ministers to serve us also and do good work.

Our plans are now to have our special meeting the fourth Sunday in July. Pray for us, brethren.

MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Harmony.—Our Sunday school is doing nicely under the supervision of our superintendent and earnest teachers. We had a splendid attendance Sunday, the largest we have had in some time.

We are glad to have with us now one of our teachers, Miss Ethel Balentine, who has been away for some time teaching school.

We are glad to report at this time that one of our most loyal members, Miss Edna Hughes, has finished her high school career at Ware Shoals High School with many honors. We wish for Edna great success in her future life.

We were honored again the fourth Sunday by a visit and very interesting sermon delivered by Rev. Mr. Davis, recently a graduate from P. C. of Clinton. We wish to have him with us very often in the future.

Rev. D. D. Broome delivered a very interesting sermon Sunday evening.

We were very much surprised Sunday morning when Mr. Broome introduced to us his wife. During their short visit this time Mrs. Broome made a number of friends. We wish

Rev. and Mrs. Broome a long life of happiness and prosperity as they journey life's pathway together.

The Young People's C. E. Society held its regular meeting last Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. Broome gave us some very interesting points on missionaries.

REPORTER.

Winston-Salem, First Church.—Our church has been going at a rapid pace, although you haven't heard from us for a short while.

We recently held a Standard Leadership Training School in our church. Five courses were offered and certificates are to be given to those who received credit for their work. This was a big success and, we think, has helped and will continue to help our church in many respects.

The Christian Endeavor Society is planning to give a play Sunday night, June 9, for the benefit of our Methodist Protestant Children's Home. Dr. Dixon is going to come and bring some of the children to sing and recite at this time. We trust it will be of benefit to us and also helpful to them.

We had a goodly number present Sunday, both at Sunday school and church worship. The choir rendered a beautiful anthem. Our pastor, Rev. H. F. Surratt, gave us a very interesting address, after which we had communion, commemorating the death and passion of our Lord and Savior.

The circles of our Woman's Auxiliary are working hard and progressing as they work. PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

Gibsonville Church.—Our attendance was off considerably last Sunday due to special services in the surrounding communities. Since the schools are closing, several of our young folk are coming home for the vacation. We hope to get back to the 200-mark within a few Sundays.

Rev. Ivey Crutchfield filled the pulpit last Sunday in the absence of Dr. Lindley. He brought us a splendid message on "Obedience."

Miss Ella Mae Sears, who has been away in school, has returned for the summer vacation. Miss Sears is very active in young people's work and we are especially glad to have her with us.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavorers motored to Summers' Mill and enjoyed a weenie roast on Tuesday evening of last week. They were chaperoned by the superintendents: Miss Orpha Burgess and Mr. F. R. Owen. They are a real live bunch of boys and girls and are doing some worth-while things.

A number of our Senior Christian Endeavorers motored to High Point College last Friday evening and attended the music recital. Those who attended report a splendid program.

Next Sunday is Children's Day. The children will give their program at 11 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend this service.

ORPHA BURGESS, Reporter.

Concord.—The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the morning service Sunday. This was a very impressive service. Mr. Hendry spoke from the text, "Bid me come unto thee," the words of Peter when he saw Jesus walking on the water. At the evening hour the pulpit was filled by Rev. J. L.

Love, a member of our church who is taking the Conference course. Mr. Love preached a splendid sermon from the subject, "The Thief's Last Hour."

Children's Day services will be held next Sunday at the morning hour. The children are being trained by Miss Fannie Little, assisted by Eva Polk.

Miss Fannie Little, who finished school at the Appalachian Normal, Boone, N. C.; Miss Adelaide Reed, who has been in school at Mitchell College, Statesville, and Miss Beatrice Waddell, from High Point College, are at home for the summer.

One of the largest crowds to attend a supper here was present at the supper last Friday evening, which the Ladies' Aid Society served in the social hall of the Sunday school building. A nice little sum was realized which is to be applied on the new auditorium.

Mr. Hendry visited his parents for a few days last week in Florida.

A marriage of much interest to their many friends was that of Miss Annie Lee Aycock to Mr. Brady Taggart on last Tuesday, May 28. Mrs. Taggart is the daughter of Mrs. M. J. Aycock, a very talented young lady, and a valuable member of our church. Mr. Taggart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Taggart, this county, and a splendid young man. After a trip through the Shenandoah Valley to Washington and Baltimore they are at home in their new bungalow on St. John Street to their friends.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Thomasville.—Our work is moving steadily along. We have a good Sunday school. There is one thing that we want in our church, and that is to get the Sunday school people to stay for church services. Just as soon as Sunday school is dismissed over half of the people leave. Even the children have to go home. They say, "Mother told us to come home, for we are going somewhere." Some people have good excuses for not staying and some just leave because they do not want to stay. Loyalty to our church and its organizations will help it more than we think.

Yesterday being the first Sunday in the month, the regular communion service was held. Mr. Powell, our pastor, delivered a good talk.

All services Sunday night were called off on account of the service held at the school auditorium.

The Ladies' Aid of this church will meet Tuesday night.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—On Sunday, May 26th, memorial services were very appropriately observed in our church. The program began with a very touching song rendered by the choir. Then the Oak Grove quartet sang some beautiful songs. At 1:30 an address was delivered by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge. The message was very impressive and seemed to touch the hearts of the young people as well as the older ones. He plainly taught us to understand just why it is the custom to observe a day in memory of those gone before. The congregation filled the church to its overflowing capacity, and while hundreds were blessed with this opportunity of hearing Brother Ridge there were many outside that didn't have this opportunity because of the lack of room inside. It isn't any wonder that many of us would like to have a bigger and better church.

The address of the afternoon was by Hon. D. Z. Newton, of Shelby.

The cemetery was beautiful with its many flowers, which were brought by friends and loved ones in respect of the dead.

Our Sunday school is climbing some in attendance. We are glad to have Rev. and Mrs. E. O. Peeler again with us.

We have preaching every third Sunday evening at 7:30 and every fourth Sunday morning at 11. We cordially invite everybody who will to come and worship with us during these hours.

LOULA PENDLETON, Reporter.

Mitchells Grove, Guilford Circuit.—We had Mother's Day the second Sunday in May with songs and pageant. It was a very impressive service and much credit is due Mrs. Ruth and Mrs. Ollie Beck for their work in getting it prepared.

We plan to have our Children's Day exercises next Sunday and will have all-day service and dinner on the grounds. We will be pleased to have any of our pastors come and enjoy the day with us. We would especially invite our former pastors and all our friends are cordially invited to come and be with us. It is needless to say we are having good preaching, for you all know it. Our pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton, is preaching the Word, and it is as sharp as a two-edged sword and it takes that to save us poor fallen creatures from sin. We feel grateful to our Heavenly Father for the preached word that feeds our souls. "Break thou the bread of life, dear Lord, to me." "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

We were delighted to attend commencement exercises on Monday morning and thoroughly enjoyed it all, and we all should feel grateful to God for this institution and should support it in more ways than giving our money. They need our prayer as they go forth shaping the young life for eternity. My, why a responsibility is on us! It is more than we realize. We at Mitchells Grove feel honored that one of the young men that graduated this year at High Point College was one of our own S. S. boys, Graydon Ring. He has proved himself to be worthy of all the honor that can be placed upon him as a church worker or student at college.

MARTHA PARSONS.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—On the second Sunday in May the Home Missionary Society held its monthly session. The blessing boxes were distributed to the members. In the absence of the president, Mrs. T. A. Williams presided.

Our attendance at Sunday school yesterday was 118, with $8.59 collection.

At the church hour our pastor preached a splendid sermon to an attentive congregation. We feel proud of our attendance at church. Let's boost some more. I believe it does good.

We are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to our Home-Coming Day the third Sunday in June. On that day we are expecting old friends and lovers of Mt. Lebanon to be with us. A very interesting program has been prepared.

We desire very much to have every one meet our pastor and hear him preach, so he has kindly consented to bring us a message at the 11 o'clock hour.

In the afternoon the program will be made up of short talks from our visiting friends. We are expecting three groups of male singers to be with us, so you will be favored with some fine musical selections, both in the morning and afternoon.

Dinner will be served picnic style, so come on, folks, with your baskets well filled and let's have a real spread.

Home-Coming Day will mark the beginning of our revival services. The pulpit helper will be Rev. T. H. Stimpson, of Virginia, father of our pastor's wife.

It is hoped that these services will be well attended and that you work and pray that much good may be done.

REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our Sunday school attendance yesterday was only 45. The attendance at prayer meeting was good; there were about 100 present. Mrs. B. A. McClimon was appointed to lead the next prayer meeting.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, filled his appointment at this place the fourth Sunday morning and evening. He continues to bring some very helpful messages. We appreciate the good work he is doing.

About $50 has been paid and pledged on our A. C. B.

We are behind some on our pastor's salary. I hope the time will soon come when our people will put on the every-member canvass.

Mrs. Leila Pearson, who underwent an operation some time back, is doing nicely at her home.

Mrs. John Greene has been right sick.

We are hoping that these sick folk will soon be able to worship with us again.

We expect to hold our Children's Day service some time in the near future.

REPORTER.

NOTICE

There will be a district rally held at Gray's Chapel M. P. Church the fifth Sunday in June, beginning at 10:30 a. m.

The churches on this district are urged to attend and help make the day a success.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor Randolph.

—Yadkin farmers have organized a dairy-men's association to promote the cause in this mountain country. Twenty-nine farmers joined at the first meeting.

—The North Carolina farmer who wishes to construct or remodel farm buildings on his place will find that blueprints made from plans designed by the agricultural engineers at State College are helpful and may eliminate many costly mistakes.

—Since the first of January, farmers of Le-noir County have sold 97,471 pounds of poultry for $22,937.25. This is double the tonnage of any previous year.

—Twenty boys of Randolph County will form a Guernsey calf club and have instructed the county agent to buy heifers for them.

—The American Foulbrood disease was found recently in apiaries of Burke County. The beekeepers burned the infected colonies to keep the disease from spreading.

GET FARM FACTS FROM RALEIGH STATION

"This is Station WPTF, Raleigh, North Carolina, broadcasting the weekly agricultural program for the North Carolina State College," is the announcement that will be heard during the next two months on each Wednesday at 12:10, noon. It means that the workers of the experiment station and extension service will continue their weekly broadcasts throughout the summer, bringing late farm facts which may be of interest to landowners and others.

The lectures which have been arranged on this program are as follows:

June 5—Farm Outlook for 1929 and 1930—Dr. G. W. Forster, head department of agricultural economics.

June 12—Parasites of Poultry—H. S. Wilfong, research poultryman.

June 19—Preventing Decay of Fruits and Vegetables in the Home—Dr. R. F. Poole, plant pathologist.

June 26—State Farmers' Convention—James M. Gray, secretary; Farm Women's Short Course, Mrs. Estelle T. Smith, secretary.

July 3—An Excursion to the Peat Bogs of North Carolina—Dr. B. W. Wells, botanist.

July 10—Developing Certified Crop Seeds—W. H. Darst, farm crops.

July 17—Organizing the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association—W. H. Darst, farm crops.

July 24—The Annual 4-H Club Short Course—L. R. Harrill, state club leader.

July 31—Power Farming—A. T. Holman, agricultural engineer.

Those interested in agricultural and rural subjects are invited to tune in on Station WPTF each Wednesday at noon. Dean I. O. Schaub says the comments and suggestions about the program would be appreciated. Persons desiring particular information should write to the college asking that it be broadcast and, as near as possible, the requests will be complied with, says Mr. Schaub.

—Vesuvius is in eruption again, spouting lava in the direction of the unearthed city of Pompeii which it buried two thousand years ago.

—Rev. S. W. Taylor is Doctor of Divinity now, a title worthily bestowed by the Trustees and Faculty of High Point College.

A MAN WITH A LIBERALIZED MIND

My bringing up was orthodox,
The strictest sort at that;
They stuffed me with ancestral creed
And bade me e'er stand pat.

Old-fashioned were my dad and mam;
They practised paying debts,
They lived within their modest means,
Nor once indulged in bets.

They had not lost their faith in God,
They kept the Sabbath day,
They went to church and heard the word,
They bowed their heads to pray.

They thought they saw a real distinction
Between the right and wrong;
They followed out the course of right,
They worshiped God in song.

But I've escaped provincialism,
My mind has been set free.
'Care I what dad and granddad felt?
I do what pleases me.

SIGNAL LIGHTS

Red light says, "Stop."
Green light says, "Go."
Avoid the cop
And do just so.

The ways of life
Are marked with signs
To warn of strife
And save from fines.

If you'd escape
The ways of pain,
Don't say, "Red tape"—
Hold tight the rein.

—J. F. M.

LAUGH IT OFF

If the weather's bleak and cold,
Laugh it off!

If the wind begins to scold,
Laugh it off!

Let it blow away your fears,
Smooth your frowns, dry your tears,
Put your faith in smiles and cheers,
Laugh it off!

If friends say that you look ill,
Laugh it off!

Should they urge a harmless pill,
Laugh it off!

Doctors, druggists and disease
Like to do just as they please;
You can save their costly fees,
Laugh it off!

If life seems to go all wrong,
Laugh it off!

Drown your worry in a song,
Laugh it off!

Do your work with smiling face,
Look ahead and keep the pace,
Be a winner in the race,
Laugh it off!

—Grenville Kleiser.

—Circle No. 3 of the Woman's Auxiliary of Calvary church will give a lawn party Friday night, June 7, at the church. Ice cream, cake, lemonade, candy and popcorn balls will be sold. All members and friends are urged to be present.

A SHOWER—YARBOROUGH

On Tuesday, May 28, 1929, Miss Louise Jackson and her parents invited us to take supper with them. After enjoying the evening meal, the pastor started to leave, but was requested to remain a while. Soon many visitors began gathering in the home. It was quite an unusual surprise as the ladies were not only members of the M. P. Church, but also members of the Baptist and M. E. Churches in the community. A social program then followed, after which refreshments were served. While we were enjoying a social conversation, we were interrupted by a supposed "washwoman," who was Miss Edna Lamb, with a number of bundles. Upon opening these bundles we found many beautiful and useful gifts. We are very grateful to these people for their thoughtfulness and kindness to us. Those present were as follows: Mrs. G. M. Jackson, Miss Louise Jackson, Mrs. C. L. Lamb, Mrs. Edith Jackson, Misses Vera and Gladys Wilson, Mrs. J. E. Bobo, Rev. Mrs. Foster Spear, Mrs. Poole, Miss Edna Lamb, Mrs. Ophelia Bobo, Miss Lena Belle Owens, Miss Sara Haynes, Mrs. Hoke Patton Bennett, Mrs. Barney Haynes, Mrs. P. H. Snoddy, and Miss Margaret Snoddy.

The warmth of our welcome seems to increase as the time passes. May the Lord's richest blessings envelop every one.

MRS. D. D. BROOME.

—Rev. George Miller drove his auto from Cambridge, Ohio, to High Point, bringing Mrs. Miller with him.

—Rev. R. J. Tambllyn preached to the graduating class of Greensboro High School last Sunday night in Grace Church.

—Miss Huldah Dixon was a recent addition to the membership of Calvary Church. She is a student in High Point College.

GREENSBORO, N. C., JUNE 13, 1929

NUMBER 32

"Lo, I Am With You Always"

Mark well my words
And note each one!
Know what I mean
When I am done.

I mean myself
And not another:
You'll still have Me
When not each other.

I say "I am"
And not "will be";
From this time on You'll e'er have Me.

Where'er you go
On land or sea,
What else you miss,
You'll still have Me.

The years will pass,
The centuries, too;
But I'll remain,
To all men true.

Not save a few,
But save a race,
Is goal to which
I've set my face.

Let all men know
Quite everywhere
That where they are Lo! I am there.

Who Is Served in Worship?

We often hear the expression "the service of worship." Precisely what is meant by it? The idea of service implies that there is a servant and also one being served. In worship who is serving and who is being served? We believe the common conception is that in worship man serves and God is served. We judge God by ourselves and imagine that He would be pleased by the same kind of expressions that please us. We may even think of God as being depressed in spirit, as losing His sense of worth, as needing to be cheered up by our telling Him that He is all right. We may even think of Him as susceptible to flattery, as taking pleasure in hearing Himself insincerely praised. We may go down from our places of worship with the feeling that we have put God under great obligation to us by giving some of our time and thought to His needs. What a shocking perversion of the true attitude and relationship to God.

We do not doubt that God finds pleasure in the sincere worship of His intelligent and loyal creatures, but we believe the fact is that in our worship God does infinitely more for us than we can do for Him; He serves us far more than we serve Him. We are more served than He is and He is more servant than we are. In the nature of the case it must be so, for we need Him far more than He needs us. We receive of His fullness in the act of true worship. Worship has been defined as a sense of personal relationship to God. To become conscious of this personal relationship we must think of God as a person, we must believe in Him, we must believe that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. We believe the definition just quoted falls short of the full meaning. There must be not only a sense of personal relationship to God, but there must be the will and sense of submission to God. We must bow before God in full allegiance. When we thus come before God, no doubt He is pleased for our sake, He sees that we have entered His Kingdom and are progressing in the true life, and in response to our acknowledgment of Him He is pleased to grant us every grace and power necessary to our further progress. We go down from the place of worship enriched in spirit. We have done little for God, but He has done great things for us. We have served Him little: He has served us much.

No, God has no need to be assured by us of His excellence and perfection. But we have great need to be helped by Him on the way toward our own improvement and perfection. In worship we have the great privilege to meet God face to face and receive from Him pardon and peace and inspiration for the loving and blessed life into which He would perpetually lead us. When we go to worship, let us go not proudly as though we were benefactors of God, but let us go humbly as helpless and dependent children of God.

As to Printing the Sunday School Lesson

A few of our readers have expressed a wish that we print each week the Sunday school lesson with comments. Our present view of the matter is that this demand should be met by our denominational Sunday school literature which any reader of the HERALD should be able to obtain from his Sunday school. Dr. Crates Johnson is employed by the General Conference to give his whole time to the preparation of Sunday school literature for all grades of scholars. The results of his work are given to the church in quarterlies and monthly journals which should find their way into every home. In view of this provision and in view of lack of space for other interesting and important matter, we are of the opinion stated above. However, we are open to conviction and would welcome valid argument for a change of view. We want the HERALD to render the best and largest service possible.

—We thank Rev. J. E. Pritchard for trying to reach the goal before reporting that it could not be reached. We also thank Mrs. J. W. Crew for her successful effort on Spring Church charge.

WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE FIFTY-NINTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT

Graduating Class of Eighty-Six Men and Women

As usual, the formal farewells, "tearful" perchance—fearful, it might sometimes seem—were mostly out of the way before the real business of Commencement Week began. Yet these are so a part of the program that we needs must mention them. The traditional Junior Play and burlesque Prophecy and Loving cup farewell to seniors by the juniors; the planting of the ivy by the sophomores and their Lantern Chain Farewell by moonlight, and the fond adieus by Sunday School, societies, and clubs, all did give a touch of pathos to these last days in spite of the general spirit of triumph.

Speed and brevity rather than sentiment and sociability being the dominant watchwords of this rather commercial age, even "Commencement Week" has been telescoped into a brief week-end, the whole show ending with the annual alumni meeting and dinner Monday afternoon. But this is not to affirm that anything of vast importance was left out. The Norment speech contest for the freshmen and sophomores was shifted two or three weeks earlier, and was characterized by the usual interest and brilliancy.

Annual Field Day

The Field Day exercise participated in by husky athletes was effectively carried out, and was, of course, a gala affair, with many interesting records. It is pleasing to note, by the way, that this has been the greatest year in the history of athletics at W. M. C. A new day has seemed to dawn, not only in intercollegiate achievements, but in variety of sports and in the high tone and morale of the men participating. Coach Harlow wants things done "square," and doesn't want brawn without brains and a soul. Athletics is not an end in itself, but, rightly conducted, ought to be consistent with high scholarship and increase in manhood and honor.

Annual Meeting of the Board of Trustees

The roll call of the Board of Trustees Saturday morning showed that time had taken heavy toll of its members, and that four eminent workers had answered the eternal roll call above. These noblemen were: Rev. F. T. Little, D.D., President of the Board; Rev. T. O. Crouse, D.D., of the class of 1871 (first graduating class of W. M. C.); Hon. Joshua A. Miles, of the class of 1878; Rev. Frank T. Benson, D.D., of the class of 188-.

The following gentlemen were elected to take their places: Rev. E. C. Makoskey, D.D., President of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church; Rev. J. N. Link, S.T.D., class of 1925, Pastor of the Starr Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore; Rev. R. Y. Nicholson, Pastor of Rhode Island Methodist Protestant Church, Washington, D. C.; Rudolph J. Goerke, Jersey City, New Jersey.

The Rev. J. H. Straughn, D.D., of the class of 1899, was elected President of the Board.

Dr. Ward's report of plans for the enlargement of W. M. C. and the erection of new buildings and the new campaign for four million, two hundred thousand was at his suggestion put into the hands of a special committee of ten for study and constructive methods of execution. The day of a greater Western Maryland seems clearly envisioned, and in the ten-year period from 1929 to 1939 this "dream" is expected to come true.

Baccalaureate Service

It was an ideal morning. The processional—colorful and gay as to the dignified faculty and trustees in trimmings of variegated hues—rather sombre as to the cheerless black of the yet festive seniors—moved with measured step into place to the singing of Luther's famous hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." The invocation was made by Rev. J. B. Rupley, of the Lutheran Church of Westminster, and the college choir, with Miss Jones director, rendered the Te Deum in E Flat by J. H. Cornell. Dr. Stephens then read the Ten Commandments and the choir sang impressively the responses, after which Dr. Edward Hayes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, led in the reading of the lesson from the Psalter, Psalm CXV, and the Apostles' Creed.

Dean Schofield made the usual announcements and Rev. J. N. Garner, of the Reformed Church, read the Scripture lesson. After the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," the masterly sermon of the day was delivered by Dr. Wm. J. Thompson, of the Drew Theological Seminary.

The sermon was a most timely message, uttering a warning against a mechanistic and dehumanized "civilization," with stress on the proper evaluation of scientific knowledge, and the still more important obligation of conserving personal values and spiritual ideals, and the insistence on freedom and responsibility for measuring up to the high possibilities of Christian character and enriched manhood and womanhood in these days of unstable moral equilibrium.

The speaker introduced his address with a reference to the Roman Colosseum combats with their audiences of ten times the population of Westminster, and the words of the listed gladiators to the emperor, "Morituri salutamus"—"We who are about to die salute you." The eighty-six arena entrants of W. M. C. about to receive their diplomas, he said, might similarly address the president of W. M. C., sobered by the thought of the possible victory of some and the possibility of tragic loss—"We who are about to enter life's great arena, in the struggle for spiritual triumph, or defeat, salute you." Living is a most dramatic performance. What you are, you are. You are masters of your fate. Each one has it in him to withstand man or God, or to ally himself with Truth and make every work for good. Men are free, and are themselves determiners of the part they play in life's great drama. If they become what they ought to be, the merit is theirs. If they fail, theirs is the demerit.

Outwardly men are alike as rivers are alike. The content of all rivers is water. Individually men differ as rivers differ—some are long, some short; some broad, some narrow; some deep, some shallow. We all have talents: some are Aristotles, some Caesars, some Edisons, some Fords, some Herbert Hoovers. But we all are, in large part, self-determiners. If I choose myself at the shallowest level or narrowest point, or at the least worth, I must not be angry if later some one lays hands on me, lifts me out of my position, dusts me off, and sets me on the ten-cent bargain counter. If I choose my better self, determine to improve my talents, throw myself earnestly into the work I am best adapted for, I should not be surprised if the same saleslady dusts me off and places me, not on the cheap bargain counter, but in the Metropolitan Museum of Art; and when the art connoisseur asks the price of that creation, the saleslady says, "Sir, that piece is not for sale; it is one of our most precious possessions." At your best you are most valuable. You may be badly placed—an acorn in a flower pot. But your high possibilities are there.

If your patience fail not you, you will find a suitable place for growth. You go forth as a young man to run a race.

We are masters of the part we play. We can choose our vocation, and measure up in it. The spiritual dynamics are available. The locomotive as a mechanism may be perfect, but it needs dynamics to make it go. Man as a machine is wonderful, but man is a spirit and needs spiritual power and control if he gets anywhere. You, ladies and gentlemen, have the same essential qualities and possibilities of a St. Paul, a Wesley, a Luther, a Florence Nightingale. You are, at least, potential saints. Socrates, by an "expert intelligence examiner," was reported to be a thief, a liar, and a libertine. His admirers were astonished. "Correct," said Socrates, "but all my life I have been striving to keep these vices under." To some extent you are all determined by heredity and environment; but you can choose the very best morality and religious life you know, and when you do that you will experience "conversion," gradual or sudden, and have an experience no one can gainsay without forfeiting intelligence. With Paul, you can think on things that are just, true, lovely, and of good report, and with love to God and man, give yourself to your life work. And the Clerk of the Courts of Heaven will issue you a license for your professional Honey-moon, to live happily and successfully ever after.

You live and move and have your being in a world that is more than a thing-world, in spite of mechanists, behaviorists, and their ilk. If I saw in this diploma only the skin it is made of, I would call the cow my sister and the dog my brother and beg them not to be ashamed of me their kin. In the world of the material, the worm, the lion, and man might all lie down together and rot. I abjure the material world as an end, and count it only a schoolmaster to lead me to the invisible. Strange that we should be asked to prove the spiritual when it is as certain as our own existence. The spiritual is more real than the material, but the two co-exist, and it is the spiritual that gives form and beauty. The spiritual and material cannot both be first more than two riders on the same horse can be first. The values of life are realized when the spiritual is made supreme. Life is not just "putting money in thy purse." The law of acquisition is, "Seek first the kingdom spiritual and these other things will be added unto you, for your Heavenly Father knoweth ye have need of them." America, richest country in the world materially, is now in desperate need of putting emphasis on the spiritual. We have many millionaires who are beginning to see that putting wealth first is bartering life for a mess of pottage, and are turning to educational philanthropy, thinking of the comfort, health, and good of mankind, seeking first the Kingdom of God. I bid all who want true riches to become shareholders in Solomon and Solomon Company, that never passes a dividend, and whose profit runs sixty and a hundred fold.

Now upon you as "captains of your fate," choosers of your own destiny, I urge the supremacy of the spiritual. Men are sailing to different ports, but storms of life will arise. From the quiet of the Chesapeake you will soon be off Cape Hatteras amid rough waters. If you reach your port, the Port of True Excellence, you must carefully attend to the setting of your sail! Is your aim as graduates to become popular in the world, to have the biggest store, or finest this or that, or the richest man? Is your ship headed for such a port? Change your course—jump overboard rather than head in there. Aim at the Highest Excellence. Make for the Port of Eternal Civilization per order of the Admiral of the Universe. Use your talents—one, two, five, or ten—to the utmost. Seek personal excellency. Let it be said of you as of the widow and her mites, "She hath done what she could." This is my text and my sermon. The question as to whether she was more natively endowed than others, or less, is irrelevant. Biology shows us some things are determined, some things we cannot change. But there are some things God can do for us—and God can do what man cannot do. Your merit consists in being all you can be with the resources of Heaven open to you—in being what you ought to be. Your demerit is in being less than you ought to be. Your orders are to attain that excellency that calls for education of the mental powers to their full capacity. This is seeking for and bringing in the Kingdom of God and His righteousness on earth. If you are a self-seeker, you may gain some governmental position, but you will not attain excellency. Employers must give more of their time to their employes and employes more conscientiously of their time to the service of their employers. Paradoxical it may seem, but this excellency of heart and mind and will is the only excellency upon which God will pronounce, "Well done."

The home is in danger. What is the remedy? Renewed emphasis on personal excellence of the individual.

Business is unstable. In the buzzing industrial confusion, where is the way to peace? To produce a citizenry of individual excellence.

The church is imperilled. The need? Not more paralleling of the movies, or emulating Rotarians, but making the House of the Lord a house of prayer—again the Pauline vision of things invisible—not so much "looking at the things which are seen—and temporal only." The need is for more men and women who "experience God," and who in such excellency of soul can give, through Him, who is the Light of the world, the light and leadership it now so much needs.

Fifty-Ninth Commencement Day

Pleasant sunshine and a cool breeze continued the ideal weather, and again trustees, faculty, students, and visiting dignitaries marched in processional to Alumni Hall to the music of Bohl's orchestra.

Rev. E. C. Makosky, D.D., President of the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, made the opening prayer. After the orchestral number, "Ave Maria," President Ward introduced the speaker of the day, Hon. Roger J. Whiteford, Esq., of Washington, D. C., of the class of 1906, eminent in the profession of law.

Mr. Whiteford, in reminiscent mood—facetious now, then sober, persuasive, hortatory and commanding in the eloquence of stern fact and emergent need—presented a great message. In purport and spiritual significance it was in perfect concord with the great message of Dr. Thompson of the day before. But it came from a layman, a trained expert in legal and governmental matters, likewise gifted with the vision of the prophet, and because it was the same truth from another angle was all the more impressive.

"Commencement Day," he said, "in a sense is a holiday, in which one is freed from the duties of college life. It is an Independence Day, with release from the rules of the institution. It is a Thanksgiving Day. Out of the approximately 12,000 who entered public school and finished eighth grade, you are the eighty-six still surviving without intellectual accident, crippling, or fatality. That is something to be thankful for. It is also a New Year's Day, in which you start a new year and a new life as an active and useful member of society. As graduates of this institution you receive a diploma. I do not ask you how far you have gone in this or that, but the big question is, 'Are you ready to go on?' Not now what is past, but are you ready to take your place and do your work in the future? Some think education is scanning many books, saying what somebody else says, or crowding the mind with multitudinous facts. But I say, 'Reflection is the mother of genius.' I don't care how many facts you pack in memory, but do you know what use to make of the facts you have? No college can fill its place as an educational institution if it only turns out marketable products. Education is more than something to sell. It involves inner capacity, worth, appreciation of the real values of life. To live is not just to 'sell your ability.' Have the capacity and you will find a place to work. From the standpoint of a lawyer I want to discuss life in the terms of legal documents. And first, life as a Lease. Under a lease you have a right to use property for term, paying a reasonable consideration therefor, and are under the necessity of returning that property at some specified time.

When you entered this institution four years ago, you agreed to study, and to endeavor seriously to meet the conditions warranting the conferring of a diploma. Today you receive this diploma, a sealed instrument conveying to you position and a portion of the wealth and culture of the educated man as a life estate. This diploma puts this great gift into your hands as a life trust. The question is, is there sufficient worth in you, sufficient virtue, industry and determination, to justify the belief that this confidence is not misplaced. Today, we cannot say, but the future will reveal the truth. I congratulate you on being the recipients of so great an estate. This is an extraordinary day. It is not an age of philosophy or of deep religious insight. It has not produced a Phidias, a Plato, a Confucius or a Christ. But it is an age of material invention and discovery—an age of surpluses, an excess and surplus of many things. Never in history a nation with the excess of wealth we have today. Dreams of the past never conceived people so rich. We have an excess of power, a surplus of power. Twenty-two million automobiles—power, and problems! We have with it all a surplus of time. Instead of working fourteen or sixteen hours a day, we have eight hours or less five and a half days a week. The result is the most dangerous surplus the world ever had! What are we doing with it? Frittering it away in dangerous amusements, or putting it into education, travel, and the worth-while things of life? As beneficiaries you are under obligations. You owe rent for the estate. In the parable in Matthew of the wicked husbandmen, you have the story of the ingrates and murderers who would not acknowledge the obligation but put to death the servants and their Master's Son. Unwilling to pay the rent! The commandment is not simply to rest one day in seven, but to labor faithfully, honestly, six days. I'm tired of these lazy fellows who say the world owes them a living, and won't work! Unless you are willing to toil, having received your diploma, or "certificate of entrance into polite society," as Hubbard says, you become a leech, not a producer. Stock market gambling is a peril to our nation, robbing individuals of manhood, character, and initiative. To work, to be willing to begin at the bottom, to take the humble positions in life may lead to the most renowned successes.

The biggest gift, and the most talked of things in Scripture, the finest things in life, are the widow's gift of two mites, or the giving of a cup of cold water, or the ministering to those in need in the name of Love. My young friends, you have also an obligation to pay rent to these good fathers and mothers, some of them seated out there, who have made it possible for you to be here today. As the French people placed a perpetual flame at the grave of the unknown soldier to keep alive the grateful memory of those who gave themselves for their country, shall there not be a perpetual flame, an undying spirit of loving service to keep alive forever the home and that second sacred trinity of the Father, the Mother and the Child?

I wish to mention another obligation—that is the obligation that the college-trained student owes to his government and the support of its laws. If we call that man a coward who runs from the battlefield, what term is strong enough to designate the despicableness of the man or woman who will not support his or her government? Here you owe loyalty—an unquestioned obligation. In spite of every effort only thirty-eight million votes were cast at the last presidential election. It is the first duty of the college graduate to find the polling booth in his own precinct and use his influence for the health and welfare and progress of his fellow-countrymen. We have problems, yes; and they must be solved by the best minds giving themselves to the service of their country. No one can dare to shirk his responsibility of supporting his government, and engaging in honest political activity.

Here is your individual freedom and responsibility. There is an indefinable something that will make some succeed while others fail. It is the way you respond—the way you will to respond. I saw from the shore on Lake Ontario with the selfsame wind blowing, two boats—one going east, one going west. "'Tis the set of the sail, not the gale, that bids them go where they go." "'Tis the set of the soul that determines the goal, and not the storm or the strife."

Gentlemen, meet your obligations.

COMMENCEMENT AT WESTMINSTER COLLEGE

"The best in years." That was the remark heard repeatedly during the commencement exercises recently held at Westminster College in Tehuacana, Texas. In spite of torrential rains during the preceding weeks, sunny skies and balmy weather made the occasion one of comfort and delight. Not in many years have such crowds attended these annual exercises. This was due partly no doubt to the large number of graduates. In fact, it was the largest class, there being thirty members, that Westminster College has ever graduated. It was due also to the increasingly favorable standing which the college has attained in recent years.

The baccalaureate sermon was given on Sunday morning by Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D., president of the General Conference, his theme being "The Supreme Court of Moral Appeal." The chapel was crowded to the doors and the audience listened intently to Dr. Broomfield's masterly and courageous discourse. Other speakers during the week were President J. A. Richardson, of the Colorado-Texas Conference, who delivered the alumni sermon on Sunday evening; Rev. J. W. Shell, Beaver Falls, Pa., who gave the commencement address; and the writer, who spoke at the Investiture ceremony on Friday evening at the beginning of the week's exercises.

The progress which has been made at Westminster College during the last three years is extraordinary. The student enrollment for the academic year has increased from 73 to 162; the attitude of the surrounding communities has been changed from contempt to respect; its accrediting is on the most solid foundation known for years; there is a strong faculty, and the work being done is of a high order. During the spring the campus has been greatly beautified, presenting in fact the finest appearance we have ever known.

The summer school opens on June 10 and the fall term September 23. The prospects for increased enrollments are very gratifying.

Westminster College is facing a serious situation, however, due to insufficient support. It ministers largely to young people of very moderate means so that it is impossible for her to establish a high tuition rate. At the close of this year the college was nearly $5,000 behind on teachers' salaries and with practically nothing in sight with which to meet these obligations. Changes involving extreme personal sacrifices have been made in order that the school might be conducted another year more nearly within the range of its normal income. The members of the faculty are underpaid and in some cases are making a heroic sacrifice that this school might be maintained.

Recently proposals to move the school to Corsicana and Mexia have been given serious consideration. Corsicana offered the church $100,000 and a very choice location composed of fifty acres. Mexia has the matter under consideration for a few days. If satisfactory arrangements cannot be made with these communities the college will be continued at Tehuacana.

WHITE-COLLAR JOBS

More and more, as the days go by, there is being brought to the attention of the people of the United States the great mistake we are making in over-educating and under-training our young people, in fitting them for the duties of life. It seems to the writer that all of us, as parents, are too anxious to find easy jobs for our sons and daughters where they may be able to wear good clothes and not soil their hands. We are too prone to look upon a pair of overalls and a worker's soiled appearance as a badge of inferiority or disgrace.

We have in our endowed and state-supported colleges and universities today more than a million students fitting themselves for a college degree—under the mistaken idea that when they finally graduate they will not have to do any real manual work—the world will be waiting for them, and the future one easy road to success and competence. Yet, if they would pause for a moment and analyze the situation, it would readily be seen that the world cannot absorb more than 10 per cent of these graduates. "Oh! the years they waste, and the tears they waste," and yet only 10 out of a hundred can even hope to arrive; to finding even an opening in the professions whereby they may serve and be served. Four years in grammar school, four years in high school, and four years in college—twelve years of study; and then what?

In the meanwhile, the great industries of the country are crying for young blood in the skilled trades. New industries are springing up, calling for special training for those whom they must employ. But to serve in these industries one must have technical training—yet most students who attend technical schools are unwilling to spend one-fourth the time or money that is necessary to "go through college." They are impatient, and many of them seem to consider they are doing some one a favor if they do attend a vocational school and master the rudiments of some trade.

We must turn on the light. We must talk not only of the dignity of honest labor, but its use as an end to real achievement. The press of the country is awakening to these stubborn facts, for they are all true. In a recent editorial in the Spartanburg, S. C., Sunday Herald, we found the following editorial, which we are reproducing in full. The caption was, "They Want White-Collar Jobs."

"Dr. Edward L. Thorndyke, of Teachers' College, New York, speaking before the department of vocational guidance of the National Council of Jewish Women recently, said, 'We find in our research work that young people are opposed to factory work. They all want white-collar jobs.' He was discussing the value of frankly telling young men and women just what their abilities and equipment fit them for in the way of occupation. The difficulty arises so often that they are unwilling to devote themselves to jobs they can do well, because they want 'nice jobs' that 'pay more.'

"This may be Dr. Thorndyke's conclusion after much research, as he says, but it is in reality an old story. It surely required no recondite learning and laborious research to find out that too many young men and women are impatiently desirous of good pay 'right now' without waiting to learn skill and acquire efficiency, or again to slip comfortably into nice respectable 'positions,' where hands are not soiled and one may be properly dressed.

"Meanwhile, this is nothing new, nothing peculiar to the young people of our day. One reason why bricklayers, mechanics and furnace-firers get better wages than whole classes of white-collar workers is because too many seek the latter sort of jobs rather than the former. Youth has lots to learn, and one hard lesson is that success is not won by soft and easy ways."—Weekly Bulletin.

BY PRAYER

It is said that John Wesley spent two hours of each day in prayer, and on many days more than this. He began to pray at four o'clock in the morning. One of his associates said of him, "He thought prayer to be more his business than anything else, and I have seen him come from his place of prayer with his face shining."

Martin Luther, the monk who so stirred the world, said: "If I fail to spend two hours in prayer in the morning, the devil gets the victory through the day." The saintly Francis Ashbury was in the habit of rising at four a. m. and spending two hours in praying and meditating in the Word. The godly Robert M. McCheyne spent two hours in the early morning and one hour after tea in prayer. Adoniram Judson could pray for hours at a time, and who can doubt that much of the success that the Gospel has had in Burma has been due to the earnest petitions that he sent up to heaven. David Livingstone knew how to pray and literally died upon his knees.

These men prayed, God answered, and things were brought to pass. Is not prayer, mighty prayer, our hope in these distressful and barren times on which we are fallen? Will not Jehovah still answer by fire? We can see no other help for Church or nation in these perilous days than the strong arm of Jehovah, and that arm is moved by prayer. Therefore, "to your tents, O Israel."—Selected.

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

PITTSBURGH MEETING

The annual meeting of the Board of Publication and the Woman's Missionary Convention met in Pittsburgh May 8, 1929. It was a record-breaking meeting in many respects. All things considered, the year's work showed up well in the interest of the new legislation by the last session of the General Conference. Our loyal women overwhelmingly voted in favor of the General Conference program, especially as pertaining to our missionary work, and have placed themselves squarely behind all the general interests of the church. They also set as their own goal for the present year the sum of at least $100,000. For the past three weeks we have been traveling over different sections of the church and are more than delighted with the spirit of interest and enthusiasm being manifest by the women of the church. From every quarter we have the expressed purpose of organizing without delay a women's auxiliary in all the churches. Many have already organized and are at work under the new regime. We shall pray and work for great success in our missionary cause. If all Methodist Protestants, both men and women, will do this the year will result in the largest success of any year in the history of our missionary work. We believe the church and everybody in it is willing to do this. For any service we can render, feel perfectly free to call on us. G. W. H.

FURTHER STEPS IN THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK

Questions have been coming to me concerning the next steps to be taken in the organization of the Woman's Missionary work of our church, and although I have not been directed to make a statement in the papers, it is decidedly advisable that the Branches and Auxiliaries should not adopt any resolutions of any kind, but that the president of the conference or some other person should call a general meeting of all the women of the churches of the conference without reference to the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. and adopt the constitution and by-laws proposed by the Board of Missions and elect the officers and committees for which it provides. Then this new Branch will be ready to proceed with its work.

In the local churches the W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S. Auxiliaries should not adopt any resolutions of any kind, but the pastor should call a general meeting of all the women of the church and without any reference to the W. F. M. S., the W. H. M. S. or their merger, adopt the constitution and by-laws proposed by the Board of Missions, elect the officers and committees which it requires and proceed with their work.

CHILDREN'S DAY

Our schools and churches are ordering freely Children's Day supplies, and indeed some schools have already held their Children's Day service. The majority of them will observe the same next Sunday, June 9th. Others will observe the day later on. We are anxious that every school in the denomination shall observe Children's Day and as far as possible use our denominational supplies. They are better than any other for Methodist Protestant schools and churches. Our foreign missionary cause needs at once $50,000. We sincerely hope this amount will be realized from Children's Day offerings. The privilege of giving to missions is not to be confined to the school but to the entire church membership. Will pastors kindly see to it that their congregations have an opportunity to make an offering to missions in behalf of the children of the church? G. W. H.

PAUL'S PASSION

The ruling passion of Paul's life was to know Christ. He wanted the saints at Philippi to know that he was not disturbed about this condition in prison. He has learned in whatsoever state he was therewith to be content. But to these same saints he expressed one deep desire, one passionate longing, and that is to know Christ. When he surrendered to Christ he gave up everything men thought worth having—material prospects, personal reputation—all had been sacrificed. He explains why he does it: "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord . . . that I may know Him and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings." He prayed for the Ephesian Christians, that "ye may know what is the hope of his calling and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints." In another prayer in this same letter to the Ephesians he prays that they "may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge."

Paul's passionate aim was to be more and more one with Christ, and to reach this he knew no better way than to cherish a deepening communion with Christ.

We are apt to sacrifice communion with Christ for service for Christ. The best preparation for service is communion with our Lord. "Tarry till ye be endued with power." I have never forgotten the words of the venerable and saintly John Monroe of old Spring Hill. When a young preacher I spent the night at his home. I was to make an early start next morning, for the distance was long—no good roads nor automobiles. We were all up early and I was ready to start. The good man said, "Let us have a prayer. Prayer never hinders a journey."

Paul's hidden life in Christ gave him a sympathetic, active life with other lives. It also gave him great boldness in the faith. He could say, "I know whom I have believed." His deepening insight into the work of Christ gave him the widening sympathy for humanity. As he discovered more and more the fullness of supply of divine grace he was more and more eager to tell all around the merit and measure of it.

His increasing knowledge of Christ was that which gave him his irrepressible joy. The Christ of God was ever new to Paul. He is like an explorer who has landed on a new continent; a little way inward he has explored the rich, strange lands; but beyond, in endless reaches, stretches a new world to be explored and possessed. And I suppose that Paul and other "spirits of just men made perfect" are still exploring "the unsearchable riches of Christ."

"My one desire to be this,
Thy only love to know,
Freely to yield all other bliss
All other good below."

—Rufus Ford, in Biblical Recorder.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Denton

June 9, Sunday.—Despite the rain and muddy roads, this was a good day for us. The morning and afternoon were given to Denton charge. At 11 a. m. the appointment was at Canaan church. We found evidences of active life here in repairs that are being made on the church building. For a number of years this was a union church. But just recently our people bought the equity of the other denominations concerned, and now we hold full title to the property. The building has been moved a short distance from its old location, and four well-planned Sunday school rooms added; part of the cost remains unpaid. The rooms are completed, and were opened for use on this day. Further improvements are to be made by painting the church inside and out.

The afternoon appointment was at Piney Grove. Here, too, the spirit of church improvement was alive. The exterior and interior of the building have been newly painted. We found the Sunday school in progress at each church, and despite unfavorable weather there was a gratifying attendance at the Sunday school and the preaching at each place. We commend each church for the zeal that has prompted them to improve their church buildings, and likewise for their interest and support of other phases of church activity. Bro. Bingham, their zealous pastor, is keenly alive to all that concerns the progress of his charge, and we were glad to hear commendatory things said of him by his people. He is now engaged in a Vacation Bible school at the Denton church. A recent revival held in this church resulted in a number of accessions. We believe that the year will be one of progress for this charge.

Albemarle

The day's work was closed in a night service with this church. After having supper with Bro. Bingham and his family at Denton, we drove over to Albemarle, arriving there in good time for the service. Automobiles and good roads have brought us all a great deal closer together, geographically, than we were in the days of our fathers. We found an attentive, though not a large, congregation awaiting us, and it was a pleasure to preach and worship with them. Things that at times seem to be against us are the very things that bring to us the best blessings. This seems to be true of our Albemarle people. The loss of their church two years ago by fire appears to be great gain for them. They now have the third best church in our conference, and one that is a credit to the entire denomination. They have built well, not only in the construction of their building, but in their location. The church is located in a splendid residential section on West Main Street, and at the junction of the Charlotte-Concord highway. Their building is of red brick structure and is 60 by 108 feet. It is imposing, commodious, and splendidly designed for all the purposes of a progressive and growing church. A large basement under the entire building provides a Sunday school assembly room, kitchen, dining room, heating plant and coal room. On the second story there is a church parlor, two large Sunday school rooms, and a pastor's study. Six well appointed Sunday school rooms and an ample hallway are on the third floor. The auditorium has a gallery with a seating capacity of about one hundred and twenty-five. The seating capacity of the main auditorium is perhaps three hundred. The usual contract price for such a building would be in the neighborhood of $50,000, though it has been built for considerably less than that, owing to economy in construction, and some advantage that they had in buying material. The membership has been loyal and liberal to the point of sacrifice. A financing plan is now being completed by which they will finally liquidate their indebtedness. In the meantime, we trust that the Board of Missions may be able to give them some help. It would seem to us a timely and profitable investment for the board. Bro. Anderson, the pastor, is popular with his people, and is laboring with much zeal for the success of the work committed to his care. He and his people have just cause to rejoice in the success that is attending their labors. A revival has just been held in this church also, resulting in several conversions and accessions. We believe that Albemarle has a growing future.

We greatly enjoyed the day with these two charges, and they have our grateful thanks for their concern for our care and comfort.

Once More

June is Children's Day month, and Dr. Haddaway is ready to supply every church in the conference with programs for this day. We want this to be our banner Children's Day year, and we can make it so if every church will fall in line. The Board of Missions needs the offering, and the church will be blessed by the program. We urge once more that every church observe Children's Day.

Report of Conference Treasurer

In the HERALD of last week Dr. Brown, Treasurer, gives a full report of all money received during the conference year from November 1 to April 30. An analysis of the report reveals that of our 90 charges, 81 have budget credits. The A. C. B. has received $925.94; G. C. B., $5,821.22; College, $4,492.76; G. G. D., $402.91; Superannuates, $19.62. Total for all purposes, $11,662.45. This total is slightly more than one-third of the amount received last year for all purposes, not including the G. G. That is to say, if our receipts this year equal what they did last year for regular church causes, we must raise twice as much during the last half of the year as we did during the first half. Of the amount paid to date on the G. C. B., the W. F. M. S. is credited with $3,229.64; the W. H. M. S. with $549.52. This leaves from other sources $2,042.06.

The comparison of this report with the corresponding report of last year is interesting. The report last year was made June 7, thus covering five weeks more of time than the report of this year. The A. C. B. receipts last year for this period were $2,124.19, or $1,198.25 in excess of the receipts for this purpose for the first half of this year. For this period the G. C. B. received last year $7,955.55, which is $2,134.33 more than was received for the same period this year. However, the receipts for this budget for the first half of last year, apart from missionary society credits, was slightly more than they have been this year. The W. H. M. S. was credited last year with $2,899.13, and for the same period this year with but $549.52. This explains the big excess in receipts for the G. C. B. during the first half of last year over the first half of this year. The college receipts this year are far in advance of what they were last year. The difference in favor of the first half of this year is $2,673.17. The total amount received last year up to June 7 for all purposes, not including G. G., was $11,909.33. This year, up to April 30, the total, as given above, is $11,662.45, a difference in favor of last year of $246.88. However, the receipts up to June 7, not included in Dr. Brown's report, will change this balance. The receipts for that time, as given by Dr. Brown through his weekly reports, amount to $1,567.46. This leaves a difference in favor of the first half of this year of $1,320.58. If we can hold this gain, and have our usual collections during the latter half of the year, we should run ahead of last year in our total receipts, despite the money depression.

Complaint Against Pastors

"He presses the budgets and talks money too much." This is the complaint that we sometimes hear against pastors. Well, perhaps he does press the money needs of the Kingdom, and does it more than he likes to do. That is, he would be glad if these needs could be met without his being under the necessity of bringing them to the attention of the people. The pastor is not a money gatherer; preaching is his business, and he would be glad to be relieved of the necessity of raising budgets, that he might give his full time to his ministry. But we do not have an ideal way of financing the church, and until we do the pastor must present the budgets, and not only present them, but press them for collections. Raising money is not the first business of the church, but it is a part of the church's business. The Kingdom can't be extended without it. The faithful pastor feels, therefore, that he must lay upon the hearts of the people a sense of their financial obligations to God, and their privilege and duty to extend His Kingdom through the means which He has intrusted to them. God requires it of him, and so does the conference. Praise, and not criticism, is what such a pastor deserves.

STANDARDS OF LIVING VS. GIVING

We need to think of giving, not in terms of obligation or duty, nor yet in terms of something that may be left to undisciplined inclination, but as a privilege of family life. As children of the Father, as followers of Christ who shared completely His Father's purpose, ours is the privilege of partnership. Our Father has placed the material resources of the world in the hands of His children. He has counted on our love and loyalty to use them in keeping with his purpose for the world. And that purpose is handicapped in whatever measure we use these resources for our selfish pleasure without regard to the needs of his other children.

We are the big brothers and sisters of the world—not just of other nations, but of the handicapped everywhere. Most of us were brought up in Christian homes, or at least under the influence of the church. Most of us have had a chance at a fair education. We have been brought up in surroundings in which decency and honor and right were taken for granted. We have had every opportunity to achieve for ourselves the rich and abundant life that our Father wants every child of His to have.

But there are a multitude of people in the world today who are younger than we are—younger spiritually, morally, socially, economically; people who have never had a fair chance to learn of decency and honor and right; people who have had no real opportunity to know of a Father who wants for his children the best. Handicapped by poverty, by ignorance, by disease, by unwholesome surroundings, these younger brothers and sisters of ours are growing up without a chance. They will get this chance only as those of us who are more privileged share with them in money, love and service.

All these underprivileged people in the world could have a chance if only those of us who call ourselves Christians cared enough. We do anything we want to do in the material realm. We laugh at those who say a thing cannot be done. We build impossible bridges, we dig impossible canals, we put up impossible skyscrapers, and nobody thinks anything of it. What we need is some such daring and consecration in the spiritual realm. The infinite spiritual resources of God are as much at our disposal as are the material resources of the world, if only we cared enough to pay the price of using them. It isn't a lack of means. Every student of the times recognizes that the United States is in peril from excessive wealth. The burden of the world's gold is upon us in the possession of three hundred and thirty billions of the wealth of the world—50 per cent greater than the combined wealth of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

It is from a report of the secretary of the treasury that we find it estimated that in 1919 the people of the United States spent twenty-two billion dollars on tobacco, candy, cosmetics, joy-riding, boxing, and other luxuries and non-essentials. The total raised by American churches of all denominations for that year was less than a half-billion dollars.

This money is not by any means all spent by the wealthy. We are in an era of general prosperity. The trouble is that our standard of living has quite run away with our standard of giving.—From World Friendship, by Brown.

We have for quite a while heard of self-expression as the solution of life. Away with self-restraint, self-command and self-denial and give to both children and grown-ups the opportunity for self-expression. But Doane Robinson with open palm slaps self-expression square in the face when he says:

"The wild asses of the desert
And the chattering hyenas
Have self-expression
In full measure
And they remain
Asses and hyenas
While man through self-denial
Has attained some semblance
Of the divine."

OUR STORY PAGE

THE MOON AND THE WIND

(A story told to little Indian children when they become discouraged.)

One day when the sun was setting, the North Wind blew hard, taking delight in making the clouds go scurrying by. It was as if they were afraid of the North Wind and he was pleased, for when he blew everything must go before him. Soon the Moon peeked up over the horizon and smiled at the earth people.

"What!" exclaimed the North Wind. "Do you defy me! Huh! I'll blow you right out of the sky!"

And the North Wind blew, harder and harder, expecting to see the Moon hurry down below the horizon just as the clouds had done to escape the force of his breath. But the Moon still smiled and kept right on shining for the earth people to see.

Harder and harder blew the North Wind until he created a cyclone that swept the fields, uprooted trees and caused the Indians to be afraid that their own wigwams would be carried away. But still the Moon shone and smiled in the sky. She did not hurry, and when she was ready she, too, dipped below the western horizon, a good-night smile on her face.

The North Wind, who was very conceited, thought that he had finally succeeded in driving the Moon away and he calmed down and went to sleep.

"There!" he exclaimed to the Earth. "You see, nothing can withstand my breath and you will never see the Moon again."

But the next evening the Moon came again and peeked over the horizon of the east, smiling as she did the night before. The North Wind awoke and was surprised when he found the light of the Moon shining in his eyes. He was very angry, and exclaimed:

"This time there will be no mistake. I shall blow you away in a very little while!" He roared as he sent the full force of his breath into the sky.

The trees shook and the earth trembled but still the Moon smiled and went on her journey across the sky. The North Wind blew harder and harder until the force of his blowing drew the leaves and branches into the air and whirled them around. No matter how hard he blew, the North Wind could not disturb the Moon, and she still smiled happily and did not retire until she had accomplished her journey across the sky.

For three nights the North Wind tried to drive the Moon away from the sky, but she always smiled and was not afraid.

Then the warm West Wind came and drove the North Wind back to his cave in the far North, for he loved the Moon and did not wish to have her disturbed.

After that, when the West Wind was visiting other places on the earth, the North Wind would steal forth from his cave and try to blow the Moon away, but she always smiled, and he never succeeded. You may see her today, just as she was then, still making her way across the sky and smiling down to the earth people.

And so, when one gets discouraged, he must think of the Moon and smile.—Beatrice M. Parker in Christian Herald.

A STRANGE MUSICIAN

Donald had the measles, and, although he was fast getting well, the doctor said that he must stay in his room for a few days more. His friends, wishing to give him a little amusement, had hunted up an old fish globe and put into it some minnows from a nearby pond.

One evening at sunset as Donald lay propped up in bed watching the minnows he noticed that that they seemed to be chasing each other round and round. They looked like silver shihing in the last rays of the setting sun.

Then all at once Donald noticed something on the top of the water that he had not seen before. A small oval-shaped bug was skimming over the surface, using his strong hind legs like two little oars.

"What a funny bug!" said Donald. "It looks exactly like a little rowboat. I suppose it must have been on the water plants all the time, and I just didn't happen to see it before."

Donald watched the water bug for a long time. He thought it would never tire of rowing its funny little self about; but at last it stopped, climbed up the stem of one of the water plants and out on a leaf. For a while it sat there quietly, then it began to scratch its tiny beak-like nose with its two forefeet.

Donald wanted to laugh at the funny bug whose nose seemed to itch, but he smothered his giggles in the pillow for fear of frightening the bug away.

And then the very queerest thing happened. Donald began to hear a strange sound, faint at first, then louder. He was so astonished that his mouth dropped open. He looked at the little bug more closely, looked again and listened with straining ears. Such a strange thing couldn't be, he thought. Yet it was. The funny little water bug was playing a funny little tune with its funny little paws on its funny little snout.

"Well!" gasped Donald.

"Splash!" went the little bug down into the water.

Then Donald burst into such hearty laughter that his father and mother came running to see what it was all about.

"Surely you were dreaming," they said.

"But there's the very bug," insisted Donald.

"It's called a water boatman," they said, "but as to the music"—

"They couldn't have given it a better name," said Donald.

"Now please get me the big nature book, so I can find out whether he can play a tune on his nose."

And the big nature book proved to everybody's astonishment that the little boy had not been dreaming.

When he was quite well again, Donald took his fish and the little water boatman that was such a strange musician back to their home pond, for he knew that they would be happier there than anywhere else.—Mary Ritchie Ward, in Youth's Companion.

WORK IN THE SOUTHWEST

We were recently in the great southwest looking over the work of our Home Missionary Department. This is a great field for service. Our greatest need is men of vision and leadership and financial support. Our success in this and the missionary cause in general is limited only by the financial revenues and real leadership in the various fields. We trust that our church is abundantly able to do so and will furnish both of these requirements more largely in the coming year than heretofore.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Elizabeth Hanner

President C. E. Society, High Point College
JUNE 16: "THE PRICE OF VOLUNTARY CHRISTIAN SERVICE"

Luke 9:57-62

To the Leader

Try to make this one of the meetings that really count by giving it special preparation. Ask several of the prominent members of your church to be present and to talk briefly on "What Voluntary Service Costs Me." Choose one of your most earnest young people to lead this meeting and urge all the members to be present. Be sure to choose hymns appropriate to the topic.

Outline for Leader

Even though the adage be old it is still true: "We can't get something for nothing." We do not always pay, ourselves, for what we get but some one will pay, sooner or later. This time we are to discuss voluntary service.

One may define voluntary service as that which is given to some one or to some cause without cost to the recipient but at the sole expense of the giver. The greater part of the work of the church and other major religious organizations is done through this sort of service.

We will, in some way, have to pay a price for voluntary service but in the end we will be repaid. Our duty may conflict with many things—are we willing to pay the price? In answering the call of Christ to any service there is a price to pay, but the true Christian knows that he receives more than he is able to give.

Topics for Talks

1. Name some kinds of voluntary service in the church.
2. Discuss the necessity of voluntary service.
3. Name three characteristics of voluntary service.
4. Service that is especially needed.
5. Touch the point where voluntary service is hardest.
6. State youth's claim to service.

Choice Prose

He who fears criticism is hopeless. Only those who do things are ever criticized. The idler is lost sight of in the march of events, but the doer is watched—and criticized.

Take your place on life's stage and play your part to the end; stand for that which is good; be a doer, not a drone.

Keep the critics busy.—Ex.

Poetry

"Let us then be up and doing
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

BE STRONG

(Maltbie Davenport Babcock)

Be strong!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift:

We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle—face it: 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!

Say not, "The days are evil. Who's to blame?"
And fold the hands and acquiesce—oh shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long:
Faint not—fight on! Tomorrow comes the song.

BRANCH MEETING

A called Branch meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies was held at High Point College Tuesday, June 4, with a large number in attendance. Short business sessions of both the Home and Foreign Societies were held in the morning, when the delegates to Board meeting in Pittsburgh, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Mrs. H. W. Maier, and Mrs. E. L. Ballard gave reports of this most interesting meeting.

After a picnic lunch in the dining room of the College the branches entered into joint session and took up the work of organizing the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Missionary work of the Methodist Protestant Church.

It was with sincere regret that the women of our church in North Carolina saw Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. George R. Brown retire from their offices as presidents of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies respectively, but we were consoled later in the day when the nominating committee named Mrs. Hammer as president of the new organization and Mrs. Brown as corresponding secretary and they were elected to these positions. These two women have proven themselves to be able leaders in the missionary work of our church and we bespeak for them in their new tasks the same loyal co-operation the women of North Carolina have heretofore shown them as presidents of the two branches. We also give up with regret the very splendid and efficient services of Mrs. M. P. Harrell, corresponding secretary of the Foreign branch, and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, treasurer of the Home branch. They also have proven themselves capable. We thank them for their help in the work, and pray that God may give them many more years of service as leaders in our missionary work.

The officers elected are as follows:

President, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, N. C.

First vice-president, Mrs. R. M. Andrews, High Point, N. C.

Second vice-president, Mrs. F. R. Harris, Henderson, N. C.

Recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, Greensboro, N. C.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. R. Brown, Reidsville, N. C.

Treasurer, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Greensboro, N. C.

Auditor, Miss Esther Ross, Asheboro, N. C.
Record agent, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Asheboro, N. C.

District chairman, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Greensboro, N. C.

State editor, Miss Mary C. McCulloch, Greensboro, S. C.

Departmental secretaries: Missionary Education, Mrs. E. L. Ballard, High Point, N. C.; Scholarships and Workers, Mrs. H. G. Paschal, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Spiritual Life, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane, N. C.; Thank-Offering, Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, Greensboro, N. C.; Christian Education, Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville, N. C.; Literature, Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C.; Young People's Work, Mrs. T. L. Speas, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Temperance, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, Burlington, N. C.; Benevolences, Dr. Harris Glascock, Greensboro, N. C.; Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members, Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson, N. C.; High Point College Student Loan Fund, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point, N. C.; Bethel Home, Mrs. F. W. Paschall, Asheville, N. C.

Standing Finance Committee, Mrs. J. H. Allen, chairman; Miss Daisy Cox, Miss Velma McCulloch.

In order that the fall Thank-Offering service might not conflict with the proclamation of the Governor of the State of North Carolina at Thanksgiving, when a day's wages is requested of every one for the orphans of the state, auxiliaries are urged to hold in September the Thank-Offering service heretofore held in November.

The Constitution, as outlined by the Board of Missions, was adopted by motion.

Mrs. Bates read a letter from Mr. Altman, a bed patient at our Bethel Home in Weaverville, in which he thanked Mrs. Bates and the women of the branch for the flowers sent to him by Mr. Casto from our branch meeting in Asheboro. Money for this purpose was given Mr. Casto and he purchased the flowers.

It was decided to hold the next executive committee meeting at Weaverville some time during August. This will afford the members an opportunity of visiting Bethel Home again and meeting all the patients old and new.

District chairmen are urged to attend the executive committee meetings, and it is hoped that a large number may be able to do so in the future. They are considered members of the executive committee.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. W. H. Neese.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD.

—An interesting sketch of the career of the Odell Hardware Company appeared in last Sunday's Daily News. The three men who now manage the affairs of the company—Messrs. Ireland, Brooks and Wills—have been associated for over 40 years, a long time for a business partnership. They supplement each other and form a stable tripod. Their business has grown to large proportions. It takes first rank among the hardware houses of the country. Messrs. Brooks and Wills are members of Grace Methodist Protestant Church and give themselves to their church with the same or even greater devotion they show in their business life. Mr. Ireland is a member of the M. E. Church, South, and is also a devoted churchman.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mr. and Mrs. Cox, State Street, several cans of fruit. Mr. W. C. Beavins, merchant in High Point, a number of straw hats for our little boys. The Grimes Street school children and teachers recently gave four nice doll houses with all the furnishings to our little children.

Forty or more of our children are attending the Daily Vacation Bible School at First Church, High Point, this week and next. They are delighted. Six are attending the summer high school in High Point, and all our little children are attending summer school here at the home. So we are keeping them busy, but they are happily busy.

Ten Days

The ten days have ended in which we asked you to think about us, pray for us and give to the support of the Home. We believe you thought of us, and if you did then we know you prayed for us, and if you prayed for us, surely you made your gift for our support, or your plan to give it soon. Our hearts are burdened a bit with finances here. You can greatly lighten our load by making your liberal gifts.

Farm produce is now coming in and that is helping wonderfully.

Thank you and God bless you all.

Faithfully yours,

A. G. DIXON.

—Rev. R. J. Tamblin was the preacher last Sunday at the Y. W. C. A. Conference of college women at Blue Ridge, North Carolina. About twelve hundred young women from all the colleges of the South are meeting at Blue Ridge for the discussion of the Christian ideal and modern life. The purpose of the conference is to discover Christian life motives and to help "toward an understanding of full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God." During the week Bro. Tamblin will lead discussion groups on the meaning and the technique of prayer.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Roberta Station.—Since our reporter, Miss Gertrude Furr, is leaving today for an extended tour to many interesting points through the west, to California, down through Texas, and back through Mississippi, Georgia and home, we will have to excuse her from reporting.

Next Sunday, June 16th, is Home-Coming Day at Roberta Methodist Protestant Church. We are expecting a great day at this time. We have secured enough musicians for the day to give all who come a real feast of music and song. If a bill of fare like that appeals to you, come and get your fill. Two good choirs, the Elizabeth Temple Band, of Concord, the Sacred String Band of Kannapolis, and six male quartettes are to be here to thrill you. The program begins at 10:30 a. m. to last all day. Members of Roberta, you need not put yourself to any more trouble about dinner than to bring a roasted pig, and two large, fat hens; that with some other things will be a plenty. It is said we are to have some of the very best bass singers in North Carolina.

I feel I must not close without mentioning our Sunday school. We have had an average attendance since March 1st of 231 each Sunday. Our offerings have averaged $19.98 each Sunday. I should like to hear from a country church in our conference that can match that. If you know of one, write to me. I want to challenge you for something greater.

ROBERT SHORT, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—On Saturday evening, May 25, the Brotherhood met at the home of Bro. Wilson Myers. After the transaction of the business we were served delicious refreshments. We were glad to be in the home of these active church workers.

Since our last report the Ladies' Aid has placed porch furniture in the parsonage which was badly needed and greatly appreciated. The church has purchased a new lawn mower for the parsonage. Our Sunday school is doing good work under the leadership of our splendid superintendent, I. A. Teague. Our congregation has improved with the good weather.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth.—Rain prevented the people from gathering at Union Hill last Sunday and consequently no service was held. The pastor was there. The annual revival meeting is to begin at this church the second Sunday in July. Rev. D. I. Garner has promised to help the pastor in this meeting.

Last Sunday the pastor had the privilege of attending preaching services at the Friends Church in East Bend, and hearing a sermon by their pastor, Rev. Charles Hutchins. After the service we were invited to the splendid home of Bro. A. E. Harrell, member of Tabernacle Church on this charge. The writer and one of his daughters accepted the invitation to eat dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Harrell. We enjoyed a brief stay in the home after dinner. Mrs. Harrell is a member of the Friends Church in East Bend. Their daughter, Miss Clio Harrell, taught in the Methodist Protestant Children's Home during the past year. Their only son is attending a business college at Winston-Salem. He was formerly a student at High Point College. Bro. Harrell is cashier of the Yadkin Valley Bank at East Bend.

We regret to note the continued feeble condition of Bro. W. L. Doub, one of the oldest members of Baltimore Church, who has been unable to attend church all this year. Mrs. Doub, his wife, has also been ill part of the time in recent weeks. We hope they will soon recover.

Members of our charge continue to remember the pastor and family with gifts for our dining table; namely Mrs. U. Walter Long, Bro. Julius Whitman, Bro. W. A. Long, Mrs. Delia Long, Bro. Spencer Long, and Mrs. Joe Marler. We thank each one for these gifts which are highly appreciated by the pastor and family.

Our services next Sunday will be with Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches. Pleasant Hill church is preparing a Children's Day program which is expected to be rendered next Sunday night.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Macedonia, Why Not Circuit.—Our church seemed somewhat in the background and we called for a rally day and the children got up an extra fine program with the assistance of those who are always faithful and for the upbuilding of the church. Our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, called on Love Joy to come over into Macedonia and help us, and some responded, of which we were very glad. Others would have come but the weather was very rainy. We still extend to them the invitation to come over into Macedonia and help us. After the children rendered their fine program our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, whom we are so proud of, made us a fine talk and his appreciation of the good things of the day. By this time it was noon. We went out to a large table filled with good things to eat. All were filled and plenty to carry back home. After a few minutes' recess we gathered in the church to hear one of our beloved brothers preach; this was Bro. George Laughlin, who has been helper in all the special meetings for the past fourteen years and has a lifetime invitation to continue to be pastor's help. We were glad indeed to have him and his good wife with us. We were also glad to have Mrs. Trogdon, our pastor's wife, as we had never met her before. It was a real fine day and hope all will come back again.

I had the pleasure passing by to drop into the orphanage home; as it was very early I found the happy little flock in the dining room around the table with Mrs. Dixon watching over them as a good shepherd watches his sheep. Mrs. Dixon was not very well at this time but was up taking care of the children which we consider a great work. We are proud of this home and we are proud indeed of Mr. and Mrs. Dixon and their splendid management of this wonderful institution. May God bless them in this great work.

Yours in His service,

W. D. MOORE.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We are holding our regular monthly meetings of the Ladies' Aid Society. April meeting met in the home of Mrs. P. L. Garmon. Many were present and had a good program. May meeting met in the home of Mrs. M. L. Stallings, our president. Many were present, had an interesting program. June 6th met with Mrs. John Garmon. Not many were present on account of sickness. Our president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings, led the program. Splendid attention was given during the business period. It was agreed by all members to have a supper June 15th to make a little money to go on the expense of the church. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. George Garmon July 3. Hope all the sick members may be so they can be present. Two new members, Mrs. John Garmon and Mrs. George Garmon. After adjournment came delicious refreshments served by the hostesses.

We are very sorry to say our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, is not improving very fast. We miss him so much, for we look to him as our leader and teacher. We ask all the good people to think of him and his family in their prayers, that he might recover if it be God's will. Yet we are not entirely deprived of preaching, for we are fortunate enough to have Rev. N. M. Harrison, from First Church, Charlotte, with us every first Sunday evening.

On the third Sunday evening in May at 3 o'clock Rev. Harden, of the M. E. Church, Matthews, preached our Mother's Day sermon. We were so glad to have him come. He brought us an interesting message.

We were so glad to have on last Sunday evening at 3 o'clock Rev. Robert Short, of Roberta Charge. Once our pastor we were so glad to greet him. He brought us an interesting and inspiring sermon. We would be so glad to have him come again.

The Children's Day program was rendered Sunday night. The children spoke their parts well and all enjoyed the program. The children were trained by Mrs. Carl Stallings, Miss Irma Drye and Miss Vera Stallings.

Our president, Bro. Taylor, was with us some time ago. We were so glad to have him with us.

Mrs. P. L. Garmon, who has been sick for several weeks, seems to be improving.

Miss R. A. Drye, who has been in school at Boone, N. C., is at home for the summer.

REPORTER.

Asheboro.—So many important things have taken place of late that it is not possible for me to enumerate them all. Yesterday morning we observed Children's Day in the Sunday school. Ordinarily we have it in the church service, but it worked fine in the Sunday school. Good attendance considering the unfavorable weather. Offering for missions was about $21. Mrs. Pritchard and Miss Helen Anick had prepared the children for the service and had done it well.

At the morning church service we had a recognition service for our graduates and prize winners in the public school. The M. P. graduates sat together and just before the sermon they were asked to stand. The pastor extended congratulations to them and assured them that the church was interested in them; then the congregation stood, expressing their appreciation of these young people. Members of our church who graduated were: Thomas Redding, Elizabeth Ross, Virginia Henry, Ultra Lowdermilk, Fern Way, Flora Page Davis and Edith Brower.

After the congregation had extended its congratulations to the graduates, Lucy Clyde Ross and Elizabeth Phillips were asked to stand and the church's congratulations were extended to them, the former winning the prize at school for the most improvement in music and the latter winning in the intermediate group of the hymn playing contest.

At the morning hour also Miss Lola Moffitt was received into church membership, coming to us from the M. E. Church at Ashley Heights, N. C.

Just as the C. E. meetings were closing last evening an automobile running at a high rate of speed turned over two or three times and struck an electric light pole about a block from the church, breaking the pole and putting out the lights, so we had no evening service.

For some time I had been thinking of writing an article and saying that since so nearly all of our people were taking the Herald that it would not be possible for us to reach the goal set for us in new subscriptions. However, I decided to take last Friday afternoon for making a little canvass, so here is our goal.

Next Sunday evening we will observe Father's Day and hope to have two or three laymen make short addresses on father's problems, father's opportunities and father's compensation.

Two weeks from yesterday morning we are to observe Home Department Day in our church with a special sermon to Home Department. Instead of growing weary with them, we wish there were more special days. They help. J. E. PRITCHARD.

High Point.—The new parsonage into which Rev. and Mrs. Farmer, Mary Elizabeth and Joseph moved two weeks ago is beautifully located on a wooded knoll on Colonial Drive in the northwestern section of the city, which is entirely residential. The house has two stories, is of brick veneer, with a portico on the front, and a larger porch on one side. There are seven rooms besides a bath and breakfast nook. The three rooms on the front, dining room, den, and living room, are arranged with folding doors, and can be thrown together, which is a happy idea for a reception or entertainment. Mr. S. P. Montgomery, of this city, was the contractor, and Mr. J. S. Pickett was chairman of the building committee, and they are to be congratulated on their splendid work. The interior and furnishings are very pleasing, in excellent taste, and this home is modern, convenient and attractive, and will furnish a beautiful and comfortable residence for the pastor and his family for several years in the future.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its general meeting for June on Monday afternoon, June 10, at the church with an attendance of 30. The president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, was in the chair. Splendid reports were given by the chairmen of the nine circles, which showed fine attendance and active interest along all lines. Circle No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, won the prize of $5.00 offered by Mrs. Coe for the largest amount raised by sending out little aprons for waist measurement. The amount was $45.70 collected by this circle, and the total amount raised by all circles was $152.00. An article on "Our Home Mission Churches" was read by Mrs. Ross Davis, and Mrs. C. F. Barton gave a sketch of our missionary work in foreign fields. Mrs. C. C. Robbins read a most interesting letter from Miss Ethel Hempstead, missionary in Japan, and displayed a lovely scarf which Miss Hempstead sent her from Japan. A most interesting and delightful report of the board meeting in Pittsburgh was given by Mrs. E. L. Ballard, who attended. This was supplemented by Mrs. A. G. Dixon, who added several details. Mrs. J. H. Pritchard made a good report from the called meeting of Women's Missionary societies held at High Point College June 4th, when the two societies were merged into one, of which Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, was elected president. Mrs. Dixon announced that there will be in the future two Thank-offering services besides one in November, one of which will be held in September, the other in February, the proceeds of which will be equally divided between home and foreign work.

The Vacation Church School had an auspicious opening on Monday morning and will continue for two and a half weeks. Rev. Lester Ballard is working very enthusiastically and persistently for its success. The teachers are as follows: for Kindergarten Department, Misses Daisy Lee York, Margaret Poole and Dorothy Krieger; for Primary Department, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, Misses Claire Douglas, Annie Robbins, Esther Pritchard, Eloise Beam, and Annie Mae Dawkins; for Junior Department, Mrs. L. R. Peacock, Misses Ruth Vuncannon and Selma Clapp, Mrs. R. O. Frazier and Craighead McCanless; custodian of supplies, Mrs. M. R. W. Green.

Christian Endeavor Society on Monday evening was led by Ralph Vance, a former president, on the topic, "Thinking Things Through."

At the mid-week prayer meeting the minister will speak on "Discerning the Gift of God."

Children's Day will be observed next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, when a splendid program will be presented for this occasion. The offering will be used for the New Century Service.

We are much pleased to announce that Miss Elizabeth Welch, who underwent a serious operation last week at Guilford General Hospital, is making satisfactory improvement.

Miss Dorothy Rankin, daughter of Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, was graduated last week from the local high school with honor, having attained an average grade of 95 per cent on all subjects for the past year. Dorothy has not yet decided where she will attend college, but wherever she goes we bespeak for her great success, for she is quite a talented girl.

Announcement was made last week that Miss Lucille Pickens had won the prize offered by Screenland Magazine for the cleverest article on "The Advisability of a Girl's Keeping On With Her Job After Marriage," taking the affirmative view. The prize is a handsome bracelet made by Cartier, the celebrated jeweler of New York and Paris, for Miss Corinne Griffith, a star in the motion pictures world. This bracelet was worn by Miss Griffith when she played in "The Divine Lady." Lucille says that her good luck came because she tithed her income in April!

Mr. Colbert Blair, of Monmouth, Oregon, was here this week for a visit to his mother, Mrs. M. E. Blair, and sisters, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Mrs. E. L. Auman, and Miss Florence

Blair. He left for home today. Mr. Blair was born and reared in Asheboro, and this was his first visit to his native state in several years. He is married and has a son and daughter.

Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York have returned from Charleston, S. C., where they went to attend the graduation exercises of their daughter, Miss Daisy Lee, at Ashley Hall. She plans to teach kindergarten, in which work she specialized.

Fairfield.—We are glad that we can report that our Sunday school is running along nicely now. The attendance is not so large, but we always get a good collection considering the crowd. Every one takes his part and does the best he can with it.

Sunday, June 9, memorial services were held. In spite of the rain, a very large crowd attended, and everything turned out nicely. A professor of Davidson College was speaker for the morning, and Children's Day exercises were held in the afternoon. We were glad also to have some musicians from Lincoln with us.

We were all badly disappointed at first in thinking that Rev. Love would not be with us for memorial services. He was in Cincinnati last week and we didn't think that he would get back by Sunday. But the temptation for the good dinner was too great, and he came back in time for the services. We are all very glad indeed that he was back with us, and we are sure that he was glad to be back.

AGNES PROCTOR, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—Since there has been no report from the Junior Christian Endeavor Society for some time, you may think we are sleeping or dead. Could you have been with us last Saturday afternoon it would have been easy to convince you that we are much alive, for our society went on a picnic to Rodgers Lake. Upon our arrival there we had a short business meeting in the lovely grove, after which most of the children went in bathing. This they enjoyed very much, and it was reluctantly that they came out of the pond even though they knew a bounteous lunch was the next thing on the program.

After this was all served everybody returned to their homes declaring they had a delightful time.

We have also been having some very interesting meetings on Sunday evenings. We enjoy having some of the older people attend these meetings.

With best wishes to the readers of the Herald. ERA ALLEN, Cor. Sec'y.

Hollister.—The attendance at Sunday school was off considerably last Sunday owing to the inclement weather. Why is it that people can't go to church when the weather is unfavorable? Yet they can go anywhere else they want to, no matter how the weather is. Several of our people have returned home from college. Misses Sallie Wood and Velma Hardy returned from Greenville college. Miss Hardy graduated this year. Rev. Willie Wood is at home now from High Point. He was one of the young men who graduated from High Point College this year. We are glad to have them back in our Sunday school.

Pastor Spencer continues to bring us helpful messages. On the last fourth Sunday he preached one of the best sermons he has preached since he has been in this charge. The sermon was highly complimented by the people that heard it.

One of our oldest members, Mr. E. L. Lee, was stricken with paralysis last week. We hope he will soon be better and can come back to church, for he is missed in Sunday school and other church services.

Mrs. John Vinson, of Brinkleyville, died very suddenly last Thursday. He will be missed in his church very much. Mr. Vinson attended services at Hollister real often and we were always glad to have him with us.

We are looking forward to having the district rally to meet with us on Saturday and Sunday, June 29 and 30. We want all the pastors and people of the first district to attend the rally. Bro. Auman and others are preparing an interesting program. We are expecting President Taylor to be with us.

Am sorry that so many of our ministers are sick. Hope they will soon be restored to their health and can go on with their work.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Kistlers Church, Cleveland Circuit.—On Sunday, June 2, memorial service was observed in our church. The program began with beautiful songs rendered by the Oak Grove choir. At 11:30 our pastor delivered an interesting message on the life of Paul. He made it so plain that it touched the hearts of the small children. After this Bro. Edly Ivester delivered a short but impressive talk. This also was appreciated. The service closed with more beautiful songs rendered by the Oak Grove choir. We were thankful to have the opportunity to welcome the Oak Grove choir and we hope they will come again.

Our cemetery was beautiful with its many flowers, which were placed there by friends and loved ones in respect of the gone beloveds. Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely.

FLORA IVESTER.

Denton Charge.—We were delighted to have President Taylor with us at Canaan and Piney Grove June 9. He brought us fine messages at each place. He gave us words of encouragement in our work. We also commend Dr. Taylor for the interest he is taking in the children. I think we should pay more attention to the children. Our congregations were good at each church considering the weather and condition of the roads. Canaan used their Sunday school rooms for the first time Sunday. I think all were pleased with their separate rooms. They bought 78 chairs for the rooms. We appreciate the co-operation of all the members in making these things possible.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Lexington, State Street.—Owing to extremely disagreeable weather and some sickness among our people our attendance at the Sunday morning services was not as large as usual. Dr. Dixon preached for us Sunday morning, Bro. Bethea still being at Belmont, where he is assisting in a series of meetings.

Dr. Dixon's subject Sunday morning was, "The Great Question and Answer," referring to the Lord's asking His disciples, "Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" and then "Who say ye that I am?" and Peter's ready answer, speaking for all the disciples, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Surely never was this great passage of Scripture used by any one in a more touching and impressive manner than Dr. Dixon used it in his address. Every one was helped who heard it, and expressions of appreciation were heard from practically all present. Mrs. Dixon accompanied Dr. Dixon, bringing with her two sweet little girls from the Home, the two youngest girls. Their very evident love for Dr. and Mrs. Dixon was beautiful and touching indeed and unmistakably a response to tender care and loving guidance.

Mr. Bethea will probably be away until the last of the week, but is expecting to be here to fill his appointments Sunday.

A fine son was born to Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lanier last Monday, June 3. This is the "newest" baby in the congregation and we are all quite proud of him. He is Harold Swing Lanier, Jr.

The C. E. Society is doing some fine work. The meetings are full of interest for all who attend and all seem willing to work.

REPORTER.

Glen Raven.—Next Sunday marks the beginning of our revival here. It is to be also a home-coming day. Bro. P. E. Troxler, the superintendent of the Sunday school, is working up the program for the afternoon service. Invitations have gone out to previous pastors to be in attendance. We would like to have all previous pastors present.

On Monday evening Bro. Bethea will be with us, and preach throughout the meeting. Everybody is invited to attend all these services.

WM. H. NEESE.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Today has been a very rainy Sunday. Did not have any Sunday school.

Bro. Hunter has filled all his appointments. Our Sunday school is increasing in interest and attendance when weather and road conditions are favorable.

We will have Children's Day program, date to be announced later.

The Stone-Hendry reunion that was to have been held at the old Squire Stone homeplace and now the home of E. S. Stone today was about rained out.

We are glad to have with us again Mr. Edgar Lane, who is home from High Point College.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

P. S.—We little thought the last time we reported that the next time we would have to report the death of one of our own children, but such is the case. Our darling baby, "Robert Friel," was stricken with that awful and so often fatal disease colitis, and was taken away in such short and sudden order. Was sick about 48 hours. Seems that a great and strong arm just reached down and snatched him away from us.

The shock so great and such a sudden call have been such a strain. Died Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and was buried Sunday at 11 o'clock, aged nine months and four days.

We desire to thank all the friends and neighbors who have ministered unto us during this ordeal that we are passing, which has torn our very heart strings. It being the first death in our immediate family, it has hurt like only those who have had the same experience can understand.

FAMILY REUNION JULY 4TH AT FLAT ROCK CHURCH

Last year on Thanksgiving day when the Williams-Smothers-Dixon reunion was held in the Children's Home it was voted to meet this year at Flat Rock Church, Flat Rock Circuit, on July 4th at 10 o'clock.

This then is to notify all the descendants of Robert L. Dixon, John F. Dixon, Levi Dixon, Billie Smothers, "Billie" Williams, Patrick Williams, "Jimmie" Williams and Washington Williams to be sure to plan to attend the reunion. Be there promptly at 10 o'clock if possible and bring baskets well filled with good things to eat.

Rev. R. I. Farmer, pastor of the First Church, High Point, has promised to make the address at about 10:30. We are expecting Rev. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, to be present. There are also about four other preachers in the family as well as some laymen and laywomen who will have something to say.

Yours in service for Him,

A. G. DIXON.

SIXTH DISTRICT NOTICE

There will be an allday rally for the sixth district at Gray's Chapel church on Randolph circuit on the fifth Sunday in June, beginning at ten-thirty o'clock. A good program is being prepared and we are hoping that the day will be a good one.

The charges in this district this year are: Mt. Pleasant, Liberty-Siler City, Chatham, Randolph, Randleman, Richland, Why Not and Asheboro. Gray's Chapel is centrally located and a good place for the rally. There will be a picnic dinner on the ground and those who come are asked to bring lunch and share it with others.

Any church choir that will render a special selection will be welcome to do so.

J. E. PRITCHARD,
Chairman Sixth District.

NOTICE

The program for the Eleventh District Rally to be held at Shady Grove M. P. Church near Connelly Springs Saturday and Sunday, June 29-30, has been sent to the Herald for publication. All whose names appear on the program will please take notice and make plans to be there and take your place on the program. Let all pastors in the district urge their people to attend. Bro. Helms informs me that all who come will be amply provided for.

C. E. RIDGE, Chairman.

HOME-COMING DAY AT GILES CHAPEL SUNDAY, JUNE 16

Sunday School 9:30 o'clock. The morning service will be in charge of Rev. S. W. Taylor and the pastor. The evening service will be in charge of Rev. J. E. Pritchard and others. We hope our former pastors and our old friends will meet us on that day. We extend a cordial invitation to all.

REV. MR. PIERCE, Pastor.

J. W. RITCH, Supt.,

J. C. ALLRED, Acting Sec'y.

An all-day memorial service will be held at Orange Chapel Methodist Protestant Church of Saxapahaw Charge Sunday, June 16. All the old friends of this church, and those who have relatives buried there, are invited to come and bring a basket and also flowers for the cemetery.

REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN FOR LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The Advanced Registration Campaign for the Leadership Training School to be held at High Point College, July 13th to 20th, is now on. We have set for our goal 1,500 registrations. It is not impossible to reach this goal, though we have but a few weeks to work. The people of North Carolina have never failed to respond in these campaigns and they will not fail now. The fact that we have a finer co-operation this year on the part of the pastors in the matter of appointing agents for their respective churches, gives us great hopes and confidence in the campaign. Over twice as many agents have been appointed this year than in any previous campaign.

Elsewhere will be found a list of the agents and the churches they represent. If you do not know the agent of your church, look it up in this list and give her your name and fee for registration. Though you do not expect to attend the school, register. In so doing you are helping to finance the school, which is sending back into the various churches better trained and more consecrated leaders for the work the Kingdom there. Every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina should have a part in this school to that extent at least.

We have appealed to the pastors to lead out in the matter of registration, and below is given the result of that appeal, with a few names which were sent direct to me without appeal. It will be remembered, however, that quite a few of the pastors have registered with the agent of his church, which have not been sent in by the agent. The agents will start sending in their reports next week.

In each report hereafter the pastors' names will be in bold type, and the number following his name represents the number of pastors which have registered up to that time:

In the above list appears the names of 22 ministers. Before the campaign is over possibly the name of every minister and pastor in the conference will be listed. Twenty-three churches are represented in this list.

Free Entertainment for Pastors and Agents

Free entertainment will be given the pastor of any charge whose churches send in a total of two hundred adult registrations, or the equal in children's registrations. Free entertainment will be given any agent who secures a hundred adult registrations, or equal in children's registrations. An agent securing free entertainment does not prevent the same registrations being counted to secure free entertainment for the pastor.

Agents Sending in Names

The registration agents will please send in all the names they have each Monday morning. Though they be but few they will help to keep the campaign going and growing. Always give the name of the church you represent.

Churches Without Agents

If there is no agent for your church, send your fee direct to me and your church will be given credit for it.

Registration Fee

Fifty cents for adults; twenty-five cents for children. All together with a forward march to our goal—1,500 registrations. On your toes, agents! Boost, pastors! Support the campaign, members! Watch the Herald next week.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE ENDOWMENT INSURANCE FUND

This fund has become slightly active once more, as a number of the friends who made pledges toward the endowment insurance have been sending some money to the treasurer. The money thus remitted applies against insurance premiums and, in this way, a substantial cash reserve is being built up. It is of the greatest importance that we receive considerably more money in order that these premiums may be paid. To pay the amount due may cause some degree of inconvenience to those who have made the pledges, but the treasurer will be greatly inconvenienced if the money is not forthcoming.

High Point College has an unparalleled history. What other college, having been in operation for only five years, has shown such an enrollment and has graduated such a number of students? What other college has, during its first five years' history, established such a curriculum and provided such a strong faculty for the instruction of its students? When comparing High Point with other colleges, however, it must be remembered that High Point opened its doors in 1924 when conditions were different from those which prevailed when other colleges were established seventy five, fifty, or even thirty years before.

High Point has endeavored to meet the needs of the new day. In order that it might do so it was compelled to trust the members of the Methodist Protestant Church to stand by it, and to support its program.

People are curious. Tremendous enthusiasm was created when it was proposed to establish a college; money was subscribed and paid, although those contributing did not know definitely what kind of buildings would be erected, or what kind of college would be operated. Now the institution speaks for itself. Those who have paid their money know for what they have paid; those who have made pledges which have not yet been redeemed know exactly what use will be made of their money. Still, the early enthusiasm is lacking. The burden weighs very heavily upon a few; the entire church could shoulder it and carry it with ease.

This is a special appeal to all who have promised to make an annual payment toward the endowment insurance to remit promptly to the treasurer for the amount which may be due.

J. NORMAN WILLS.

WORDS

Words, words, words, words—
Words that come in endless herds!
Words in print and on the lips,
Words like sately moving ships;
Words of bitterness and pain,
Words that have a selfish strain;
Words of ostentatious show,
Words in never-ceasing flow;
Words that stray like witless sheep,
Words destroying peace and sleep;
Words of bombast, words austere,
Words that spread disease and fear;
Words of every length and hue,
Words that threaten and pursue;
Words as sharp as two-edged sword,
Words that stride like sately lord;
Words like an engulfing wave,
Words that harass and enslave;
Words distorted, misapplied,
Words in millions multiplied;
Words, words, words, words—
Words that come in endless herds!

Words, words, words, words—
Words like flocks of singing birds;
Words of myriad types and kinds,
Words that rest our tired minds;
Words as delicate as flowers,
Words that fall like summer showers;
Words bespeaking truth and grace,
Words the pride of English race;
Words that stream from pen and voice,
Words to make the heart rejoice;
Words like music of the spheres,
Words of scholars, statesmen, seers;
Words on tiptoe secret bent,
Words exhaling rarest scent;
Words as fleet as eagle's fly,
Words that please the ear and eye;
Words diffusing sweetness, light,
Words of majesty and might;
Words that gleam and glow and shine,
Words expressing love divine;
Words, words, words, words—
Words like flocks of singing birds!

Words, words, words, words—
Words that storm like phalanxed herds!
Words of sesquipedalian length,
Words that smite with giant strength;
Words of gossip, scandal, crime,
Words that all besmirk with slime;
Words of wrath and want and woe,
Words iconoclastic, low;
Words that hiss and scold and scream,
Words that broadcast self-esteem;
Words of bitterness and strife,
Words that menace human life;
Words of plunder, words of greed,
Words that sow rebellion's seed;
Words like booming ocean's roar,
Words that to Olympus soar;
Words of violence and sin,
Words in deadly deafening din;
Words that overflow and crush,
Words that surge in maddening rush;
Words, words, words, words—
Words that storm like phalanxed herds!

ORANGE CHARGE NOTICE

The Children's Day services were rained out at Chestnut Ridge the second Sunday. These services will be held the third Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

On account of above the regular preaching service at Union Grove is called off for the third Sunday.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

—Grace Church had a wedding ceremony of much interest last night at nine o'clock. Miss Ellen Mabel, daughter of Bro. J. M. Stone, was married to Mr. A. A. Scott.

—June 10 witnessed the marriage of Miss Zelian Hunter, daughter of the late Henry Hunter, to Prof. H. A. Helms, principal of Pomona School. After a northern trip they will be at home in Greensboro. Mrs. Helms as well as he is an experienced teacher with unusual preparation.

—Justice Hughes recently made a speech in London in which he took occasion to administer merited rebuke to Americans and Englishmen who have been trying to awaken the spirit of strife between the two nations. Mr. Hughes said the common sense of the two peoples would neutralize the effect of the efforts of the war agitators.

—MacDonald, England's new prime minister, wishes to come to the United States for a conference with President Hoover.

—Richard Shaw, of High Point, and Miss Flossie Stout, late of Asheville, were united in marriage by Dr. A. G. Dixon, a former pastor of both, at the Children's Home last Saturday morning. They are now making a tour of northern cities.

—The Sunday evening services in Grace Church will be discontinued throughout the months of June and July.

—Have you registered for the Leadership Training School? Adults, 50c; children, 25c.

—It is expected that fifteen hundred Methodist Protestants in North Carolina will support the Leadership Training School, High Point College, to be held July 13th to 20th, by registering at a fee of 50c though they do not expect to attend the school.

Ways of Life: the Way

If we could only say of life
That all ways lead us home,
It would be a grander saying
Than "all roads lead to Rome."

But sad the fact we must admit
That most roads lead away.
A startling question then it is,
Whither leads my road to-day?

It seems to us we need a map,
A traveler's trusty guide,
To show us roads we want to take
And roads to leave aside.

Just such a map would I draw here
If I but had the skill:
The work is great and intricate,
Requiring more than will.

It must be plain to any one,
As plain as day is long,
If you but keep to the right road,
You can't be on the wrong.

One way you really need to know,
And that's the way of right:
Go straight ahead in this good way,
Keep others out of sight.

This College Campaign

It will seem to some that this college campaign is put on at a most inconvenient time. Really it is not a matter of choice but of necessity. A crisis has come and the trustees of the college have become convinced that honor requires that the college pay its debts. Only two alternatives are seen. One is to close the college and sell its property for its debts. The other is to raise the money from its friends and let the college live and do its work. Of course the first alternative is not to be thought of save as a last resort. The college has had a finance committee engaged for months in a still hunt for pledges from generous people of large means. This committee has succeeded admirably but still there is a deficit. It reported to the board of trustees that with $50,000 more it could pay the college out of debt. Hence this campaign. You will note in the Treasurer's report which we publish nearly every week that the church has paid a little over $200,000. But the four buildings cost more than $427,000; the furnishings cost over $32,000; and work on grounds including paving and sewage cost over $17,000. Add to this the deficits in running expenses for five years' operation, and you can see the appalling magnitude of the debt. It is a great piece of good fortune that generous friends have come within $50,000 of assuming the whole debt. But please bear in mind that their pledges are on the condition that the whole amount of debt is paid or assumed. Knowing the situation, you will understand why this appeal comes at this time. Surely friends of the college will do the comparatively small thing necessary to save its life.

The Christ in Stone

Perhaps the best statue of Jesus ever produced by any sculptor is that of the Danish sculptor Thorwaldsen. This work of art is now in the Thorwaldsen Museum in Copenhagen. Borden Parker Bowne visited it some years ago and thus records his impressions and the effect upon his feelings: "No other Christ compares with this. Christ seems so majestic yet so tender, so regal yet so winning, removed by such infinite heights yet so condescending as to be infinitely near. . . . It almost seemed to me that He spoke Himself to me. I could not keep back the tears and could scarce refrain from sobbing aloud. I wanted to kneel down and pray; it would have been a joy and relief. But there were others in the church, so I entered into the closet of my own heart and, having shut the door, I prayed to Him who seeth in secret." Dr. Bowne was a profound American scholar, author of a work on Metaphysics.

Death of Dr. T. H. Lewis

We print elsewhere the tribute of appreciation spoken by Dr. H. L. Elderdice in the funeral of Dr. Lewis at Westminster, Md., last Sunday. This expresses the sense of loss that will be felt throughout the denomination. Dr. Lewis was doing work for the church up to the last. Last week his editorial contributions appeared in the church papers as usual. The report of his death must awaken a great surprise. As we look back over his life we see at many points evidences of his worth to the church. Perhaps his chief worth was in his service to our educational institutions, especially Western Maryland College. We were told last year that in his early years of service as President of this college he served for what the position yielded, which was almost nothing some years or would have been had not his great friend, Daniel Baker, come to his relief with generous donations. It should be remembered also that for a year or two when Adrian College was in dire straits he served that institution without salary, going in alternate weeks from Westminster. He did much and has left his impress upon the denomination as few other men have. It is pleasing to note that during his last term as President of the General Conference our church enjoyed a degree of growth much larger than some other churches that are much larger and wealthier.

AN APPRECIATION

By HUGH LATIMER ELDERDICE

(An address at the funeral of Dr. T. H. Lewis, Baker Chapel, the Western Maryland College, June 16, 1929)

"There Came a Man Sent from God"

This reference to John the Baptist by John the Apostle may well be quoted as a condensed history of Thomas Hamilton Lewis.

He was a Man.

He was a man in body. Though neither a Goliath in stature, nor a Hercules in physical prowess, yet every ounce of his blood and bone, nerve and muscle was a dynamo in perpetual motion. His vitality was so vigorous, his energy so intense, and his programs so prolific that the work of his hands was monumental. His feet were never found in the path of least resistance but always where the road was roughest and the hill highest. His shoulders were ever broadening for additional burdens and they were heaped upon him, solicited and unsolicited. Upon one occasion his conference was so overloading him that Dr. J. M. Holmes entered the solicitous protest, "Stop! When you kill Dr. Lewis you kill a dozen men."

When we see him as a stripling resurrecting a dead church in Cumberland and popularizing the Mother Church of Methodist Protestantism in Baltimore; then, as a pioneer theologian of his denomination, laying the foundation of the Westminster Theological Seminary to prepare men for the ministry; after that, presiding over the destinies of the Western Maryland College, fighting her battles in scholastic halls, state legislatures, and church assemblies for more than three decades; then, in old age, traveling night and day as president of his General Conference; and climaxing his conquering career by giving the last thirteen months to the new field of journalism, where he wielded his editorial pen with a touch timely and trenchant, it is not strange that his strong body at last spent its marvelous force and now lies at rest in this sacred spot so dear to his heart. The marvel is that he stood the tremendous strain for seven years beyond the allotted span of life.

He was also a man in mind. His intellectual endowments were rare and in constant cultivation; and with every development of his mental faculties there was deeper desire for new worlds to conquer. Sir William Hamilton had in thought such giants as our profound thinker when he declared, "There is nothing great in the universe but man and nothing great in man but mind." In study, the mind of Dr. Lewis was analytical; in composition logical; and in purpose, both philosophical and practical. Whether teaching his classes, speaking on a platform, writing a book, debating on the floor of conference, or facing a congregation of worshipers, his most notable trait was brilliancy of intellect. Quick and keen was his comprehension of complex questions of curriculum, administrative affairs, and disciplinary duties. So vast and varied his mental equipment that he was easily the master of any assembly, whether in the privacy of a parlor ear or the publicity of a crowded auditorium. In every organization of which he was a member, he must needs be the leader, for he could not be a follower. This leadership was not born of contempt for the intelligence of his fellows, nor of ambition for self; but was the spontaneous and indomitable assertion of a master mind.

His widespread culture embraced the fine arts. His keen appreciation of paintings is evidenced by the pictures placed by him to adorn the pulpit walls of this sacred edifice; and within the book racks of the pews throughout the Methodist Protestant churches of our land you find the Hymnal revised by his discriminating taste in music. One tune bears the title Baker Chapel and other tunes carry the names of those who have worshiped at this altar from infancy to womanhood.

President Lewis was a man not only in body and in mind, but also in spirit. Indeed, his supreme power was the ripened fruit of his spiritual gifts and graces. The gifts most worthy of mention were: his intelligent reading of the Holy Scriptures, which gripped the imagination and was in itself an inspiration; his clear insight into the heart of the Biblical truths he expounded in his sermons; his well-poised verdict in conflicting moral standards; and his prophetic voice in all the social, civil, and religious issues of his day. He was at his best when facing a congregation of worshipers in a rural church or in a city sanctuary; but chiefly in Alumni Hall on Baccalaureate Sunday. Today, the second Sunday in June, is the anniversary of his Baccalaureate Sunday; and it reminds us that none of the graduates of his thirty-four years of presidency can ever forget his great message to their class; for it was Paul's "logic on fire" and John's winsome plea of love. Yet the spot on which your speaker stands this moment was his throne. He regarded the building of Baker Chapel as an act of special Providence, his love of its every stone and pew was well nigh idolatrous and the Sunday night messages delivered here during the scholastic year—especially his annual series of sermons to the senior class—will immortalize his highest influence in the transformed lives, the clarified ideals, and the Christian character and conduct of thousands of the old alumni.

It is with pardonable pride that we rehearse the fact that this outstanding leader of the numerically small church of his choice was also acknowledged as the peer of any leader in some of the larger denominations. His most spectacular triumphs were when he made his powerful pleas for a United Methodism. Before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Lyric Theatre, Baltimore, in 1908, and before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in Asheville, North Carolina, two years later, the timeliness, the truth, and the thrill of his inspired eloquence lifted both assemblies to their feet with hallelujahs on their tongues. Probably no such scenes were ever paralleled in any other ecclesiastical council, convention, or conference in our generation.

Great though he was, yet he made mistakes—many and serious; for he was a man, not an angel. And those who knew him best and loved him most recognized that his weaknesses were those inherent in strong characters. The frequent exhibition of these frailties was severely criticised; but their sting is lost when we recall the truth of the familiar proverb, "In order to avoid criticism, one must do nothing, say nothing, be nothing."

When he retired from the constant grind, the petty annoyances, and the crushing financial burdens of the third of a century which held him as a slave on College Hill and entered the office of president of the General Conference of his church, a delightful "change came o'er the spirit of his dreams." He had now more sympathy for his weaker brethren, more indulgence for their shortcomings, more eagerness to lend a helping hand to any struggling soul; and more deeply desirous to learn how "to grow old gracefully." In the evening of his life, this seemingly stern and coldly reserved man who had not worn "his heart upon his sleeve" gave in both private and public touching proof of the tenderness that speaks loud in sob and tear.

In last week's issue of the Methodist Protestant, his front page editorial proved to be his valedictory. It was a message to the Maryland Conference convened in the Edmondson Avenue Church, Baltimore. He was reminiscent of the similar sessions held during his membership of more than half a century. He closed his day dream by calling the roll of his ministerial brethren who had answered the summons from on high. Then this old warrior of many a battle turned on his sick bed which he hoped soon to leave, saw in fancy more than a hundred and fifty living fellow-fighters on roll, signed his orders for new campaigns, and declared his readiness to play again his part. Listen!

"We must not waste time in reminiscence. Time will not turn backward. The future calls almost impatiently. No time for tears or sighs. Forward the ensign moves. Well, comrades, I won't be left behind. So, 'leave me here and when you want me, sound upon the bugle horn.'"

What he heard a few hours later was not the old bugle blast to battle, but the reveille of the redeemed in the Church Triumphant. He fell as he lived, fighting on the front line!

"O, iron nerve to true occasion true!

O, fallen at length that tower of strength

Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew."

O thou! our modern Asa Shinn in theology, Nicholas Snethen in church polity, Francis Waters in college administration, and Thomas Stockton in silver-tongued speech! This moment thou dost hear every Methodist Protestant in the land say sadly, yet proudly,

"He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again."

Hero of my college days! Comrade of my manhood!
Solace of my old age! Good morning!

WINONA LAKE BIBLE CONFERENCE

August 16 Through August 25

The Winona Lake Bible Conference is now well-known as the largest enterprise of this kind in our country, if not in the world. The reputation is well deserved. Here gather the greatest throngs and here come the greatest preachers and Bible teachers the world affords. The conference is full of blessing to people in general. It is especially helpful to ministers.

Among the special features for this year are the following:

Dr. Frank H. Ballard. One of the most conspicuous characters in the British Empire today. Claimed by many to be her greatest preacher, now minister of the famous Highbury Church at Bristol in England. Author of In the Form of a Servant, Christian Agnosticism, and many other volumes. He will speak twice to ministers only and several times to the general audience.

Sergeant Alvin C. York. "The greatest civilian soldier of the world," says General Pershing. He will tell the thrilling story of his capture single-handed of one hundred and thirty-two Germans and thirty-five machine guns. Out of this came his wonderful work for his own mountain people. He will tell us all about it in two wonderful addresses on the last two days of the conference.

Dr. William H. Leach, editor of Church Management, will give four special lectures to ministers. His subjects are (1) The Minister as an Executive; (2) Church Publicity; (3) Church Finances; (4) Special Program Planning.

Home-Coming Day, Thursday, August 22. One of the really great days of the conference. All loyal and true Winonians will surely make an effort to be with us on this day. Friends of the "old days," friends from everywhere. Speakers: Conrad, Massee, Bieber and the Mission Boys.

The League of Many Nations. Sunday afternoon, August 18. A spectacular demonstration of the power of God in the lives of young men and women. Natives from many nations, dressed in native costumes, will tell the story of their conversion. This afternoon's wonderful program is arranged for by the Practical Bible Training School of Bible Park, N. Y., of which Dr. John A. Davis is the president.

Other speakers throughout the ten days are Robert Watson, of the First Presbyterian Church, Boston; Dr. A. Z. Conrad, Park Street Church, Boston (Congregational); Prof. A. T. Robertson, of Louisville (Southern Baptist Theological Seminary); Max Reich, Christian Jew, noted scholar and preacher; Jacob Pelzt, Dr. J. C. Massee, evangelist, recently from Tremont Temple, Boston; Robert G. Lee, great preacher from the Southland (First Baptist Church, Memphis, Tenn.); Dr. William Crowe, of St. Louis (Southern Presbyterian); Dr. Herbert W. Bieber, noted Bible teacher from Bala Synwyd Presbyterian Church; Peter McFarlane, five of the morning devotional hours; the Mission Boys under the leadership of H. E. Eberhardt, of Indianapolis, and Scoville, Newlin, M. B. Williams and Oliver E. Williams among the evangelists.

The Gideons Are Coming. During the last three days the Gideons are to hold a special convention and among the speakers arranged for the Bible conference program are Mr. Samuel R. Boggs, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Will R. Green, of Toronto, both former presidents of this great organization.

Remember the dates and write for detailed program to the Bible Conference, Winona Lake, Indiana. Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, director of the conference. Prof. Homer Rodeheaver, director of music.

GIRLS AND BAD MAGAZINES

The influence of evil reading matter was brought out in a recent address by Miss Eleonore Hutzel, director of the women's division of the Detroit police department. This deputy commissioner of police has charge of forty policewomen in one of the largest cities of the nation, and receives on the average every month complaints that 125 girls have left home and their distracted parents want help in finding them. About 96 per cent are found, but one's heart bleeds for the other four per cent who have drifted off into vice. Many of these girls are as young as thirteen or fourteen years.

Miss Hutzel says that, though the movies are frequently declared to be the cause for girls leaving home, a far more important cause is the low-priced, depraved magazine. These periodicals are veritable agencies of the devil. They are circulated secretly, passed from hand to hand, gloated over in private. Many of them are found on the newsstands, and it is much more necessary to suppress them than the bad books which exercise the minds of most censors.

Few more important tasks are before the home, the church, and the school than the cultivating of a taste for the best reading.—Selected.

COLLEGE CAMPAIGN FOR $50,000

At a recent meeting of the college Trustees the Finance Committee requested that a campaign be put on in the conference to raise fifty thousand dollars to complete the amount necessary to liquidate the entire indebtedness on the institution. Brother Bates and I have been asked to delegate speakers, and to work out a plan of appointments for the campaign. We are giving below the result of our work. Considerable time and thought has been given to it, and it is our hope that speakers and churches will conform to it as far as possible. We know, however, that there may be instances in which an interruption of the plan seems necessary. We trust that such may be few, and that, in the main, the campaign may go forward according to the plan outlined here. Where this can not be done, we are asking pastors to please put it on later and at an early date.

There is no more important work before us at this time. High Point College is the key to our future. As this institution lives and thrives, so will the conference. We must, therefore, give to it every possible help, and now at this time, when the Finance Committee is trying to clear it of indebtedness, let no Methodist Protestant fail them. If we can raise $50,000 within the next month and a half, High Point College will start on a new era of growth and service. Where hour for appointments is not given here, pastors will please supply it and notify the speaker. It is best, we think, if appointments follow the regular plan on each charge.

Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis

Word has just come to us that he "is not; for God took him." How sudden! How unexpected! And how soon after he was "calling the roll of his hundred," and "even reading the history of the Annual Conference in Malachi; hearing the itinerant roll call as He makes up his jewels!" It is all so sudden and so saddening to us. For a half century a great form has walked among us, thrilling and inspiring us with his presence, and we have been willing to follow him in the confidence that he was a great leader. His passing casts a pall over our conference and over the entire denomination. Sadness fills our hearts, but joy too; for Doctor Lewis has gone to be with his "hundred."

We extend to his bereaved family the loving sympathy of our entire conference.

"Out of Debt"

That is what the Finance Committee is saying for High Point College. And so say we all. At a recent meeting of the college trustees, the Finance Committee requested that a campaign be put on at once in the conference to raise $50,000 to complete the amount necessary to put the college "out of debt." In pursuance to that order of the trustees, we are "at it." The schedule of the campaign goes out with this issue of the HERALD. This is big work; it is necessary work; it is timely work; it is everybody's work. We are requesting four things: first, that no delegated speaker fail to take his appointments; second, that churches co-operate by releasing their pastors for this campaign; third, that we pray without ceasing for the success of this undertaking; fourth, that every Methodist Protestant in the conference give something to put the college "out of debt." With this spirit actuating us in this campaign, we shall soon be singing the victory song.

Herald Subscriptions

We trust that pastors are not forgetting that the fifth Sunday in June is "HERALD Day," at which time all subscription allotments are to be completed. If pastors need subscription agents, and have not appointed them, we suggest that this be done yet. Much can be accomplished within a week or ten days. It is necessary that the HERALD subscription list be increased. The financial support of the paper makes it necessary; the benefit that the reading of the paper gives to the conference makes it necessary. And as an expression of gratitude for the long years of sacrificing and efficient work on the part of Dr. McCulloch, the editor, the subscriptions should be increased. Let us not stop until this is done. To date 36 charges have reported new subscribers. Enfield, Orange and Asheboro charges have reached their quotas. The total number of new subscribers since the campaign began April 25 is 96 2-3. Is this our best, brethren? Let's see to it that Monday after the fifth Sunday is not a "blue" Monday for the editor.

Glad to Note

That a number of charges report Children's Day held, or programs in process of preparation. We are urging that this be the banner Children's Day year in our conference, and we are, of course, totally dependent upon pastors and superintendents to make it so. But they are a safe dependence, and we are looking to them for a banner year. Now don't fail us, pastors, superintendents. Hold the program, if you have to do it in July; and if for any reason you can not prepare the program, make a talk in the Sunday school on missions, and take a Children's Day offering for that purpose. Please do this without fail, and take credit on the G. C. B. for the amount.

District Rallies

Several have been planned for the fifth Sunday in this month. We trust that they may be well attended, and that those who appear on the programs may bubble over with enthusiasm. Such a speaker soon stirs that kind of spirit in others. A bubbling speaker has bubbling hearers; and a bubbling hearer wants to hear again. These occasions that bring our people together for conference, meditation, prayer, information, inspiration and fellowship, are eminently worthwhile. We trust that a rally may be held in each district, and that each one may be so full of worthwhile things and worthwhile folks that, even now, the rallies for next year may start in the making. Now for a rallying rally that will rally every district!

Registrations

Bro. Harrison is urging them for the Training School, July 13-20. If you expect to attend, register; if you do not expect to attend, register. In either case you will help to meet the expenses of the school and thus render a worthwhile service. The registration goal is 1,500; let us pile them up until Harrison says "Stop." Adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents. Register through your church agent.

Pastors' Summer Conference

This is to be held concurrently with the Training School. For quite a number of years this conference has been a source of valuable aid to our pastors, and we are looking forward to it this year with hopeful interest. Bro. Curry, the president, is working very zealously to provide a pleasing program, and we urge our pastors to make their plans to attend the conference. A small purse put into the hands of the pastor by his charge would meet his expenses at the conference, and he would more than compensate for this generosity in better service. "The proof of the pudding is the eating." Anyway, let's meet at the summer conference and have another session of mental and spiritual refreshing.

Richland

It was our privilege to be at Giles' Chapel, on this charge, Sunday, June 16, and to share in their "Home-coming" program. This is one of the oldest churches in our connection, having been established in 1833. It lacks only four years now of being a centenarian. No doubt the one-hundredth anniversary will be appropriately observed. Rev. Alson Gray, D.D., one of our pioneers, was the founder. It has been a church of ministers, eight having gone out from it. Three of them are now living, and two are actively engaged in pastorates, Bro. J. E. Pritchard, pastor of the Asheboro church, and Bro. J. B. Trogdon, pastor of Why Not charge. Bro. George A. Laughlin does not serve a charge, though he still preaches. Those who have passed on to their rewards are: Jackson Laughlin, Lemuel Davis, W. O. Davis, Jesse Giles, and T. T. Ferree. This is a contribution to the ministry of which the church is justly proud. And besides these, a large number of the influential citizens of the community were converted at the altars of this church, and have spent their lives in its communion. Many have already been received into the Church Triumphant; others are pressing on. The first building was a log house. This stood for 43 years, when it was displaced in 1876 by the present frame building. In 1899 this building was enlarged to its present proportions. Plans are now on to beautify the building by painting it inside and out. Bro. J. E. Pritchard was present in the afternoon and had charge of the service. He recounted a number of interesting experiences connected with the church, as did others when they were given an opportunity to speak. Several who are now active in other churches, but who were reared in this church, were back at the "home-coming" to express their affection for the "old home church," and their gratitude for what it had done for them. Many of them, too, have loved ones there beneath the sod in the church burying ground, and they were back to pay to them the tribute of a loving memory. It was a good day and one well spent. We trust that the quickened impulses and the renewed inspiration may not be lost with the day, but that they may be carried right on into the work with each recurring week for the larger service that God still has for this old and honored church.

The pastor, Rev. T. E. Pierce, was present through the day, and of course had general charge of the program. The people speak well of him, and we are hopeful that the year may be one of steady progress for the charge. An offering was taken during the day for the A. C. B., amounting to $8.75. Our day at this church was greatly enjoyed.

West End

On Sunday night we preached at West End church, owing to the illness of the pastor. We enjoyed, as we always do, being with this congregation. Bro. Williams is able now to resume his work.

Our Sick Ministers

Bro. Carmichael is up now and able to give some time to his work. We urge, however, that he do not overtax his strength. Bros. Moton, Hall, and Martin are our brethren who are in most failing health. So far as we are informed at this writing, their conditions are not improved. They still have our sympathy and our prayers. May the great Head of the church abundantly bless these under-shepherds who, in the days of their strength, were zealous for the flock.

"NEVER SAY DIE"

F. M. LARKIN

Life in all its various phases is subjected to difficulties and discouragements that often lead to disaster. But they ought to lead to the development of skill and abilities that would otherwise have been unknown. Seldom have we known, however, of a more remarkable case than the one that suggests this note.

A man at fifty years of age lost his right leg in a railroad wreck. Thirteen years later, the other leg was amputated after being injured in a street-car accident. After trying different artificial limbs that were on the market, without finding any that gave him any degree of comfort, he decided to make something that would fit and work. His efforts resulted in an invention of a new type of limb and in the founding of the "Fitwell" concern in Kansas City. This institution is said to be one of the largest of its kind in this country.

He turned his calamity into a fortune. He became the head of the Morris Orthopedic Institute of Los Angeles. He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner. He died of pneumonia at seventy-eight years of age at his home in Pasadena. He is survived by a widow and two daughters.

This is the record of Harry J. Morris, a very remarkable man. His example should be an inspiration to all people discouraged in health, in business, or in church and state. "Never say die."—Zion's Herald.

PRAYERS PROMPTLY ANSWERED

When the secretary of the American Mission to Lepers visited the American Board Leper Home at Manamadura, India, he found that the only meeting place of the Christians was under a great tree. He told them about three hundred Christian lepers in Siam who prayed for a church more than four years, when at length their prayers were answered. Showing them a picture of the church, he asked, "Would you be willing to pray that long for a church?" But the interpreter put it this way: "Mr. Danner says that in Siam the patients prayed more than four years for a church, but he does not think we shall need to pray that long to get ours," and the lepers understood that to mean that they would obtain theirs very soon.

Returning to America, at his first meeting, which was in Richmond, Va., Mr. Danner told this story, and a prominent Episcopalian lady asked if the women of Richmond might be allowed to answer the prayers of those Congregational lepers of Manamadura. The money was quickly raised, people of many denominations contributing, and now those lepers have a beautiful stone church, a standing testimony to the truth that the Lord loves to answer faith-filled prayers, and to answer them with startling promptness.—Amos R. Wall.

RELIGION THE FOUNDATION STONE

HON. W. J. BRYAN

A good religion is the real basis upon which all law, all business, and all pocketbooks must rest. Without a heart, what good is a mind? Give men a deep sense of responsibility to God and you can wipe all laws from the statute books. Conscience is the greatest force of which man has knowledge from the cradle to the grave. Conscience rears about us stronger walls than those of stone.

THE BOYS' MAY DAY SURPRISE

"Let's have a picnic, girls," suggested Lida Wells. "Over in Beech Grove."

"Why not have a May Day party?" exclaimed Dora Nelson.

"But it isn't the first of May! It's the last week of the month," objected Lida.

"That makes no difference. Often the weather is cold and rainy on the first, and people can't celebrate it. It's so lovely and warm now and there are lots of flowers in bloom," returned Dora.

The other girls fell in with Dora's idea. It would be lovely to have a May Day party. Lida at last agreed with them.

"Where shall we have it?" she asked.

"On our grounds," answered Dora promptly.

Her companions agreed that that was the very place for such a celebration. None of them had much ground around their homes. Dora lived a short distance out from the village. There were extensive lawns and a beautiful garden about her house.

"But will your mother let us have it there?" one girl asked.

"Of course she will. She will enjoy seeing us have a good time."

The celebration decided on, they began to discuss the details of it. Of course, they must all dress in white, and they must carry a lot of flowers, and they must sing songs. Fortunately they did know one song about going Maying.

"I have a book that tells about things to do on different days," Dora said as the group separated to go home to dinner. "I'll read up about some things to do on May Day."

At the supper table that evening, she told her family about the proposed May Day celebration. Her parents agreed that it was a nice thing to have.

Her brother Fred made fun of the idea. "Girls always want to do something that they can dress up in," he laughed.

"If you'll take the trouble to read, my son," returned his father, "you will know that men, and boys, too, dress up in May Day celebrations."

"And who dressed up on Hallowe'en," smiled his mother, "with false faces?"

"I wish we could have a Maypole with ribbons hanging down from it like I read about," went on Dora.

"If I had not to be out of town the rest of the week, I'd try to fix up one for you," said her father kindly. "I like the idea of keeping up those old-time customs."

"Oh, well, we can do a lot of things without a Maypole, but it would be nice to have one, of course. I'm glad we have so many roses in bloom."

"Fred, what are you going to do with your holidays?" asked his father.

"Oh, some of the boys and I are going to build a fort in the lot back of the house with that old lumber piled there."

"That's all right, but put on old clothes to do it."

"You bet, no dressing up for me to have fun. I—" Fred flushed and stammered, remembering again Hallow Eve. His father laughed.

The next day Dora had a busy time seeing her chums and talking over the details of what they would do at their celebration. They decided to invite a number of the girls of their class to take part in it, and to tell their different friends that if they wished, they could come and there would be seats on the porch for them to sit and watch the celebration.

"I wish we could have it today," Dora said, "but we can't get ready, and tomorrow mother will be away, and, of course, I want her to be there. We'll have it the day after. Be sure you all have your white dresses ready."

Meanwhile Fred and several of his schoolmates were busy in the back lot building a fort. After working a few hours they sat down to rest.

One of the boys said something about the May Day celebration the girls were going to have.

"Lida's crazy over it," said Bob Wells.

"So is Dora," returned Fred. "She's been reading in a book a lot about May Day. They're going to be dressed in white, and have flowers on their heads, and dance around and sing songs. Huh! I bet we have more fun building this fort."

"But in the books they always have a Maypole," said Joe Long. "And they are not going to have one."

"No, of course, girls can't put up a Maypole," Bob returned.

"Well, it seems too bad that they can't have one when a Maypole is part of a May Day celebration," said Joe.

"I think so, too," agreed Bob.

After dinner the boys worked again at their fort. Fred had been thinking of what his father had said that if he were home he would fix up a pole for them. He couldn't get it out of his mind. So when they were resting a while from their building, he told his companions an idea that had come to him. When he was through they laughed and said, "Let's do it."

After breakfast on the morning of the celebration, Mrs. Nelson sent Dora on an errand on the other side of the village. "Your party does not begin until 2. I'll get the flowers ready for you, and you will have plenty of time for the other things you want to do. Don't hurry," she said.

Dora felt cross at being sent on an errand. She was kept a good while at the place she went, so it was almost two hours before she was on her way home. She was in a hurry to get into the house and begin to dress for the afternoon. She was almost across the front lawn before she saw something that made her stop and gaze in wonder. Was she dreaming?

There in the middle of the back lawn was a Maypole, not a very tall one, but very pretty, with streamers of colored muslin hanging down from it. And nearby was her brother and several other boys.

"Why, how—when—" she began. She was almost too surprised to speak.

The boys laughed. "We thought it was too bad not to have a Maypole, and Fred asked us to help him fix it," explained Joe.

"We fixed it in the barn, and set it up when your mother sent you on the errand."

"Oh, how lovely! How nice of you all! Now won't you come this afternoon and bring any other boys you like?"

"Oh, yes, we'll come. Sure we will!"

Fred grinned. "And we'll wear white waists, and a bunch of flowers."

That evening, after a most joyful afternoon, Dora said to her brother, "It was dear of you to think of the Maypole."

"Huh! it wasn't anything."—The Leader.

For the Leader

When we begin to fight battles within our own lives then it is that we are on our way somewhere. It is by struggles with ourselves that we become something worthwhile. Christ taught that "the Kingdom of God is in us." Too often we have failed to recognize this great truth and have looked elsewhere, where we have never found it and never will—except within ourselves.

Christ taught self-control. He was the supreme example of self-control in its bigger sense. All through the Bible we find instances of the wonderful power of self-control which He possessed—when He was tempted by the devil, when He was scourged, on the cross.

Through self-control we may be able to rid our individual life of undesirable qualities. But this is only a small part: we can command the respect of others and in this way lead them to Christ.

Suggested Questions

What is the most necessary thing to control? In what way may we learn self-control? How was Jesus the embodiment of self-control?

What are the rewards of the practice of this virtue?

Is it always the best thing to use self-control?

What is the difference between self-control and self-discipline?

For Debate

Resolved, That the lack of self-control is sin.

Suitable Songs

"More Like the Master," "I Would Be Like Jesus," "Just When I Need Him Most," "He Leadeth Me," "Lead On, O King Eternal," and "The Touch of His Hand on Mine."

Poetry to the Point

IF

If you can keep your head when all about you

Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,

But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;

If you can dream and not make dreams your master;

If you can think and not make thoughts your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster,
And treat those two imposters just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken

Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the thing you gave your life to broken,

And stoop to build 'em up with worn-out tools;

If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings,
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew

To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the will which says to them, "Hold on!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,

Or walk with kings, nor lose the common touch;

If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;

If all men count with you, but none too much;

If you can fill the unforgiving minute

With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN FOR LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The registration campaign is now in its second week of activity. The registration list has grown from forty-four to one hundred and one, a gain of fifty-seven. We are just getting started. Next week we expect to see a greater gain in the list, and an increase each week until the close of the campaign.

We expect to make this the shortest and most active campaign we have ever had. We have more agents than ever before, and I believe more of them are going to do their level best to register every member of their respective churches than ever before.

We find several new names in the list of churches this week. Miss Pauline Pickard, from Fountain Place, Burlington, sends in a list of fourteen names; Miss Myra Yount, Reidsville, thirteen; Miss Ellen Etheridge, Whitakers, eight; Miss Virginia Massey, Spring Church, two; Miss Aubrey Crew, Pleasant Hill, four.

Advances were made by Miss Nell Dellinger, Charlotte First, seven; Mr. Earl Bulla, High Point First, six, and Miss Pauline Branson and Mr. Paul Minish, Winston First, three.

The standing by churches to date, in the total registrations, is: Fountain Place, 14; Reidsville, 13; Charlotte First, 10; High Point First, 9; Whitakers, 8; Winston First, 5; West End, 4; Pleasant Hill, Spring Ch., 4; Spring Church, 2; Saxapahaw, 2; Bethesda, Halifax, 2; Asheville, 2; State Street, 2; Denton, 2; Asheboro, 2; Harmony, Yarbrough, 2; Burlington First, 2; Kannapolis, 2; Thomasville Community, 1; Fairview, Anderson, 1; Flat Rock, Flat Rock, 1; Pleasant Gap, Democrat, 1; Mt. Lebanon, 1; Julian, 1; Pleasant Hill, W. Forsyth, 1; Lebanon, High Point, 1; Grace, 1; Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant, 1; unclassified, 4. Total, 101.

Some of the old-time winners, such as Miss Ruth Green, Albemarle, and Miss Margaret Rogers, Burlington First, have not been heard from directly. We have had an indirect hint, however, that Fountain Place, Reidsville, and Charlotte First will have to move from where they are if they expect to stay in the lead. It is not impossible for some "dark horse," not yet heard from, to come to the fore and give these "old-time war horses" such a race as they have never seen before. The unexpected sometimes happens. Keep your eyes open and on the campaign.

One hundred adult registrations, or the equal in children, gives the agent free entertainment at the school. A total of two hundred of the same from all the churches on a charge gives the pastor free entertainment and if any one agent of that church secures a hundred registrations she likewise will be given free entertainment. Several have said "we are endeavoring to win both."

In the order in which they register will be given at the right of their name, the number of preachers who have registered to that date. In the list below will be seen that to date twenty-seven preachers have registered. Others will be sent in later. This is not a bad percentage even now. A larger percentage than any other class. Good for you, preachers, but come on, the rest of you!

Registrations received since last report:

45. G. L. Amick
46. Miss Pauline Pickard
47. Mrs. R. G. Hornaday

We thank each and every one who, personally or through your church or Sunday school or C. E. Society, have helped us out during June. Eighty-six of our churches have responded during June with a total of $375.19. Also four individuals with a total of $21.25, making a total for the month, up to date, of $396.44. We thank you over and over again for this help. Without you we cannot run this splendid Home.

At the first of June we made a most earnest plea through superintendents and pastors asking that each church and Sunday school send us an extra offering during June. Eighty-six have responded; where are the other 134 churches? If every church and Sunday school would just help us each month it would be easy for all, and our hearts would be happy. Please look over the above list and see what First Church, Thomasville, did in response to our appeal. Also watch each month and see that Porter, one of our smallest churches, always makes a monthly offering. We need you and you need us. So come on and let's pull together to close the year without a deficit. Thank you.

We also thank all those who are mailing us the Octagon coupons. They are coming in well. Keep it up.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

—Ten co-operative earlot shipments of sweet potatoes have been made from Granville County this spring.

In my report, published May 23, $7.00 from Liberty Hill, Anderson charge, was credited to G. C. B. It should have been credited to A. C. B. The correction has been made on my books. The brother who sent the money made the mistake, and it is a pleasure for me to correct it.

Do not forget our slogan: "Every church on every charge paying every assessment in full by November 1, 1929." My books will close on the last day of October and will remain closed unless opened by order of the Annual Conference. Any contributions sent to me after this date will not be included in my report to the conference this year. I am making this statement now in order that the brethren may take due notice and govern themselves accordingly. I want my books audited before conference meets, and every member of the conference ought to want the same thing. It is fair both to the treasurer and the conference that this be done.

GEO. R. BROWN, Treas.

—Calvary's children's day presented an entertaining program which was enjoyed by a good congregation. As fifty little tots marched out for one exercise we were reminded of the effort necessary to train them. The offering did not come up to expectation; it was about $32.00.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE TO TREASURERS W. H. M. S.

Please send all W. H. M. S. money to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Missionary work of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mrs. Taylor's address is 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, N. C. Be sure to give name of church and charge and also your address.

MRS. H. A. GARRETT.

TO THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES AND PASTORS

Please remember that the total amount paid to the foreign missionary budget and one-fourth the amount paid to the home missionary budget counts on your General Conference budget. Three-fourths of the amount paid on the home missionary budget goes to interests inside of North Carolina and therefore does not go to the General Conference treasurer at all. According to the ruling at the last General Conference only money that passes through the General Conference treasurer's hands can be counted on the General Conference budget.

Please bear this in mind when raising your General Conference budget.

NOTICE

The annual District Rally for the Second District will be held at Flat Rock Church, Vance Circuit, Sunday, June 30, beginning at 11 o'clock a. m. There will be a picnic dinner on the church grounds at the conclusion of the morning session and the afternoon session will begin about 1:30. Members of all the churches in this district are urged to attend and help make the occasion a success.

R. A. HUNTER, Chairman.

RALLY DAY

Yes, another call to Denton, Davidson, South Lexington, North Davidson, Mocksville, State Street, people and pastors of these charges, to be present at the Rally Day Services the fifth Sunday in June commencing at ten A.M.

Unless you have a part on the program you will be expected to bring your lunch with you as it will be too much to ask the good people of Bethel on Mocksville Charge, where the meeting will be, to furnish the dinner. So don't come to eat only the good things that will be given for spiritual food.

Let's make 100 percent pastors in our attendance and that will give our people a good example.

J. W. BRAXTON,
N. G. BETHEA.

NOTICE

The rally will be held at Shady Grove on the fifth Sunday in June. If you belong to this district you are urged to come. Shady Grove is one mile northeast of Connelly Springs. Look for marker. Yours for a great rally.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Union Grove, Orange.—The first Sunday in June at 11 o'clock we had our children's day service. In the afternoon our pastor, Brother B. M. Williams, brought us another one of his good sermons.

These services were well attended and enjoyed by all. Much credit is due Miss Janie Blackwood and Miss Mae Snipes for their work in training the children. Collection for children's service, $20.00.

We are very much in need of a new and larger church here. We hope to be able to start one soon.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the church is to meet with Mrs. John Ray, of Hillsboro, the first Saturday afternoon in July at 3 o'clock.

We are very glad to have Miss Mae Snipes, who has been teaching, back with us in Sunday school again.

Rev. Mr. Minnis and family, of Graham, spent Monday at their father's, Mr. Morgan Minnis.

MRS. L. C. DAVIS, Reporter

Albemarle.—Our church is looking forward to a great day the fourth Sunday in this month. "Home Coming" day will be observed at this time, and it is hoped that all former pastors, members and friends of this church will make a special effort to attend.

Special attention is also called to the fact that the corner-stone laying will take place on that day. This day has been looked forward to with great anticipation by the members of this church since the completion of the new church building the first of the year, and we are expecting the largest crowd in the history of the church.

Several prominent speakers have been secured, and special music will be rendered by different groups of singers.

Everybody is invited to come and enjoy the day with us. Dinner will be served in the dining room of the church and if it is convenient to do so, bring a basket of lunch—if not, come anyway.

The Ladies' Aid Society held their June meeting at the home of Mrs. Marshall Hatley, with Mrs. Ira Smart as joint hostess. The regular business was transacted, and there was no special business to come before the meeting.

During the social hour the hostesses served delicious refreshments consisting of sandwiches, deviled egg, lemonade and chocolate cake. About 20 members were present at this meeting.

Our pastor and family motored to Atlanta, Ga., last week. He returned the latter part of the week, but Mrs. Anderson and the children will spend some time visiting friends and relatives before returning.

MRS. JOHN C. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Union Ridge, South Winston-Salem.—Bro. Taylor's letter this week is fine. He had a fine text, John 15:8: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." Well, the 15th chapter of John is fine. The sixth verse tells us all about what will be done for us if we are not bearers of fruit. The seventh verse tells how we must live and what we can do. I read on page five of your paper (By Prayer) how John Wesley prayed two hours every day and some days more than that. Luther and all the men of God prayed much that we might have our great Methodist church and all other churches of like faith in God. I also see on page 16 that Grace Church will have no evening service through the months of June and July. I wonder what Bro. Wesley would say about that. I wonder what they are going to do myself.

May the Lord bless you.

P. W. MOCK.

West Forsyth.—Last Sunday was a good day for Pleasant Hill church. A large congregation was present for the morning preaching service. A pleasant surprise was given the people by the pastor. He had invited Bro. William Porter, of Kernersville, to speak to the congregation, no previous announcement being made of his coming. Bro. Porter delivered a very helpful and forceful message on the subject "Spiritual Vision." It was the writer's privilege in his boyhood days to have heard Bro. Porter while he was pastor of the Burlington church and the good impressions received have lingered with us during the intervening years. We were delighted to have Bro. Porter with us. He was accompanied by a Mr. Parks, also of Kernersville, and they were both entertained for dinner at the parsonage.

The service at Tabernacle church last Sunday afternoon was not so well attended, owing to the extreme warm weather and possibly on account of a funeral in a community near the church. The people were very attentive to the effort of the pastor in presenting a message. The annual revival meeting will begin at Tabernacle church the third Sunday in next month at 11 o'clock in the morning instead of 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Pleasant Hill congregation will join with the Tabernacle people in their first service of the revival. Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of the Randolph charge, will be with us and do the preaching during the meeting.

The vote for delegate to the next Annual Conference was taken at Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches last Sunday. This was a reminder of the rapid approach of the Annual Conference, which is now less than five months hence.

The Children's Day program was rendered at Pleasant Hill church Sunday night with a large congregation present, the church being almost filled. The children and young people performed their parts well, considering the limited time devoted to preparing the program. The program consisted of a welcome recitation, exercises by the primary and intermediate departments of the Sunday school, a pageant by pupils of all departments of the school and a pantomime by the larger girls of the school. The pastor made a brief talk and took an offering, which amounted to $7.00, which will go to the board of missions.

The people of this charge are constantly presenting useful gifts to the pastor and family, and we have been remembered in this manner by a number of people since our last report. We appreciate these gifts.

The revival meeting will begin at Harmony Grove church next Sunday morning. The pastor has been asked by the church to do the preaching during the meeting which will continue for at least a week. The services will be held each evening at 8 o'clock during the week, and a day service may be held. We invite our church people and people of other denominations to attend the services and help with the singing and personal work. Harmony Grove church is located two miles from Lewisville and three miles from Clemmons. It is also about ten miles from Winston-Salem.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—Our Sunday school is still progressing and creating much interest. We are furnishing our Sunday school rooms, and hope to have them completed in the near future. The flowers placed about the church grounds some time ago are now in full blast, making it a beautiful place at which to worship God.

We were very glad indeed to have our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, with us Sunday afternoon, as it was impossible for him to be with us the first Sunday morning. He delivered a most helpful sermon. Herald readers, we are glad to tell you that Mr. Braxton completed his college course at High Point College a few days ago.

Our revival meeting will begin the first Sunday in July with three services: preaching at 11 o'clock, singing services in the afternoon, and preaching again at 8. The prayer of every one is requested for a great success.

Our Ladies' Aid Society is progressing nicely and doing fine work. Our heartsister ring is making things of much interest.

May God bestow his richest blessings upon each reader of the Herald.

STELLA BAILEY, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Brother Reed preached a good sermon today. Our Sunday school has been small for the last three Sundays, but better today. Congregation did fairly well. We were glad to see so many of them back in their places. There was something said about Children's Day, but no time was set. Hope people will take part in it and all work together for good. We are looking for Bro. T. F. McCulloch to preach for us the third Sunday in July. We are pleased to have him to preach for us; he was our pastor years ago.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Rose Hill.—We were very glad to have with us Rev. T. Glenn Madison, who is to be our pastor for the summer months. He filled his first appointment here Sunday and brought to us two very helpful and soul-stirring messages which were enjoyed by all. Both the morning and evening services were well attended.

The Junior Christian Endeavorers meet every Sunday afternoon and the Senior Christian Endeavorers meet every Sunday night. Some very interesting programs have been given. The intermediate class of which Miss Mary Quick is teacher rendered for the Senior Endeavorers and to the public a most interesting pageant on last Sunday night, which was beautifully carried out.

The Ladies' Aid Society is doing some splendid work. We have sufficient funds to partition off two Sunday school rooms in the church and to get some new furniture for the church. We are planning to do even more to beautify the church. We are planning a supper Thursday night for the pastors and officials of the town. We trust our every effort will count for the glory and upbuilding of God's Kingdom.

MISS LEO SOWELL, Reporter.

First Church, Burlington.—Attendance at Sunday school today was 345 with offering amounting to $19.60. Attendance showed an increase of 89 over the previous Sunday.

Miss Kathleen Paschall has arrived and is on the job as young people's worker for the summer. Miss Paschall is from Henderson, N. C., and comes to us highly recommended for the work in which she is engaged. We are hoping that much may be done in various phases of the church and Sunday school work during the coming months with Bro. Gerringer and Miss Paschall taking the lead.

Bro. Gerringer assisted in the funeral of Mr. Wm. Frank Amick, of Whitsett, who passed away suddenly last week. Mr. Amick was the father of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Amick, members of the Burlington First Church. The family and relatives have the prayers and sympathy of the church.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held in the main auditorium of the church Wednesday evening, June 12, following the prayer meeting, with our pastor presiding. Things of importance were discussed and passed upon at this meeting. A goal was set for $100 Children's Day offering. A number of good reports were made at this time concerning the work of the church.

Mr. James Rogers, of this city, and Miss Nell King, of Greensboro, N. C., were happily married Sunday in the early morning at the parsonage, Bro. Gerringer officiating. Miss King is a splendid young lady of exceptional qualities and ranks high among a large circle of friends, who will learn with interest of her marriage. Mr. Rogers is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Rogers, of this city, and is a faithful member of First Church, a graduate of High Point M. P. College of class of 1928, and a young man of noble character. A large host of friends wish for these young people a life of much happiness and usefulness.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

English Street.—Our Sunday school is growing. Every class is adding new members. The smaller classes are taking much interest in singing, with Mrs. Reynolds as superintendent and Miss Irene Reynolds as organist.

It was decided at a Workers' Council to divide the Jennie Lee Philathea class and take some girls out of another class and form a new class which is now working fine with Miss Swanie Baldin as teacher. The Philathea class had 24 present after taking those out. Now they will have to hustle or this new class will catch up.

We are sorry to report a painful accident on English Street last Friday when Owen Parson, small grandson of Mrs. J. C. Johnson and a member of Mrs. Reynolds' class of small boys, was run over by an automobile, breaking both legs, one arm and sustaining a bad cut on the head; he is now in the High Point hospital in a painful condition.

Mrs. W. P. Ridge, who has been sick for several months, is slowly improving and able to sit up some at her home on English Street.

Mrs. Warren Phillips, who has been sick for a long time with heart trouble, continues sick at her home. Mrs. J. C. Burton, absent from church for several weeks on account of sickness, has improved enough to be able to be in her place at the services Sunday night.

We are hoping for a speedy recovery for all these as they were faithful to be at their places in church and they are being missed very much.

The Ladies' Aid met last week on Tuesday night with Miss Monroe on Briggs Street with a good attendance of members and some visitors, showing an active interest in all lines of this work. It was voted to give a measuring social in the yard of Mrs. Jim Bowers as soon as the president, Mrs. Goebel, returns from her vacation. The committee is already at work on a jolly program.

The Senior Endeavorers came together last Thursday night at the home of J. A. Lee, Carr Street, for their business and social. The business program was full of interest, after which every one seemed to be in good spirits, playing old-time games. The folks enjoyed this very much. Refreshments were served in the dining room where the game of "gossip" was played around the table.

Bible reading was started two Sundays ago and each member in Sunday school that can read gives the number of chapters read the week before. Last Sunday with 115 present a report of 3,000 Bible chapters had been read, some of the boys reading a hundred chapters.

Two young girls' classes, their teachers, Miss Swanie Baldin and Mrs. Jennie Lee, and some of their friends went to the home of Miss Kate Phillips Friday night and after deciding on some important matters all went out into a nearby field and had a weiner and marshmallow roast. All stayed until a shower of rain chased us home.

MRS. J. A. LEE, Reporter.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Our Sunday school is moving along with interest and growing in number, there being 117 on roll Sunday. Rev. T. J. Whitehead could not be with us Sunday, but K. G. Holt from High Point College filled the appointment. We were very glad to have him with us and hope he will come again.

The fourth Sunday in this month there will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock, preaching at 11, and dinner on the grounds. In the afternoon the Children's Day exercise will be held. Every one is invited to come and spend the day.

The fifth Sunday in this month will be Rally Day for West Thomasville charge at Canaan church. We are looking forward for a worthwhile day and hope all the churches on the charge will be represented. Every one has an invitation to come. REPORTER.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—These hot days are trying on all of us, at church and at work. Some may stay from church worship thinking it is cooler at home than at church. We are very glad to say there are quite a few that the weather doesn't affect in that way.

Monday began our Vacation Bible School, which will continue for two weeks. The children are interested in this and we hope it will be very, very successful. Our church is pioneering this school this year; this is the first time that we have had the opportunity of presenting this type of training to our children in our local church. We have a very competent faculty for this work.

Miss Bettie Brittingham is with us this week helping somewhat in the outlining and starting of our Bible School. The Christian Endeavor Society has planned a little social affair and a get-acquainted party Tuesday night and we hope we may all know and enjoy the fellowship of one another and of Miss Brittingham during her stay with us.

The Booster's Class of our Sunday school had a wonderful little social last week, a weiner roast, jokes and a general good time. This is the young women's and young men's class of our Sunday school.

Ho! Our Summer Conference is almost here. Are you going? We hope to have a goodly number from our church attend.

Our Young People's Missionary Society is doing a splendid work. They have taken a child at the Children's Home to help clothe and make happy. They have sent out many other articles to gladden hearts of the receivers. Last year they won the banner; let's hope they win it again for their splendid work and programs. Mrs. J. A. Gwyn is the adult adviser. She is appreciated by all the girls, and loved as well for her helpfulness, splendid spirit, and counsel.

Sunday morning our pastor gave us a good sermon, "The Voice of Duty." Some of us are unconscious when duty calls, some don't want to hear, and others heed after they have their duty before them.

If we can all grow more determined each day to do more and more for Christ, which is our first duty, we should not fear but that material things will come.

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—Our Sunday school has several new members. We welcome them. Bro. Ridge brought us a very impressive sermon Sunday on "Worship."

An election for delegate to the Annual Conference was held; the candidates were Chas. Grant and Roland Turner. After this communion service was held.

Our revival services will begin the third Sunday in July.

The third quarterly conference will be held here on Saturday before the fourth Sunday of next month.

I have been appointed registration agent for my church. Any one who wishes to register, just hand me your fee and I will gladly send it in.

LUCILLE WARLICK, Reporter.

Siler City.—Interest and attendance are very good in our Sunday school. The annual picnic will be given at Kimesville Lake June 20th. The various other organizations of our church are very active and doing a good work also.

Our auditorium was almost filled to overflowing last Sunday evening when the Children's Day service was given. This splendid program was rendered under the direction of Mesdames Leslie Parker, C. E. Brady and Lewis Woody.

For the past month or two it seems we have had quite a bit of sickness in our community. Mrs. Russell, our pastor's wife, has recently undergone a very serious operation for appendicitis, but we are glad to know she is improving rapidly. Mrs. Will Teague has been sick practically all the spring, and since her recovery was so slow she was carried to Richmond last week by her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Carrick, where she is under the care of specialists for a while.

Miss Lebus Stone, a student of High Point College, is at home for the vacation season. Miss Margaret Siler, a graduate of Peabody Institute, is also spending the summer with her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wade Siler.

PEARLIE MOORE, Reporter.

Lincolnton.—During the past three weeks we have taken in eight new members.

On June 16 our Sunday school is going to Roberta Station to have services with the M. P. S. S.

Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, and several other church members drove to Cincinnati with the Cox evangelistic party to attend the God's Bible School camp meeting. They reported it fine with 250 converts at one service.

Our Christian Endeavors have been going fine. The intermediates have planned a weiner roast Saturday, June 15. We are planning to have a grand time.

REPORTER.

High Point.—In connection with the regular morning service on Sunday Children's Day was observed and a beautiful and interesting pageant, "The Children's Hosanna," was presented. The message brought by the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, was on the subject "Children in the Temple."

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the topic of his discussion "How Old Are You?" from the text found in Genesis 47:8. The minister said in part that it is safer to pull the tail of a tiger than to ask the average woman her age. It is possible that there was an understanding about the purpose of the question. The whole dark panorama of Israel and her evil days is lighted up by the story of Joseph, which is outstanding in all history. We are accustomed to measure life by years, but our citizenship is in heaven, not on earth. The soul of man is the dominating element in our lives. We sometimes think that a year has been wasted by war, bereavement, panic, or disappointment of different kinds. The thing that breaks the spirit and crushes the heart of a man or woman is that our lives have amounted to nothing. "She hath done what she could," as related of Mary by the Master when she broke the alabaster box of precious ointment to anoint Him for his burial is the grandest encomium that can be paid to any woman. A gloomy way of measuring life is by its trials and disappointments, for on the happiest lot some blow will fall. We ought to learn that when one day is clouded by storm, one hundred are smooth, fair, and sunny.

"To every man upon this earth
God gives a burden to be carried down
The way between the cross and crown;
No lot is wholly free,
He giveth one to thee."

We need to minimize our sorrows, and one of the best yardsticks is our purpose in life, for what we do is all that counts.

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun

Views from thy hand no worthy action done."

An old man who is reality had lived 83 years, upon being asked by a young boy how old he was, replied that he was only three years of age, meaning that he had lived the Christian life for that brief period.

The Vacation Church School is proving highly successful with an enrollment of 150 children. There are 18 workers who are kept busy all the time. Ernest Auman, Jr., and Joseph Montgomery are helping with the boys' work. Mrs. E. L. Ballard is assisting in the Junior Department with the handwork. The spirit and morale of the school is fine. A number of children from the Home are attending these sessions.

The Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer will be at home to the members of the congregation at the new parsonage one afternoon and evening next week, the exact date to be announced later.

Mrs. John S. Pickett will leave Wednesday for Trenton, N. J., to visit her mother, Mrs. Sams, for a few weeks.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. W. Lewis White, in Greensboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ballard have returned from their wedding trip to northern cities, and are at home at their new residence on Howell Street.

It was with great surprise and deepest regret that we heard the sad news of the passing of Dr. T. H. Lewis, of Washington, but High Point people have not heard the details. He had often been a visitor here, and spoke when the new First Church was opened, and delivered the commencement sermon at High Point College in 1927. He was an outstanding leader in our denomination and it may truly be said of him:

"He bore without abuse

The grand old name of gentleman."

Hollister.—The Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. J. L. Alston June 11th. Mrs. E. T. Ellington led the devotional. We had a very helpful meeting. We are planning to have a picnic on the fourth of July. We are going to give the Brunswick stew free and sell barbecue and ice cream. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the Auxiliary.

We are having Delco lights put in the church. Heretofore we have been using gas lamps.

We are planning to have Children's Day service next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

The Halifax County Sunday school convention will meet at Central Cross M. E. church near Enfield on July the 6th and 7th. We want to have a large delegation from Hollister Sunday school present.

REPORTER.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Ct.—Sunday, June 16, was a good day for Orange Chapel. Our day's program began at 10 a. m. with Mr. W. T. Hurst teaching the Sunday school lesson to the school in a body. All who have ever heard him teach know how capable a teacher he is and we were very glad to have him with us at this time.

Dr. Dixon brought the 11 o'clock message in his usual zealous, earnest way. Allene Thompson read the past history of Orange Chapel church. The speakers of the afternoon were Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College; Prof. H. E. Coble, of Belmont, and Mr. McBride Holt, of Graham. These addresses were enjoyed very much and to each of these speakers we extend a hearty welcome to come back to Orange Chapel any time. We were glad to have Mrs. Dixon and two small children worship with us also.

Mr. McBride Holt explained to us how a memorial association could be organized, so we proceeded to organize at our church at once and I think there were nearly 25 to join yesterday.

The music of the afternoon was furnished by members of Graham and Mt. Pleasant churches with Mr. Easley at the piano. We appreciated their help very much and hope they may sing for us again.

Orange Chapel has recently purchased a new piano for church and think it will add greatly to our music.

Mr. J. S. Crawford remains right feeble.

ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—We had our Children's Day service June 16th at 2:30 p. m. The children did their parts well; we feel very proud of the children and everybody seemed to enjoy the exercise very much.

Much credit is due to Mrs. A. V. Jones and Mrs. E. E. Brown, who trained the children.

The collection amounted to $30.00. If we just had had an all-day service it would be better.

Sunday school is moving along very nicely and the attendance is good for this time of the year, as this is the season people want to take their vacations.

The votes for delegate will be held here the second Sunday in July. The nominees are Bro. C. A. Bivins, of Enfield church, and D. A. Pender, of Chestnut Ridge church. Communion service will also be observed.

Gravelly Hill Union Sunday school is moving along nicely. It keeps growing. Every one seems to be interested in this little Sunday school. Readers, pray for us that we may do a great deed through this Sunday school.

Rev. D. B. Green, of the Mebane Presbyterian church, gave us a splendid and helpful message. Who will volunteer to be the next to preach for us? We will be delighted to have any one that feels like helping us.

REPORTER.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—A word about Homecoming Day last Sunday. We think it was a wonderful success. Those absent missed a treat. We wish you could have been with us. If our pastor never preaches to a house full at Mt. Lebanon again, he will have the consolation of knowing that he did one time. All the seats were filled, some of the people were standing, and others were outside listening. And such a sermon! I wish you could have heard it.

His text was Luke 10:42: "But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." His subject was "Jesus in the Home." He pointed out to us the importance, the beauty and pleasure of having Jesus reign in our hearts and homes, and petitioned us to choose, like Mary of old, that good part which shall not be taken away from us.

After lunch served picnic style in abundance the afternoon session began with Mr. L. R. Hughes presiding. Brother Hughes in a splendid way heartily welcomed old friends of Mt. Lebanon and the "strangers within our gate." Rev. Filmore Kennett made the first talk of the afternoon, giving a brief history of his life. Dr. C. E. Wilkerson, of Greensboro, came next. Other speakers were Brothers W. A. Lamb, John Hanner, Philander White and Jim Lutterlough. Rev. Paul S. Kennett brought greetings from High Point College. He gave a summary of the talks made during the afternoon. Rev. T. A. Williams also made a few remarks, inviting the folks back again and bidding them God-speed. Bro. A. J. Daniel was chairman of the program committee and I think he deserves much credit for the success of the day.

Monday night Rev. T. H. Stimpson, of Virginia, father of our pastor's wife, preached the second sermon of our revival. His text was John 13:34-35, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another: as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." His subject was "A True Christian," a very appropriate sermon for the beginning of a revival service. He challenged us to test ourselves to see whether or not we were true Christians or merely counterfeits. We hope to have a great revival. Pray for us that we may.

YADKIN COLLEGE REUNION

It was held on Thursday, June 13th, and from every standpoint it was a happy occasion. I did not count the attendants but one hundred to one hundred and fifty must have been there, former students of the school and citizens of the community. The program was given in the M. E. Church, South. Prayer was offered by Rev. H. L. Powell. Mr. M. F. Phillips made the address of welcome and the reply was by Rev. A. S. Raper. Then followed the address of Mr. J. Norman Wills. He stopped the wheels of time and went back forty-two years just to be a boy again for one brief day. His reminiscences were greatly enjoyed. In the afternoon there were brief talks by a number of the boys and girls who were there with Mr. Wills, and since, all of which gave a sweet aroma to the occasion. Two of the beloved teachers were present—Prof. H. C. Stout, of the more remote past, and Prof. W. T. Totten, of the years more recent. Each teacher spoke, of course, and former students of each were there to cheer them. Mrs. Stout went there as a bride. She was present on this occasion; it would be difficult to tell whether she and Professor Stout were happier then or at the reunion. The absence of Prof. G. W. Holmes, who taught there for many years, was a matter of regret to every one. The day was a revel in good things. We sang, talked, ate, laughed, fellowshiped—did just what would be expected when the boys and girls of long ago return to the old stamping ground to spend a day with each other. Body, mind and spirit—the whole man was refreshed. At the noon hour a regular delicatessen was spread on the long table in the shade of the stately oaks. As would be expected, the abundance of this spread was not so large after the appetites of this hungry group were satisfied. However, there was enough and to spare. The currents of Old Yadkin are still flowing, and they are to be brought in vital touch with our newest venture in learning—High Point College. A roster of the Yadkin College students, from the present back to the remote past, is being prepared, and this will probably be placed in the archives of High Point College. Bro. Curry is planning also to ring the old into the new by having the old Yadkin bell installed in the tower at High Point. Let us help him do it.

A committee was created to plan for the reunion in 1930. Mrs. W. M. Koonts, Lexington, is chairman, and Miss Lucy Owen, Yadkin College, secretary. Upon the recommendation of the committee, the first Thursday in June was agreed upon as the date for next year. We all feel grateful to the homefolks for the fine reception that they gave us; to Mrs. Koonts, C. J. Taylor, and any others who worked out the details of this happy occasion; and to the members of the church for the use of their building. We parted, feeling that we were at the "end of a perfect day," and with our hearts already set for the reunion.

THE QUEEREST CREATURE

No bird or beast did ever see
In air or water or on land
So queer a creature as the one
For want of better name called Man.

He starts his life before he's ready,
Can neither walk nor fly nor swim;
How quickly his career would end
If no one would take care of him.

Then he's unclad and sure would freeze
If he himself did not enwrap,
And what a sight it makes of him
With garments fastened with a strap.

What frightful forms does he assume
In all the fashions of his dress!
He tries to change with all the seasons,
And truly does he make a mess.

But queerest thing of all is this:
He says he's booked for better state,
But ever loath to make the start,
He's more than willing to be late.

—J. F. M.

CURIOUS?

In my article last week I made the statement, "People are curious." I have since questioned whether I used the word correctly. Perhaps I should have said "queer."

My reason for regarding people as queer is the fact, as I endeavored to bring out, that they will be tremendously enthusiastic about something which they hope to get, and then, having been given more than they expected, cannot be inspired to further effort in behalf of the enterprise in order to insure its permanence and to increase its usefulness.

Am I correct?

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

It opens July 15 and closes July 19. Every pastor is expected and urged to be present from the beginning to the end. Do you take that in, pastor? Please think it over and make your plans to this effect. Now, layman, I have a word for you. The expense of your pastor to attend this conference is something. I do not know how to calculate the transportation expense except through the idea that preacher's gas and wear and tear of car cost him nothing. Now I hope in this case this will be literally true. Please see to it that your pastor is given a present of enough to pay traveling expenses to High Point and back home. Then, too, there will be a small expense for the pastor's keep while he is at High Point. The cost of meals will be $1.25 per day and 50 cents for each meal under a day. The pastor can do as he likes about sleeping. It costs him nothing. Now, dear brother layman, please get busy and see somebody else and get together enough to meet the expense of your pastor at this conference. This will be a nice way to encourage him to go. It will say to him, "Go rest and work at the same time and be better prepared to serve your people when you return." Come on, layman, and send your pastor to the Summer Conference.

Yours for the best conference yet,

GEO. L. CURRY.

MINISTERS' MEETING

All ministers and preachers in the Western section of our Conference, beginning with Lexington, are urged to be present at the Shelby Methodist Protestant Church, Monday, June 24, 11 A.M. President Taylor will speak at that hour and in the afternoon there will be round table discussions on live topics that interest all pastors especially.

No time will be lost and all pastors are in driving distance so that they can return home same day. Where there are several living near each other considerable expense can be saved by going together. Be sure and be there, brethren.

MOUNTAINS OF ICE

Ocean liners that arrived in New York last week reported many icebergs near the North Atlantic travel lane. The Red Star liner Arabia was delayed six hours. It passed 19 big icebergs, besides many "growlers," the name given by seamen to smaller masses of floating ice. The largest iceberg was 160 feet high and a quarter of a mile long.—Current Events.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stone Are Honored On Birthday—at the Age of 69.

The children, grandchildren, and sons and daughters-in-law gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stone of near Thomasville, to pay tribute to their 69th birthday, Saturday evening, June 8. Grandpa's birthday was on Wednesday, June 5th, and grandma's Saturday, June 8th.

We gathered on the porch and lawn where we enjoyed ourselves very much talking and laughing over the past, future and present.

As it was so disagreeable outside, we were forced to spread our supper on a long table in the dining room. There were many nice things to eat. Lemonade was served as a refreshment.

There were thirty-two guests present consisting of children, grandchildren, and sons and daughters-in-law.

Many gifts were presented to our beloved mother, father, grandmother and grandfather. May the remainder of their years be long which the Lord God hath given them.

We are planning on December 18 of this year to honor them with a "golden wedding." I think a couple that live together for fifty years should be honored, if possible, in some way. Don't you think so?

Mr. and Mrs. Stone are members of Mt. Pleasant M. P. church. Mr Stone is the intermediate superintendent of the Sunday-school and has been the superintendent for many years.

A Grand-daughter,

—George R. Ross, of Asheboro, at the age of 41 finds himself in a very responsible position. He has been appointed by Governor Gardner as director of 28 state-owned farms. One of these farms has 6,900 acres. Bro. Ross is a son of R. R. Ross. His office will be at the State's Central Prison.

—While Bro. L. W. Jobe and family were away from home last Friday their house was entered and ransacked. Mrs. Jobe found all her clothing gone. Bro. Jobe missed some of his and the foreign coin he brought from France. Articles of food were taken also. The house was entered by cutting wire screen and breaking window glass. There are no very near neighbors and the thieves had little fear of detection. It is humiliating to know that we have people capable of doing such a deed.

GOOD HEALTH

Health, health, health, health,
Health the very best of wealth!
Health of body and health of mind,
Health that's of the robust kind.
Health of spirit sound and pure,
Health that builds to long endure.
Health from eating wholesome food,
Health exempt from things tabooed.
Health that does not slump or shirk,
Health from well-done useful work.
Health quite free from useless stress,
Health from daily cleanliness.
Health as blithe as warbling birds,
Health that thrives on wisdom's words.
Health from prudent exercise,
Health that sparkles in the eyes.
Health immune from nervous waste,
Health that knows no foolish haste.
Health from rest and eight hours sleep,
Health that comes from breathing deep.
Health expressed in daily cheer,
Health that has no doubt or fear.
Health of outdoor life and sun,
Health from walking, sport and fun.
Health that laughs at drug or pill.
Health of thought that knows no ill.
Health that sits and stands erect,
Health that speaks of self-respect.
Health from gardening in the sod,
Health that keeps the laws of God.
Health, health, health, health,
Health for you the best of wealth!

—Grenville Kleiser

—H. Cicero Causey died last week at the age of 83 years after a lingering illness. The funeral was conducted on Friday in the Liberty M. P. Church by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. J. C. Russell. Bro. Causey showed strong love for the church though he never became a nominal member. He professed saving faith in Christ more than a year ago while he was confined in Clinic Hospital, Greensboro.

—Rev. J. D. Williams was kept from his church last Sunday by illness. His pulpit was filled in the morning by Dr. R. M. Andrews and at night by Dr. S. W. Taylor. Bro. Williams is now out and hopes to fill his pulpit next Sunday.

—Home-coming at Albemarle will be unusually interesting this year. A new attraction will be the new church which President Taylor pronounces the third best building we have in North Carolina.

—Dr. J. D. Williams, Jr., has advanced to his senior year in his medical course. He is now doing intern work in a hospital in New Jersey, and is responsible for the service of many patients. His wife is serving as nurse in the same institution.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway, assisted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer, conducted the funeral of W. F. Amick at Mount Pleasant church. He died in the Whitsett community at the age of 62.

—Since the discovery of the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida, any fruit in which there are found small worms or maggots should be an object of suspicion and those who find infected fruits are asked to send them to Dr. R. W. Leiby, State Entomologist, Raleigh, or to the Bureau of Entomology at Washington, D. C.

—The following table from an article by Professor P. L. Lord in the School Journal (New York) shows the status of boys in average public schools in New York City. There were twenty boys in each group, chosen by lot, one group from boys who smoked cigarettes and the other from those who did not smoke. They were taken from the same classes in the same schools, the ages ranging from ten to seventeen years, average fourteen years. The reports were made impartially by ten teachers, the boys being under observation for a number of months.

—Wm. C. Aldridge was hurt in the Buick plant, Flint, Mich., on March 20. As a result he died June 9. On June 13 he was buried at Bethany church, near Worthville, N. C., Revs. D. I. Garner and J. E. Pritchard in charge of the funeral.

VOLUME XXXV

NUMBER 34

"Because I Live, Ye Shall Live Also"

The twelve were troubled, filled with doubt.
What would befall them when their Lord,
Quite overcome by cruel death,
Could speak to them no heart'ning word?

With words of balm the Master soothes
Their troubled hearts and gives new hope:
He paints for them a larger view,
He gives their vision grander scope.

He draws aside the veil of death
And brings to light immortal life.
Not victim, victor, will He be
When He comes forth from dreadful strife.

And they will share with Him the life
His glowing words now bring to view.
What joy and hope in His great words:

"Because I live, shall ye live too!"

He ends not there: He paints a view
No brush or chisel could e'er portray:

"I in My Father and ye in Me!"

O blessed hope—to last always.

And still there's more. In year of grace
One thousand nine hundred twenty-nine
A saint of God in our own land
Is brought quite near life's boundary line.

He finds the gloom of death's dark vale
Illumined by a light quite new,
He hears the voice of Jesus say,

"Because I live, shall ye live too."

Eternal life and such a life!
A life that's hid with Christ in God!
Most glorious hope for souls of men
Whose bodies lie beneath the sod!

Stand Still and See: Go Forward

Both are commands of God. There is a time to stand still and see the way of the Lord. The Lord has a way out. You are not in a closed bag. You may see no way out, but there is a way. God sees it and will show it to you if you will only stand still and look. Calm yourself. Be not overcome with frantic fear. God has not forsaken you. He is waiting to deliver you, waiting for you to stand still and see what He has for you, His marvelous way of escape. Then when He shows you His way, He commands you to go forward. You must not expect to be carried. You must go. You must use the strength God has given you. The way God provides may be a strange way, but go forward in it, you will find that it leads to safety and real deliverance. It is not a way of death but a way of life. Go forward with all confidence and see the salvation of the Lord.

Rev. J. H. Moton

Three months ago Bro. Moton became ill. He hoped and his friends hoped that he would recover health and resume his work in the ministry. But he grew worse rather than better. Pneumonia was added to his other ailments and it became evident last week that the end was near. None knew it better than he. He told Rev. R. I. Farmer that his grip was packed and he was ready for the great journey. He spoke of his approaching death as Paul spoke of his. He was unafraid. He knew whom he had believed. He saw in death, not destruction, but deliverance. Last Sunday morning, near the hour when he had been accustomed for fifty years to rise as on eagle's wings for a flight of oratory, he rose and soared away beyond the skies. Brother Moton is no more and we have none like him. He was an outstanding minister in our Conference. He had some qualities in higher degree than any other. He was unsurpassed in earnestness as a preacher and he perhaps excelled all others in emotional ardor. Aroused by the truth himself, he had rare power to rouse others. Rev. W. F. Kennett expressed the belief that Bro. Moton led more people to Christ for salvation than any other minister that has ever labored in our Conference. He estimated the number by thousands. Surely he had a glorious ministry. He served fifteen charges in forty-five years. He gave himself fully to the ministry of the word. He could not do otherwise and be true to his intense convictions. He trusted in God and was not disappointed. He found out by trial that those who seek first the kingdom and righteousness of God have added unto them the supplement of physical needs.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon in First Church, High Point. Among the large number present were more than twenty-five ministers. The service was a most impressive one, President S. W. Taylor in charge. The two surviving members of Bro. Moton's Conference class, Rev. W. F. Kennett and Rev. W. M. Pike, by agreement among the three, paid their tributes of personal affection and esteem. At the request of Mrs. Moton Rev. R. I. Farmer had a place among those who spoke and told of impressions received by the bedside of Bro. Moton in his long illness. By request of Bro. Moton the casket was opened in the church and all were permitted to behold his face in the repose of death. He looked much as he did in life, not wasted away by his long illness. The throng that followed saw his body committed to earth in High Point's cemetery. Those who in imagination tried to follow his departed spirit saw a very different scene. One minister's wife declared that she believed that on that funeral day on earth Bro. Moton was the happiest man in Heaven.

Bro. Moton left besides Mrs. Moton several sons and daughters. They will have the sympathy of many who learned by personal experience of Brother Moton's worth. His life was about 75 years long, we believe, and in early manhood he began to give himself to the work of saving men.

THE PREROGATIVE OF PREACHING

Rev. W. A. Ledford.

The church located on the main thorough-fare today will likely have ten times as many people pass it during the hour of worship as attend its services. Considering the number who do not attend any church services, together with those who do attend so irregularly as to derive practically no benefit therefrom and add to these two classes, the large per cent, who attend the other services of the sanctuary and habitually leave before the preaching services, and one wonders if there were not grounds for Jews and Greeks to speak of the "the foolishness of preaching." There seems to be a growing disposition to minimize the importance of Gospel preaching. The churches that advertise short sermons, elaborate musical programs and other side features, hoping thereby to draw large congregations, need to study the Scriptures.

The prerogative of preaching is the salvation of believers. If preaching fails to save the world, then God has made no other provision. Paul wrote the Corinthians, "It was God's good pleasure through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Moffatt's scholarly and helpful translation of the same verse is as follows: "God resolved to save believers by the 'sheer folly' of the Christian message." This message may be, and frequently is, proclaimed by the laity as well as the ministers; and in other places than in the Christian churches. Yet there can be no one so well prepared to deliver this message as the one called of God, trained for and set apart by the church for this very purpose. Paul wrote to the Romans, "How can they hear without a preacher?" Some one has said, "The church localizes God for us," and there is no place so fitted for the proclamation of the church's message as in the church itself, where most of the decisions, conversions, dedications and consecrations take place. The church that has lifted up Jesus Christ has never failed.

The late Bishop W. A. Quayle, who won such phenomenal success preaching the gospel, and wore his life out so prematurely, perhaps gave out the secret of his great zeal and passion when he requested that there might be carved on his tombstone, "Allow'd of God to be put in trust of the Gospel." A sense of that responsibility and obligation that rested on Paul and was felt so keenly by Bishop Quayle on all Christian ministers would doubtless bring a new day to the Christian church. The church led by its ministers has the only message that can save this world. The sun alone can bring day to this physical world; not all stars and moon combined can take the prerogative of the sun; neither can all other agencies combined take the prerogative of preaching the Christian message in saving believers. This method that meets with the good pleasure of God the Father shall not fail.

—Ministers of all classes and degrees of prominence should guard their reputations as well as their characters. There are worldly-minded people who will try by various arts to secure the endorsement of ministers for schemes that will not stand close inspection. They give their compliments (and sometimes complimentary tickets) to ministers to bring about a situation in which they can say, "See, the ministers are patrons; can't you afford to go where they go and do as they do?" Don't be taken in. "In vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird."

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

A Variety in Magnitudes and Colors

W. E. SHEPARD

Stars are divided according to their brightness into magnitudes. This has no reference whatever to the real size of the star, only to its apparent size. A small star may be so near the earth that it looks like a large one, while a large star may be so far away that it looks like a small one. Magnitude, then, has reference only to what a star appears to be in size. The largest ones we see with the naked eye are of the first magnitude. The next in apparent size are of the second magnitude. Then they go on down the line—third, fourth, fifth, and sixth. This is as far as the naked eye can detect a star—down to the sixth magnitude. There are about twenty belonging to the first. These are the brightest we can see from the different positions on the earth. Fifty-nine are in the second-magnitude class, 182 in the third, 530 in the fourth, 1,600 in the fifth, and 4,800 in the sixth. There are about three times as many in any one magnitude as there are in the next brighter one. The total number down to and including the sixth magnitude is around seven thousand, which is probably more than any ordinary eye can detect. Generally speaking, six thousand stars would be about the right number seen from different positions around the earth. At any one time only half of this number would be above the horizon, while a great many of these lie so near the horizon that they are obscured by the thickness of the atmosphere in that direction. Hence, it would be safe to say that probably never more than two thousand stars can be seen at any one time, and then only on a very clear and moonless night.

When the telescope was invented, people got their eyes open to the fact that the universe was on a much larger scale than was previously supposed. This instrument revealed stars of further magnitudes, and as it was more and more perfected, and pierced farther and farther out into the regions of space, it disclosed stars of quite a number of magnitudes farther down the line, until those of the fifteenth were discovered. Now by the use of the most powerful instrument, stars even to the twenty-first magnitude can be seen.

When a telescope was made sufficient to see stars to the fifteenth magnitude, the whole number was estimated to be about a hundred million. With each discovery of the next magnitude, it meant also the discovery of about three times as many stars as the next brighter one. Now that we have an instrument that can detect the little points of light down to the twenty-first magnitude, you can see what a revelation it meant to the astronomical world. The number of stars is so great that it actually staggers the imagination. The other day while engaged in some research work at the Mount Wilson library in Pasadena, I asked one of the astronomers what was the computed number of stars in the universe. He said that a conservative estimate was five billion, while the more liberal ones placed the number at about thirty billion. Stop a moment and ponder. The naked eye sees about six thousand stars, down to the sixth magnitude. Telescopes discovered fainter ones to the fifteenth magnitude, where a hundred million were estimated; then the greatest telescope pierces space to the twenty-first magnitude, where more than five billion stars are believed to exist. What will the eye behold when the great telescope now planned is built, with several times the powers of the present one?

In order to lucidate the thought of magnitudes, we are told that each one is two and a half times brighter than the next following. This leads to the conclusion that a star of the first magnitude is a hundred million times brighter than the faintest stars seen with the most powerful telescope.

Variety is found also in the color of stars. While most of them are white, yet other colors are conspicuous among them. How beautiful to behold among those glittering gems of night the white, red, golden, blue, green, orange, and yellow, interspersed throughout the vast universe, silently twinkling away as the ages roll on! Our own sun belongs to the yellow class. While it is true that shades of color are not so distinct and striking as some of the same kind we see around us, yet these very colors obtain among the stars.

One of the curious things observed in starland is the startling contrast of color to be found among some of the double and multiple stars. There is one very noted case in the star called Gamma, found in the constellation of Andromeda. The telescope revealed this star to be double, the larger one orange, the smaller an emerald green. A more powerful telescope shows the emerald star itself to be double, one star blue and the other yellow. Here is a single speck of light coming from three stars and showing a beautiful combination of colors. Another double star reveals the fact that one of the two is red and the other dark blue. When two stars that compose a double are about the same size, they are usually of the same color, and the color contrast is very apt to be increased with the increasing difference in their brightness, the fainter one generally being the bluer.

One of the earlier astronomers, in describing a certain cluster of stars, said that it was "an extremely brilliant and beautiful object when viewed through an instrument of sufficient aperture to show distinctly the very different colors of its constituent stars, which give it the effect of a piece of fancy jewelry." He had noted one hundred and ten stars in this cluster, and three were described as greenish white, two as green, one red, one blue-green, and one ruddy.—Zion's Herald.

A BRITISH-AMERICAN MESSAGE TO ALL PEOPLE OF GOOD-WILL

We the undersigned clergy and ministers of religion, in loyalty to our respective countries and in the conviction that the welfare of each country is linked indissolubly with friendship for the other, unite in the following message, with the earnest hope that it may help to crystallize the thoughts which we believe are forming among multitudes of men and women in Great Britain and the United States.

We believe that the time has come when the world must have done with war in fact, in expectation, and in planning.

We believe that another collision between great nations would be an assault upon civilization and an offense against God, and we believe that the intelligence and the conscience of this generation are able to build the structure of a permanent peace.

We hail, as a standard around which the thought and will of the world can rally, the Multilateral Treaty against war, signed by representatives of Great Britain and the United States and others of the great nations, renouncing war and embodying the pledge of the signatory nations that "the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts, of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

We believe that our nations when they signed this pledge meant what they said, and that a growing determination to make the Treaty effective must lift it above all doubt and contradiction.

We believe that the paramount obligation of political leaders in our respective governments is to shape the policies and programs of these countries in accord with the Treaty renouncing war, to the end that the wholesale psychology of supposedly hostile interests and competitive armaments may be transformed into the creative faith which shall build and strengthen those arbitral treaties, courts of justice, and covenants between the nations by which peace can be assured.

As patriots, loyal to the solemn promise of our respective countries to renounce war, and as believers in a better future for the world which our nations can help to assure, we hereby pledge ourselves as individuals to accept in spirit and in fact the words of the Treaty which we have already quoted; to discountenance any but pacific means for the settlement of disputes or conflicts; and to do our utmost to rally men and women of good-will to unite with us in this same determination.

(Signed for Great Britain and Ireland by nearly a hundred clergymen; for the United States of America by about the same number.)

LOQUACITY

Talkativeness is an insidious disease. If not checked in its incipency it ultimately enslaves its victim. Permitted to grow it becomes increasingly difficult to eradicate.

The tenacious train talker is tantalizingly tiresome. You plan to go on a trip of quietness and relaxation. But the ubiquitous train talker soon dispels your dream of peace. He is in the dining car, the smoking room, the observation car, in the seat behind yours, or worst fate of all, he has the upper berth of your section.

The trip started the fusilade of words begins. Possibly a word-parade of disease starts. Thousands of words per hour are exploded in your face without the slightest compunction. Unlike the train this talker has no terminal facilities.

When two loquacious persons meet they do not converse, but engage in verbal and vocal combat. A word shower takes place which drenches both contestants and finally leaves them breathless and prostrated.

I estimate that a talkative person, with vocal machinery thoroughly burnished and lubricated, given exclusively the field, will use approximately ten thousand words in an hour and a half. This is a conservative estimate. A really rapid talker can speed the record up to fifteen thousand words. The damage to the nervous system, due to talkativeness, is incalculable.

There is a golden mean between talkativeness and taciturnity. A talkative person is invariable tiresome; a silent person is seldom a bore.

—Grenville Kleiser.

—The sudden death of Dr. T. H. Lewis is attributed to angina pectoris, the same malady that carried Dr. Benson away. These hearts of ours play an essential part in our physical existence, but they will wear out at length like a much-used pump and fail to function. When they do, the end is at hand.

Fallen

Death has again visited our ranks and another one of our ministerial brethren has fallen. After a lingering illness, extending over several weeks, Bro. J. H. Moton succumbed, and on last Sunday morning passed into the great beyond. The funeral service was held at 3:30 p. m. Monday in the First M. P. Church, High Point, and his body laid to rest in Oakwood Memorial Cemetery. We shall not attempt details of the funeral here, as we are sure this will be done elsewhere. Bro. Moton had a long, useful and honorable connection with the conference, and his works will follow him. We shall miss him, of course, and our hearts are sad because he is no more with us, yet we rejoice in the victory that has come to him and the place of glory that he now has in the church triumphant. The family has the deep sympathy of all the brethren and a host of friends.

College Campaign

This begins on the first Sunday in July. The financial objective of the campaign is $50,000. There is nothing else in the conference just now that is so important as this campaign. The college must be maintained, and we must do it. The schedule of appointments and speakers was published in the HERALD of last week. These appointments will not interrupt the regular preaching services of the various churches, as we have made them to conform to that order. However, many pastors will be called from their pulpits for a few Sundays to assist in this campaign. We are sure that they will gladly render this service for the college, and that their churches will readily release them for this work. All together, now, for a great and successful effort to raise this balance necessary to pay off all indebtedness on the college, and to put the institution on a secure financial basis. We are calling on the entire conference to pray every day during this campaign for the blessings of God upon this effort.

Herald Subscriptions

Next Sunday is "Herald Day," as was announced several weeks ago. The campaign for new subscribers, which has been running since April 25, closes then. Up to date five charges report quotas in full. Davidson leads with 24 subscribers, which is four in excess of the allotment for this charge. Forty-seven charges have not reported. We trust that the work of next Sunday may result in subscriptions from every charge, and that the total number now reported from all charges may be greatly increased. Increasing the circulation of the HERALD increases interest in all conference work.

Revival Season

We are approaching the season when most of our revival meetings are held. We are anxious that these meetings may result in the greatest measure of good. A revival wave sweeping over our conference would solve many of our problems, and give an impetus to our work as nothing else can. Prayer will do much toward the success of these meetings. We are taught to pray "thy kingdom come," and surely the Lord wants us to pray for these special efforts that are designed to "turn many to righteousness." We are appealing, therefore, to every pastor and to every member to pray without ceasing for the success of our revival meetings.

Yarborough-Anderson

June 20 to 23 was given to these two fields in the South Carolina district of our conference. The district chairmen, Bro. N. M. Harrison and Bro. Lee Pool, had arranged for a rally at each of the four churches on these charges, and we were down there to assist them in these programs. Our work began at Yarborough's Chapel on Friday night, June 21. We were greatly pleased with the attendance here and with the spirit of the meeting. A large part of the congregation was made up of young people, and their orchestra was a pleasing feature of the musical program.

On Saturday night we were at Harmony, the other church on the Yarborough charge. The attendance here was probably reduced by a program at the community school building. However, quite a number were present, and here, too, we had a pleasing response. Bro. Harrison, who had been with us up to this time, had to leave before the program was over for a drive of nearly 150 miles in order that he might fill his Sunday appointments at Charlotte. Wonderful how a Ford and good roads do eliminate distance!

The Sunday appointments were at Fairview and Liberty Hill, on Anderson charge. We arrived at Fairview in time for Sunday school, and spent the day with this church, preaching at 11 a. m., and speaking again in the afternoon. Bro. Ferree, the pastor, was also on the afternoon program in an address on Evangelism. Bro. Harrison had discussed this subject at the other churches, in addition to having general charge of the program. The attendance here was encouraging, though reduced, perhaps, by services at other nearby churches.

At night we were at Liberty Hill. Here the largest audience of this itinerary greeted us, despite unfavorable weather conditions. Bro. Ferree was sick, and unable to take his place on the program in another discussion of Evangelism. It was our privilege to speak, and to lead the congregation in a round table discussion on "The Essentials of a Growing Rural Church." This proved an interesting feature of the hour, and afforded another illustration of the fact that an active participation in any matter intensifies interest. By an arrangement of the program committee, Mrs. J. J. Atkins, a worker of the Charlotte church, was present in all of these rallies and made helpful contributions to the program. Her subject was "Missions and Woman."

It was refreshing to find two of our High Point students at these churches—Miss Fannynet Freeman, of the Fairview church, and Miss Emma Lee Pool, of Liberty Hill. They were enthusiastic for the college. At each of these four churches the financial need of the college was presented, and the following amounts in cash and pledges received: Yarborough, $120; Harmony, $10; Fairview, $65; Liberty Hill, $100. Total, $295. These contributors have the grateful thanks of the college and the conference.

Our visit to these churches was greatly enjoyed. We were glad to see again the friends we learned to appreciate there in the early days of our ministry, and to find a continued vital interest in the work, and hopeful signs of progress. The remoteness of these churches gives them but little contact with the remainder of the conference. If they could have more visits from the folks this way, and we could have visits from them, helpful and mutual benefits would result. We are not sure but that the two works should be combined. Good roads and automobiles make this possible, we think. We suggest that this matter be taken under consideration by these fields. Pastor Broome and his talented young wife, and Bro. Ferree and his good family are giving themselves zealously to their respective charges. They are popular with the people, and the work is prospering under their administration. We are grateful to all who provided for our welfare while we were on this visit.

FIGHT THE CIGARETTE!

It is high time that the moral forces of the nation turned their attention to the cigarette menace. That in the long run cigarette-smoking lowers vitality and slows down efficiency is pretty well established through medical research. Life is too short and its demands are too exacting for reasonable men knowingly to tolerate any health-undermining agent. We live in an age that requires, as the price of the highest success, abounding physical vitality, clear intellectual insight, and sound moral judgment.

There are many evils that follow in the train of the cigarette habit. As is well pointed out by a number of New England physicians in the symposium that appears on another page of this issue of the Herald, cigarette-smoking tends to irritate the membranes of the throat and lungs and to create heart disease. Can any young man or woman who desires to make the most of life take the risk of undermining health through indulgence in this habit?

Cigarettes constitute a good "dope" to quiet the nerves, we are told. But, granting that these "coffin nails" do bring a temporary relief from the state of tension, what is to be said of the final effect of the oft repeated doping of the nervous system? What will happen in the long run?

It is important also to consider the effect of cigarette-smoking upon the will, the very center of the moral life of man. The beginner may get along with a half-dozen cigarettes a day. But soon he is no longer content simply to smoke them in the ordinary way. He begins to "inhale." And six "smokes" will no longer suffice. He must have twelve, twenty, then six or eight packages in twelve hours. Some addicts lose all self-control unless they arise from their beds several times in the night to indulge this pernicious habit. The picture drawn in the daily press recently of the ground covered with cigarette stubs at the scene of the murder or suicide of the young Harvard student at Windsor, Connecticut, will scarcely be used in page spreads for advertising the wares of the great tobacco companies, but it is highly significant for men and women who can fathom its deeper meaning.

And what of the coming generation? What kind of children will cigarette-smoking parents give to the world? There is still debate among physicians as to the extent of the effects of the habit upon prospective mothers. But the fact that some specialists believe that cigarette-smoking does seriously injure the delicate systems of women ought to be sufficient to make every woman contemplating marriage and motherhood shun the very appearance of this evil. Is it fair to rob a boy or girl in any measure, before he or she comes into the world, of the chances for health and success? The consciences of all right-thinking men and women must answer the question with an emphatic "No."

What does cigarette-smoking do to the ethical sense of its victims? It seems to lower moral as well as physical vitality. There is a selfish aspect to the habit which at least lends itself to discussion. These smokers simply "must have cigarettes" and "can't get along without them." Other people, in restaurants and similarly public places, might have a word to say about the fogging of the atmosphere with smoke, thus making it very unpleasant for non-smokers. If the seeming flouting of the ethical principles of advertising by cigarette firms in recent months is in any way traceable to indulgence in the habit here under discussion, the indictment from the moral standpoint becomes even stronger.

And what of the "heroes" who write testimonials lauding the virtues of this or that brand of cigarettes? One of our readers has suggested that we start a fund in behalf of these persons who have come into the limelight through the performance of some brave deed, in order that they may not be forced to sell their good name to cigarette advertisers. Whether or not the action of these heroes in thus lending themselves to commercial exploitation is subethical, it at least reveals a very poor taste.

Fight the cigarette! For the sake of the coming generation, and the future of the country, let us do everything in our power to preserve the physical, intellectual, moral, and spiritual health of the young life about us.—Zion's Herald.

THE PULL OF PRAYER

In a foreign land one of God's children sorely pressed by the enemy and much in need of financial relief, turned to the Source from whence he had so often received help, and prayed that God would send what he so much needed. He prayed for a very definite number of dollars, for the need was definite. This was the assurance he received: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Phil. 4:19. And he went on his way trusting in that promise.

In the homeland a dear child of God—a "shut in"—but rejoicing in Christ, and spending much of her time in communion with her precious Lord, felt strongly the pull of prayer. "What is it, Lord?" she asked. Then God spoke to her of his child in a foreign land and reminded her of a sum of money she would not need, and she who loved Jesus needed but just a gentle reminder from her Lord. So she sent this message to that waiting, trusting one: "I realize the pull of prayer and so send you this sum to be used for what you are most earnestly praying for." It was exactly the sum asked for. How this cheered the hearts of those who realized afresh God was "keeping watch above His own," and He had those who realized the "pull of prayer" and were quick to respond.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

WHO TOOK TEDDY?

(A True Story by Grace B. Allen)

Mary was so excited over what she found in the largest hen's nest that she could hardly wait to tell Marvin, who was studying arithmetic in the kitchen. As soon as she saw him she cried:

"Marvin, there's $10 in the barn for you."

Marvin was saving money for a wheel. Of course he jumped. "Where? What?" He dropped his book. "You're not fooling?"

"Come, see," begged Mary. She led him to the barn and the biggest nest where Fanny, Marvin's collie, lay with five funny, fuzzy puppies.

"They are beautiful; worth $10 all right," laughed Marvin, and patted Fanny's head when she barked so proudly. "I can sell every one for $2 per." The little yellow and white things with their wobbly legs were so dear. Marvin took the finest puppy and placed it on an auto cushion. "That's for Mr. Jones. This for the teacher." He thus disposed of four. But when he saw the fifth, he dropped it back into the nest. Oh, he was cross!

"It's a runt; good for nothing. I see $2 gone."

Mary took the trembling puppy to her face, where she held it lovingly. "Did Marvin hurt its feelings?" she begged. She angrily asked her brother, "Do you s'pose mother treated you so when you were weak and sickly? No; she worked until she made you well. I'm 'shamed of you, Marvin Parsons."

Marvin was too badly disappointed to laugh. On Friday he took away the four puppies and returned with a stock of silver dollars. Mary saw him just as he dropped the runt in the duck pond. She ran as fast as she could. With one leap she caught the puppy. She came out with her new dress soaked and a shivering puppy in her arms.

"Mother taught you to be kind to animals!"

"I want him," declared Mary very emphatically as she walked away. She loved the puppy already, loved to watch him totter about, loved to teach him. But when he grew older he was troublesome. He tore her overshoe which she had forgotten to put away, hid her cap and chased the chickens. One night, when he was a year old, Mary took him when she and Marvin went for the cows. The runt, whom they now called Teddy, barked at Buttercup, bit her tail, and drove her so far away that Marvin was furious.

"I wish I'd drowned him," muttered Marvin. "If he's good for anything, what is it?"

Mary wrinkled her whole forehead, and when she could not think of anything else, she faltered, "He's good to love." When Marvin had flung himself away, she whispered to Teddy, "You're all right, dear. I know it, but we've got to show them. Let's go get a whole nestful of eggs."

They went to the barn. None. They hunted the orchard. Not an egg. They went to the cowshed. Mary opened the door.

"Teddy, here's a little new calf. Oh, the darling!" She stooped to smooth the little wobbly thing when she heard

Buttercup's bellow. It sounded as awful as the roaring of the circus lion. Something big and black, with fiery eyes, struck Mary with its horns and knocked her down. Everything went red. When Mary opened her eyes and tried to rise, her leg doubled right up. She could not walk. Was her leg broken? Another roar made her look. The cow was coming with her head down. Mary saw her awful hoofs, her horns with shining brass tips. Oh—oh—

"Teddy!" she screamed. And just then Teddy caught Buttercup's tail and bit it just as he had done in the pasture. Buttercup whirled to fight the dog. Out of the door Teddy ran, with Buttercup after him. Mary could hear him barking and Buttercup bellowing, until the noise grew fainter and fainter.

She pulled herself up by holding to the manger. Her leg was broken, but she dragged herself to the door and stood with her leg hanging limply until Marvin, who had heard, came running.

"What in the world, sis?" cried Marvin.

Mary smiled faintly as she fell over against Marvin.

"Teddy was just showing you," she smiled again as she closed her eyes.

Every one wanted to buy the runt when they heard Mary's story. Marvin shook his head. "I'll keep him myself if I never get a wheel," he stoutly declared. "Maybe dad will furnish the rest rather than to have him go out of the family."

Of course daddy did.—Western Christian Advocate.

VALUE OF ONE SOUL

"I believe that if an angel were to wing his way from earth up to heaven, and were to say that there was one poor, ragged boy, without father or mother, with no one to care for him and teach him the way of life; and, if God were to ask who among them were willing to come down to this earth and live here for fifty years and lead that one to Jesus Christ, every angel in heaven would volunteer to go. Even Gabriel, who stands in the presence of the Almighty, would say, 'Let me leave my high and lofty position, and let me have the luxury of leading one soul to Jesus Christ.' There is no greater honor than to be the instrument in God's hand of leading one person out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious light of heaven."

—D. L. Moody.

—Our country has just gone through an orgy of stock speculation, hurtful to legitimate business and demoralizing to many of our citizens. It would require close analysis to determine what are the moral principles violated in the stock market, but the common people, the safest class in moral matters, have long condemned stock speculation, and men with clear sense of all that is involved will think twice before they consent to give themselves to such traffic. It is therefore quite shocking to many to learn that a distinguished bishop has been guilty of spending his money in the stock market. It does not atone for his misconduct that he lost all that he invested. That was to be expected. A man who thinks he can beat sharpers at their own game needs only to try to be disillusioned. Now the bishop's money is gone and his name is so terribly tarnished that he will have a time in clearing it from its ugly coating. But he must be given credit for the good he has done in other ways, especially in his opposition to the liquor traffic. We believe he was straight regarding that matter, even though he erred grievously in the other.

Suggestions for the Meeting

Take advantage of this topic and do some good advertising. It helps. In making your posters use pictures of Lindbergh, Byrd or heroes in the missionary field. Let it be known that at the prayer meeting you are to review great men. Vary the meeting somewhat by having a series of stories of heroes.

The Leader's Talk

You might well divide your talk into two parts, one as introductory to the stories and the other as a summary at the end of the story hour. Tell the story of the picture "Diana or Christ," and if possible display it. This is the story: Before the altar of Diana stands a young Christian maiden. Near her is seated her judge and nearby virgins from the temple of Diana. The young maiden is to be cast to the lions in the amphitheater unless she will make an offering to the goddess Diana at the altar. Her Roman lover stands by her side with his hand on her arm and begs her to make the offering. It would be so easy to place a bit of incense on the altar and thereby save herself, and very hard to face death, but then—Christ. Which did she choose?

There have always been those people who have had to make some such decision for Christ. Just where was their strength? It is very good for us to study carefully the lives of these heroes in order that we may see in their lives something that we need in our own lives.

Heroes of old, I humbly lay
The laurel on your graves again;
Whatever men have done, men may;
The deeds you wrought are not in vain.
—Austin Dobson.

NAMELESS SAINTS

What was his name? I do not know his name.

I only heard God's voice and came

To live and work for God and me;

Brought all he had across the sea,

Felled the ungracious oak,

Dragged from the soil

With horrid toil

The thrice-gnarled roots and stubborn rock.

With plenty piled the haggard mountain side;

And at the end, without memorial, died.

No blaring trumpets sounded out his fame;

He lived—he died—I do not know his name.

And I?

Is there some desert or some pathless sea
Where Thou, good God of angels, wilt send me?

Some oak to rend; some sod,

Some rock for me to break.

Some handful of His corn to take

And scatter far afield

Till it in turn shall yield

Its hundredfold

Of grains of gold

To feed the waiting children of my God?

Show me the desert, Father, or the sea;

Is it thine enterprise? Great God, send me,

And though this body lie where ocean rolls,

Count me among all faithful souls.

THE THINGS THAT HAVEN'T BEEN DONE BEFORE

The things that haven't been done before,

Those are the things to try.

Columbus dreamed of an unknown shore

At the rim of a far-flung sky;

And his heart was bold; and his faith was strong

As he ventured to dangers new;

And he paid no heed to the jeering throng

Or the fears of the doubting crew.

The many will follow the beaten path

With guide-posts along the way;

They live and have for ages back—

With a chart for every day.

Some one has told them it's safe to go

On the road he has travelled o'er;

And all the things that they strive to know

Are the things that were known before.

The things that haven't been done before

Are the tasks worthwhile today.

Are you one of the flock that follows, or

Are you one that shall lead the way?

Are you one of the timid souls that quail

At the jeers of the doubting crew,

Or dare you, whether you win or fail,

Strike out for the goal that's new?

REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN FOR LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Increase in Registrations

The registration agents are now dead in earnest about the campaign; the membership is responding nicely to their solicitations. The advance this week in registrations is over a hundred and sixty per cent of the total up to last week. We are off on the greatest whirlwind registration campaign we have ever conducted in North Carolina. Just watch these agents work, and the registrations come in.

Attendance Boost

Not only an increase in registrations this week, but we see evidences in the work of these agents of an increase in attendance at the Leadership Training School. Frequently accompanying the list of names and fees are such statements from the agents as follows: "We are bringing a large delegation from our church this year"; "All Fords head toward High Point July 13th"; "I am looking forward to the Leadership Training School." Our agents seem more interested than ever in boosting the attendance at the school as well as increasing the registration list.

Interesting Features

Some of the interesting features of the campaign thus far are: (1) The largest number of agents accepted the position as agent than ever before; (2) several churches which never heretofore entered the campaign are now sending in good lists. These are mostly rural churches which bespeaks a growing interest in a better church trained laity leadership. (3) A wholehearted co-operation of the pastors. It has been pleasing to learn that the pastors, almost as a whole, have been boosting both the campaign and the school, and urging a response to both matters by their membership.

The Standing of the Churches

The following schedule will show the standing of the churches. It will be seen that 43 churches have already sent in registrations, 12 of that number are reported this week for the first time. Ten churches added to what they had previously sent in. We are expecting the churches which did not increase their list this week to do so next week. We must go forward, we cannot stand still. The fifteen hundred mark is our goal, we must not quit until it is reached.

WHO TOOK TEDDY?

(A True Story by Grace B. Allen)

Mary was so excited over what she found in the largest hen's nest that she could hardly wait to tell Marvin, who was studying arithmetic in the kitchen. As soon as she saw him she cried:

"Marvin, there's $10 in the barn for you."

Marvin was saving money for a wheel. Of course he jumped. "Where? What?" He dropped his book. "You're not fooling?"

"Come, see," begged Mary. She led him to the barn and the biggest nest where Fanny, Marvin's collie, lay with five funny, fuzzy puppies.

"They are beautiful; worth $10 all right," laughed Marvin, and patted Fanny's head when she barked so proudly. "I can sell every one for $2 per." Fountain Place drops down to fifth place this week, giving her lead to High Point First. Agent Earl Bulla has a hundred per cent lead on his nearest competitor for the top position, but I am told that Miss Maggie Mann has all kind of energy and she knows how to use it. Concord has had experience in these campaigns before and I am sure that High Point First will have to move on from 41 if she expects to stay ahead of Concord. Reidsville, who occupied the second place last week, finds herself seventh this week. She is surpassed also by Winston First, Charlotte First, Fountain Place, and West End. While High Point has a pretty good lead, the holders of the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh berths have been in these campaigns before and they usually know how to get the registrations. Burlington First, Albemarle, Asheboro, Grace, and State Street in former years have held high places, if not the top. They will not be content to be low in the list this year. High Point, keep your eyes open.

Miss Myrtle Kiger, Maple Springs, Forsyth, sends in a whole dozen names this week. Together with Haw River Mission; Edland, Orange; Fair Grove, Haw River Charge; and Julian, Tabernacle, she is determined not to be left too far down the list. The spirit manifested in the correspondence with these agents shows a determination to put their respective churches well toward the top.

Agents, Don't Forget—

1. To work fast. The campaign ends July 13th, just a short time off.

2. Send the names and fees to me every Monday morning. Use the blanks sent you some time ago. Designate if they are 50 or 25-cent registrations.

3. Have your pastor announce the Leadership Training School and the campaign from the pulpit, and urge the membership to register and attend.

4. Pray for the success of the school.

Remarks to the Membership

The Leadership Training School is a school held each year at High Point College, under the direction of the Board of Young People's Work of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. It brings together a group of men and women, as instructors, who have had experience and met certain required standards laid down by the General Board of Young People's Work. The various courses offered are designed to make those who take them more efficient and consecrated leaders wherever they work in the church. It would be well if every person trying to lead in any department of the church work would attend this school.

Whether one is expecting to attend the school or not he is interested in the development of leadership. If he understands thoroughly what these schools are meaning to our church in North Carolina he will consider it a privilege to register at a fee of 50 cents and thus help to make possible this summer school of one week, which, possibly, is giving a larger return for the money expended than any other things we do for the groups who attend it. These registration fees make possible the school; without it they would be impossible on the high plane on which they are now conducted. Your registration fee is an investment in efficiency for Christ in our church in the state.

The registration fee is 50 cents for adults; 25 cents for children. One hundred 50-cent registrations, or equal, from any one church entitles the agent of that church to free entertainment at the school. Two hundred from a charge entitles the pastor of the charge to free entertainment.

YARBOROUGH CHAPEL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

The interest and attendance are very good in our Christian Endeavor.

We had a very interesting meeting Sunday evening, June 23, with Lloyd Wilson as leader. We were very glad to have with us Prof. Breck Templeton, who gave a very interesting and helpful talk on the topic, "Jesus Teaching Self-Control."

Our society has recently organized an orchestra with the following personnel: Miss Louise Jackson, pianist; Miss Lily Mae Cox, clarinet; Miss Virginia Cox, Hugh Watson, Charles Layton and Smith Cox, violins; Lloyd Wilson and Boyce Ezelle, Jr., cornets; and John T. Poole, saxophone. This orchestra is quite an added feature to our meetings.

The recent marriage of our pastor has added a very helpful member to our society. Mr. and Mrs. Broome are both splendid workers, and are very interested in the young people.

VERA P. WILSON, Cor. Sec'y.

THE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

Say, young people, what happens July 13? Do you realize how near it is? Our Leadership Training School starts and we young people are going to put our very best into it. But maybe some of you don't know what it really is. It is a conference held at the High Point College from July 13 to July 20. How much is crammed into that one week! The most interesting speakers and teachers from our denomination are secured to help us become leaders among the young people in our church. The best of everything is offered us and what an opportunity we lose if we don't take advantage of it. We come in contact with the finest young people in our state and it is quite an inspiration to be with such an uplifting group for a week. We indulge in the cleanest sports and all the activities mean so much to us that everybody joins right in and we have a glorious time. It means so much to your church when you attend this school. You go back, taking with you the newest ideas and helps concerning all phases of church and Sunday school work. You become a leader in your own church, and in so short a time. Start making your plans now to attend and boast it with all your heart.

MARGARET OPAL NEESE,
First M. P. Church,
High Point, N. C.

FOR THE YOUNG AND OLD

That is just who the Leadership Training School is good for. The inspiration from the lectures and the fellowship cannot be equalled anywhere—good for everybody.

The good meals and the rest from the routine and work of housekeeping are especially good for the elderly folks. I know whereof I speak. And we all need religious training. The greatest drawback in most of our churches is lack of trained leaders. By all means send your young people to High Point Leadership Training School if you have to sacrifice to do it. Money is not wasted when it is invested in religious training for the youth of our churches. And help the good work along by registering right now.

MRS. J. J. CRAWFORD.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE TO AUXILIARY TREASURERS

In sending in money, please observe the following directions:

If the money is to be kept in North Carolina, all that you need to do is simply designate it "North Carolina." I will then understand exactly what it is for, and will allot it according to the percentage amounts given by the committee on apportionments. So "North Carolina" will be all the explanation necessary. (The money kept in North Carolina is that raised for the Children's Home, Bethel Home, High Point College Scholarship, and Branch Contingent.)

If the remittance is for causes outside of North Carolina, all you need to say is, "New Century Service." I will then know that it goes to the treasurer of the general church.

A few auxiliaries have special causes that they are supporting. If they care to state that in remitting, they may do so, and the proper designations of such remittances will be made on my books.

One other matter is important: If the remittance is money raised by young people, please give me the name of the organization. This is important; please do not forget it.

Make checks payable to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer, and not to Mrs. S. W. Taylor.

An observance of these suggestions will simplify my work and that of auxiliary treasurers as well. Thank you.

TO THE METHODIST PROTESTANT WOMEN OF NORTH CAROLINA

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Work of the Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina, at High Point College, plans were made for the complete organization of the women of the church, as per the plans outlined by General Conference last year. For a number of years many of our societies have been working on a unified program and it is hoped that not only all of the former organizations will consolidate but that efforts may be put forth for the organization of the women in each church. Copies of the constitution and by-laws may be obtained from Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro, and further instructions may be had from the district chairman. Practically all of the districts of the conference are having rally days and the plan is for the women's work to be presented in such a way that all may have necessary information for organizing. Every woman in the church to which she belongs is a member of the Woman's Auxiliary and the women are asked to get behind the entire program of the church. No church has honored her women more than the Methodist Protestant Church and the women of North Carolina were among the first to co-operate with the plans outlined by the General Conference. Programs and material for carrying them out may be obtained from Miss Pearl McCulloch and where there are no organizations yet formed we are appealing to at least one woman in each church to secure them and begin the study of this splendid unified program which covers all the work of the church. Heretofore the women have been working especially for missions but the church is making larger demands, realizing that much depends on the activities of the women. For twenty years the North Carolina Branch of Home Missions has conferred the honor of the presidency upon me. When the new organization was formed I was again honored by the women of the church. It is only by the continued co-operation of the splendid women of the church who have so loyally co-operated in the past that I can do the work connected with the office this year. With the assurance of appreciation of the honor conferred upon me and with a determination to have our women thoroughly organized and co-operating with the plan of our great church, I am

Very truly,

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER, Pres.,
N. C. Branch Woman's Missionary Work.
Ashelboro, N. C.

FROM ONE OF THE NEW SECRETARIES

I have been elected secretary of Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members for our new organization.

There is urgent need of money in our work, and we are anxious to make a good start under the new plan.

I would like to suggest to all the circles that they secure as many new members as possible. Ten dollars makes a Life Member, ten dollars a Memorial Member, and thirty dollars a Perpetual Member.

Send the names to me and I will do my best to have them properly enrolled and published.

Wishing all success to the work and the workers,

MRS. S. R. HARRIS.

—Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw, wife of Professor Hinshaw, of High Point College, died on Tuesday after a few days' illness. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. R. I. Farmer on Wednesday afternoon. Burial in Oakwood Cemetery.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Charlotte, Richland, $8.26; Spencer, $10.00; Shiloh, N. Davidson, $9.15; C. E. Society, N. Davidson, feeding and clothing a child, $10.00; Liberty, Davidson, $6.15; New Hope, Why Not, $2.50; Enfield, $7.15; Harmony, Yarrowburgh's, $3.00; Liberty Hill, Anderson, $6.25; Friendship, Haw River, $5.00.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Mrs. Minnie Harrell, one double bed with springs, and two suits of clothing for boys. Mrs. F. S. Gordy and her son, Thomas, four rabbits and a good rabbit house for our little boys. Mr. Earl Bulla, one suit with extra pantaloons for one of our boys. The Young Ladies' Class, Gibsonville, one quilt. Mrs. Elizabeth Pardue, one dozen pair hose.

The list is short this week, but we thank those who have helped. Several have promised to help more soon.

A recent copy of the Greensboro Daily News reported Dr. M. L. Kestler, superintendent of the Mills Home, Thomasville, N. C., as saying, "The small offerings from our Sunday schools and churches for this season have placed the Home in a serious condition."

The same is true with our Home. We know you love us and will continue to help; but if our people are not doubly diligent during this present financial depression this Home will suffer beyond what it can bear.

We thank you for thinking about us, praying for us, and giving us your support.

Faithfully yours, A. G. DIXON.

FIRST DISTRICT RALLY

The rally is to be held at the Hollister church on Halifax Charge June 29 and 30. Every Methodist Protestant living within the bounds of this district ought to feel that it is his or her duty to be present. If you do not come you will miss one of the best rallies ever held in the first district. In addition to the announcements made last week I might add that Rev. J. F. Minnis, the pastor of our Graham church and a returned missionary from India, will be there on Saturday night to give an illustrated lecture. You must not miss his lecture. Sunday afternoon Mrs. E. I. Bellamy, of the Enfield church, will give a Bible drama. Here is an opportunity to see how we can make our church program more interesting.

What about the barbecue supper on Saturday? Come and join us.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

SIXTH DISTRICT RALLY—FINAL NOTICE

Please bear in mind that the rally for the sixth district will be held at Gray's Chapel Church on Randolph Charge next Sunday, June 30, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. There will be both morning and afternoon services with picnic dinner on the grounds. Those coming are requested to bring a basket. The Gray's Chapel choir and the pastor will have charge of the first half hour. There will be good singing, good addresses, and good fellowship. Come and make the occasion a great success.

J. E. PRITCHARD,
Chairman Sixth District.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—Our Sunday school held a Children's Day service the third Sunday night. We had a good audience, and the children acquitted themselves creditably. A good many favorable comments were heard. The pageant "Naaman" was well presented, and we are proud of our five young people who played the roles, three of them college students. Mr. Auman kindly loaned us some articles of dress for two boys representing Japan and China in one recitation. A girl representing India was also in costume. The program was well arranged by the ladies in charge, and the decorations were very pretty.

The Ladies' Aid has recently placed a marker in front of the church. Credit is due the pastor and one of the stewards, Mr. Frank Thomas, for making the iron framework and setting up the marker in its concrete foundation.

Two of our young people, Misses Maxine Taylor and Ethel Harrison, have gone to attend the summer school at the University of California.

Mrs. E. R. Wells, of Wilmington, a former member here, has just returned home after a three weeks' visit to her mother, Mrs. M. J. Hunter, at this place.

Our community was recently shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Mr. John H. Vinson, for many years a prominent member of this church. The loss is keenly felt by a host of friends and acquaintances.

M. H. S., Reporter.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—In our district rally Sunday we were glad to have with us President S. W. Taylor, who delivered a very interesting and helpful address in the morning from Exodus 14:15.

In the afternoon Mrs. J. J. Adkins, from Charlotte, gave an address on "Missions and Womanhood." Our pastor also gave a brief talk on "Evangelism," after which Dr. Taylor entertained the children by telling them interesting stories and calculating the value of a small boy or girl, which amounted to $37,000. I wonder how many parents have the least idea of how much their children are worth to them. Then Dr. Taylor gave an address on "The New Century Service," which was greatly enjoyed by all.

We were exceedingly glad to have with us several members from the other churches on this charge.

Our revival services will begin on Wednesday night, July 31. Rev. R. C. Stubbins will assist the pastor. We are hoping and expecting a good meeting.

Several of our girls are home from college for the summer: Miss Bessie Wyatt, Winthrop; Misses Fannynet Freeman and Emma Lee Poole, High Point College.

Mrs. G. M. Nalley, who has been critically ill, is improving rapidly. We hope she will soon be able to come back to church.

The club ladies of the community are putting on a cake sale next Saturday in order to secure funds for markers for the two churches of the community, Fairview M. P. and Zion

M. E. We shall appreciate the work and interest of these faithful ladies very much.

Miss Monteg Henderson, teacher of the young folks' class, is attending summer school at Furman University. Her class misses her very much.

There were six members of our church who were members of the graduating class at Easley High. They were as follows: Misses Elizabeth White, Bertha Connelly, Lucille Freeman, Ruby Johnson and Messrs. Herman and Charlton Henderson. We are very proud of them and wish that these young people will continue their education. We are indeed proud to say that Miss Lucille Freeman was valedictorian of her class and won the scholarship medal. Miss Bertha Connelly won the U. D. C. medal on her history essay.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

Yarborough Charge, Cross Anchor.—We rejoice in the great advance made in this work, and feel it is auspicious of a very pleasing Sunday school advance.

Our pastor and wife, Rev. D. D. Broome and Mrs. Broome planned a Rally Program for last Friday evening and we feel it was a success and a help. The M. P. Church together with this entire community counted it indeed a privilege to have Dr. Taylor, Pres. of Conference, Mrs. Atkinson of Charlotte, and Rev. N. M. Harrison, former pastor of this church, as three of the Rally Day speakers. The pastor and wife were also speakers and I'm sure the program was enjoyed more than I am able to say.

The Christian Endeavor society orchestra furnished splendid music.

Dr. Taylor suggested that Mr. Broome plan an all day program and invite all our N. C. brethren to come down, we feel this would make us feel closer together and would give promise of a harmonious and simultaneous action.

We are more than glad to have any visitors at any time. We can assure you a very hearty welcome.

A FRIEND

Rehobeth Church, Granville Charge.—The Children's Day services were held on the 16th of this month, a very good program was rendered and the attendance was fine.

Jasper Hicks, a young lawyer of Henderson, made our address. He read for his text, a portion from the 3rd chapter of Acts, about the lame man at the beautiful gate. As the people passed him he would ask alms. When Peter passed by, he said to the lame man "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." So Peter lifted him up and he walked and entered the church praising God.

Service is the thing, and just the touch of your hand on mine.

Idle, Idol and Ideal were explained. Are we idle? Yes, in the churches, Sunday schools, and also homes. Let's get busy, there is no time for loafing. Do we worship idols? Yes, pleasure seekers, money lovers, and other things of no value. We should put our time on doing things of eternal value.

Let Jesus be our Ideal. Remember when a lad, he was found by his mother in the temple talking with the wise men. He told her this, "Wist ye not that I should be about my Father's business?" True worship leads us to the threshhold of the other world, the Divine—the Ideal.

Revival services will be held the 1st week of July. Mr. Shelton will do the preaching. We trust we may have a good meeting.

The 5th Sunday Rally will convene at Flat Rock.

Rev. H. L. Fogleman performed a wedding ceremony of much interest Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Ellen Harris, daughter of Mr. E. C. Harris, was married to Mr. William Floyd.

They have gone on a motor trip to the western part of the state, and will be at home in Henderson in a few days.

The missionary society will meet with Mrs. J. W. Wrenn this afternoon.

CRYSTAL BOBBITT

Zoar, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our reports are very scarce from this church, but we have a very faithful little band of workers. We are sorry to say that our pastor has not been able to fill his appointments for some months, but we are not deprived of preaching entirely, Rev. N. M. Harrison of First Church, Charlotte, preaches every third Sunday afternoon. He brings us some wonderful messages. Our superintendent, Mr. W. C. Hartis, who has been sick has improved and is able to be out at church again. We are sorry to hear that our pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, is not improving very fast, we ask the prayers of christians that he may be restored to health if it be God's will.

The prayer services held every Sunday night seem to be of interest to the people. The services are well attended. We are glad to have the string band of the Wesleyan Methodist Mission of Fort Mill with us Sunday evening, they rendered some very pretty music. The members of the Ladies' Aid will have an ice cream supper June 22th.

REPORTER

Canaan, Denton Charge.—The work in general is progressing nicely in all its organizations. The attendance in Sunday school is very good. There were present for Sunday school last Sunday ninety-three and the number can easily be increased to one hundred.

Our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, filled his appointment Sunday and delivered a very impressive and useful message, his subject being "Our Neighbor." He pointed out very vividly the qualities that a person must possess in order to be a neighbor.

Preceding the worship service the nominees for the Annual Conference were voted upon. They are Mr. Joe Delk, of Piney Grove Church, and Mr. M. C. Cranford, of Denton Church. Either of these will be competent to represent this charge. They are both wide-awake men.

Our church has purchased a lawn bulletin board.

The people have selected Wayne Sexton for janitor of our church for this year.

Our prayer meeting is moving steadily on under the efficient leadership of Bro. J. M. Gallimore. We have prayer meeting each first and third Sunday. There is one thing we want in our church and that is loyalty to our church and its organization.

Our church has recently opened four new Sunday school rooms for class work. The rooms are an addition made to the church. These were seated and are well equipped for class work. Each member of the Sunday school can do much better work than before.

We have Sunday school each Sunday at 10 o'clock, preaching each second and fourth Sundays at 11 o'clock. We cordially invite everybody who will to come and worship with us during these hours.

Best wishes to all,

WILLENA SEXTON, Reporter.

Liberty, Davidson Circuit.—Our Sunday school convention was held last Sunday. We had several good speakers. All enjoyed the day. We hope more of our people will take part in our Sunday school conventions. I assure them that will attend will hear something to help them to take more interest in Sunday school work.

MRS. A. C. HARRIS.

Orange Charge.—Announcements: Revival services are to begin at Edland Church Sunday, June 30th, 11 a. m., Rev. J. A. Burgess to do the preaching.

Owing to the fact that Bro. Carroll and myself each have special local work on hand, it has become necessary for us to rearrange our plans for exchange of pulpits. The new arrangement calls for Bro. Carroll to visit Orange Charge as follows: Second Sunday in June, Hebron, 3 p. m.; third Sunday in June, Edland, 11 a. m.; third Sunday in June, Union Grove, 3 p. m.; third Sunday in June, Edland, 8 p. m.; fourth Sunday in June, Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

(We presume Brother Williams means July instead of June.—Editor.)

Tabernacle Charge.—The work on this charge is going forward smoothly with all of the organizations functioning in a satisfactory way. Memorial day, which is on the third Sunday in May, is always a big day on the calendar of Tabernacle Church, and this year was no exception. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, the music was uplifting, and the addresses by Hon. E. S. W. Dameron and Revs. W. F. Kennett and J. F. McCulloch were very instructive and inspiring. It was a regret to both pastor and people that Rev. T. F. McCulloch could not be present.

A pleasing Children's Day program was given at Julian on the third Sunday in this month. It was really a children's service and all the children rendered their parts well. We were glad to have a number of visitors present from Greensboro for this service. The children's service will be given at Tabernacle next Sunday and the service promises to be good.

Mr. Livens, a ministerial student of the Reformed Church, addressed the Tabernacle C. E. on the second Sunday afternoon, using as his subject "Our Shadows." On the second Sunday afternoon in July Miss Elizabeth Hanner, of Julian, who is president of the C. E. at High Point College, will address the society.

Our efficient Sunday school superintendent at Tabernacle, Bro. Cecil M. Fields, is a patient in a Greensboro hospital where he had his tonsils removed. We trust that his recovery will be rapid.

Mrs. Mary Hanner, the widow of Amos Hanner, was buried at Tabernacle last Sunday afternoon. She was a member of Bethlehem M. E. Church but her two daughters, Mrs. Bud Monnet and Mrs. Charlie Andrews, are members at Tabernacle. The writer assisted the M. E. pastor, Rev. Mr. Ratlidge, in the service.

Miss Ezda Deviney, who did graduate work at the University of North Carolina the past year, is spending the summer with her parents at Julian. It is a pleasure to have her in our services again.

We desire to thank Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Fields and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Smith for fruit and Mrs. John Greeson for some valuable dahlia bulbs.

It appears that the greatest need on this charge is better Sunday school equipment at Tabernacle. Being the fourth oldest church in our conference, it has done a great work and is still serving the community well, but the time has come when many of the young people of our country are going to attend those churches having adequate equipment. It is very encouraging to learn that many of our people are anxious that something be done soon.

H. L. ISLEY.

St. Paul.—Our Sunday school and church services are well attended, although the mills are on short time and some go off for weekends, and our attendance is not as good as we would like for it to be.

Our revival meeting will start next Sunday, June 30, with Bro. Suits of High Point to do the preaching. He will be here Monday night if nothing prevents; come and hear him. We ask your prayers that souls may be saved and much and lasting good may be done.

Since our last report we have had our church and Sunday school room painted inside. It looks so good we feel almost like we have a new church. When we first began talking about painting we did not have the money on hand to pay for the job, but we got busy and soon raised the money, so when the job was finished the money was ready. The Ladies' Aid came to our aid and paid about half of the bill. Many thanks to the Ladies' Aid and all others that helped out in paying for painting our church.

About a month ago Mr. Manger invited the Ladies' Aid out to Camp Herman, the Y. M. C. A. camp, to hold their meeting and a weiner roast; it was a real treat to roast weiners by a camp fire and go boat-riding. We had a good crowd and a good time.

Some of our young girls are planning to go to college in the fall. We will miss them but are always glad to see young people go to college.

Our Sunday school has raised right many Octagon coupons to send Mrs. A. G. Dixon at the Children's Home. She has sent letters to all our churches asking for them. We hope she will get the number she is asking for.

REPORTER.

Lincolnton Station.—We are delighted with our Sunday school and preaching services. Part of the Sunday school scholars, Pastor Fred R. Love and wife were visiting Roberta Station Sunday, June 16. We had a wonderful time singing, praying and listening. God's great love is wonderful, reaching down to man. Just think: For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. In every bird, in every flower, in every babe and in everything we can see that God is love.

Several being at Roberta, we had 110 at Sunday school June 16.

Sunday night there were seven united with the church: Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Moore, Leola Moore, Willard Moore, Bertha Moore, Mrs. May Odom, and Iren, colored. We were indeed glad to have them and may God bless them. Why shouldn't we be thankful to see any one link up with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? I thank God that Christ paid it all. He bore it all that we might live with Him.

June 23, 1929, we had 150 at Sunday school and $9.10 collection. We had a wonderful time. We had a praise meeting and it was enjoyed by many. Thank God for the blessing.

Our preaching services were inspiring and wonderful. When we go to the Lord's house for a blessing we always get one. Try it and see if it isn't so. I have tried it.

Praise God for it all.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—The work is progressing nicely. The Sunday school is growing and much interest is being shown. The Ladies' Aid Society gave a supper Saturday evening which was very successful. Proceeds amounted to $65. We are very grateful to the ladies of our church for the great work they are doing.

Rev. K. G. Holt filled the pulpit Sunday morning and Sunday night. He gave very uplifting sermons. May he continue with the same effort and interest he has started with.

The children will give their Children's Day exercise on next Sunday night. The collection from this will go to help pay the debt of the church to help carry on the work. Pray for us.

REPORTER.

Glen Raven.—Our special meeting began the third Sunday with a home-coming sermon by the writer. A further home-coming service was held in the afternoon. Besides several male quartettes, a number of speeches were made. Bro. Will Taylor, of Fairview, made the principal speech.

Bro. Bethea came Monday for the evening service and remained till the close of the Friday evening service. The attendance from first to last was good, and much interest was manifested. There were thirty-three conversions and reclamations. Three united with the church. Bro. Bethea's messages were well received. He will be welcomed back and graciously received any time.

WM. H. NEESE.

Henderson.—The Philathea class held its monthly business meeting May 28th at the parsonage, with Mrs. R. A. Hunter and Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Jr., hostesses. In the absence of the president, Mrs. C. F. Tanksley presided. Miss Katie Cooke conducted the devotionals, and read a most beautiful explanation of the 23rd Psalm. Reports from the treasurer and secretary were read and approved. The contest chairmen read their reports and much interest is being shown among the contestants. The program proved very interesting, as the leader had invited Mrs. E. G. Shaw, a delegate from the Philathea-Baraca convention at Winston-Salem, to give us an account of that gathering. At the conclusion of the meeting the hostesses served refreshments.

The fourth circle of the Auxiliary met on Thursday evening, June 13, with Misses Myrtle and Gertha Trogdon at their home on Young Street. The president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, presided, and Miss Myrtle Trogdon conducted the devotionals. Following this was the secretary's report and reports from standing committees. The circle voted to have a miscellaneous shower for the M. P. Children's Home at High Point sometime in July. A committee was appointed to confer with the other circles of the Auxiliary in regard to the purchase of an oil stove for use in the basement of the church. The meeting closed with prayer, and Mrs. W. R. Trogdon assisted the hostesses in serving refreshments.

The Auxiliary met with Mrs. Henry T. Powell at her home on Clark Street June 17, with Mesdames Geo. B. Harris and R. A. Hunter associate hostesses. The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. S. R. Watson. "I Love to Tell the Story" was sung in unison at the opening of the meeting, and Mrs. W. B. Hight conducted the devotionals. During the business period reports from the treasurer and secretary were given and approved. The corresponding secretary read a note of thanks and appreciation from Mrs. W. P. Garrett for flowers sent from the Auxiliary. The circle leaders gave in very good reports and interest and competition seems to be assisting the leaders to strive harder for better attendance at their circle meetings. The Auxiliary was then given a report from the branch meeting held at High Point, by Mrs. L. R. Gooch. Following the business, Mrs. S. R. Watson gave the reviews of the second chapter of our study book, "What Next in Missions?" During the social hour a delicious ice course was served.

The Vacation Church School opened Monday, June 24, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Fox. Forty-seven children registered and more are expected to enter later. Those assisting Miss Fox are Mrs. L. R. Gooch in charge of the primary department; Miss Mary Young, Junior department; Misses Aline Bowling, Eleanor Young and Myra Hight, beginners' department, and Mr. Henry Fox in charge of boys' play and recreation. Mrs. Emily Reavis has charge of the girls' handiwork. The school will continue for two weeks and it is hoped will prove a great success and blessing to our young people.

We are glad to welcome home again a number of our college girls and boys, also teachers who have been away for the school year.

Mrs. Geo. B. Harris, who has been in Maria Parham Hospital for the past week, is able to be home again.

It is with deepest regret that we report the death of our Baraca teacher, Mr. W. P. Garrett. His presence is greatly missed, also in our choir as well as in other choirs of the city. Although a member of Mt. Carmel church, he was ever active and interest in the Sunday school and choir work of our church and it is with saddened hearts that we bow to His infinite wisdom.

REPORTER.

Mebane.—The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church on Wednesday evening following the second Sunday. The program was in charge of Circle No. 1, Miss Pauline Nicholson, leader. This proved to be a surprise program and was most interesting and entertaining. Mrs. J. F. Minnis, of Graham, came to us at this meeting and talked about the mode of living in India. Mrs. Minnis spent six years in India as a missionary. She also brought with her costumes and jewelry worn by the women there. Some of our girls wore the costumes during the lecture and this added much to the impressiveness of the occasion. The ladies present were given an opportunity to ask Mrs. Minnis any question they wished about the Indian people, and she spent some time in answering these in a very interesting manner. Miss Edna Nicholson was pianist for the evening and Miss Elizabeth Nicholson delighted the congregation with a beautiful solo, "Just for Today." A piano selection was also given, by Miss Kathleen Qualls. Following the program the business meeting was held, and reports from the different circles heard. The sum of $44 was turned in to the treasury at this time. Then the ladies were invited into the girls' Phila-thea room where delicious sandwiches and iced tea were served.

The June meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held at the home of Mrs. T. O. Pender, Mrs. D. M. Qualls and Mrs. J. A. Payne hostesses. This was the time for election of officers. The following new officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. E. Barnette; vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Jobe; corresponding secretary, Mrs. P. U. Thompson. The remainder of the officers were re-elected. Mrs. Pender has been our very efficient president for several years but asked that her name be withdrawn since her chosen profession, nursing, demands a great deal of her time away from home. Mrs. Jack Smith was vice-president. She also asked to be removed. Both of these ladies have been untiring in their efforts to make our Ladies' Aid grow in number and interest, and it is one of the most active and wide-awake organizations in our church.

The work in general is moving on nicely here and our pastor is bringing to us each Sabbath interesting and inspiring messages. The service Sunday evening at 8 o'clock was in charge of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. The officers of this organization were installed at this service. We have some splendid young people members of this society who are interested in the work.

First Church, Thomasville.—New officers for the Christian Endeavor Society have been elected. They are: President, Mr. Roy Scarlette; vice-president, Mrs. Motte Williams; secretary and treasurer, Miss Juanita Dorsett; assistant secretary and treasurer, Miss Louise Powell; pianist, Mrs. Motte Williams; program committee, Mr. Roy Scarlette, chairman, Miss Blanche Lackey, Mrs. Bertie Lloyd. The other committees will be appointed by the president.

We have an average attendance at Sunday school. Mr. D. R. Connell, our superintendent, was away Sunday and Mr. Roy Scarlette had charge of the Sunday school.

Attendance at church service was off considerably Sunday night on account of the bad weather. Our pastor delivered a fine talk to the "faithful few."

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning Rev. R. I. Farmer chose for the subject of his message "The Transient or Abiding Christ." He said that there is no gift so precious as the friendship of the Lord Jesus. As the two disciples, on the way to Emmaus, walked and talked about Jesus, His crucifixion, death, and burial, and the many sad incidents of those few days, Jesus suddenly appeared by their side and talked with them. They said to him, "Abide with us." Shakespeare said, "I would rather let my head bow to the block than to bow my knee to any other God but Christ." When you and I meet and talk about Him He reveals Himself; you commune with Christ, and before you know it He is there revealing Himself. The heart into which Jesus comes is His abiding place or home. As you break bread at meals, Christ will be there if you but ask Him to be your guest. One of the saddest trials of life is the necessity to go back home after the failure of an undertaking or to take up the broken threads again after the loss of a cherished relative or friend. The disciples were yearning for a new earthly dominion, and as they grieved for the lost cause and the failure of their hopes in Jesus' crucifixion and death, He came and walked with them and talked with them. Our shattered hopes and broken dreams are often the way to greater things. He is a God of equity and will equalize things if we only let Him.

The C. E. Society held an interesting meeting Monday evening at 8 o'clock with Miss Lois Snipes, leader, on the topic, "Jesus Teaching Us Self-Control."

The Junior Mission Circle met Monday morning at 10 o'clock with Mrs. John Whitesell leader. The Vacation Church School was suspended temporarily for this meeting.

The Vacation Church School Comment exercises, which are always entertaining and worthwhile, will be held Wednesday evening in the assembly room. The exhibit will be displayed in the Primary Department of the Sunday school.

Miss Marjorie Welborn will attend the State C. E. Convention at Montreat, N. C., June 25-29 as a delegate from the local society. Rev. R. I. Farmer will attend and deliver some addresses. Arnold J. Koonce also plans to be in attendance for a part of the sessions.

"The Family Album," an amusing and interesting entertainment, will be presented Friday evening by members and friends of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Mr. C. E. Bulla is registration agent for the Leadership Training School at High Point College for the week July 13-20, and is very anxious to secure a large number of registrations from First Church.

The usual mid-week prayer meeting will be held Wednesday evening at the regular time and place.

We were inexpressibly shocked and grieved to hear the announcement of the death of Mrs. Lucille Walton Hinshaw, wife of Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, of the faculty of the college, which occurred today (Tuesday) at 1 o'clock p. m. at Guilford General Hospital. An infant son born last Thursday lived less than a day, and was buried here Friday, June 21. Mrs. Hinshaw moved here two years ago with her husband and young son, Reginald, and small daughter, Garnet, and had greatly endeared herself to the people of the city and First Church, to which she transferred her membership last March, as well as the college community. She was a woman of culture and great refinement, possessed a lovely voice, was an interested member of the Woman's Auxiliary, and entered actively into the social, civic, and religious life of the community. Of handsome and commanding presence, genial and charming personality, she drew many friends to her, and it is hard to connect the thought of death with one who was but a week ago so full of buoyant health and eager life and joyful strength. Our hearts go out in loving sympathy to the bereaved and desolate husband and the two sweet, motherless children in this sudden and appalling blow. May God's grace be sufficient for them, and may they feel "His everlasting arms" beneath them. A more extended account will appear later.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Shaw have returned from their honeymoon trip through the Valley of Virginia, to Washington and Atlantic City, and for the present are at home to their friends at the Elwood Hotel. A most of friends will welcome Mr. Shaw's bride to the church and city.

Pleasant Grove.—The Children's Day program was rendered the third Sunday to a large congregation, the church being almost filled. The children and young people performed their parts well. Mr. R. L. Pope, of Thomasville, made a splendid talk on the Sunday school. The offering amounted to $31.00.

The Junior and Intermediate classes with their teachers, Mrs. W. G. Myers, Mrs. Wallace Kennedy and Mr. Clyde Payne, went on a fishing trip Saturday afternoon. Before returning home the group all enjoyed ice cream and a picnic supper.

The C. E. Society is doing some splendid work under the leadership of Mrs. W. G. Myers. Some very interesting programs have been given.

The vote for delegate to Annual Conference was taken Sunday morning, after which Brother Williams gave us another one of his spiritual feasts. REPORTER.

Gibsonville Church.—Last Sunday was a very good day for us. We had fairly good attendance at Sunday school and most of them stayed for preaching. Dr. A. G. Dixon, superintendent of the Children's Home, was with us and delivered a splendid sermon. He also told us of some of the work they are doing in the home and of some of the needs to make the work more successful. We were somewhat disappointed because he did not bring any of the children. We hope he can come again and bring them.

Mrs. F. G. Hammer, the Junior Sunday school superintendent, and one of the teachers, Mrs. Norman Brown, have been on the sick list for about two weeks. We hope they will be well soon and can come back to church.

Some folks seem to have an idea that when they have gone to Sunday school on the Sabbath day that they have done their part and don't have any need to stay for the preaching service. I don't agree with them. We have only done a part of our part when we stay for both services and it doesn't make our homes any farther away.

Paul the apostle said that it was through the foolishness of preaching that men were saved. There are not many preachers if any who take the time to hunt a fellow up just to preach to him. We may say that we can stay at home or go home from Sunday school and read our Bibles or hear a sermon over the radio and get just as much good from it. Perhaps we could, but how many of us do this, especially on a nice day, when there are so many other places that we would like to go? Let's more of us go to Sunday school and then stay for preaching.

REPORTER.

Harmony.—The work at our church is moving along nicely. The Sunday school is growing in both numbers and interest. Sunday we had 65 present in Sunday school and a larger number for the regular morning preaching service. A large collection was taken in Sunday school; we will send the collection to the Children's Home every fourth Sunday.

The District Rally service was held at Harmony on Saturday evening, June 22, with a good attendance. The speakers were: Dr. Taylor and Mrs. J. J. Atkins, of Charlotte, N. C. Mrs. Atkins made a very interesting talk to the women and young people about the missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Broome. We also had with us Rev. N. M. Harrison. We were all glad to have Mr. Harrison with us although it was only a short while.

A singing convention will be held at Harmony the third Sunday in July, beginning at 2 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

The W. F. M. S. met at the church Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and an interesting program was rendered.

Rev. D. D. Broome rendered two interesting sermons Sunday at the 11 o'clock service; he talked mostly to the children. The children all enjoyed the sermon and so did the grown-ups.

Rev. and Mrs. Broome are going to open a Daily Bible School the first week in August. All children from the age of 4 to 12 are asked to attend this school. We feel sure this will be very helpful.

The young people of the C. E. Society did not carry out their program Sunday evening on account of rainy weather, but we will give the same program the fifth Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Moriah.—A splendid Children's Day program was given Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The children did well. We feel very grateful to Mrs. Ethel Sharpe, Mrs. B. S. Kimery and Miss Blanch Curtis for their untiring efforts in training the children for this occasion.

Our Sunday school is gaining right along in attendance; had 150 present Sunday.

Some of our young people are planning to attend the Leadership Training School to be held in High Point next month.

We will have no services next Sunday. Our pastor is planning to take a 10-day trip. We hope the rest will help him regain his strength so that he may soon be able to take up his work in full.

YADKIN COLLEGE HOME-COMING

It seemed to the former students of Yadkin College who gathered under the aged oaks in front of Professor W. T. Totten's lawn Thursday morning, that the Wheels of Time were literally being turned back. Memories of the days when Yadkin College was the cultural and educational center of the Carolinas and Virginia came thick and fast, revived by the returning of men and women who received their education here.

The meeting which was held in the Methodist Church nearby, was called to order by the president of the Methodist Protestant Conference, Dr. S. W. Taylor, Rev. H. L. Powell led in prayer. Mr. Millard Phillips, who was introduced as having always been considered by the students of the college to be the philosopher of the school community, spoke a word of welcome. Rev. A. S. Raper responded to this welcome.

Mr. J. Norman Wills of Greensboro, N. C., Secretary, Treasurer and General Manager of Odell Hardware Co., and widely known philanthropist, made the address of the morning. He expressed the regret of everyone present that it had not been possible to keep the old college going. He reviewed the history of the college, outlining the contributions that it had made to the state. He touched the chords of memory fondly as he carried his audience back with him through the years that were so full of happy memories for all of them.

After a committee was appointed to arrange the details of the next home-coming the meeting was adjourned to the grounds where a basket lunch had been spread.

The afternoon meeting was given over to business after which there were many short talks by former students.

A motion was made and carried that the old college bell, which has been carried to the present Methodist Protestant College at High Point, be named "Old Yadkin" and have a tablet erected giving its history. Mr. George Curry has been instrumental in having this bell installed.

Dr. O. B. Michael, of Winston-Salem, expressed the hope that the High Point College would not be considered as separate and apart from Yadkin College but rather that it might be deemed as having been built on the foundation of the ideals for which Yadkin College had always stood. He suggested that one of the departments of the High Point College be named for the old college.

Appreciation was expressed to the people who were responsible for planning this home-coming, of whom Mrs. W. M. Koonts of Lexington was foremost.

Yadkin College was organized by the Methodist Protestant Church before the Civil War. It was for many years the only school in this section and numbers among its graduates, many of the foremost men in this and neighboring states. The present college building was erected about 1880 by the Brick Constructing firm of Cecil and Watson under a committee appointed by the Methodist Protestant Church.

This is the second home-coming held at Yadkin College. It was voted by the members present an annual affair. The next home-coming will be held June 7, 1930.

—Bro. J. P. Owen has been appointed postmaster at Shoals, Surry county.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Henry Ray Sapp

Henry Ray Sapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Sapp, died June 5, 1929, being only 20 days of age. Besides the parents, two brothers, William Thomas Sapp and Roscoe Gray Sapp, survive. The deceased child was one of twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Sapp. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant Church. The infant child was found dead when the mother awoke early on the morning of June 5. It had not been ill previously, and a heart attack is thought to have been the cause of its death.

The earthly life of Henry Ray Sapp was very brief, but he lived long enough to become one of God's flowers in human form, which was plucked and transplanted into the heavenly flower garden, whose fragrance will be a benediction to the redeemed souls of heaven throughout all eternity. Heaven is made richer and more attractive by the souls of the children who die in infancy. Christ said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Doubtless the angelic hosts of heaven will be composed largely of the souls of children, whose sweet voices will be heard by the redeemed in that Eternal City of God."

Buried from Calvary Church June 7, 1929
So quickly gone! We wonder why.
We're dumb: we cannot understand.
Was she more fitted for the sky,
That she was taken from earth's low land?

Her gentle life made impress strong,
We saw her faith, we felt her love.
Her memory will we cherish long,
We'll class her with the saints above.

She calls to us to follow on,
From her high place in Glory Land.
God's reason deep begins to dawn,
And some good day we'll understand.

Kelley

"Watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." The members and congregation of Yarborough Chapel, Cross Anchor, S. C. have had another warning. Last Wednesday, June 5, Brother Kelley, a Cross Anchor farmer, was fatally injured by a frightened mule. He was riding the mule to the field when the animal became frightened and threw Brother Frank Kelley. He fell, catching his foot in the trace chain. The animal ran several hundred yards to the stables. He was rushed to the hospital in Spartanburg but the death angel slipped into the operation room immediately after his arrival, and Brother Kelley is no longer among the living of the earth.

The funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon in Yarborough Chapel of which he was a member. Rev. Foster Spear, pastor of Cross Anchor M. E. Church, assisted in the service.

Mr. Kelley is survived by his wife, three step-daughters and four sons. They all have the prayers and heartfelt sympathy of the writer. May God make His grace abound toward them so that their bereavement may be comforted, and that they may also live that when the time comes to go, each will be ready.
D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

Resolutions of Respect

It is with hearts filled with sadness that we, the members of the Methodist Protestant Church, record the death of one of our faithful members, Mrs. Elizabeth Beavans Whitaker, which occurred May 22, 1929. In her passing the children have lost a devoted mother, the town a valuable citizen, and our church and Aid Society a loyal member.

Therefore, be it resolved: First, that we cherish her memory, appreciating what she has done for us by her unfailing love and faithfulness. Second, that we try to emulate her splendid Christian character. Third, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family. Fourth, that copies of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the Progress, to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and that they be recorded in the minutes of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Garrett

Whereas, the Supreme Master, in His infinite wisdom, on the 29th day of May, 1929, after a life of usefulness, summoned into His presence our leader, W. Polk Garrett, organizer and teacher of Baraca Class, First Methodist Protestant Church, a man of sterling integrity, a faithful, unobtrusive friend and a highly respected and honored citizen;

And, whereas, by his well-known, upright, manly character, the departed gained and held the affections of all who knew him and won a permanent place in the hearts of his fellowmen, and our entire class fully realizes and keenly feels the loss of his services as leader;

Resolved, that we transmit to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy with the profoundest assurance that we share with them this irretrievable loss.

And be it resolved, that this resolution be spread upon the permanent records of this class, a copy transmitted to his wife, and that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and to the Henderson Daily Dispatch.

Respectfully submitted,
J. M. BAITY,
LITTLEJOHN FAULKNER,
S. C. FLOYD,
Baraca Class Committee.

MARRIED

Stout-Shaw

A wedding of very great interest to the many friends in this section of the state, and especially to High Point and vicinity, took place at the Methodist Protestant Children's Home last Saturday morning, June 8, when Miss Flossie Mae Stout became the bride of Mr. Richard H. Shaw. Miss Stout is the youngest daughter of the late Mrs. S. R. Stout of High Point and Greensboro. She is a graduate of N. C. C. W. and for some years taught in the Greensboro High Schools. For the last two years she has taught in the Asheville High Schools. Miss Stout was reared in High Point and will be welcomed back into the circle of First Church membership.

Mr. Shaw came to High Point in early young manhood, and soon thereafter connected himself with the First Methodist Protestant church and served for some eight or nine years as Sunday school superintendent. He has steadily grown in influence in High Point until he ranks among the leading young business men of the city.

Dr. A. G. Dixon, a former pastor of both the bride and groom, performed the marriage ceremony with just the required number of witnesses present.

The happy couple were soon on their way to Washington, D. C., Philadelphia, Atlantic City and other points by automobile. We wish for them much happiness, great usefulness and abundant success.

Bruin-Vaughan

On June 1st at the home of the bride's parents, in Henderson, Mr. Earl Bruin and Miss Esther Vaughan.

On June 10, at the home of the bride's parents, in Dabney, Mr. Roy W. Dixon and Miss Mary Isabel Wyche.

Miss Vaughan and Mr. Dixon are members of the Methodist Protestant Church in Henderson and are among our most active workers.

We extend to these young people our hearty congratulations and best wishes.

Man gets but little here below;
E'en then, avoiding strife,
He takes his weekly wad of dough
And hands it to his wife.

Man wants but little here below,
But wants that little soon.
If you don't give him what he wants,
He'll snatch it with a spoon.

"OLD YADKIN" APPROACHING THE TOWER

At the Yadkin College reunion a number of subscriptions were made on the "Old Yadkin" Bell fund and this brings the fund up to where it looks like the old bell will soon find itself well equipped and in a final working place. For certainly the idea is to place the bell where it will be able to do efficient work in our new and up to date college as it worked in the good old college of other days. This will not only be a way by which the old bell will be doing a service but it will be causing the spirit of the old college to survive and it will cause the survived spirit of the old to be a part of the spirit of the new.

Recent subscribers to the fund are as follows: Prof. Stout, $1.00; Miss Vick Byerly, $1.00; Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, $1.00; Mrs. Webster Koonts, $1.00; Miss Salie Taylor, $1.00; Miss Lelia Byerly, $1.00; Mrs. Burchet, $1.00; Mr. M. L. Craver, $1.00; Mr. J. M. Simpson, $1.00; Mr. J. Norman Wills, $1.00; Mr. W. D. Forelines, $1.00; Cash .50; Mr. J. R. Raper, .50; Mr. R. T. Wills, $1.00; Mrs. J. C. Castevens, $1.00; Mr. Wm. Hanner, $2.00; Rev. O. B. Micheal, $3.00; Total, $18.00.

The total amount subscribed to date is $60.00. This leaves $10.00 to yet be raised. We thank all who have helped in the amount thus far subscribed, but it is the next man we are now looking for. It should be a small matter for the friends of the two colleges to raise this small balance. In this way we will help to perpetuate the spirit of a great institution that served well in its day and help the activities of a great institution that is serving well in its day. Come on next, with your subscription. Send subscriptions to the undersigned.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT THE ENFIELD CHURCH

We are delighted to have Miss Bettie Brittingham with us to direct our Daily Vacation Bible School. While we were little short of teachers in the beginning we feel that as the days go by we will get a sufficient number to man the school. On Tuesday there were 58 enrolled and the school going fine. You will hear more about us later.

TALK

Talk, talk, talk, talk,
Talk that likes to shout and stalk!
Talk of diet, drugs, disease,
Talk of doctors' frightful fees;
Talk of earthquakes and the probs,
Talk of ultra-rich and snobs;
Talk of politics and crime,
Talk of names immersed in slime;
Talk of panic, unrest, strikes,
Talk of baseball, golf, and hikes;
Talk of I did this and I did that,
Talk of household dog or cat;
Talk of discontent, divorce,
Talk of choosing winning horse;
Talk of bargain sales and style,
Talk of biggest money pile;
Talk of shakups, holdups, thugs,
Talk of real estate humbugs;
Talk of someone's homemade pie,
Talk of "U" and "I" and "IP";
Talk of agents, barbers, clerks,
Talk of neighbors' queerest quirks;
Talk of baby's cutest pranks,
Talk of braggarts, bores and cranks;
Talk of motorists on the go,
Talk of "See, I told you so!"
Talk of plunder, graft and bunk,
Talk of worthless antique junk;
Talk of children's smartest ways,
Talk of gravely censored plays;
Talk of fishermen and fake,
Talk of things for talking's sake;
Away from all such inane talk
I want to walk, walk, WALK, WALK!

CHILDREN'S DAY

Some schools are still ordering Children's Day supplies. Has your school or church ordered yet? If not, do not delay longer.

Will pastors or treasurers of churches and schools that have observed Children's Day please see that the offering is sent to Dr. Straughn, denominational treasurer, at the earliest possible moment? Our missionary obligations have to be paid monthly and when funds are not in hand with which to meet the same the Board of Missions is compelled to borrow at six per cent interest. If schools or churches hold the money both the borrowings and interest account will necessarily be larger. We only borrow when we are compelled to do so, and we are only compelled when the funds in the hands of the church are not forthcoming.

LADIES' DAY, LADIES' DAY

On Thursday of the Summer Conference, which is July 18, the wives and other members of the preachers' families are invited to be a part of the conference. If a brother does not have a wife or a family he might bring some other man's daughter. The idea is that we bring our dinners on that day, eat together picnic style, and have a good time. The ladies may enjoy the program with the pastors or they may have a program all their own. Come, ladies, and help make this day the greatest day in the history of Summer Conferences. Pastors, please report to the undersigned whether or not you and yours will respond to this invitation. It is very important to know.

Yours for a great conference,

GEO. L. CURRY.

—The Maryland Conference met on June 12 and elected Dr. L. B. Smith as its new president. He has preached in revival meetings in several North Carolina churches and is well and favorably known by a large number of our people.

—Last week's Methodist Protestant contains Dr. Lewis's latest editorial article. It ends with this striking expression: "Surely we are fearfully and wonderfully made! Surely God must have intended us to live together, for He made our backbone adaptable, accommodative, yielding up to a point and then iron."

—The 47th annual catalogue of Westminster Theological Seminary is a neat pamphlet filled with interesting matter. The names of Brothers Bingham and Madison appear in the list of students as representatives of North Carolina. The fall semester opens September 24.

His Ministry

He spoke the word to selfish men
Of blinded mind and hardened heart.
He went his way and came again
And found the truth had taken start.

He preached again and went his way
To preach to men in other field.
The truth took root by night and day
And promise gave of generous yield.

He preached and preached through all the years.
Both here and there and everywhere;
Till hardened men were brought to tears
And blinded men bowed down in prayer.

The harvest came with golden grain,
The worthless weeds had been displaced.
The sower's seed, God's sun and rain,
Reclaimed some lives quite else disgraced.

Jesus' Evasive Replies

Jesus could answer questioners without answering questions. His answers have excited much admiration. He did not ignore or treat with silent contempt any questioner unless it was those who tried him on his last day, but he sometimes evaded the point of the question. Some questions were wicked and could not be answered according to the purpose of the questioners without entering into the promotion of their wicked purpose. This was true of the question regarding paying tribute to Cesar. The object was not to gain light on the way of duty, but to lead Jesus to an offense that would have serious consequences to himself. Jesus avoided the trap by evading the point of the question. He did not express his mind as to the legitimacy of the Roman rule over the Jews. He said render unto Cesar his own, but did not say what belonged to Cesar.

One day a man of statistical turn of mind came and coolly asked Jesus: "Are there few who be saved?" He perhaps expected that Jesus would give him the answer in figures, or at least would say "yes" or "no." Jesus directed his reply to all the multitude present, exhorting them to strive to enter into the way of salvation, warning them that many will seek to enter in and be disappointed. The spirit of that questioner who would make the great question of human destiny merely a question of curiosity was offensive. He simply wanted to know the outcome, he was doing nothing to determine the end for the best. He was asking for knowledge that did not belong to him. He was ignoring questions of great practical concern. We are not surprised that Jesus evaded his question.

Then there was the question of his disciples: "Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Jesus saw that they were obsessed with the prevalent Jewish notion that Israel was to be exalted as a nation among the nations of the world, probably above the other nations of the world. We are rather surprised that he did not rebuke them for their gross misconception. But instead of trying to obliterate the false program in their minds by words of strong denunciation, he sketches for them in a few words what would come to pass in God's great program. They would receive power, indeed, but it would be for very different uses from what they supposed. They were to have a world-wide province, but in that domain they would be not rulers but witnesses unto Him whose it was to be both Saviour of all and Lord of all. Their question was not evaded, perhaps, strictly speaking, but it was answered by implication rather than directly.

The woman of Samaria said that the Messiah would tell us all things. That was perhaps a common belief. Men thought that he could unravel their perplexities and ease their minds regarding the subjects in which they were most interested, that He would be a great fortune-teller. But his mission did not include such undertakings. He would not minify the importance of His real work by engaging in that which would divert men's minds from His great, transcendent theme of spiritual life. Many of men's questions He did not answer, but He gave a very clear answer to man's great question, "What must I do to be saved?"

No Herald July 18

This paper will take its annual vacation the week including July 18. The editor wishes to be free to attend the Pastors' Summer Conference. Those who would make announcements that week will please make them next week.

—We thank all who have joined in the effort to add new subscribers to our list. The combined effort has helped more than we could make you realize without employing more words than we think we should use at this time. We will have more to say hereafter regarding provision for the Herald's permanent continuance. We ask all to bear in mind now that there is need of special effort now to overcome difficulties felt in this office from the loss of income by the sale of the Publishing House and the application of the proceeds on the debts of High Point College.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard has our sympathy in his bodily ills, but we are hoping that they will yield to treatment. Let those who know his value in the ministry join in prayer that it may be so.

—We trust enough of our people will pay the registration fee for the Young People's Conference to enable the management to come out financially.

—We wonder whether most of the opposition to the prohibition law is not on the ground that it cuts off the supply of strong drink or makes it hard to get.

THE TRINITY OF TRIUMPH

By REV. DANIEL A. POLING, D.D., LL.D.

President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor
(Keynote address delivered at the opening session of the International Christian Endeavor Convention, Kansas City, Missouri, Wednesday evening, July 3, 1929.)

The Thirty-Second International Convention of the Christian Endeavor movement opens under auspicious circumstances. The report of our General Secretary, Mr. E. P. Gates, will reveal progress, definite and in some respects quite remarkable, along all lines and in every department. Our correspondence from overseas indicates that the work in America but reflects the state of Christian Endeavor abroad. The next World's Convention is to be held in Berlin one year from this month. We shall then be rapidly approaching our Fiftieth Anniversary, our Golden Jubilee. One year later, in our year of Jubilee, two notable international gatherings are in prospect—one, the International Convention on this continent; and the other, a similar convention in Australia. To the second of these the young people of Australasia have invited a gathering which will reveal and emphasize the scope of our movement's ministry in the Southern Pacific.

From our General Secretary, Mr. E. P. Gates, has come the suggestion that during the next two years we enroll one million former active Endeavorers, men and women who have known the fellowship and training that are our common heritage and who, though no longer serving with us in the active ranks, are now identified with the home, social, religious, and public life of their communities and states. I offer this suggestion as a definite recommendation. Let this enrollment be entirely separate from any financial appeal and from every other campaign. Let it stand as a living memorial to Christian Endeavor. Let those enrolled become the big brothers and sisters of all Endeavorers.

The gift of Charles O'Hara Craigie and his wife, both of whom passed from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant during the year, has enabled us to think in terms of a yet larger service. Certainly Christian Endeavor has for nearly half a century demonstrated the divine principle that Christian agencies live largely by living unselfishly and that they receive unto themselves in proportion as they give of themselves. Jesus Christ came that "they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." For organizations, as for individuals, the life abundant is the life of sacrificial service. Francis E. Clark, our founder, was a living demonstration of this truth in which the Christian Endeavor movement has gone forward in all lands.

Problems of Progress

The problems we face—and there are problems—are problems of progress. If we are as true to the principles of this movement as were those we follow, the program of Christian Endeavor has an expanding future. Her genius in adaptability as well as in direct service commands her now, as perhaps never before, to the individual church. We believe that her response to both denominational leadership and denominational control, with the worldwide Christian fellowship and the united Christian service which are her peculiar glory, have brought her to the kingdom for such a time as this.

I would make particular reference, not only to my associates in the Boston headquarters, but to those of our number who are the executive and field leaders of the State unions. Under these devoted men and women new and greater achievements have been recorded. Particularly significant and happy have been the relationships of these secretaries with the officers of the great denominational youth groups. I have had personal satisfaction and joy in these associations.

But even more praiseworthy and significant than the accomplishments of our full-time salaries executives is the ever-enlarging ministry of the young people themselves. Without remuneration they give their time, ability and enthusiasm to make Christian Endeavor what for young men and young women we believe it distinctively is, "The greatest youth movement of the world."

In my own church the individual societies have played an ever-growing part in the parish ministry of Christ's kingdom. Without the slightest friction they have carried forward a common cause side by side with the church school and the organized clubs and classes. I would not consider favorably a pastoral responsibility in downtown New York without the aid of Christian Endeavor. Expressionally it is at once the simplest, the most efficient, and the most constant instrument the pastor has available for the direction and leadership of youth. Again and again I find young people confirming the testimony of Mr. Roger W. Babson, who said: "All that I have and all that I am I owe to a little Christian Endeavor Society in Gloucester, Mass. After joining the church at fourteen years of age, I became interested in the Christian Endeavor movement. This gave me an opportunity for expression in a religious way which held me until I went to college. It truly saved my soul."

Crusade With Christ

At the Cleveland International Convention two years ago Christian Endeavor gave to the youth of the whole church the Crusade with Christ. It is estimated that more than ten million young persons in more than forty associated groups are now united in this great enterprise. The Crusade with Christ has already done something to lift "like a mighty army moves the Church of God" out of the realm of poetic fancy.

During the recent Lenten period more than ten thousand Easter sunrise services were conducted by young people under the Crusade auspices. A National Loyalty Sunday was observed, and the enthusiasm of young people was concentrated upon a national election so as to raise the Constitution and the law above partisan politics.

The Crusade with Christ has materially affected the attitude of adults toward young people. Here we have made just a beginning, but a real beginning. We hold that youth are as intrinsically fine as they have ever been and that the Christian challenge is not only their hope of salvation, but their way to larger living. In the Crusade with Christ this challenge is delivered with directness and power.

Fifteen men and women, serving without remuneration, have comprised the General Committee of the Crusade. The total expense incurred has been pitifully small, but they have materially affected the atmosphere surrounding denominational relationships and the attitude of young men and young women toward the worldwide ministry of Jesus Christ.

What of the future? We present the Crusade with Christ tonight as the imperative of the hour and as the challenge for the next two years. In its program we find the sufficient answer to the question of both the individual Endeavorer and the organization.

Trinity of Triumph

Evangelism, citizenship and peace—this is the trinity of triumph. Personalized in the words of Mr. Fred W. Ramsey, they bring home to the heart of each of us the driving dynamic, "Myself, my country, and my world." Again evangelism is first—this profound, this timeless challenge to personal religion and for personal rightness, this clear call to personal devotion and personal allegiance. One man can change a community; one woman can revolutionize a city; but it must be a new man and a new woman. The new world, with its Christianized social order, waits forever on these. Here lies the supreme business of Christian Endeavor, for here is the fundamental reason for Christianity itself. To lead young people to Jesus Christ, to strengthen and train them in the Christian life, to relate them definitely to the service of Christ and His cause—thus we express the fundamental business of our society, which is Christian first, pre-eminently, and always!

For the Jerusalem Message

During the next two years it shall be our purpose to co-operate with all communions associated in the Christian Endeavor movement in order that Christian missions may feel a new tide of life flowing from Christian youth. Our conventions shall carry an even stronger evangelical emphasis. The time has come again when the student generation should be brought more definitely face to face with the world's need—the need that cannot be met at any station short of Calvary.

This International Convention is at one with the Jerusalem message. The work of the missionary may have changed. His place in the life of the peoples to whom he goes may be different now from what it was a generation ago, but the vital business of the missionary has not changed. While ancient civilizations are in the travail pains of a new birth and while indigenous churches rise through social convulsions, the missionary is needed as never before, needed to counsel and to inspire, as well as to teach and direct.

From Christian Endeavor thousands of young persons have gone to the missionary fields at home and abroad. Tonight let us join our lives to the greater missionary task ahead. Let this be at the heart of our passion and program for evangelism.

To make our missionary purpose definite and the plan practical, we propose a special covenant declaration. We shall ask this convention to give the declaration its first public indorsement.

Crusade Unique

A unique feature of the Crusade with Christ is this: that each church, each denomination or communion, may make the Crusade peculiarly its own. There are no restrictions as to organizational procedure. The Crusade with Christ is at once the crusade of the particular organization, while its unity is a unity of spirit in a common cause. Christian Endeavor has only the profound joy of its origin and of a place with all others in its plan.

Christian Endeavor and Organic Union

As to organic unity, Christian Endeavor calls the youth of the whole church to support the commissions on union that have been authorized by practically every denomination and communion. Our movement is in itself a commission for unity—spiritual unity first, that unity which must precede and accompany any organic plan. Christian Endeavor is also a vital factor in bringing about those physical contacts and organizational relationships that open and prepare the way for organic union.

But it is in our own field, the field of fellowship and co-operation, that we shall continue to operate. Our functional life is not without and apart from the church; it is within the churches in which our societies are established and to which we belong. Christian Endeavor is not a young people's church. Christian Endeavor is part of the church; Christian Endeavor is a youth agency of the church, loyal to the church and responsible to the church. It is for this reason that Christian Endeavor does not have a special commission on church union. It is for this reason that we serve the great principle and ideal of union at the call and under the leadership of our denominations. Such a gathering as this is the outward and visible expression of the spirit that in God's own time shall bring to pass the fulfillment of Christ's prayer that His children should be one. To this glorious consummation youth will bring increasingly the enthusiasm and faith that dispute with schism and that are impatient with delay.

Citizenship

We present at this convention the beginning of a new citizenship library. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" is the basis of every great educational enterprise of the Christian church. We shall strive to discharge our trust more effectually in the future than we ever have discharged it in the past.

Fundamentally the Christian Endeavor Society is in its citizenship emphasis a Christian citizenship group.

While I shall allow the convention itself to unfold the details of our program, I do particularly call your attention to the fact that we have a responsibility for law observance and law enforcement all our own. We dare not lightly regard the implications of our slogan of eighteen years ago, "A Saloonless Nation by 1920." By our private practice and public testimony we must challenge lawlessness. We must throw our whole influence behind the government and in support of the Constitution and law. The words "observance" and "enforcement" have for us a special significance. The initiation of the President of the United States does not fall upon deaf ears tonight. We shall call you to personal, definite commitment.

"Evangelism, citizenship, and peace"—ay, and let me remind you that not only in evangelism, but in citizenship and in the campaign for world peace, the missionary program of Christian Endeavor finds its expression. I think of the message of Christian missions as strengthening us for each of these vital tasks, and the spirit, the veritable miracle of missions, as binding the tasks into one.

World Peace

With us world peace can never be an empty phrase. We do not forget that it was our beloved founder, Francis E. Clark, who at the New York International Convention in 1921 launched the Christian Endeavor Crusade for a Warless World. Our field is the world. Our associates are of all nations and all tongues. Our program for more than two generations has carried us, in the flesh as in the spirit, to the ends of the earth. We shall never escape the horror that brought Christian Endeavorers face to face upon the field of battle in bloody throes of war. Tonight our vow to have a part in ending war comprehends at once the passion of a personal Christian testimony and the fervor of a fellowship that has made of the world a Christian Endeavor community. We are of one faith, one tongue, one objective, and we have a single High Command. "For Christ and the Church" is more than a motto. It is a program for service and the expression of personal dedication.

But, aside from all else that we may do through our individual societies and our unions, by means of study courses and the conferences and conventions that are to be held in half a hundred countries in all quarters of the globe, let us tonight launch a campaign that shall be a veritable crusade, a crusade more significant than any that ever swept forward towards the sepulchre of Christ, a crusade to bring the young people of the world first to think peace and then to so practice peace that nations shall learn war no more forever.

We Launch a World Movement

Let us tonight launch a worldwide movement to make prompt and effective use of that most promising instrument for peace, peace among all peoples—that most promising instrument yet devised by human statesmanship. Let us request the Executive Committee of the International Society of Christian Endeavor to bring our action to the attention of all national Christian Endeavor Unions. Let us set in motion a program that shall call to a common purpose and plan Christian Endeavorers of every land, of every race, and of every tongue. The providential instrument of this advance is the Pact of Paris, which we tonight rechristen the Pact of Peace.

This Pact has changed completely the psychology and the basis of the crusade for a warless world. Now youth campaigns for peace as a crusade of national honor. Our banners in North America are not the flags of "pacifism"; they are the flags of our countries—the Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes, and the banner of Mexico.

Yesterday we strove against age-old traditions to overcome precedents and to change law. Now we strive to vindicate national honor, to make law effective, and that our countries shall not be found either in failure or in falsehood. Surely God is in this matter.

Every national Christian Endeavor organization, particularly every national honor society in the countries of the sixty sovereign powers ratifying the Pact, may unite with us, as we unite with them, in this new war to end war.

"All for One, One for All"

Christian Endeavor formally accepts the Pact of Peace. We take it in full earnest. To it we give our indorsement. With it we pledge our personal—ay, and our Christian Endeavor—honor. It is our individual and collective declaration of faith. It is equally our platform of principle and our field of action. It renounces armed conflict as a means for settling all differences between the high contracting nations. By it we are authoritatively committed to the proposition that henceforth all questions between nations, all disagreements, shall be settled by conference and arbitration; that there shall never come again any dispute that shall not be submitted to a proper tribunal for peaceful adjudication. The Pact outlaws war forever. It is British. It is German. It is French. It is American. It is the covenant of each and of all. It is Christian Endeavor!

Finally, from this Pact of Peace and as the next step towards organizing the machinery of peace, let us move forward to the World Court. Let us enter here without delay.

Tonight I call you to a threefold covenant which is at once a personal vow and a world program.

DUTY

"If you have a duty to perform and you have the opportunity, now and not tomorrow is the time to do it. You cannot keep your self-respect by putting off the performance of duty. Put off duty, and it will soon cease to command you, and conscience will soon cease to perform its function. Have you an apology to make, a pardon to ask, a debt to pay? Can you do it now? Then do not be a coward; go at once and do your duty."—Selected.

OPTIMISM	The President's Letter	EVANGELISM
----------	---------------------------------------	------------

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Hall

Word came to us yesterday that Bro. C. H. Hall had been released from his long season of suffering. The end came Sunday morning in a High Point hospital where he had gone for treatment. We are informed that the funeral was held Monday at Love Joy church, Why Not charge, and conducted by Bro. G. L. Reynolds and Bro. Paul S. Kennett. Our tender sympathies are extended to the bereaved wife and children and other relatives, and to the Mecklenburg charge of which he was pastor. Bro. Hall was an earnest pastor, and the people of his charge bear testimony to his faithfulness. His period of service was short in the church here, but we are comforted in the confidence that his place is secure in the church above.

A Meditation

June 30, Sunday.—A slight physical ailment has made me a "shut in" today. From my bed I can see that the outside is bright with the unclouded light of a summer sun. The chirping of the birds near my window tells me of their happiness, and the gentle swaying of the green boughs on a nearby tree indicates the peacefulness of nature on this beautiful holy day. But my thought is turning mostly toward folks—a great host of them, mine included—who have found their way to church on this morning, glorious with the touch of heaven. Some will assemble in great and costly cathedrals; others, in temples less pretentious, but just as holy and attractive. The building is not the chief attraction of a church. In these thousand sacred places the people have assembled to worship God. Through sermon, song, prayer, offering, and fellowship of the saints they will be enriched in their thoughts, and lifted up in their souls toward the Father of us all. The value of this day as determined alone by public worship, is inestimable. Surely the holy Sabbath and the House of God are gracious provisions of heaven, and indispensable to all that is ennobling in the individual and worthwhile in society. No wonder the greatest of Israel's kings could say, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

God preserve his holy Sabbath, and God bless his Church, and keep a beaten pathway to its altars.

"Blest are the souls that find a place
Within the temple of thy grace;
Here they behold thy gentler rays,
And seek thy face and learn thy praise."

College Campaign

Everything is in readiness for this now, and the campaign is to start next Sunday. We are out to raise $50,000 to supplement what has already been pledged in order that the entire indebtedness of the institution may be liquidated. In putting on the campaign it has been necessary to use our pastors, and some of them will have to be away from their pulpits for one or more Sundays. There will be no objections on the part of congregations to this, we trust. The college belongs to the conference, and that means to every congregation in it. We are all a part of this great undertaking, and all, therefore, will want to bear a part, and one way of doing this is to release the pastors for this campaign. We want to say again that there is no greater need and no more important undertaking before us just now than this campaign. We must take care of this college, or suffer consequences that will be irreparable. We are amply able to take care of it, and of course we will. Only small contributions from our 29,000 members, covering a period of ten years, would provide the $50,000 that we are trying to raise. Let no one among us, who loves his church and who appreciates the value of this college, fail us now. And please be much in prayer during the campaign.

One thing more: we want to keep right up with results from week to week, and we are asking, therefore, that workers report to us the success of each Sunday. The name of charge and church, number of pledges, amount of pledges, and amount of cash payments will be sufficient. We shall be very grateful for this information.

July 13-20

This is to be a busy week, and one of great importance and pleasure, as well. The Young People's Training School is to be in session at this time, also the Pastors' Summer Conference, both of which merit our full support. Bro. Harrison is piling up registrations for the Training School. Let every pastor, every charge, every church give him a lift. Bro. Curry is working hard to make the Pastors' Conference a success. Everybody to his support! He has designated Thursday "Ladies' Day." The women of the church, pastors' wives, and those who are not so fortunate as to be a pastor's wife—all women of the church—are invited to go to the college that day and share in the good things in store there. This will afford an occasion for the women to discuss and familiarize themselves with the new order of their work. Let's make "Ladies' Day" the one big day of the conference. And now, the lunch basket; don't forget that.

The Collection

Please send it in at once to the treasurer, Rev. George R. Brown, D.D., Reidsville, N. . . We mean the Children's Day offering. Many churches have observed the day, and received the offering, as required by the Board of Missions. Now, the other important thing is to send it to the treasurer, so he may forward it to the General Church Treasurer and make it available for immediate use. Again, if your church is not planning to give the Children's Day program, please give an opportunity for an offering—Children's Day offering. It will count on the budget of your church, and help in the work of the Board of Missions. Please do this.

Subscriptions

We are anxious to see the list this week. Our hopes are that the last Sunday of the campaign, "Herald Sunday," resulted in a substantial increase in subscribers. Those who have succeeded in getting the paper well circulated among their people have cause for satisfaction; it will pave the way for progress along other lines. The task has been more difficult on other fields, no doubt. However, the most obstinate difficulties yield to persistent effort. The constant dropping of the water wears away the rock. This special campaign is over, but subscriptions are in order always, and we hope that there may be a persisting effort on every charge to keep this splendid paper in circulation in increasing numbers.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Pastors' Summer Conference will begin July 15 and will close July 19. Instead of a general theme as followed heretofore, the program is tied around five words that carry with them suggestions of five essentials of church activity and Christian life. These five words are Visualize, Systematize, Organize, Modernize, and Vitalize. One word and its suggestions will be used each day. The subjects assigned are of the most practical kind and it is hoped that the pastors and others who attend will find in them helps that will be of great profits. With one or two exceptions the assignments are all made, but it is thought best not to give the program in full until next week. Thursday has been designated as Ladies' Day. It is hoped that wives and other lady members of our preachers' homes will, on this day, attend in goodly numbers and that we might fully enjoy a picnic dinner brought from our homes. We preachers have the privilege of becoming acquainted on various occasions, but many of our families are not acquainted. This will be a way by which the good ladies of our homes may learn to know each other with an everlasting love. It is hoped that the good ladies will accept this invitation and enjoy something of what the pastors have enjoyed for these years.

The ladies will be asked to attend the regular program of the conference until 10:40 a. m. and then they will be given the privilege to choose for themselves as to whether they would prefer to have a separate program of their own or to attend other services of the regular conference program.

For the best conference ever,

GEO. L. CURRY.

GOD'S TEMPLE

When we take up the Bible we enter in spirit . . . a temple built, not out of stone and marble, but with human words, yet enshrining within it, for the comfort and warning, the correction and encouragement of every human soul, no other and no less than the holy and eternal Spirit. Of that temple the Old Testament is the nave, with its side aisles of psalm and prophecy; and the gospels are the choir—the last gospel, perhaps, the very sanctuary; while around and behind are the apostolic epistles and the Apocalypse, each a gem of beauty, each supplying an indispensable feature to the majestic whole. With what joy should we daily enter that temple! With what profound reverence should we cross its threshold! With what care should we mark and note—where nothing is meaningless—each feature, each ornament that decorates wall or pillar or window or roof! How high should be set our expectations of the blessings that may be secured within it! How open, and yet how submissive should be our hearts to the voices—they are not of this world—that might touch and change and purify them!—Canon Liddon.

OUR STORY PAGE

TEDDY'S CHERRY PIE

It certainly was a delicious pie, and the best of it was that Teddy himself had helped to make it. Every cherry that went into it had been stoned by his chubby little fingers; and, when the top crust had been carefully laid in place, his mother had allowed him to crimp the edges with a fork before putting it in the big hot oven.

For the next half hour Teddy hovered round, waiting for the moment when mother would pronounce the pie "done"; and, when it did come out of the oven, with its flaky crust baked to a golden brown, and delightful little crimson trickling of juice escaping from the tiny holes pricked in the top, Teddy thought there had never been another so tempting.

"I hope there will be enough to go round," he said, somewhat anxiously. "It seems as though it isn't as big as when you put it in the oven."

His mother laughed as she placed it on the shelf to cool, and told him that she thought his appetite had grown, and that there was no danger of his not getting as much as was good for him.

Teddy walked slowly out on the veranda and sat down on the top step. Somehow he didn't feel like going very far away from that pie. He wondered if his cousin Dorothy, who was coming to dinner with him, was fond of cherry pie. Perhaps as she was just getting over the measles, she ought not to have a very big piece. He wondered, too, if it would be polite for him to have two pieces, and he thought that perhaps he would rather have the extra piece and not be quite so polite. Hark! What was that noise? Supposing the cat should get into the larder? He thought he had better go and see.

Now, what do you suppose made him open and shut the door so softly, and tiptoe across the kitchen floor in such a quiet way?

It seemed strange, because Teddy was rather a noisy little boy, and his way through the house was usually marked by a series of bangs and thumps. Perhaps he wanted to surprise pussy. Do you suppose that was the reason? But no pussy was there, and the pie was safe where his mother had left it. It certainly was a delightful pie. How well he had crimped the crust—almost as well as mother. But no, stop! there was a place where the edges were not quite together. Of course, mother would like to have the pie look well, with other people at dinner; so he tried to press them closed. But they would not meet. Perhaps there were too many cherries in it! What should he do?

Ah, Teddy! Didn't something whisper to you that the thing to do was to hurry right out of that larder, quick? But suddenly a chubby hand reached out and a small finger disappeared into the pie, and when it came out two rosy cherries came with it and were popped into a little mouth as rosy as themselves. One, two, three times it went in before Teddy felt sure that those edges would meet, and then he hastily pinched them together and slipped away, with rather a guilty feeling at his heart.

This was soon forgotten, however, in the excitement of the arrival of his aunt and his cousin, and it was not till dinner was half through that he began to think of what he had done.

When the pie was brought in, he somehow thought it didn't look quite so tempting. There was that guilty feeling at his heart again, and suddenly he jumped. What was that he heard his mother say to Aunt Lizzie? He could hardly believe his ears, and yet he had distinctly heard her say: "Teddy had a finger in this pie," and every one was looking at him and smiling, and oh, how dreadful it was!

Teddy's face grew scarlet, and sliding down from his chair, before any one could speak, he was out of the room and up the stairs to his bedroom where he hid his hot face in the cool pillow, wishing he might never have to take it out again.

How had she found out? Did mother know everything? And then to tell it right before Aunt Lizzie and Dorothy! He felt that he could never look them in the face again.

When his mother came up to find him, she found a very much ashamed little boy, who, however, bravely told her the whole story, and what do you suppose his mother did? Why, she laughed and laughed at first—she couldn't help it—and then she told him that it was his own little guilty conscience that had put such a meaning into her words, and that she had only meant that he had helped her to make the pie. And then, of course, she forgave him, as mothers always do when little boys are really sorry; but Teddy always remembers now, whenever he hears those words again, how frightened of nothing a bad deed may make a boy.—The Messenger for the Children.

THE ANNUAL LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL HIGH POINT COLLEGE JULY 13-20

What It Is

It is a school for every one, young or old, who wants to become a better trained leader in any phase of church activity. The curriculum has been enlarged so as to include subjects suitable for all. As Mrs. J. J. Crawford said in last week's HERALD concerning the school, "It's good for everybody." So if you wish to become a better trained leader, come to High Point College and attend this school. The slogan for all Methodist Protestants should be, "On to High Point July 13th."

When to Come

Come on the 13th of July. Come on that day and sign up for the course of your choice. Class work begins on Monday, July 15th, at eight o'clock in the morning, so the wise thing to do is come on Saturday and have everything in readiness for Monday. We are planning a splendid time for you on Saturday evening; don't miss it. Sunday will be a good day for us, inspirational services and Christian fellowship. So come Saturday, July 13th.

What to Bring

Toilet articles, bed linens, blankets, a pillow (if you use one), tennis outfit, musical instruments, and any articles of like description which you may need.

What It Costs

We are keeping this at a minimum. Your room and board for the week will cost you only $10.00.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

—The press of other matters in recent weeks has forced us to defer the printing of some death notices. We ask friends to be patient.

—We hope to receive from our churches this year many reports of successful revivals. Rallies are good, but revivals are better.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Elizabeth Hanner

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JULY 7: "WHAT HAS MADE OUR NATION WHAT IT IS?"

Deut. 8:1-14, 17, 18
(Consecration Meeting)

To the Leader

Advertise this meeting well. Use the flag idea in making your posters. You might send out special invitations to members who have been irregular in attendance or to prospective members. Write the invitations on small cardboard flags.

Use flags in the decorations and perhaps a picture of Uncle Sam. As the program progresses give each person taking part a small flag. See if every one can have a flag by the close of the meeting.

Be sure to use patriotic songs as "America," "Star-Spangled Banner," "America the Beautiful," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and "Faith of Our Fathers."

In closing stand and salute the flag and close with the Mizpah.

The Leader's Talk

We, as American citizens, are proud of our nation, its resources, its accomplishments, and justly so; yet we need to be careful in boasting of our standing as a nation and of our power. For this reason it is harder for us to be humble. We fail to humble ourselves before God. This topic should help us to remember that we owe our prosperity to God. Will America be able to handle her power or will she, as have many nations in the past, fall because of too much ill-used power?

"What has made our nation what it is?" The welfare of our nation has not been showered upon us accidentally, there has been a hand moving and shaping the nation's destiny. We need to think for a while on the things which have been responsible for the making of our nation.

Three things have been factors in the molding of our nation: the natural resources, the human element, and God. Our nation is very fortunate along the line of natural resources. We have a varied land not only in temperature but along other lines as well. There are mighty mountain ranges laden with ore, acres and acres of forests, a soil easily cultivated, and great rivers through which power is harnessed.

To the human factor we owe much. We must remember the courage and ideals of the first settlers on these shores whose influence is still seen plainly today. Let us not forget that generation which won for this country independence and began in reality a new nation. We have had embedded in our lives the moral courage and strength of the pioneers who pushed steadily on. Commerce, industry, education, religion, law and many other things have been due to human endeavor.

But had there been no God there would have been none of these other factors. Our forefathers gave God first place in their lives and in their activities. Are we doing that today? The church is the house of God. Christian Endeavor is the training school of the church. So we can, if we are willing, be instrumental in making others see the necessity of knowing Christ. A Japanese visitor to this country said, even though he had not accepted Christ, "To me it is perfectly plain that Christianity is the spring of American prosperity."

Sub-Topics

1. What sacrifices and pure living do the stripes of the flag still call for?
2. Sketch the history of at least two nations who have failed because of too much power.
3. What place has the Bible had in America's progress?
4. Define a true American citizen.
5. How may a good citizen pay tribute to the flag?

Poetry to the Point

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said:
"This is my own, my native land!"
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand?

—Sir Walter Scott.

He serves his country best
Who lives pure life, and doeth righteous deed
And walks straight paths, however others stray

And leaves his sons an uttermost bequest—
A stainless record which all men may read.
This is the better way!

—Selected.

In thoughts, as wise as is her prairie sea;
In deeds, as splendid as her mountain piles,
As noble as her mighty river tides—
Let her be true, a land where light abides;
Let her be clean, as sweet as summer isles;
Let her sound the note of liberty
For all the earth, till every man and child be free!

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY

The Young People's Union which embraces Albemarle, Concord, Charlotte, Kannapolis, Midland, Friendship, Roberta and Mecklenburg charges held a rally at the Kannapolis tabernacle Sunday afternoon. These rallies are held every fifth Sunday and are proving very helpful. Revs. Lowdermilk, Hendry, Anderson and Short were on the program, and all made splendid addresses on Evangelism, which was the theme for this meeting.

It was decided to have a watermelon feast at one of the country churches (place to be decided) on the second Saturday afternoon in August.

Concord won the attendance banner from Albemarle, they having won it at the last meeting. At the close of the meeting the ladies of the Kannapolis church served delicious chicken salad sandwiches and lemonade to the entire crowd.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. D. E. Smith, Liberty, one little dress. Daily Vacation Bible School, First Church, High Point, one dozen nighties and ten pillow cases; also booklets and pictures for the children. Daily Vacation Bible School, First Church, Winston, booklets and pictures and bean-bags for children. Woman's Bible Class, Toronto, Ohio, fifteen pair pillow slips. Mrs. Ferry's Sunday school class, Community Church, Thomasville, one child's bed with mattress, spread, pillow, two sheets and two pillow cases, all brought to the Home and set up complete ready for use by a most happy little girl. Several have sent the Octagon coupons during the week. They are accumulating pretty fast, so please keep sending them.

We sincerely thank you for all these gifts of money and materials.

Next Sunday is the first Sunday. Please remember us specially that day.

A Request

Our children are gathering all the blackberries they can find and they are being canned for winter use. But there are not very many to be had. This fall we are going to ask you for a "Harvest Home Week" for our Children's Home. So you good mothers, please put up a few cans of berries and other fruits and vegetables as the summer goes by and bring them to us, or perchance we can send for them this fall. Please save some fruits and vegetables and chickens for us which may be collected this fall. Thank you. Farmers might also save us some wheat or other produce. We know many of you will do this since your attention has been called to it. We will gather and save all we can, but will still need your help.

Yours in His service, A. G. DIXON.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SCHOOL OF METHODS UNDER AUSPICES OF WOMEN'S MISSIONARY WORK

High Point College, July 18

Arrangements have been made for a "School of Methods" at High Point College July 18, to which all of the sub-district chairmen and any women from the various districts who are willing to assist in organizing and re-organizing the women's work in the North Carolina Branch are invited. Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman, will preside, and the executive officers, including all secretaries, have been asked to present their part of the work, offering suggestions as to how to carry it on in auxiliaries. The program will conclude with an open forum or round table, which will afford an opportunity to bring out any points which are not thoroughly understood.

Rev. Mr. Curry has invited the women to accompany the ministers and make July 18 a rally day, a picnic dinner adding to the pleasure of the day. If the women of the North Carolina Branch will come and study together how to organize an auxiliary in every church they will be rendering inestimable service to the Methodist Protestant Church in putting on the new program. Remember the aim, "A Woman's Auxiliary in Every Church in North Carolina This Year." This can only be done by planning for it and co-operating in doing it.

Meeting opens at 10 a. m. and announcements will be made next week as to the meeting room at college.

Looking forward to meeting you and studying with you how we can best co-operate with our Mission Board in organizing the womanhood of the Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina.

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER, Pres.,

Woman's Missionary Work, N. C. Branch,
Asheboro, N. C., July 1.

NOTICE

District Chairmen, Executive Officers, Including Departmental Secretaries

Asheboro, N. C., July 2, 1929.

Dear Friends:

We have arranged for a school of methods to be held July 18th at High Point College at which time we may come together and study how we can best carry out the program outlined by the Mission Board of our church. Since the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary work has been consolidated and we are asked to get behind the entire program of the church we must study how we can do it to the best advantage.

We are especially asking the sub-district chairmen to come and bring any leaders from their districts who are willing to assist in organizing and re-organizing our women's work. We are asking our executive officers, including departmental secretaries, to attend and present plans for furthering their particular line of work. An open forum or round table will enable those who are not clear on any subject to ask questions.

Each officer please accept this as notice to prepare to speak on your line of work.

Rev. Mr. Curry has designated July 18th as Rally Day during the Summer Conference and Young People's meeting. Bring lunch and let's study our work and enjoy the day. We will appreciate your co-operation.

Very truly,

MRS. WM. C. HAMMER, Pres.,
Asheboro, N. C.

MRS. C. W. BATES, District Chm.,
Brown St., Greensboro, N. C.

REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN FOR LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The list jumps this week from 268 to 402, and even more than that, but this number is all we are reporting. There were a few names held back because of improper listing, and which will be reported next week. The campaign seems to be gaining momentum, and we feel that each week will show a greater increase. We do not believe that our agents will stop until a thorough canvass of the membership has been made. We are sure that a great change in the size of the list will take place between now and the final whistle, likewise the standing of the different churches will greatly change.

Standing of the Churches

We see from the following schedule that several new churches have come into the list this week. Charlotte, Richland Charge, leads the list with eight registrations. The agent there, Mrs. Henry Bulla, must be of some of the High Point Bulla stock, when it comes to getting registrations.

High Point First still heads the list. Her advance of 33 registrations sends her pretty close the free entertainment mark. Earl Bulla says, "Yet some more next week." I don't know where Earl is going to stop, but judging from his first letter he expects to carry the campaign to the very borders of his church membership.

Miss Frances Taylor, Grace, comes in for an advance of fifteen; and Miss Maggie Munn, Concord, with an advance of twelve. Both of these agents have good fields to work in and seem to be determined about building up a large list.

The other agents carrying their churches forward this week are: Mrs. Annie Harkey, Lexington; Floyd G. Reynolds, Calvary; Ronald T. Hill, Denton; Miss Juanita Hunter, Pleasant Hill; S. R. Stafford, Mt. Pleasant; Miss Charlie Younginer, Asheville; Miss Ethel Etheridge, Whitakers.

We are inclined to believe that some of the agents are holding registrations back, waiting to send them in the last week. Come on, agents, let's have them now! It is a whole lot more interesting when the list grows rapidly from week to week, and when there is closer competition for the first place. Let us have all you have every Monday morning.

There will be only two more reports of the campaign. One of them comes next week and the last one the following week while the school is in session. This last one will be the final report. Agents, on your toes. Put forth all the effort you have in these next two weeks. Let's carry the campaign forward by leaps and bounds these last few days.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL FACTS

The Leadership Training School will be held at High Point College July 13 to 20. Possibly in no previous year has the school been more thoroughly planned than this year. President Paschall has given himself untiringly to the work, and is offering in courses and faculty the very best.

Those who are teaching courses are, largely, men and women of our own conference, who know the problems peculiar to our own denomination, and have made special study of those problems. By meeting certain requirements of our denominational board they have been selected for the work.

Courses and Faculty

A Study of the Pupil—Mrs. H. W. Maier.
 Primary Materials and Methods—Miss Lelia Wagoner.

Junior Materials and Methods—Miss Margaret Wilson.

Young People's Materials and Methods—Mrs. F. W. Paschall.

Training in Worship and Devotional Life—Rev. L. C. Little.

Life Investments—Rev. E. L. Ballard.

The Master Leader, Jesus—Dr. S. W. Taylor.
 Young People's Methods—Rev. J. F. Minnis.
 Christian Living—Dr. H. W. Maier.

The Bible in the Making—Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

The Science of Leadership—Rev. L. W. Ger-ringer.

Stewardship—Rev. N. G. Bethea.

Denominational History and Program—Dr. A. G. Dixon.

Recreational Activities—Miss Bettie Brittingham.

Growing a Christian World—Dr. P. S. Kennett.

The Kingdom Enterprise—Rev. J. C. Auman.
 Evangelism—Dr. G. R. Brown.

Morning Devotions

Morning devotions will be conducted in the chapel each morning by Dr. T. M. Johnson. There is not a man in our denomination who is better qualified, from a spiritual standpoint, than is Dr. Johnson.

Vesper Services

A special place has been arranged for these services on the campus. Mrs. H. W. Maier will conduct them. We cannot forget the wonderful vespers Mrs. Maier conducted at Weaverville. She knows how to appeal to and challenge youth.

Evening Addresses

Inspirational addresses will be given each evening. These services will be held in the chapel. The first two will be in charge of the Pastors' Summer Conference, which is in session the same time. The last three, namely: Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, will be conducted by Rev. Roy Farmer, pastor High Point First Church.

Recreation

Miss Bettie Brittingham will direct the recreational activities. The afternoons will be devoted to these activities. Each afternoon will be different, and the program thoroughly planned.

She will also have charge of a Get-Acquainted Party the first night of the school.

Pageant

A pageant will be staged in the college auditorium on Sunday evening. This will be under the direction of Mrs. H. W. Maier and her people from Thomaville.

Trained Leadership

Possibly one of the greatest needs of the church today is trained leadership. There is no better place that our lay leadership, both young and old, could go to get that training than at this school. The school is planned for the purpose of training to solve the problems of the local church.

The churches which are lacking in leadership are the churches which should send the largest delegations. Those churches which have sent its leaders and would-be leaders in former years are almost without exception the churches which have made the greatest progress and developed the most. If you feel that you cannot afford to send two or three delegates, it is an evidence that you cannot afford not to send them. The weakest and most inefficient church needs the school more than the larger and stronger churches.

Expense

The courses of study, room, and board for the entire week will cost only $10.

What Some of the Agents Say About the Leadership Training School

"You can depend on me for any support you may wish to ask. I shall endeavor send some representatives from this section."—J. Albert Walker, Stokesdale.

"I think the Training School is the finest thing our church is doing for its young people. I enjoy the school so much, and therefore I'm glad to do anything I can to help make it a success."—Miss Maggie Mann, Concord.

"I shall certainly do my utmost to have my community well represented with interested delegates. It is with delight that I will encourage the attendance and help develop the true spirit of this meeting."—Miss Joy Friddle, Flat Rock.

"I have heard a number from my church talking about the school. I think there are several planning to attend."—Miss Kate Smith, Tabernacle.

"I am at work and it is doubtful about me attending the school. However, I have not lost hopes, and will also do all I can to get others to attend."—Ronald T. Hill, Denton.

"I am hoping that the school will be the best that we have had."—Miss Ruby Isley.

"May this be the best conference ever."—C. Earl Bulla, High Point First.

"Trusting in the Lord that this will be the best year for Leadership work."—F. G. Reynolds, Calvary.

These are just a few of the many expressions which are coming in almost every letter from these young people. One could not read these letters and not be encouraged over the prospects of a successful registration campaign and school, and in fact over the future of the Methodist Protestant Church. What a responsibility we have, as a denomination, for the proper development and training of this consecrated, interested youth! And what a responsibility, as a church, we have in not only training, but also in providing avenues for the expression of that training!

SIXTH DISTRICT RALLY—SOME OBSERVATIONS

The rally for the sixth district was held at Gray's Chapel Church on Randolph Circuit on Sunday, June 30, beginning at 10 o'clock and lasting through the day. Everything considered, there is no better place in the district than Gray's Chapel. The church is at the crossroads of an important community and is on the hard surface road leading from Asheboro to Liberty. The nice church building, the splendid grounds for parking, and the beautiful trees for shade, together with the fact that everybody in this section of the state knows where the church is, make it an ideal place for a rally.

The first half hour was in the hands of the choir and the pastor of the church. Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a former pastor, was present and led in a fervent prayer; his presence was a benediction throughout the day. The chairman presented Rev. A. O. Lindley, of Chatham circuit, who delivered a very earnest and timely address on the subject of Evangelism. Brother Ashburn was called on and made some timely remarks on the subject growing out of his long experience in revival work. The chairman followed with a brief discussion in which he emphasized the importance of keeping in touch with the large number of members of our country and small town churches who go off to the cities to seek employment. He suggested that a diligent search be made for their addresses and spoke of one church which was sending them a monthly letter telling them of the things the church had tried to do during the month.

At the noon hour a bountiful picnic dinner was served on the long tables under the shade of the trees.

At the afternoon hour the choir of the Asheboro church rendered a beautiful anthem. Then Mrs. W. C. Hammer brought a most helpful message on the work of women in the M. P. Church, stressing especially the new plan of work as outlined by the last General Conference. In the beginning of her address Mrs. Hammer paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of the late Dr. T. H. Lewis, at the conclusion of which the audience stood with bowed head while Rev. W. F. Ashburn led in a prayer of thanksgiving for the great life which Dr. Lewis lived. It was an impressive moment. Mrs. Hammer's address was followed by one by Rev. L. W. Gerringer, of Burlington, on the subject of Christian Education with especial emphasis upon High Point College. The address was packed with pertinent facts and ought to bring forth fruit.

At the afternoon session an effort was made to organize the district into the young people's work in accordance with the wishes of the Young People's Board. Mr. T. L. Smith, of Liberty, was appointed as president and Mr. R. T. Lloyd, of Asheboro, was appointed secretary and these were asked to call a meeting of the young people of the district at an early date to effect a permanent organization.

Just before the meeting closed, Rev. J. C. Russell, the new pastor of Liberty-Siler City, was introduced and made a few remarks.

The following preachers of the district were present: Revs. Garner, Russell, Lindley and Pritchard. The charges of the district were represented as follows:

Mt. Pleasant, 0; Liberty-Siler City, 12; Chatham, 0; Randolph, aside from Gray's Chapel, 26; Randleman, 3; Richland, 2; Asheboro, 29, and Why Not, 0. I might say here that we were late in deciding to have the rally and a great many churches in the district had planned other things which kept the pastors and people away. Next time we want to announce the rally three months in advance.

J. E. PRITCHARD, Chairman.

A SURPRISE

On last Wednesday evening a number of our people composed of men, women and children came right on by the tabernacle as though they had forgotten the place of prayer, smiling, laughing and talking, with bundles, cans and packages, and placed them on the kitchen table for the occupants of the parsonage. This merry crowd was then invited to the living room, but since the hour of prayer had arrived they preferred to return to the tabernacle to join in a service of song, prayer and praise, which seemingly proved to be a service to the delight of all present. We thank the good people who on account of their thoughtfulness made this an extraordinary occasion.

Such causes us to call to mind what Paul said to the Corinthians when he said to them, "Our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged."

God greatly bless you all.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

SPECIAL NOTICE

At present I have two young couples, who have no children, and who would be glad to adopt a child under two years old. Both families prefer a little girl.

There are also two farmers in good circumstances, each of whom wishes a boy 12 to 15 years of age who will go and make their home with them and live as one of the family. These are splendid opportunities for good boys such as we would take into the Home here. If interested write us.

Faithfully, A. G. DIXON.

COUNTY LIBRARY A SUCCESS

A county library which began its work on a small scale and as an experiment, in Harris County, Texas, in 1921, has proved such a success that it may well be cited as an example to other counties, according to a statement issued by the United States Bureau of Education.

The Harris County Public Library began active work on an appropriation of $6,500 by the county as an experiment for one year. In May, 1921, a librarian was appointed and soon "library service" was announced throughout the county. Petitions for collections of books came from communities and schools, large and small. At the close of the year, twenty-six active library stations had been established, 3,455 volumes placed in the library, and 19,574 volumes circulated.

Today Harris County has five community library buildings for the seventy-three communities served, and with two exceptions buildings were erected and the libraries financed by the communities themselves. The library is the gathering place for the people of the community in which it is located. It is the common meeting ground and serves a social as well as an educational purpose.

The superintendent passed the infants' class as they were singing, "I want to be an angel." "Beautiful," he said, "and does every little girl and boy here want to be an angel?"

"I don't," answered a little girl. "I'd rather be a monkey and swing by my tail."—Exchange.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Pleasant, West Thomasville Charge.—

A very interesting children's day program was rendered to us here the third Sunday in June. The children acted their parts well according to the time devoted in preparing the program. A number attended and seemed to enjoy it very much. Much credit is given to Mrs. E. M. Briles for her work in training the children.

Rev. G. L. Reynolds preached an interesting sermon Sunday on several different topics.

Our Sunday school is increasing some in number since warm weather is here. We are trying to build up our Sunday school in several different ways. We have organized the young ladies' class and are hoping to have a Christian Endeavor Society as soon as possible.

Reporter.

Denton Charge.—We just closed a very successful Bible Vacation School at Denton last Friday. We had a four weeks school. We enrolled 72, and had an average attendance of 46. Thirty-five met the conditions for and secured the certificates. Dorothy Loftin, Josephine Hill, Robert Johnson and Pansy Hurdy secured a prize each for memorizing the most Scripture in their divisions. The school gave a closing demonstration of its work Friday evening. Several passed compliments on the service. We wish to thank the teachers who willingly gave their time without pay. They are Misses Sallie May Frank, Jewel Lanier, Julia Loftin, and Ruth Floyd. Edmond Sexton supplied one day for Miss Floyd.

Fifth Sunday evening in June Rev. W. D. Reed preached for us at Denton. He brought us a very timely message that I am sure all appreciate. Brother Reed is a former pastor of Denton, and also of the writer when he was on Cleveland circuit. We thank you, Bro. Reed, and hope you can come our way again.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Asheboro.—We have observed so many special days of late that it will be hard to think of them all. On a recent Sunday we observed Home Department Day at the morning church service. The Home Department of the Sunday school had been especially invited to be present. Cars were sent for all who needed transportation and a goodly number were present and sat together. Just before the sermon they were asked to stand that the congregation might see who they were. An appropriate sermon was preached after which Mrs. S. L. Hayworth, their superintendent, made some remarks expressing her appreciation for the service.

There was no morning service yesterday on account of the district rally at Gray's Chapel. However, there was the usual Sunday school and Christian Endeavor and a patriotic service at the evening hour. In the evening service Miss Maude Lee Spoon rendered a beautiful vocal solo. Miss Spoon has taught music in the public schools of Southport, N. C., for the past two years, and we are glad to have her in the community again.

The Sunday school attendance for the month of May was the best ever, the average being 225 with one Sunday going to 241. The past two Sundays have been 238 and 234. Next Sunday we have communion service. The third quarterly conference will be Tuesday night, July 9, and the annual Sunday school picnic will be Thursday, July 11.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

P. S.—The physician has so restricted the diet of the writer and so prescribed rest as to make it necessary to cancel all out-of-town engagements.

J. E. P.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, taught an interesting training school the second week in June, which was beneficial to all the students as well as the Sunday school leaders.

Our revival meeting began the third Sunday morning. Rev. J. W. Braxton filled the pulpit. Rev. T. J. Whitehead preached an inspiring sermon Sunday afternoon.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer came Monday and stayed with us till Friday night. He gave his hearers earnest and inspiring sermons but seemed as the unsaved did not take any warning. We sincerely hope that there were seeds sown during this revival which will bring forth much fruit. We were indeed glad to have Rev. L. W. Gerringer with us; hope he will come again.

The third quarterly conference will be held at Dulin's next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All official members be sure and be there on time. Davie County Sunday school convention will be held at Dulin's next Friday, July 12. Everybody welcome.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—Yesterday, June 30, was a good day for us. We had a good attendance at the regular Sunday school hour. Children's Day service at 11 a. m. with an increased attendance. The singing and recitations by the children were good. The offering was good, but not large. Due credit is to be given to Mrs. Lowdermilk and Mrs. M. W. Henderson for the training of the children.

At 2 p. m. the C. E. district rally, of which Brother D. A. McLaurin is chairman, met with us with the following places represented: Albemarle, Concord, and Roberta. General theme for discussion was Evangelism. The following were the principal speakers for the occasion: Rev. J. R. Anderson, pastor of First Church, Albemarle; Rev. G. H. Hendry, pastor First Church, Concord, and Rev. Robert Short, pastor of Roberta. Each of the above named speakers won for themselves and the occasion much credit. Concord won the attendance banner. The next C. E. rally will be held at Roberta the fifth Sunday in September.

E. G. LOWDERMILK.

Graham.—For our morning service last Sunday Rev. J. F. Minnis had arranged a very pleasing program. Seven girls who have attended High Point College gave us a glimpse of the life and spirit of the college as seen by the students there. The program, consisting of readings on the Academic Life, Social and Religious Life, solo, duet, was highly appreciated by all present. Those taking part were Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, Alta Allen, Mebane; Adele Williams, Graham; Grace Barnette, Juanita Amick, and Elizabeth Rogers, Burlington.

The Children's Day program was rendered the fourth Sunday at the evening service. Due to the inclemency of the weather a very small congregation was present. However, the children performed their parts well and the offering taken amounted to something over $20.

Our hearts are saddened by the passing of one of our members, Mrs. Beulah Fuller Cook. May God's grace be given to the bereaved family to sustain them in their loss. The membership of the church extends to them its heartfelt sympathy.

Mrs. G. S. Stafford, who has been quite ill for the past week, seems to be improving some. We pray, if it be God's will, she may speedily be restored to health.

MRS. J. H. McPHERSON, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting, which began at Harmony Grove Church the fourth Sunday in June, came to a close last Sunday night. There was a total of ten night services and one day service held during the week. The attendance was small at some of the services on account of the rain and threatening weather during the week. The largest congregation was present at the closing service Sunday night. The pastor did the preaching during the entire meeting except last Sunday morning when Rev. Mr. Rothrock, a local preacher of the M. E. Church, preached in the absence of the pastor, who was at the district rally at Stony Knoll church. While there were no visible results in the matter of conversions during the meeting, we believe the church was revived to some extent, and some good impressions were made upon the minds of the few unsaved persons who attended the services. There were only a few young persons attending the services who were unsaved. These were appealed to and pleaded with to surrender their lives to Christ, but none of them were brought to a penitent condition. There is so much of the world and sinful attractions for the young people of this age that it is very difficult to get unsaved people to consider the salvation of their souls. Another hindrance to the work of reaching the unsaved is the cold, indifferent condition of the church and the lack of a deep spiritual life among the church people.

The writer is thankful to the good people of Harmony Grove church for the splendid entertainment given him and his family during the revival meeting there last week. We also appreciate a nice offering taken for us at the closing service of the meeting. There is a prospect of securing some new members at this church, as there are a few families in the community whose church membership is elsewhere, and some of them are considering the removal of their membership to Harmony Grove.

The district rally for the tenth district, comprising the charges of Winston, South Winston, Forsyth, West Forsyth and Pinnacle, was held at Stony Knoll church, on West Forsyth charge, last Sunday. The program began promptly at 10:30, according to the announced program. Rev. R. C. Stubbins, pastor of the Forsyth charge, and chairman of the district, presided over the program in a very interesting and pleasing manner. The speakers for the occasion were J. M. Spease, of the Stony Knoll church; Rev. A. L. Hunter, pastor of the Pinnacle charge; Rev. R. C. Stubbins, pastor of Forsyth charge; Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, of High Point; Mrs. Gwynn, of the First Church, Winston-Salem, and Rev. H. F. Surratt, pastor of the First Church, Winston-Salem. At the opening session the devotional service was conducted by this writer and in the afternoon Rev. P. L. Kinnaman, pastor of South Winston charge, led the devotional service. Rev. A. L. Hunter conducted the song services during the morning and afternoon sessions. Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunter and daughter, Miss Lena Hunter, sang a beautiful selection at the afternoon session. During the afternoon session the women's work of our church was given special consideration, with Mrs. T. L. Spease, of Winston-Salem, presiding, and Mrs. R. J. Whitman, of Pleasant Hill church, West Forsyth charge, as secretary. Reports from several of the auxiliaries in the district were made. During the morning session C. G. Hunter, of the Pleasant Hill church, served as secretary. A pleasing feature of the noon hour recess was a splendid dinner which was placed on the table on the church ground and enjoyed by all present. The entire day was a very enjoyable one, and all of the charges were represented, with West Forsyth far in the lead in the attendance.

The writer and family are thankful to Mrs. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, for a nice supply of tender new corn which was added to our snap beans from our garden, making a very satisfactory mixture. This was the first gift of its kind received this season. We also thank Mrs. Ellis Long for a supply of the best honey that is produced in Forsyth County.

The pastor and family were pleased to have as guests at the parsonage on Friday of last week Mrs. Elizabeth Warner and daughter, Miss Bessie Warner, of Harmony Grove church. They told us and others that they enjoyed the dinner and the visit with us, and we were equally glad to have had them visit our home.

The pastor's mother, Mrs. Mary Way, and grandson, Winfred Way, of Burlington, spent a few days at the parsonage this week.

Our services next Sunday will be with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We will take the vote for delegate to the next Annual Conference at both of these churches next Sunday. The vote has been taken at three of the churches.

Before ending this report, the writer wishes to express his deep sorrow occasioned by the departure from this life of Bro. J. H. Moton. Our contact and association with him at our Annual Conferences during the past eight years was a real blessing, and our impressions of his deeply spiritual life and consecration to the gospel ministry will be lasting. Because of the revival meeting in progress at Harmony Grove church last week, the writer was unable to attend the funeral of this true man of God and outstanding exponent of the Gospel of Christ. The widow and children have the sincere sympathy of the writer.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

High Point.—The Vacation Church School in closing its third-year session gave appropriate and pleasing exercises last Thursday evening to a large audience that well nigh filled the assembly room. The different groups presented their programs, and the feature of the kindergarten tots' contribution was a dramatization of the parable of the Good Samaritan. This department was ably taught by Miss Daisy Lee York. The Primary Department, with Mrs. J. C. Whitesell the very efficient leader, gave the story of the Birth of Christ, and presented some memory work of Scripture passages and hymns. The Junior Department, under the capable leadership of Mrs. L. R. Peacock, presented a pageant, "America Befriend." Rev. E. L. Ballard gave some interesting facts about the school just closing; the enrollment was 155 with an average attendance of 142. There was 18 loyal and efficient workers in the faculty. Much of the hand work of the pupils was of a high grade, and the rendition of the splendid program proved that the instruction given was very efficient. Miss Vera York, daughter of Postmaster O. R. York, received the doll offered every year by Mrs. E. M. Brower, dealer in ladies' apparel in the city, for the prettiest doll dress, and hers was adjudged the most attractive of 12 dresses submitted. This prize was presented by Rev. E. L. Ballard, who has worked so faithfully and conscientiously for the success of the Vacation School.

At the recent session of North Carolina C. E. Union held at Montreat, N. C., Arnold J. Koonce was elected president, and our local church feels honored by this elevation to the first rank of our popular and worthy young fellow-member. It is an honor worthily won, for Arnold is a faithful, loyal, and efficient worker, and fully deserves this token of merit and esteem. Rev. R. I. Farmer attended the sessions of this convention, delivered two addresses, and says that he was delighted with the first glimpse of our beautiful N. C. mountains.

A wedding of interest to many friends was solemnized last week at the Children's Home, when Mr. John W. Dixon, of Summerfield, and Mrs. Cora Vaneannon, a worker in the Home, were united in marriage. The brother of the groom, Dr. A. G. Dixon, was the officiating minister. Their numerous friends extended hearty congratulations and best wishes for a happy and useful life together.

The friends of Mrs. John H. Walker, Jr., who underwent an operation for appendicitis last Thursday, will be pleased to hear that she is improving in a satisfactory manner. Messrs. C. C. Robbins and H. B. Krieger had operations for removal of their tonsils on Monday, and are resting comfortably at their homes.

Miss Lucille A. Pickens left Sunday morning for New York, where she will take summer school work in library science at Columbia University, leading to a degree. She was accompanied by her friend, Miss Pauline Moore, of Wadesboro. Miss Virginia Pickens is substituting in the city library for her sister during her absence.

The Executive Board of the Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting at the church Monday afternoon. The co-operation and loyalty of this band of workers is wonderful. They plan to hold a picnic for the general meeting next Monday, the place to be decided later.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its weekly meeting Monday evening at Guilford Sanatorium at Jamestown.

A number of our congregation are planning to attend the District Rally at Thomasville next Friday evening. The exercises will be held in Community Church, and supper will be served.

The Workers' Council of the Sunday school will meet Tuesday evening.

The delegate to Annual Conference next November will be elected next Sunday morning. The nominees are Messrs. E. L. Douglas and L. R. Johnston.

Charlotte.—On the evening of May 24 the new parsonage was opened to the public and friends of the church. Rev. and Mrs. Harrison with members of the building and finance committee received the guests in the living room and they were shown through the rooms by other official members of the Sunday school and church. Members of other denominations as well as our own members were very much impressed with the beauty, arrangements, and conveniences of the parsonage. On the same evening Circle No. 1 with Mrs. J. J. Atkins, chairman, gave a lawn fete on the parsonage lawn, Mrs. J. C. Watts being in charge. They realized a nice little sum from the sale of ice cream and cake, and home-made candies.

The other circles are doing splendid work and expect to put on some very interesting entertainment soon. The beginning of the missionary year a budget was made up for local work, each circle assuming their amount of the entire budget. The ladies furnished the breakfast room suite and most of the window shades for the parsonage. The Philathea class furnished linoleum to cover the kitchen floor.

Eight boys of our Boy Scout troop will receive service stripes from the Charlotte Council for service rendered during the recent Confederate reunion. The scouts all received much praise for their wonderful work.

On Sunday morning, June 16th, the Children's Day program was given under the direction of Mrs. Garrett, Miss Nell Dellinger and Mrs. Harrison. In the evening Miss Bettie Brittingham, of Cumberland, Md., spoke concerning the Leadership Training School.

Tuesday evening, June 25th, Rev. N. G. Bethea, of Lexington came to our church and gave a very interesting lecture on his visit to the Holy Land.

The annual Sunday school picnic will be this week on the 4th of July at Sustars-pond near Matthews. Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Richardson are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Breck Julian, June 10th at St. Peter's hospital.

Mrs. T. F. Helms, after a very serious illness in Presbyterian hospital, is recuperating at her home on North Harrill Street. Mrs. Roy Blair has also returned home on North Pine Street after an operation in Presbyterian hospital.

Two weddings of interest recently were: Mr. Roy Garmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Garmon, was married to Miss Wilma Irene Helms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Helms. Mr. and Mrs. Garmon are at home at 311 Mocklenburg Road. On June 15th Mr. Frank Sechrest, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sechrest, was married to Miss Christine Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jones, of Louise Avenue, City. They are now living at 1301 Pecan Avenue. The Philathea class, with Mrs. W. A. Neal teacher, gave an ice cream supper on the church lawn last Thursday evening.

The Baraca class recently completed a room in the basement of the parsonage for a class room. This is opposite a door leading into the church and very convenient. It will seat one hundred or more and is newly furnished.

We now have a well equipped nursery with Mrs. A. F. Love, Cradle Roll superintendent, in charge. Those wishing to attend services with babies may bring them and have them well cared for. New Cradle Roll members are Donald Alten Thomas, Charles and Jean Owen, and Peggy Jean Champion.

Miss Enolia Presnell has not been so well for some time and we have missed her presence very much in the Sunday school and church.

Tonight (Tuesday) there will be a city-wide rally on law enforcement and temperance at the new Armory building. On last Sunday all the ministers of the city spoke at one of the services concerning temperance and law enforcement. Last Sunday was known as Membership Day in our church. The service was very impressive and beautifully carried out. One large candle was lighted in the center of the table representing Christ and as Mr. Harrison called the roll alphabetically a candle was lighted from the big candle by Mrs. Harrison and a verse of Scripture in which the key word corresponded with the letter of the names being called was read by Miss Nell Dellinger, this being carried out until the roll was called and all of the smaller candles lighted except one. The smaller candles signified we had lighted our candles from Christ, and the one being left until the following members were received into membership of the church: Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Buice, Miss Ada Buice, Mrs. P. D. Brooks, Mrs. George Garrett and Miss Maud Holden. The last candle was then lighted, showing they had joined the circle. Mr. Harrison spoke briefly of how our lights should burn, extinguishing and relighting the candles as he talked of the circle being broken and how much brighter when all were lighted, quoting appropriate Scripture. During the service two beautiful solos were rendered, "The Land Where the Roses Never Fade," by Mrs. Leon Blake, and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," by Mrs. George Garrett. REPORTER.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—Belmont Church: Rev. N. G. Bethea assisted in the meeting at this church June 2-10. We had about 15 professions. Six joined the church, five by profession of faith and one by letter. Those baptized were James Rich, Bonnie Rich, Nettie Juanita Lowe, Mattie Lucile Pickett, and Lucile Sharpe. Mrs. Lawrence Russell came to us by letter. We are thankful for them all.

The people at Belmont are continuing to move forward despite the closing of the mill indefinitely. The people have just bought themselves a fine piano. Under the touch of the artist, Mrs. Paul Lowder, who is a member here and teaches music in the E. M. Holt High School, it is producing some wonderful music. During the meeting we were favored by a duet by Misses Elizabeth Rogers and Adele Williams, of Burlington and Graham, respectively; also a duet by Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson; and a solo by Miss Elva Ausley. Mr. T. O. Pender came over one night and led the choir. Thanks to all these contributors.

The C. E. Society is clothing a child in the orphanage at High Point.

Cedar Cliff Church: This is a small group with much life and religion. They have just bought a suite of pulpit furniture and also a carpet for the aisles. Prayer meeting is conducted by the Federation each Sunday evening during the summer months. Rev. O. C. Loy is to be the help in the meeting which is to begin July 28.

Friendship Church: It seems that I have told the Herald readers about our new piano here. The shrubbery is growing nicely. The C. E. is doing nicely. The W. M. S. is planning some wider fields and broader plans for the coming months. The lightning struck one of our beautiful shade trees. Children's Day will be held July 7.

Mt. Hermon Church: The six Sunday school rooms have been floored, covered, weatherboarded, and have the windows and doors hung. We hope to have them finished soon. Painting of the entire structure is to begin this week. A piano is being used on trial and probably will be retained. Children's Day will be held July 7.

The Charge: Rev. B. M. Williams is to swap pulpits with me during part of July. He will be at the Mt. Hermon churches as follows: July 21, Mt. Hermon, 11:00; Friendship, 3:00; Bellemont, 8:00; and July 28, Cedar Cliff, 3:00. J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—Children's Day was observed the fourth Sunday in June, the children being under the direction of Miss Eula Swaim. There was a good crowd present.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We did not have Sunday school at Spring Hill Sunday but met with all the schools on this charge at Canaan. Each was represented and all had a wonderful time.

Prof. J. B. Swaim will close his singing school at this place the third Sunday in July. Sunday school and preaching in the morning and singing in the afternoon. Everybody is invited to come.

On June 24 Miss Dora Bell Cecil, the daughter of Mrs. J. M. Cecil, was married to Mr. J. E. Sink at the High Point College. Rev. T. J. Whitehead, pastor of the Spring Hill M. P. Church, performed the ceremony. We wish for them many years of happiness.

There has been a marker placed on the public road near the church so that all may know that it is Spring Hill M. P. Church and are welcome to come.

We are very sorry that Mrs. S. V. Swaim's health does not improve much. REPORTER.

West Thomasville.—Last Sunday the entire charge gathered at Canaan for a rally day program. The churches were all well represented at the beginning of the program at 10:30. More than an hour was taken for the Sunday school period. The superintendents from all five churches were present and took some part in the opening exercise. When it came time to go to the class rooms, the people at Canaan saw the real value of their new rooms. All these rooms were filled to capacity. All of the teachers present were allowed to say a few words to the classes they represented.

Following the Sunday school period, Dr. P. S. Kennett, of High Point College, delivered a very inspiring address. He took as his subject "Friendship." He pointed out that man needs to be a friend both to man and to Christ. Every one present seemed to enjoy his speech very much.

There was a long table provided to serve dinner in picnic style. The table was well filled and every one had plenty to eat. The fellowship of this period was great. Nothing but a spirit of Christian love seemed to prevail. In the afternoon there was a speaker and a special selection of music from every church on the charge. The speakers did not have very much time for their speeches, but they brought some very helpful thoughts. The music was all well rendered. Also in the afternoon Rev. G. L. Reynolds, pastor of English Street of High Point, and acting pastor of Mt. Pleasant and Mt. Zion, of West Thomasville Charge, and T. J. Whitehead, pastor of West Thomasville Charge, made helpful talks on Sunday school and church work.

It was through the efforts of G. A. Berrier, lay leader, and C. W. Haynes, assistant lay leader, that this day proved to be such a success. We hope that rally day will become an annual affair on West Thomasville Charge.

Lexington, State Street.—We had no service Sunday except Sunday school, Mr. Bethea being in the district rally held at Bethel. This service was a very helpful and interesting one. All the subjects under discussion were ably handled by the different speakers. Mrs. C. L. Koonts gave an address on missions that was very convincing and inspiring. Bro. Bethea had a large place on the program and filled it in his usual fine way. Mrs. C. D. Potts sang two numbers which delighted the audience, as her singing always does.

The second Sunday in July is the time chosen for Children's Day program. One feature of this program being anticipated with much pleasure is the coming of Mme. Garrett to sing for us. She is a celebrated singer and is widely known as one of the most popular radio singers.

Mr. B. J. Bethea, of Miami, Fla., has been in North Carolina for the past month and has spent some time with his brother, Rev. N. G. Bethea, our pastor. We were glad to have him in the Sunday services twice during his visit.

We are pleased to note an increase in Sunday school attendance and are hoping to keep it up. REPORTER.

Randleman.—Our special meeting closed Sunday night, June 23, with Rev. Thomas Stimpson from Virginia, father-in-law of Rev. T. A. Williams, delivering some of the most forceful, soul-stirring sermons ever heard here. The meeting will long be remembered as a light and inspiration by all those fortunate enough to be present.

Home-Coming Day at New Salem Church was held the fifth Sunday in June with a large crowd present. Space does not permit us to mention all the names. All enjoyed being present with friends and relatives and resolved to meet again next year.

Rev. T. A. Williams and family are spending some time at Bessemer City.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society is very active. They are planning to have a special singing program soon to raise money for their budget.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

IN MEMORIAM REV. JOHN HAMILTON MOTON

After an illness of thirteen weeks, the well known and greatly beloved minister, Rev. J. H. Moton, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia Sunday morning at 10 o'clock at his home, 807 Fifth St.

Born in 1854 near Athens, Ga., he was the son of Robert and Adelia Kephart Moton. In boyhood he moved with his family to Buncombe Co., N. C., where he attended Weaver College, and began his ministry in the Methodist Protestant church on Ivy circuit, Buncombe Co., when a youth of nineteen years. On December 12, 1879 he was happily married to Miss Rachel Priscilla Brittan, of Weaverville, who was a true and courageous companion, walking and working by his side for almost half a century, sharing the joys, responsibilities, and burdens of an intrepid minister's wife. They reared a large family of eight children, five daughters and three sons, "who rise up and call them blessed".

The family roster is as follows: Mrs. Florence Miller, Weaverville, Mrs. J. C. Bodenheimer, Concord, N. C., Miss Mittie Moton, Lynchburg, Va., Mrs. M. A. Honeycutt, Lagrange, N. C., Miss Beulah Moton, High Point, Messrs. A. C. and Elmer Moton, Bakersville, N. C., and C. S. Moton, Albemarle, N. C. For 56 years he served in the ministry, and was pastor in Albemarle, Yadkin College, Alamance County, Yadkin College, Buncombe County, Cleveland County, and three churches in High Point, Lebanon at Mechanicsville, Welch Memorial, and English Street. At the Annual Conference in 1925 he was superannuated and assigned as assistant pastor in Winston-Salem. About two years ago he built a home here on Fifth Street, and retired from active work to enjoy the peaceful serenity of "duties well performed and days well spent."

Funeral services were conducted in the First Church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by Dr. S. W. Taylor, president N. C. Conference, assisted by Rev. W. F. Kennett, of Greensboro, and Rev. W. M. Pike, who were ordained at the same time as the deceased. Interment was made in Oakwood Memorial Park of this city. A large throng of sorrowing friends, doubtless many of whom he had welcomed into the church, prayed for at beds of illness, joined in marriage, and administered the rite of baptism in babyhood, gathered to pay the last tribute of love and affection and to mingle their tears for this servant of God, who literally spent his energy and life in the service of his fellowmen. Rev. Mr. Moton was a great evangelist, and was never so happy as when proclaiming salvation and singing praises to his Lord and Savior. He has been instrumental in bringing thousands of boys and girls, men and women to the cross of their Christ all through the state of North Carolina. He loved to preach the old-fashioned gospel of repentance and personal salvation from sin. Praise God for men like him, who by unwearying toil, agony, and sacrifice planted the church and blazed the way for the proud heritage which we of a younger generation are enjoying today. His faith was beautiful, firm, unwavering; his long and consecrated life was devoted to saving souls and "His father's business." To his lonely wife who sits in the shadow of grief, mourning for the love of her youth, and to the sons and daughters who have been bereft of a good father whom they delighted to honor, we extend our deep and sincere sympathy, commending them to the mercy of the compassionate Father who has promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," and whom he delighted to honor and serve.

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!) Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace, And saw within the moonlight in his room, Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom. An angel, writing in a book of gold; Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold, And to the presence in the room he said, "What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,

And with a look made of all sweet accord, Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so," Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low, But cheerly still; and said, "I pray thee, then, Write me as one that loves his fellowmen." The angel wrote and vanished. The next night

It came again, with a great wakening light, And showed the names whom love of God had blessed.

And, lo Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

AN APPRECIATION OF REV. J. H. MOTON

Brother Moton was pastor of my home church, Friendship, now on Fallston Charge, for twelve years. He also helped in two special meetings at my home church. Several times I have heard him say that he worked for us as long as Jacob worked for his wives. During his last stay of four years on Fallston Charge he licensed me to preach the gospel. At Henderson Conference he helped ordain me to the gospel ministry. We also had him baptize our son, E. A. Bingham, Jr. We have had the pleasure of having him help us in two meetings since we have been in the active work. From early life I have loved, honored, and appreciated this great man of God. He preached the gospel with power; loved the people he served; and took a great interest in the young people. May the mantle of this zealous man of God fall upon us younger men that we may hold the torch of evangelism high.

Mrs. Moton deserves a great deal of the credit of his success. She was a constant helper in the kingdom work. I always enjoyed her testimonies and public prayers. May God bless and sustain her until she too may hear the call to come up higher.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Vinson

On Thursday morning, June 6th, Mr. J. H. Vinson quietly passed into that rest beyond before any one knew anything about it. When they thought he was sleeping later than usual and went to see about him, they found him sleeping that sleep from which none wakes to weep. He had been in his usual health for some time, and his departure was a shock to the entire community.

Mr. Vinson was a member of the M. P.

Church at Bethesda, on Halifax Charge. He had been a member of this church for about 60 years, having joined when a boy. He has held different offices in the church during this time, and but few men have ever been more faithful to attend church services and encourage others to attend than the deceased.

While he could not hear well enough to understand what the preacher said, he paid strict attention, and was a close observer, and seemed to get as much out of the services as any one.

His life was like an open book (as one has said since he died); there was nothing hid about his life. He was known far and near for his honesty, truthfulness, and uprightness of heart and life, and was always pure and chaste in all his conversations.

He always spoke well of his fellowman; he could always find and speak of the good qualities in his fellowman, and overlook any fault in them.

For a number of years he has lived close to the parsonage on Halifax Charge. He has been a friend to all of the pastors, as well as a good neighbor; he loved all of his pastors and he was loved by all of them.

I have never lived by any one that I thought more of than I did Mr. Vinson. He was a friend to me, and one that I could depend on at all times for anything I needed. It has been truly said that a friend in need is a friend indeed. We will certainly miss him.

He was loved and respected by the colored people as well as the white people, and often helped them in the time of need, and will be missed by them.

He leaves to mourn their loss three children, Mrs. H. M. Whitaker, of Enfield, N. C., and Mrs. E. A. Perry, Route 2, Enfield, and Randolph Vinson, of Asheville, N. C., and one sister, Mrs. E. G. Glenn, of Route 2, Enfield, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. But we should not sorrow as one that hath no hope, but let us prepare to meet him where there will be no sorrow, or trouble, but where the weary will be at rest.

The funeral services were conducted in Bethesda Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. C. Auman, of Enfield, and Rev. C. I. Smith, of Littleton.

The funeral services were attended by a large crowd of friends and relatives, who feel keenly their loss, but we are sure that our loss is his eternal gain.

The body was then laid to rest in the cemetery at Bethesda Church by the side of his wife who preceded him to the grave about thirty years ago, and beneath a very beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

HIS PASTOR, C. L. SPENCER.

Mrs. Lillie Gordon

Lillie Ada Scott was born January 27, 1875. At the age of 12 years she was converted and united with Lee's Chapel M. E. Church, South, near Greensboro, and remained a member there until her marriage, at which time she transferred her membership to Friendship Methodist Protestant Church on Haw River Circuit. During the early years of her Christian experience she formed ideals that were moulded into a character that is today without spot or blemish.

When about 19 years of age, and on December 26, 1893, she became the wife of Pinkney M. Gordon. To this happy union were born five children, two of which died in infancy.

It was during those earliest years of her family life that there grew up a bond of sympathetic understanding and loving companionship among the members of the family, which has grown stronger as the years have come and gone, until today that understanding and companionship is incomparable.

For more than 35 years she stood courageously beside her husband, and together they met life's sorrows and joys, its losses and its successes.

As a woman she was respected by all who knew her, and as a mother her heart always beat in an unceasing desire to make happy those whom she had borne. As a neighbor and friend, she was loved and admired for her hospitality and neighborly kindness.

As a wife she stood like a Joan of Arc against all discouragements, and when the days were dark and discouragements had left their mark, she was as truly sympathetic, and seemed to understand, as when the sun shone its brightest and happiness was supreme. Her home was noted for its open door. It was always her pastor's refuge, and regardless of denominational affiliations, there was always a welcome and a rest awaiting God's servants under her roof.

Her suffering, though great, was never great enough to shake her faith in her Christ, or mar her love for Him. And since

"Death is but a path that must be trod,

If man would ever pass to God,"

it so happened that on the night of June 6th "God's finger touched her, and she slept." Her funeral was conducted by this writer the following Sunday afternoon, assisted by Revs. W. F. Ashburn and W. D. Reed, former pastors, and Rev. J. D. Williams, D.D., a close friend of the family. The old church she loved could not hold the throngs that came to drop a tear of sorrow and sympathy beside her bier. Her nephews carried her body through the rain to the family plot in the church cemetery, her nieces and other relatives covered the grave with the most beautiful flowers, and we left the house in which she lived to rest beneath the oaks of Friendship cemetery, until that day when all those who loved her shall clasp hands with her again.

When comes to the weary a blessed release, When upward we pass to His kingdom of peace,

When free from the woes that on earth we must bear,

We'll say good night here, but good morning up there.

J. L. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

Russell

Wiley Mayberry Russell was converted and united with Chapel Hill Methodist Protestant church when a young man, being one of the number who moved out to the first camp meeting held at Chapel Hill in the year 1870. Out of 58 camp meetings held he moved out to 56. This record itself speaks in no uncertain tone his loyalty to his church and his love for his Saviour. There could not have gone from that church and community a person who will be missed more than he. The preachers who have served his church know what a wonderful man he was. His wonderful personality and pleasing disposition made it pleasant for one to associate with him at church and at his home. I don't know a man who loved his pastor more than did Bro. Russell. He had no pets among us, but he loved us all. This love was proved to us by his fine spirit of co-operation, liberality and loyalty. The church has lost one of its strong pillars. The community has lost a good neighbor, the home a good companion, father and grandfather. To sum up his pilgrimage here it is not putting it too strong to say that he was a man who stood four-square for his country, his church, his home, and his God. When we compare the life of a good man to the life lived by a man who is not a Christian, it helps us to understand the power of God to save us from sin, and the love of Christ in our hearts to make it a joy and a blessing as we journey here, and prepare for eternal life yonder.

The funeral was held under the large tabernacle at Chapel Hill on May 21, 1929, at 11 a. m., conducted by Bros. W. D. Reed, J. W. Hulin, E. A. Bingham and the writer. His body was carried to the church cemetery and we left it there beneath a beautiful mound of lovely flowers to await the resurrection morn.

The grief-stricken family have our deepest sympathy. We weep, but not as those who have no hope. May the sons, daughters, and grandchildren treasure his life in their hearts.

C. E. RIDGE.

Allen

On June 15, 1929, death visited the home of our dear brother, Claude Allen, and took for its victim their darling baby boy, little Robert Friel Allen, aged nine months and four days. He leaves father, mother and five brothers.

Although his stay with them was short, he had endeared himself to them until it was heart-rending to them to see him slip away from them so unexpectedly, and almost suddenly, being sick only about three days. Our hearts go out in sympathy for them, and also join with them in thanksgiving for the blessed assurance that we have of meeting our loved ones again in the "sweet bye and bye" where we'll have no more sorrows, disappointments and heartaches.

Burial services were conducted by the writer Sunday at 11 a. m., after which the remains were laid to rest in Mt. Zion cemetery under a mound of beautiful flowers. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

A. L. HUNTER.

Hatley

On June 17, 1929, about 11 o'clock, the soul of Mrs. Rettie Emeline Harwood Hatley, the wife of Mr. Philmore Hatley, departed this life; age, 73 years, 8 months, and 4 days. She professed faith in Christ at an early age, and joined Friendship Methodist Protestant Church; lived a Christian life, and was ever loyal to her church. She always stood by her pastor, and her home was the preacher's home. She was the mother of four children; the husband and three children survive; namely, I. W. and W. A. Hatley, and Mrs. J. H. Harkey, of Albemarle. Mrs. Rosa Lee Hatley Burleson preceded her to the home beyond. She also leaves one brother, Mr. Howell Harwood, of Albemarle, 13 grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her going. She was a brave soul. Her friendliness had won for her a host of friends. To visit her and see the bright smile on her face was an inspiration to the visitor. She manifested an unusual devotion for the members of her family. All that doctors and loving hands could do was done to stay the hand of death, but God said she had suffered enough, so the angels bore her spirit away. Let's dry our tears and read Revelation 14:13: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth." On the evening of the 18th her funeral was held in Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. D. Reed, Rev. A. Ridge, Rev. J. R. Anderson, and Rev. J. S. Newton, in the presence of a large concourse of people. Her body was laid to rest beneath a mound of lovely flowers. The pallbearers were her grandsons, and the flowers were borne by the Ladies' Aid, of which she was a member.

—C. H. HILL

Bramble

On June 17, 1929, Mrs. Ida F. Bramble, nee Patterson, was laid to rest in the cemetery at Friendship Church in Alamance County. Rev. D. I. Offman, by request, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Carroll, conducted the services.

Mrs. Bramble was born November 20, 1883, and was reared in the neighborhood of Friendship, and connected herself with the congregation at that place in her youth, remaining faithful till death. For the past several years the family have lived in Washington, D. C. She had been in declining health for more than a year.

The number attending the funeral and the floral tribute was an index of the esteem in which she was held.

Mrs. Bramble leaves to mourn her departure her husband and one son, besides a host of relatives and friends. May the grace of God be with and comfort each and every one.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, your committee on resolutions, do hereby submit the following:

Realizing that in the death of Mrs. Rettie Hatley we the Ladies' Aid, Church, and community have lost one of our oldest and most highly esteemed members, and that whereas her life has been so pure and unselfish, so Christ-like and peaceful that we have been able from time to time to gather inspiration from her example of christian living and that perfect peace with God.

Be it resolved, that we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, striving to follow her example, live more Christ-like, to be of greater service to our Church and community and to all humanity so that when we too shall have passed from this world it may also be said of us that we preserved our bodies a living sacrifice wholly acceptable unto God.

Be it further resolved that copies of this writing be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and the local paper for publication, and to the bereaved family, and that a copy be preserved in the records of our society.

MRS. C. H. HILL.

PROSPECTIVE TOBACCO LEGISLATION

On June 10, the United States senate received a shock. Senator Smoot introduced a bill to amend the Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906, by extending its provisions to tobacco and tobacco products.

He said he introduced the bill because "the manufacture and sale of tobacco products are matters that affect the public health and welfare of millions of our population"; that "various drug products are contained in tobacco"; and that "false and deceptive statements made through advertising media in the interest of tobacco products should be brought under government regulation."

In introducing his bill the senator delivered a scathing address in which he charges the tobaccoists with indulging in "an orgy of buncombe, quackery, and downright falsehood and fraud to create a vast woman and child market for their products."

The No-Tobacco League prints the senator's address in full in the July issue of The No-Tobacco Journal. It has also organized a nation-wide campaign to get individuals and groups of people in all states to petition congress to pass the bill.

Any one interested in having a part in the campaign in this matter so vital to the "public health and welfare of millions of the population," can obtain copies of the senator's address and suggested form of petition by writing to the No-Tobacco League, Box 578, Indianapolis Indiana, and enclosing five cents for postage.

PRUNING THE CHURCH ROLL

It is a well known fact that any organization or institution must keep pace with the times if they hope to grow or obtain the best results. If the above statement applies to Business Organizations and Educational Institutions, will it not apply to our Churches? Teaching methods and Business methods are continually changing, and some changes, I agree, are taking place in our Church government, but more are needed.

I refer in particular to the rural Church, because I am in a position to know more of our problems. Many churches have members listed on their books that have not visited their church in five years or more. Some of these people live in the nearby community, and do not go to church, while others have moved away. If they attend other churches, they should be interested enough to move their membership and be loyal to the church where they can do the most good. Some will say that they love their church too much to change their membership, but this is not true of the churches I have in mind because, most of the members in question show no interest whatever. Please do not get the idea that I think we should turn people out of our Church just because they do not attend or help in any way, but I do say it is unfair to the active members to have to be responsible in a financial way for those people who are able to do their part but show no inclination to do so.

This is a delicate problem and should be given careful consideration before any action is taken, but I hope this matter will be given some thought by the leaders of our denomination and that some action will be taken at the next conference to relieve the present situation.

The writer is of the opinion that it would be a good idea to have some ruling whereby a church could carry an active and inactive list of members. This would give credit where credit is due and would help greatly in working problems out on a fair basis.

C. W. GORDON.

(The last General Conference provided for the elimination of inactive church members. See later Discipline.—Edit.)

THE SKY

The sky is not all dark to me,
I see the sun behind;
Those clouds of sombre-looking hue
Are softly silver-lined.
My fancy penetrates that scroll,
Rare pictures come to view;
The sky is not all dark to me,
Beyond is rose and blue.

The sky is not all dark to me,
I trace a rainbow there
Of promised beauty still to come
And colors wondrous fair.
The gray and black are only masks
Of amethyst and gold;
The sky is not all dark to me,
Its charm will soon unfold!

THE ROSE BEYOND THE WALL

Near a shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and bloomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by the morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.

As it grew and blossomed, fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall
Through which there shone a beam of light.

Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride,
And it followed the light through the crevice's length,
And unfolded itself on the other side.

The light, the dew, the broadening view,
Were found the same as they were before;
It lost itself in the beauties new,
Breathing its fragrance more and more.

Shall the claim of death cause us to grieve,
And make our courage faint and fall?
Nay, let us faith and hope receive—
The rose still grows beyond the wall—

Scattering fragrance far and wide,
Just as it did in days of yore;
Just as it did on the other side,
Just as it will forevermore.

Let freedom ring throughout the land
And men rejoice on every hand.
Our nation's free from foreign rule,
Proclaim the fact in church and school.

Our fathers brave well won the day
When England came in force to slay.
Her armies, beaten, were driven out
And we broke forth in victor's shout.

Let's not forget that hostile men
Our tempting shores may visit again.
Let's build our forts and man our ships.
Be ever ready, and make no slips.

But know all men by presents sure,
There are dire evils war can't cure.
In vain we meet with shot and shell
The terrible hosts that come from hell.

Invading our souls they bind us fast
And aim to make us theirs at last.
We feel degraded, sore oppressed,
And know not where to turn for rest.

We did not dream in childhood days
That life could lead to such a maze.
We wish we could be children again
And know the freedom we knew then.

The past is sealed, the future dark,
Alas that we so missed the mark.
Can Heaven itself hold out no hope
To sorrowing souls that pray and grope?

Like lightning flash the truth comes down
And brings good news to all around:
Deliverance comes through woman's Seed;
Whom He makes free is free indeed.

Why Deplore Variety?

Variety in the world results from natural forces ordained by the Creator. It is not a thing to be deplored, but to be thankful for. Reduce all the forms of the world to one, and what a dreary world we would have. This is as true of forms of religious service as of forms of plant and animal life. Variation comes with freedom. The only way to hold men to form is by external authority. Free men follow an internal principle and express their lives in new and original ways. Wherever there is long-continued conformity to one type there is interference with nature by human authority. Ages of sameness are not ages of inspiration and cannot be ages of true progress.

Shall the pine tree say to the oak: Let us both have needle-shaped leaves or both have broad leaves with sinuous outline; let us not be different. Shall the white man say to the black man: Let us both be white or both be black; let us not be different.

The enemies of variety must be those who in their school days were punished by being compelled to gaze at a nail head ten minutes at a stretch.

God's variegated world pleases us better than would the world of the monotonists if they could ever bring it to pass. A hundred things may all differ and yet all be right.

Side Light on Church Union in Canada

A sketch of the union movement in Canada written by a Canadian writer explains the causes of the movement and includes among them the fear of absorption by a larger body either in the United States or in England. They thought it better to join with their neighbors though of different name, creed and polity, than to accept foreign domination. It is the democratic spirit expressing itself in ecclesiastical life. This spirit not only opposes our going back into the fold of Rome, but it also opposes our yielding ourselves to foreign control. Men want to be self-governing in church as well as state. It is this democratic spirit throughout the enlightened nations that has interfered with the program of the great episcopal bodies. Their bishops can no longer travel round the world as "general superintendent" with the Wesley slogan—"The world is my parish." They serve in restricted areas, and foreign mission fields are demanding that they have liberty to control their own affairs. While some small churches are uniting, some large churches are breaking up.

More Convenient Money Needed

Has it not occurred to you that the United States government could improve on our paper money by making the bills smaller? With the present size of bank notes it is difficult to carry them in the pocket without crumpling them. If they were made one-third or one-half as large they might be carried without folding them. They would last longer and look better and be less bulky. When you get in position to determine this matter, we trust that you will give it your serious attention.

The foregoing was printed in our issue of November 11, 1926. We did not then expect that the reform would be accomplished so soon. It would be another surprise to us to learn that some of our readers took up the suggestion and brought it to the attention of somebody in authority.

—President Taylor proposes a writing contest which we trust will enlist quite a number of our people. The subject is an important one and the careful study and discussion of it cannot fail to do good. Send your name to President Taylor if you feel prompted to write on the subject announced.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

Many years ago, in a Sunday school which I attended, there was a good woman, zealous, sincere and faithful, but amazingly ignorant. One Sunday a teacher of a children's class was absent, and the superintendent, hard-pressed for substitutes, asked this good woman to take her place. She, unaware of her ineptitude, agreed to do so. The opportunity to supply for absent teachers came more and more frequently, and, finally, by reason of her willingness and faithfulness, this good woman was appointed a regular teacher—her only qualifications being willingness, faithfulness and goodness—splendid qualifications if accompanied by knowledge of the subject to be taught and training in the art of imparting that knowledge, which this woman totally lacked.

At a later period, there was another teacher, fairly well educated, not altogether ignorant of the Bible, and possessing some teaching ability, but woefully lacking in a sense of responsibility. She was absent from the school about half the time, and never secured a substitute, or notified the superintendent that she would not be with her class.

Still later, a class of boys was placed under the tutelage of a man whose ideas were as primitive as the old log school house, whose teaching ability was non-existent, and who, all-in-all, was as total a misfit as I have ever seen.

Now, why am I telling this story? Simply this. We insist that our public school teachers must be the best our money can employ. They must pass the required examination before they may be given a position, and we watch their work as it shows up in the child's progress, and if unsatisfactory, a change is made.

But what of the child's religious training? Often the parents not only do not know the type of work the teacher is doing but do not even know who the teacher is. Why are we solicitous for the character of the child's secular education, while neglecting his religious instruction? Too often we are satisfied with the fact that the child goes to Sunday school, while his teacher may be any one of the three above referred to, and we are none the wiser.

Fortunately, the situation is receiving attention, and more care is being used than formerly in the selection of the Sunday school teachers, and training schools are being conducted for their benefit, but there are still to be found attempting to give religious instruction to our children teachers of a type that would not be tolerated in the public school.

This is not a bit of fault-finding, but a plea that more thought and care be given to the selection of those who are to instruct our children in the vital things of religion, and that a constant effort be made to improve the Sunday school teaching personnel.

There may be schools in which the conditions are such that capable teachers cannot be secured. We should not be content with those conditions.

Superintendents, is not the child entrusted to your care worthy of your best thought and attention? Parents, is not your child's religious training as important as his public school training?

A remedy which is being used to some extent is to employ and pay teachers especially trained in giving religious instruction—a plan to be commended if care is used in selecting the teachers—those who teach not for the monetary reward, but who choose this method of contributing to the work of the church. But this is not, as yet, generally considered feasible or desirable. There is still too much of the attitude of the old lady who, when the minister said, "Salvation is free," shouted, "Yes, bless the Lord, salvation is free. I have been a member of the church twenty-five years, and it has cost me only thirty cents."

The best substitute for the paid teacher plan is to select capable, intelligent men and women as teachers and conduct a weekly teachers' training class, led by a thoroughly competent Bible student. Much may be learned from a general discussion of the lesson, resulting in interchange of thought and ideas. Religion cannot, without suffering, remain static while every other phase of life is making progress.

MARTYR OR SNEAK?

By ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON, LL.D., Litt.D.

Let wets boldly and publicly violate the laws to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment if they desire the American people to believe in their sincerity when they claim the right to break a law which they assert is a violation of liberty. Let them invite the police or other proper authorities to witness such violation. Let them submit to arrest, plead guilty in the courts, offering in mitigation no pleas save that they believe their liberty has been invaded. Let them accept whatever sentence the court imposes and serve such sentence without asking pardon or probation. Then they may convince some of their sincerity. Then, and only then, they may be accepted as martyrs to principle rather than as fettered victims of the drink habit or of the greed habit.

The furtive patron of the criminal bootlegger is scarcely a heroic figure. The flurry which has disturbed so-called social circles when a bootlegger's list has been discovered by the police has been one of the most laughable commentaries on the sincerity and courage of those who finance liquor criminals. The world salutes Ajax defying the lightning, but when Ajax hides between feather beds at the first roll of thunder, he deserves jeers and not cheers. The advice of a sneak and a craven is not likely to be effective with the people of a nation which honors the true sport, the genuine hero and the courageous martyr.

The recurrent outcry against the use of "spies" and "snoopers," so frequently raised by patrons of the bootlegger, is a confession of cowardice as well as guilt. The law-abiding citizen is not afraid of an officer of the law in uniform or out of it. The frank, honest rebel is honored even by the foes he is fighting, so long as he wages his war openly and not treacherously. The laws of modern warfare recognize the rights of insurgents, but they must be open insurgents. They cannot hide themselves in ambush but must openly display their banners and advertise their belligerency by their uniforms. To these are accorded the honors of war, even in defeat. They may be shot as rebels, but they will not be hanged as criminals. Thus far, the violators of the prohibition law have been conducting themselves as frightened criminals rather than as convinced defenders of principle.

—We have a new contributor who calls himself "Roddy." The publication of his first piece would be of very doubtful propriety. Indeed, I fear it would have the opposite effect to that intended. He has some novel ideas. One of his conceptions is that a strong church may be formed by a process of freezing. Perhaps he is thinking this warm weather about making ice cream. If his formula is correct, it will be good next year. We ask "Roddy" to try his hand again, and excuse our skepticism regarding his first effort. We are afraid it might result in ptomaine poisoning.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Pastors' Summer Conference will be held next week beginning at 8 o'clock p. m. Monday. Dr. P. E. Lindley will be the speaker for Monday night. It is hoped that all pastors will attend from the first service to the last. It is also hoped that the laymen of the conference will make it possible for the pastors to attend. Laymen, give your pastor a little present not only of the time but the expense of the conference. A little effort on the part of the laymen will make this possible.

Ladies' Day

Thursday of the conference has been designated as Ladies' Day. It is hoped that on that day our good ladies will be present in large numbers. Not only the ladies of the preachers' families are invited, but everybody. Come one, come all. Mrs. Hammer and Mrs. Bates have a notice elsewhere which extends an invitation to the ladies to attend a School of Methods which will be conducted on that day. This is fine and will furnish valuable information to ladies of our churches. Come, ladies, come. And, by the way, why not the men also? Laymen, come along and bring the good ladies—your wives and our wives. Let us, all together, have a good day together. It would be fine to have a great gathering of our people on this day. Come along, men, you are invited as well as the ladies.

The Program

The program which follows has been completed and all the brethren notified of their assignments. Last year every brother was present with his part and it is hoped that the same may be said of this conference. We regret that Dr. Forlines, who has been in every previous conference, will not be with us this year. We will miss him very much, but he is otherwise engaged. The 9 o'clock hour each morning formerly occupied by Dr. Forlines has been assigned to a number of other brethren who will bring us messages that will be worthwhile. Instead of there being a general theme for the entire conference there will be a theme for each day. The five words suggesting the thoughts for the five days are: Visualize, Systematize, Organize, Modernize, and Vitalize.

The program follows:

A NEW LEAF

He came to my desk with quivering lip,

The lesson was done.

"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,

"I've spoiled this one."

I took the old leaf so stained and blotted,

And gave him a new one, all unspotted,

And into his sad eyes smiled,

"Do better now, my child."

I came to the throne with a quivering heart,

The old year was done.

"Dear Master, I want a new leaf," I said,

"I've spoiled this one."

He took the old year so stained and blotted,

And gave me a new one all unspotted,

And into my sad heart smiled,

"Do better now, my child"

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

COLLEGE CAMPAIGN IN TEXAS

Dear Brother Pastor:

You may have learned by this time of the plan of the Board of Christian Education to launch a campaign on May 20 to secure $125,000 for Westminster College at Tehuacana, Texas. So impressed was I with the fine opportunity this campaign provides to do a real piece of constructive work for our denomination and the Kingdom that I immediately volunteered my services, and suggested to Dr. Stephenson that he invite Drs. Straughn and Haddaway to join us in giving at least two weeks to the campaign.

These brethren readily agreed to help, so that on May 20 your college will have more officials of the General Conference helping in its campaign than any of our colleges has ever had in a similar effort. This is Westminster's opportunity and I appeal to you to help us make the most of it.

I am sending a copy of this letter to all our pastors in the recognized area of Westminster College, and I am asking each of them to join in the following:

1. In giving the widest publicity to the proposed campaign, announcing it in every public service for the next month.

2. In calling our people to united and earnest prayer for the success of the campaign. Interpret for them its spiritual significance.

3. If solicitors come into your community to secure funds, co-operate with them to the limit of your ability. If they are unable to come, what a fine thing it would be for you to take the initiative in calling together your leading men and women, explaining to them the campaign, and then going out to get your community's share of the $125,000.

I cannot emphasize too strongly that this is the finest opportunity that has come to Westminster College, and to the supporting conferences, in many years. We must not fail to make the most of it. Thanking you for your co-operation, I am,

Faternally yours,

J. C. BROOMFIELD.

COMPENSATION

For everything that happens wrong
A dozen things go right.
For every tear a flood of song
Rings out across the night.
For every dark and stormy day
A week of days are fair.
However chill the clouds and gray,
'Tis always bright somewhere.

For every heart of bitterness
A host of hearts are light.
For every hour of deep distress
A whole long day is bright.
For every faithless friend we find
That many friends are true.
So, after all, God's mighty kind
To such as me and you.

—Clarence E. Fynn.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Martin

The "earthly tent" of Rev. W. P. Martin has been "taken down," and he now has "a home from God, made by no human hands, eternal in the heavens." The dissolution occurred last Saturday, July 6, as the evening shadows began to gather beneath the hills about his home. But we are convinced that for him there were no shadows; for "at evening time there shall be light." Bro. Martin had been in the conference for just a half century, having joined in 1879. For several years he had not had active service, but he was nothing abated in his zeal for the progress of the kingdom. Of the men who preceded him in membership in the conference, only one is living—Bro. T. F. McCulloch. His membership antedates that of Bro. Martin by three years. Bro. D. A. Fishel, who was admitted with Bro. Martin, is living. The funeral was held at Shiloh church, Connelly Springs charge, and interment followed in the church burying ground. This little mountain church is near where Bro. Martin had lived for the past twenty-five years, and was the regular worshiping place of himself and his family. We were assisted in the funeral by the pastor, Rev. L. S. Helms. Bro. Martin was held in high esteem by his neighbors, and many of them were present to share in this parting tribute of respect. We extend to the immediate family and to the relatives our personal sympathy and the sympathy of the conference. An obituary committee will be promptly appointed, and a suitable obituary prepared for the conference memorial service. In the meantime, an obituary will be furnished for publication in the HERALD.

Community Church

July 5, Friday night.—Chairman Maier and the churches of his district—the eighth district—held their rally on this date, beginning at 5 p. m., and concluding with the night program. Because of a funeral we were not able to be there at the opening, but were able to get there for the night session, though at a late hour, and to speak, according to assignment, on "The Conference Programs." We found quite a number of ministers and laymen present, representing different charges, and were glad to be assured of the success of the rally.

The time of holding this rally affords a suggestion to chairmen and other districts. Bro. Maier and his district have shown us that a rally may be held at some other time than on the fifth Sunday in June. We suggest that other chairmen, who have not yet arranged for a rally, try out this idea. If it does not give promise of the large assemblies that the fifth Sunday does, it would nevertheless bring together worthwhile groups who would take back to their churches something, at least, of the purposes of these rallies. Think on this, brethren.

Grace

July 7, Sunday.—It was our privilege to be here at the eleven o'clock hour, and to share in the service by preaching. In the absence of the pastor, Bro. Tamblyn, who is on his vacation, we were pleased to have Bro. Spahr with us in the pulpit and to have him assist by leading in the order of worship. The attendance was gratifying, and a spirit of devotion and sympathetic interest prevailed. We enjoyed our visit and worship with them.

The Campaign

Several of the brethren were out Sunday. We trust that the day was one of "good tidings," and that they will not "hold their peace." We are anxious for their reports, that we may know how the matter goes. What we desire is the following: Charge, churches visited, number of pledges, total amount of pledges, total amount of cash. A postal card will do. Thank you, brethren.

The schedule provides for a visitation with several churches next Sunday. Pastors will, of course, have all plans made for the speakers, as to appointments, and will notify them in advance. In the meantime, let us all remember to pray daily for the success of this undertaking. We should raise every dollar of the $50,000—just $5,000 a year for ten years—that the college may be put on a stable financial basis. Now is the time for every member among us to stand in his place and help accomplish this worthy and reasonable task.

In making out the schedule of speakers, the committee did not undertake to secure a supply for pastors who were called upon to assist in the campaign. We trust that the pastors themselves will handle that phase of the undertaking. We call upon churches again to release their pastors for this work. The most important and necessary thing before us now is this college campaign.

"Know Your Church," Leaflet

The conference New Century Service and the Budget Council have had this leaflet in process of preparation for some time. The matter is now about ready for the printer, and we hope to have it in the hands of our people in a very few days. This simple announcement is all that we need to say in regard to it now.

Here's Good News

At least we hope it is. By the generosity of friends we are able to offer two prizes for the best and next best "write-up" on the Country Church. These papers are to be published in the HERALD, and are not to exceed twelve hundred words. The contest will run for three months. Any one sixteen years of age and over is eligible to enter, but we must have the names of at least ten before the contest will begin. Unless we can have the assurance that as many as ten will write on the subject, we would think it hardly profitable to go forward with it. After the contest begins, one paper will be published weekly for three months, and in the order in which they are received. All papers are to be sent direct to the editor. In case two or more are received on the same day, he will run them week after week until each one has been published. If a number of papers are unpublished when only one week of the contest remains, the one bearing the earliest date will be given priority. If two or more of these bear the same date, the editor will make choice by lot, and the paper thus chosen will be published. When enough papers are in to fill up the time allotted, the editor will make announcement and request that no more papers be sent for the contest.

These papers are to deal with the place of the country church in the life of the community—the opportunities, needs, problems, and best ways of promoting the country church. This, in general, is what is contemplated in this discussion.

The prizes are as follows: for the best paper, $5.00; for second best, $2.50.

Three competent judges will pass on the papers, and award the prizes. All papers are to be signed by the writer, but only numbers will be used when they are published.

Seventy-five per cent of our churches are rural, and the same percentage of our people are in these churches. This would seem to justify this undertaking. Now for a real lively, earnest, good time, writing and reading about the country church. Come on now, contestants, and sign up.

"If I Forget Thee, O Jerusalem"

The hot weather is on now, and it will be an easy matter for us to relax in church attendance. It is doubtful if we shall be any more rested by not going to church Sunday morning; on the other hand, it is most likely that we shall be refreshed both in body and in spirit if we do go. At home or on vacation, it is a good thing to remember the church service Sunday morning.

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem,
Let my right hand forget her skill.
Let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth,
If I remember thee not;
If I prefer not Jerusalem
Above my chief joy."

Finally

This is the last opportunity for a final word regarding the Pastors' Conference and the Young People's Training School. The officials of each organization will have everything in readiness for us when we meet Saturday and Monday. We trust that our young people may be there in full force, likewise our pastors. And we of course are expecting the ladies on "Ladies' Day." These occasions are potential of much good. They bring us together for fellowship, for spiritual, mental, physical, and social refreshing, and to learn how to become better equipped for the tasks that the great Head of the church has committed unto us, as his co-laborers. Let us be there. And don't forget the basket on "Ladies' Day."

Appointments

July 13-20.—Pastors' Conference and Young People's Training School, High Point College.

July 28, Sunday.—Mecklenburg Charge, in District Rally.

August 4, Sunday.—Union Grove, 11 a. m. L. S. Helms, pastor. Shady Grove, 8 p. m.

August 10-20.—Vacation.

"Grace be with you all."

THE PRAYER MEETING

There were only two or three of us
Who came to the place of prayer;
Came in the teeth of a driving storm,
But for that we did not care,
Since, after our hymns of praise had risen,
And our earnest prayers were said,
The Master himself was present there,
And gave us the living bread.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE TOMB ROBBERS

When they carried the man away from the spot where they had been digging, all the Egyptian workmen came with them. That didn't seem strange, because everybody is curious and likes to crowd around when anybody gets hurt. But when they came to Mr. Higgins and demanded their money, Jim Higgins and his friend, Tom Powers, knew that something more than usual was the matter.

"There's the Egyptian boss," said Jim, pointing to a dark, surly-looking man with a red fez on his head. "He appears to be quite excited."

"I don't know what is wrong with you, Hassim," Jim's father was saying. "Ever since we began cutting in toward the side of that hill you have been a hindrance to me rather than a help."

"Mr. Higgins," replied Hassim El Dur, "you are blaming me because the men are superstitious? They say that the King's curse is on this tomb, and if they break into it, all of them will die within the next year."

"What's the King's curse?" asked Tom in an undertone to Jim.

"That's a belief these Egyptians have about the tombs of their ancient kings. They think there is a curse upon the heads of the ones who open them up for study," answered Jim.

"But I'm not asking you to break into it," protested Mr. Higgins. "All I want you fellows to do is to dig as far as the door. Then I'll do the rest."

"My men won't do it," answered the Egyptian. "Already three men have been hurt, and this one makes the fourth."

"Accidents," replied Jim's father. "Surely they can understand that?"

"Just the same," was the Egyptian's answer, "we don't like it, and so we're quitting."

And they did quit, leaving Mr. Higgins and his small party of Americans alone with the immense cavity they had dug in the sand in an attempt to find the tomb of the second king of Egypt.

"I don't trust that man Hassim," said Jim, when he was alone with Tom again. "As my father says, there is something funny about the way he is acting. Do you know, Tom, I have a feeling that he doesn't want us to find that tomb!"

"What makes you think so?"

"Well, for one thing, he was all right until we gave him orders to stop digging the big hole and start on the little one off to the side. That makes me think that the little one is going in the right direction, and for some reason or other Hassim doesn't want to dig it any deeper."

"Maybe you're right," agreed Tom. "It certainly does look funny."

For a moment both boys were silent. Then Jim said:

"Let's you and I take shovels and keep on digging where his men left off. Perhaps we can find the tomb!"

Tom was willing, so they each found a shovel and began digging. They didn't keep on in exactly the same direction as before, because if their theory was correct, Hassim wouldn't encourage his men to dig toward the tomb. So they chose a spot which seemed to have been neglected by the Egyptian foreman. They worked steadily for an hour, stopping only to wipe the sweat from their faces and to look at what they had done. In one of these pauses, Tom said:

"How about the King's cure?"

"What about it?" asked Jim.

"Do you believe in it?"

"Of course I don't. Do you?"

"Well, I guess I don't at that. But it's spooky to think about it, just the same."

With that remark, he turned back to his work, and at the moment he dug his shovel into the sand again, the accident occurred. Jim yelled out as he felt the ground fall out from under his feet; but Tom was too surprised to yell. They fell about ten feet, and the sand poured down on top of them until they were almost buried.

"What happened?" sputtered Tom.

"The ground gave away, and we're in some sort of a cave. No, Tom, it isn't a cave. It's the tomb!"

Both boys got to their feet and looked around the place into which they had been dropped. There was enough sunlight coming in through the hole for them to see at once that they were not in the tomb, but in a long, narrow passageway that disappeared into darkness at both ends.

"It's a tunnel!" exclaimed Jim. "And I'll bet—" He paused for a moment. "I'll bet it leads to the door of the tomb. Come on, Tom, let's look and see."

They struck matches and began to walk down the tunnel, holding the flickering lights ahead of them, so that they could see. Tom didn't like it a bit—it was too much like being in a graveyard at midnight.

Suddenly he caught his breath and stood stock still.

"Voices!" he whispered to Jim. "I thought I heard voices!"

Jim blew out the match and said:

"So did I. Let's go back to the opening and yell for my father."

But before they could turn and run, more than six men came out of blackness and grabbed them. Hassim El Dur was the leader.

"Tie them up," he said, "and leave them in the tunnel. We still have time to reach the river before the men on top find out that the boys are missing."

"How can we tie them up?" asked one of the men. "We haven't got any rope."

"Then put them in the tomb and roll the stone in front of the door."

As three men were carrying out the Egyptian's orders, some others were lifting great chests of gold and silver ornaments and carrying them out of the tomb. When they had taken out all they wanted, they rolled the stone in front of the door and began to carry the loot away.

"Just as I thought," said Jim. "Hassim knew where the tomb was all the time, and now he is robbing it. I never did trust that man."

"Neither did I," answered Tom. "And I don't think much of his brains either. Look! I can see light coming in through the wall! I believe it is only sand and I can put my fist through it!"

But before he could do it, the small hole he had seen suddenly got bigger, and he saw the end of a shovel come through. Then he shouted and so did Jim, and in another minute they were telling Mr. Higgins about Hassim El Dur and his chests full of stolen articles.

"His tunnel must lead to the river!" exclaimed Mr. Higgins. "Quick, men, let's go to the embankment!"

And sure enough, when they got there, they saw Hassim and his men loading the chests into a boat by which they hoped to make their escape. But Mr. Higgins persuaded them, at the point of a gun, that they had better give themselves up, which they did.

"Whatever is found inside that tomb," said Mr. Higgins, "belongs to science. That is why Jim, my son, and Tom, his friend, have done such a service to the world in catching these robbers. As for you, Hassim, how did you ever expect to get away with thievery of this nature?"

"I would have gotten away with it all right if it wasn't for—the King's curse!"

And when Jim heard that, he looked at Tom, and Tom couldn't help but smile. He was thinking that the King's curse was just like a bad wind. It had to be pretty evil to blow nobody some good.—Selected.

PLAYING THE PARASITE

Two business men going down to work on the elevated train one morning were discussing office affairs. One, evidently an executive, told the other about a young man under his direction. "I have talked to him again and again," he said earnestly. "I have said to him: 'You have ability, but you do not use it. You do not perform your work satisfactorily; yet you still want to hang on.'"

The executive did not call the young man a "parasite," but he mentioned the chief characteristic of this pest: it hangs on, drawing out but giving nothing in return.

We are familiar with parasitic forms of vegetable and animal life. In the study of botany we make the acquaintance of the dodder that strikes its roots into the trunk of a tree and saps the life out of its host. Several months ago officials and nurserymen of eight states met in Washington to discuss with heads of the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture methods whereby the Japanese beetle might be fought. Experts at the Pennsylvania State College have co-operated with a railroad company in sending a special train through the state to aid farmers in the control of wheat smut. The two types of parasite, one insect, one fungus, have caused incalculable damage to the growing food supplies throughout the country.

The word "parasite," in its original sense, means one who eats at the table of another, and in times past the term has denoted men who feast at the tables of the rich, and who paid their board bill in flattery. They were mere hangers-on, living at the expense of others.

The young man who was the topic of the conversation on the elevated train was probably unconscious that he belonged to the undesirable company of the parasites. But if all that was said of him was true, he could not be classed otherwise. If he was taking his pay envelope without giving an equivalent in service, he was an unprofitable guest sitting at the table of society.

We may not agree entirely with all that Elbert Hubbard said, but there is food for thought in the following somewhat exaggerated statement: "To a great degree, so-called society is made up of parasites who fatten and feed upon the industrious and methodical." When a nation becomes overcrowded with unproductive people, there is trouble ahead. For instance, Persia, once a great nation, suffered because too many whose hands were never stained by toil built luxurious palaces at the expense of the downtrodden laboring classes.

Spurgeon has expressed his splendid contempt for the good-for-nothing: "'As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes,' so is the sluggard to every man who is spending his sweat to earn an honest living, while their fellows let the grass grow up to their ankles, and stand cumbering the ground, as the Bible says."

Playing the parasite in the economic and social world is full of peril, but the dangers of this are more subtle in the spiritual life. In an English religious monthly a writer who was discussing "Christ's Secret of Peace" said that if a man craves for relief from the torture of an anxious heart, to be set free for better things, Jesus says to him, "Come unto me . . . and I will give you rest."

"But if a man be merely querulous," the writer continues, "and fretting to be rid of disciplinary cares, that he may give himself to the repose of an ignoble sloth, he will find no answer to his quest in Christ. And it is just here that the idle parasites of religion come literally to grief. They are disappointed and ill at ease because the faith of Christ has meant so little to them. In truth, it has not given them what they sought—discharge from duty and a lazy rest. Christ has no such soul-destroying gifts to give."

When Amos, the prophet, exclaimed, "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion," he was thinking of those who were playing the parasite. He predicted punishment for men who lived in luxuriousness and who wished to escape the duties which life laid upon them.—Forward.

BOARD EXPRESSES CONFIDENCE IN BISHOP CANNON'S LEADERSHIP

"At the annual meeting of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., on July 4, 1929, the matter of numerous attacks in many recent newspaper statements upon the President of the Board, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was taken up. After consideration of documents relevant to the matter and written statements by Bishop Cannon, and questioning of Bishop Cannon by members of the Board so that the facts were brought out, and after full consideration of the telegraphic correspondence of the fall of 1928, which correspondence had already been given to the press by Bishop Cannon, the Board was fully convinced that the attacks upon Bishop Cannon, in which practically the entire "wet" press of the nation has joined with evident unanimity, had been instigated by the enemies of prohibition with the sole purpose of discrediting a great and influential leader of the prohibition forces of the nation.

"We forbear further comment upon the methods and motives of these attacks, and we hereby declare our confidence in the leadership of Bishop Cannon, and we urge him to continue his unrivaled work for the maintenance, enforcement and extension of the wise and beneficent policy of prohibition and for the accomplishment of the other objects of the Board, and in all such efforts we pledge him not only our confidence, gratitude and affection, but our continued support, sympathy and co-operation."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Elizabeth Hanner

JULY 14: THE CHRISTIAN SUNDAY— WHAT IT IS FOR, AND WHY

Luke 4:15-22

For the Leader

Why not ask several of the older members of the church to be present and to give briefly their idea as to the Christian Sabbath. After this have the Christian Endeavorers' ideas and views on the subject. Contrast or compare these as the case may be.

You might make this an outdoor meeting. If you cannot easily do this, decorate the room to give the appearance of the outdoors.

Use some of these hymns:

"We're Marching to Zion."

"I Love to Tell the Story."

"Power in the Blood."

"O Day of Rest and Gladness."

Leader's Talk

This topic is important in that we are all affected by it—and especially during the summer months. Churches often find it hard to keep up attendance because there are so many other places to go. We should redouble our energy and put on more interesting and better programs on this account.

The Christian Sabbath should serve several purposes. Man needs Sunday as a day of rest from the every routine. Man also needs the Sabbath in order that he may worship God and to study His word. Today we are so busy we often fail to take the time for prayer and Bible reading. We cannot do on Sunday enough for the other days of the week, but may gain much strength and courage from Sunday.

Very often we have to make some decision, be it great or small, as to what we will do on the Sabbath. We are often tempted to do some bit of work or to take part in some pleasure instead of being loyal to our church services and not only to the church but to God. What we determine to do depends a great deal on the purpose of the day. We must consider this point in the discussion. We must face squarely the question and problem of amusements and recreation and answer it according to the dictates of our own heart, coupled with what we know to be God's will.

Questions

1. What has Saturday to do with the Sabbath observance?
2. What people were "made righteous by law?"
3. What scriptural grounds have we for observing Sunday?
4. What pleasures and pastimes are wrong on Sunday? What are permissible?
5. What service may we do for the Master on Sunday?
6. What reasons can we conscientiously give to our Lord and Master for missing the church service and the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting?

Debate

Resolved, That commercialized sports and amusements on Sunday should be prohibited by law.

Poetry to the Point

The winter winds are shrilling past my door;
The sleet is shining on the lilac limbs.
I love my warm hearth, but I love yet more
The stillness of the church, the prayer, the hymns.

This is the "first day" of the early church,
And Christ, the crucified, will mee me there;
I shall not fail to keep our tryst, and search
My store of words for truthfulness in prayer.
The sleet will tap against the storied pane
While Jesus whispers. What a joy to be
So rapt by music of the old refrain
That bears me back to Calvary!

I can see

In broken bread and fruitage of the vine
The patient, suffering, thorn-crowned Friend of mine. —Anon.

REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN FOR LEADER-SHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

The following telegram was received from Rev. N. M. Harrison just before going to press:

"Late registration from Grace Church, Winston First, Pleasant Hill, Tabernacle, Calvary, Siler City, bring total to seven hundred. Grace nears hundred mark."

Yet we go forward. The agents of the different churches, as the report below will show, have been working this past week. They bring the total registrations up to 626, and yet from their reports they do not intend to stop until every member of their respective churches has been solicited.

Total 626

Again this week High Point First leads the list with advancements and again holds first place. She has run up this week a total of 110, which gives her a good margin over the required number for free entertainment. Burlington First comes in with the next highest number of advancements, just one less than High Point, but because she had few to her credit she has to yield second place in the list to Concord, though Concord did not make as large advancement as did Burlington First. Concord and Burlington are both good fields and in previous years have stood high in the list. Thomasville Community delighted our hearts when she sent in 27 names. Community Church has in previous years stood higher than she does now, and doubtless before the campaign ends she will make sufficient advances to bring her up to her old record. The registration agent there has been away from home for some weeks, and the mother could not think of seeing the Community Church trailing in the dust, so she secured the number added this week. Fine work, Mrs. Boyles!

Eleven new churches were added to the list of this week, the largest number so far during the campaign. Thirteen churches made advances. There is a total growth of 224 registrations over the number reported last week. We are confident that we will have equally as large advancement in our next report, and if we had three or four weeks longer to go there would be no doubt about reaching the goal set in the beginning of the campaign.

On account of the fact that the Herald will not be published next week our final report will appear in the issue two weeks from date. My report, however, will be read at the Leadership Training School, and any agent sending in the required number of registrations to bring their total up to the free entertainment number will be wired to that effect as soon as the registrations are received.

All right, agents, let's make this concluding week the banner week of the entire campaign. Don't stop where you are; let the final report show a growth in your list. If you have not sent in any registrations yet, do so this last week. We are depending on you. We know you will not fail us.

THE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

It has never been my privilege to attend a Leadership Training School so elaborate as the one that is to be conducted at High Point College beginning July 13. But it was my privilege to attend two of the schools conducted in different churches during this year. From a pastor's viewpoint these schools have been very helpful to me. Among those of my people who attended these schools I have been able to observe results that are to be greatly appreciated. The school so soon to be conducted at the college is being worked out at no little expense and work by President Paschall and his co-workers. Our people should do everything possible to encourage this work. We should send our young people to this school that they may become trained leaders in our churches. And it would be good for many of our older people to attend this school. If many of our older people would attend some such schools they would be so much better qualified to understand the needs of our young people and they would be so much better qualified to be leaders in our churches. I trust that a greater number than ever before will attend the Training School this year.

As one who loves the cause of the young people, I am

Fraternally,
GEO. L. CURRY.

SOME REFLECTIONS ON THE 1928 CHURCH STATISTICS

(By Herman C. Weber)

If the net increase of church members in the past year or so was 1,114,000, as Dr. Carroll computes it, the number of those received into fellowship by baptism, on confirmation or on confession was a great deal larger. The figure reported is the result after the deduction of losses by death, erasure, removal, suspension and the like. The percentage of members removed annually from the rolls of the churches is rather large and constant.

One error has crept into the schedules in connection with the report of the Churches of Christ. The increase for this body is reported as 115,777. This happens to be the increase reported by the Census Bureau for the decade 1916 to 1926, and is obviously too high for one year.

The situation as to the great abundance of sects or denominations is not quite as bad as it is sometimes painted. It is bad enough, but when it is remembered that all local churches with congregational government, such as Disciples or Baptist or Congregational churches, have about as much right to be enrolled as separate bodies in the census as some that are actually reported and that swell the number of ecclesiastical bodies to 213 for the census of 1926, it will be seen that the large number of sects and denominations so-called can to some extent be discounted. In fact, only 4.4 per cent of church members are enrolled in the more than 175 "denominations" which are reported in addition to the major bodies which enroll at least 150,000.

The following is a schedule of the percentages of net increase registered by each of the bodies having at least 150,000 members in Dr. Carroll's lists. The year of reporting varies a great deal. Some of the reports are for the calendar year 1928, others are dated as of March 31, May 31, September 30, or other dates during the year 1928. They include, therefore, a substantial proportion of the year 1927.

The population increase is estimated at 1.5 per cent. Decreases were reported by the Evangelical Church and the Evangelical Synod of North America. Incomplete reports made it impossible to compute the increases or decreases for the Churches of Christ, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, the Greek Orthodox Church and the Russian Orthodox Church.—Federal Council Bulletin.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SCHOOL OF METHODS JULY 18 FOR WOMEN'S MISSIONARY WORKERS

Held in Connection With Pastors' Conference and Y. P. Meeting

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president of the North Carolina Branch, Missionary Work, and Mrs. C. W. Bates, district chairman, are announcing a School of Methods July 18. Each of the executive officers and departmental secretaries of the new women's organization will give a condensed way to perform the duties connected with her work. An open forum or round table will enable each of those present to acquaint themselves with any points not clear in their minds. The School of Methods is inaugurated especially for the district chairmen and leaders in the districts who are willing to assist in organizing an Auxiliary in each church. It is a splendid opportunity for the women of North Carolina to come together and learn how to carry out the new program of the church.

NOTICE

All who come to the School of Methods of Women's Missionary Work are requested to meet in the College chapel at 10 a. m. Thursday, July 18th. We will all need the inspiration which will be given us at the 10:40 worship service conducted by Dr. T. M. Johnson.

The picnic dinner will be spread under the trees at our Children's Home.

The afternoon session will probably be held in the Children's Home chapel.

Let us accept the challenge, "A Woman's Auxiliary in Every Church in North Carolina This Year."

If you have nothing to give to this meeting, come to get something from it.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS,

First Vice-Pres. Woman's Missionary Work,
N. C. Branch.

High Point, July 6.

—Friends of Dr. and Mrs. Lyman E. Davis recently held a meeting in Pittsburgh in prospect of losing these two to Baltimore whither Dr. Davis will soon go as the editor of the merged paper, The Methodist Protestant Recorder. There were speeches of appreciation by the President of the General Conference, the President of the Pittsburgh Conference, and several others, all tending to make one glad that he has lived and labored among such appreciative friends.

The fact that we have no issue of the Herald next week need not keep church treasurers from flooding us with money. If we are to meet our obligations we must have more money. For some reason we have forgotten the College and the Gratitude Gift fund. It will take $2,000 to pay our notes account the Gratitude Gift. Why not get busy and meet this obligation? It must be met; why not meet it now and forget it?

The treasurer will be at High Point attending the summer conference all of next week. If receipts are not sent out promptly, you will know why.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Albemarle.—In 1909 a little band of 16 people banded themselves together for the purpose of uniting in worship under the same standard and thus the First Methodist Protestant Church was founded in Albemarle with Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk as pastor of the small band.

Needing a place for worship, the little congregation set to work to build a church, and a small wooden structure on Broom street resulted. This place served the members until 1926, when Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Atlanta, Ga., came to the church as pastor.

When Rev. Mr. Anderson came to the city as shepherd of the flock he suggested a change in location. The congregation by this time had grown to about 90 and they considered the proposed change with due deliberation.

However, during the interim of discussions on the proposed change, disaster swept down on the little band, for fire totally destroyed the wooden structure and it was highly imperative that a new place be built and a change would be very little trouble.

Only a small amount of insurance was being carried at the time of the fire and with this as a nucleus the members started the campaign to raise funds which resulted in the building of the magnificent edifice they now occupy. It was after some time had elapsed that the congregation was able to raise the necessary money for the new church and work was started immediately after the funds had been pledged.

The new building is about 60 by 108 feet, with a basement under the entire building. One part is used as the assembly room for the Sunday school, another part is equipped for a kitchen and another part is used for social gatherings.

Thus, from a small beginning, this beautiful structure has resulted and plans are now on for further expansion. In honor of this memorable achievement the church had cornerstone laying and homecoming day Sunday, June 23. A full day was planned and the service was impressive as fitting the occasion.

The new building is located on the Charlotte road, which is an extension of Main street. Great opportunities and possibilities lie ahead for the Methodist Protestants of Albemarle and the surrounding community. Optimism prevails and the work goes forward.

Halifax Charge.—The 3rd quarterly conference of Halifax Charge will meet at Hollister on Friday before second Sunday in July (or Friday, July 12th, 1929).

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Winston-Salem.—Methodist Protestant Herald family, greetings in Jesus' name.

We haven't reported in some time, I will give a little report of our work. We are not getting along as well as we would like to.

Much room for improvement. However last Sunday being June 30th we had our Children's Day service at two of our churches, namely, Union Ridge and South Winston M. P. church had a good crowd at each place.

The children rendered a fine program. It was interesting and inspiring.

We had 151 present at Sunday school at Union Ridge, and 70 or 75 at South Winston church.

Union Grove is coming on nicely.

We are behind in our budget. Perhaps because work has been so slack, this spring and summer. But we hope to come out by conference.

We have had two of our revivals and as a result of these meetings there were 13 professions, nine united with the church.

Bro. Surratt did the preaching at our South Winston church. We all enjoyed it very much. Bro. Stubbins did the preaching at Union Ridge, we enjoyed his messages very much.

We solicit the prayers and co-operation of all the Herald family for our work. That it may grow and become strong in Jesus, and be a life saving station to those who are drifting down the stream of time without God and hope in the world.

And especially do we want your prayers for our Southside church. We are very anxious to get funds enough together to build our church. Mrs. Reynolds built two S. S. rooms to the one we are worshipping in at present, yet we would rather have one all to be M. P. church property. God surely has the money somewhere, pray with us and for us.

We had our annual picnic July 4th. Yours in the Master's service.

P. L. KINNAMAN.

Palestine, Flat Rock.—Our pastor held memorial services third Sunday in May, also had Communion service in the quarter. The attendance at church has been very good.

Our Sunday school has improved during the quarter, eighty the past Sunday. The children seem to take more interest. Children's night was given fifth Sunday night; the children did their parts just fine considering the time they had on preparing their program.

The Christian Endeavor Society, though small in number, is trying to go on. It seems hard to get people to take any part in it.

Above is the beautiful new First Methodist Protestant Church building of Albemarle, N. C. It is one the best and most modern in the North Carolina Conference. The building is located on the West Main extension of the Charlotte highway. The church was made up of 16 people in 1909 and recently completed this building when fire which destroyed the old wooden building made necessary a proposed change of location.

On the fifth Sunday night the Sunday school and Endeavor Society gave a double program. The Christian Endeavor Society will meet during this quarter on the second and fourth Sunday nights instead of the first and third, as last quarter.

There have been improvements to our church by the adding of cement steps to both doors, which add greatly to the appearance. Several of the Sunday school children have whooping cough.

Mrs. Jasper Sharon, who underwent an operation in Leaksville hospital, is able to attend church again.

Mrs. D. A. Walker had to undergo a serious operation in Long's Hospital in Greensboro. She is now at the home of her sister, Mrs. Archie Lemons, at Stokesdale, N. C.

GRACE TUCKER, Reporter.

Lincolnton.—Here it is vacation time. The Intermediates are busy, planning for a good vacation. You can imagine they are going to have something peppy planned out to do. Last Sunday we had a very interesting lesson—which was about prophet and kings of Judah's decline.

Officers for the next three months were elected, and by the majority. The following were elected for July, August and September:

Assistant teacher, Carrine Garrison; president, Willie Mae Leatherman; assistant president, Clara Mae Heavner; secretary, Jessie Garrison; assistant secretary, Bonnie Hope; social committee, Helen Houser, Mayna Moore, Ruth Johnson, Rachel Robinson, Christine Harmon.

The social committee has chosen for a social to be held at Carrine and Jessie Garrison's house. This is to be an important event of the week.

The Girl's Intermediate Sunday school consist of the following: Nellie Carter, Veda Betty Carter, Jessie Garrison, Bonnie Hope, Clara Mae Heavner, Minnie Ruth Johnson, Mayna Mayzelle Moore, Helen Leonora Houser, Carrine Edith Garrison, Edner Georgia Reinhardt, Rachel Ada Robinson, Christine Harmon, Kathleen Seronce, Willie Mae Leatherman, teacher, Miss Helen Eury.

We had a very attractive visitor; she was Miss Fannie Prue Gilbert, who we hope will visit us again.

West Forsyth.—The appointments for last Sunday were with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. At Baltimore the Ferbush Township Sunday School Convention was held with sessions both morning and afternoon. This writer was on the program to deliver the convention sermon, which was given at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. W. Doub, superintendent of the Baltimore Sunday school, conducted the devotional service at the morning session. An address of welcome was made by John Nicholson, member of Baltimore church. The response was made by Miss Della Hobson, of Ferbush Baptist Sunday school. Dinner was enjoyed, which was spread on the church grounds. In the afternoon the program consisted of exercises by the Ferbush Baptist Sunday school and an address on Sunday school work by Rev. Wade Adams, minister of the Friends church. D. R. Groce, president of the township association, presided during the two sessions of the convention, and J. B. Phillips, member of Baltimore church, was secretary of the convention.

The service at Stony Knoll at three o'clock in the afternoon was attended by the usual size congregation. At this church we took the vote for delegate to the next Annual Conference. The revival meeting will begin at this church the first Sunday in August, with Rev. J. D. Cranford, of Kernersville, as pulpit help.

Pleasant Hill church gave a lawn party at the church last Saturday night for the benefit of a fund with which the church expects to build Sunday school rooms. We have been informed that the net proceeds of the occasion amounted to a little over $100.

We will begin the annual revival meeting at Union Hill church next Sunday morning. The Lord's supper will be administered at the morning service, and also the vote for delegate will be taken. Rev. D. I. Garner, of Julian and Burlington, pastor of Randolph charge, is expected to arrive on Monday and assist the pastor in the services.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Orange Charge.—The third Quarterly Conference is called to meet with the Hebron church Saturday July 27th, 2:00 p. m. Hope to have a full attendance of the official members.

The revival meeting began at Efland 5th Sunday in June. Rev. J. A. Burgess did all the preaching until the close Friday night, June 12th. This was a splendid series of sermons, earnestly delivered and favorably received. We believe they will live in the hearts of this people, and bring forth fruit in days to come. Seven were converted during the meeting. Two new members were received into the church Sunday night, July 14th—Mrs. Della Murray, from the Baptist Church, and Bro. Lowe Thompson on confession of faith. Bro. Thompson is 60 years old. Certain members of the Efland church say they have been praying for his conversion for 20 years. At last these prayers are answered. May God be praised. We are glad to welcome Sister Murray and Bro. Thompson into the church. Bro. Thompson did a risky thing by putting off his salvation until he was 60 years old; but we are praying that his remaining days in this world may be days of rejoicing in a Savior's love.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance at Sunday school today was 277 and the offering amounted to $16.72.

Communion service was observed at the 11 o'clock hour today. Preceding this ordinance the pastor, Bro. Gerringer, gave an appropriate sermon.

The daily vacation Bible school, which has been in progress for two weeks, came to a close Friday and the school gave its commencement service at the 8 o'clock hour this evening. The program was interesting throughout and a number of the parables of the Bible were dramatized, making a deep impression on the audience, we believe. The enrollment of the school was 105 and graduation certificates were given to 76 of the scholars who passed off the work, making a certain high grade and not missing more than two days of the session. The success of the school is due to the efficiency of the faculty, of course, and we cannot mention here the names of all who assisted but we wish to express here for the church the appreciation of the valuable services of Miss Paschall, our special worker; Rev. J. F. Minnis, of Graham, and Bro. Wayne Curtis, of Belmont.

Our faithful Baraca teacher, Bro. C. C. Lindley, could not be at his post in the class today because of being ill, and Mr. George Smith taught, in his usual good way, instead. We hope Mr. Lindley will be with us next Sunday.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Moriah.—We had good attendance yesterday at all services. Our pastor is back and seems to be regaining his strength very fast.

The young men's class won the auto race for the past quarter. They will be entertained by the adult Bible class some time next week.

Mary Kirkman, Elvira Scott, Edwin Sharpe and Parks Wood will leave Saturday to attend the Leadership Training School at High Point College.

A lawn party will be given next Saturday night, July 13, on the church lawn, by the Woman's Missionary Society. We hope all our members, friends and neighbors will bear this in mind and be there.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Charlotte Church, Richland Circuit.—Our pastor, Bro. T. E. Pierce, filled his appointment July 7th at 11 o'clock.

He preached a good sermon and all seemed to enjoy his sermon very much.

Our Sunday school is showing more interest and we are having better attendance the last few Sundays. On the first Sunday our offerings are sent to the Children's Home.

Our church is planning a home-coming and children's day next Sunday, July 14th. Some of the children from the Children's Home are expected to give a program in the afternoon. Everybody is invited to attend. There will be dinner on the grounds.

On the third Sunday in July our township Sunday school convention will be held at our church. It will also be an all-day service.

Our special meeting will be the first Sunday in September, as usual.

Our third quarterly conference will be at New Union church on Saturday before the first Sunday in August at 2 o'clock.

REPORTER.

Winston.—A great time we had July 4th on our Sunday school picnic. We went to Holton's Pool, a beautiful place, good for swimming and other outdoor recreations.

Our vacation Bible school was a success, we think. There were many who won certificates; these were awarded Sunday morning.

Regular services were held Sunday. Due to vacation time our attendance is off just a little but we had a very good number. On Sunday night Rev. Kinnaman of Southside church filled the pulpit and our pastor in the other pulpit. We liked his sermon very much.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its monthly business and social meeting last Tuesday night at the home of the president, Miss Pearl Sapp. Many things of importance were discussed and settled. They are considering inviting one of the Moravian Endeavor societies to visit them, but the date is still undecided.

The Woman's Auxiliary is working hard. Circle No. 2 is going to give a luncheon at the Huntley-Hill-Stockton team room Friday, July 12. A successful day is hoped for.

The Standard Leadership Training School is here. We hope several of our young people, as well as old old, may attend.

Next Sunday is Children's Day. The program committee has been very busy trying to prepare a good program for this day. We want every one that can possibly do so to come and bring their friends.

Our pastor stated Sunday that he anticipated having an Old People's Day the last Sunday in July, but not to put special emphasis on the "old." However, every one is to be invited.

We wish to all a very happy vacation.

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

Henderson.—Our Daily Vacation Bible School came to a close last Friday, with commencement exercises at 8 o'clock. The school was the second of its kind ever held in this church and was considered a success by those who had it in charge. The enrollment reached a total of 75 and the average attendance was about 60.

All the teachers were members of the local church with one exception, Miss Mary Young, dean of women at High Point College, who is a former member and who still considers Henderson her home. The names of the faculty follow: Principal, Miss Elizabeth Fox; Junior Department, Miss Mary Young; Primary Department, Mrs. L. R. Gooch; Beginners' Department, Misses Eleanor Young, Ilene Bowling and Myra Hight; Pianist, Mrs. Horace Faulkner; Director of Girls' Hand Work, Mrs. Emily Reavis; Director of Boys' Play, Henry Fox.

We hope to have a picture of this group of fine girls and boys in the Herald some time soon. We are proud of them and expect great things from them in the years to come.

The teachers who made the school possible have the thanks of the entire church and many expressions of appreciation for their splendid work were voiced at the commencement exercise.

R. A. HUNTER.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—We had our Children's night service the second night in June. The children did their parts well. Certainly we felt proud of them. Everybody seemed to enjoy the exercises very much, and much credit is due Mrs. Gazzie Stancy for helping in preparing these exercises so well.

On last Sunday morning Rev. C. E. Ridge brought us, as usual, a very impressive sermon. His subject was "Ingratitude." Bro. Ridge taught us to see ourselves just as we are, and lots of us felt unworthy of our many blessings; for which we realized that we hadn't given thanks to our Heavenly Father. Brother Ridge is a wonderful preacher. We couldn't possibly have a better one. And I believe that the spirit of his sermons will live on through the ages; even after we have passed on to eternity.

Our Sunday school is still moving along splendidly. Mr. P. S. Gettys, our much beloved superintendent, is always with us. Mr. Gettys is also an excellent Sunday school teacher, and has a fine class of young girls.

He is giving each member of his class the opportunity of opening Sunday school. Although we feel unworthy to do this, we are glad to help in this great work. Sunday school was opened last Sunday by Miss Linder Pendleton and will be opened next Sunday morning by Miss Blanche Mode.

LOULA PENDLETON, Reporter.

Union Grove, Orange.—Our revival meeting begins the first Sunday in August with Mr. Millaway as pulpit help.

We hope that every member of this church will attend these services, and all others who can come. There will be two services, one at 11 o'clock and one in the afternoon. Dinner will be served on the grounds.

The Missionary society of this church held a very interesting meeting Saturday afternoon with Mrs. John Ray.

After the meeting Mrs. Ray served ice cream and cake. Those attending the meeting were Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, Miss Eleanor Craig, Mrs. Herbert Blackwood, Misses Janie, Nannie and Mary Blackwood, Mrs. L. C. Davis, and Mrs. John Ray.

Rev. Mr. Carroll will change pulpits with our pastor the third Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

MRS. L. C. DAVIS, Reporter.

High Point.—At the Sunday morning service Rev. R. I. Farmer chose for the subject of his message "The Quest of Heart's Desire," from the text in Job 6:8, "Oh, that I might have my request: and that God would grant me the thing that I long for!" He said that not only children, but adults as well, seek the pot of gold at the rainbow's end. Through the history of the world men have sailed the trackless deep, climbed high mountains, explored the forest primeval, traveled through deserts, endured cold, hunger, and every labor and sacrifice in quest of their heart's desire, as witnessed by the children of Israel, the Aryans, and the Pilgrims and pioneers who came to the wilderness of America in search of new homes, better fortune, and religious liberty. The inmost longing of every soul is the pursuit of happiness. It is the lot of some of us to fail, but it is better to make an effort to rise above the commonplace.

"Tis thus our fairest castles in Spain

We never can perfect call;

And the hopes we cherish in joy or pain

Must sooner or later fall."

Where one is called to be a star, there are ten thousands of us called to be merely courteous, polite, patient and nobody notices it. Life's greatest pleasure is to love and be loved, but we must live worthily.

"Though Life's dearest joy I miss,

There lies a nameless joy in this,

I will be worthy of it!"

An old German lady said, "My heart is a garland, and Jesus is planting the flowers there."

I want us to know that our lives must bear faithfulness, and Heaven must be earned. We do not receive it as a gift.

According to the annual custom of exchanging pulpits on the Sunday evenings during the month of July the pulpit was occupied by Rev. H. C. Byrum, pastor of Calvary M. E. church, South, of this city.

The Woman's Auxiliary enjoyed a delightful picnic supper and general meeting Monday evening at 6 o'clock on High Point College campus. The tables were spread near the east entrance to the girls' dormitory and near the Jamestown College marker. A tempting menu of delicious viands was served to a large number of the members, ministers, and singers. Refreshing iced lemonade served by Mrs. C. L. Gray was especially enjoyed. After all present had done full justice to the 'eats,' the president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, called the meeting to order at the main entrance to Woman's Hall, and devotionals were conducted by Dr. A. G. Dixon, who read a chapter, led in prayer, and gave a beautiful talk on "Be still, and know that I am God." He deplored the fact that we today live in a hustle and bustle, and take little time to talk and commune with Jesus. In the cool and quiet twilight hour of this fierce and restless summer day, when

"Softly now the light of day

Fades upon my sight away;

Free from care, from labor free,

Lord, I would commune with thee," it was delightful to spend these few moments in worship and communion with our Heavenly Father. The Circle chairmen gave good reports. According to the treasurer's report, the Auxiliary has raised during the past quarter the sum of $964.00. Dr. R. M. Andrews dismissed the meeting with prayer.

A Christian Endeavor Rally of the High Point Union was held in the church Monday evening, one of the features being a "model meeting," given by our society.

Mrs. M. E. Blair and daughter, Miss Florence Blair, are spending the summer with Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, the latter being Mrs. Blair's daughter.

In honor of two recent brides, Mrs. H. A. Helms, of Greensboro, who was Miss Zelian Hunter, and Mrs. Richard H. Shaw, of High Point, nee Miss Flossie Stout, a reception will be given at Odell club house Tuesday afternoon by Mesdames F. R. Stout and H. N. Varner, of Greensboro.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock an interesting feature of the service was the baptism and dedication to the Lord of Lawrence Leonard, Jr., the bright and attractive young son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Leonard. We were also delighted to receive into our membership the following new members: Mr. Theodore R. Ballard, who transfers from our Charlotte church; Mrs. Richard H. Shaw, from the Asheville church; Miss Lucille Lewis, Mr. Ferree and his sister, Miss Bertha Ferree.

We are pleased to know that Mrs. John H. Walker is recovering satisfactorily from her recent operation for appendicitis; also, Miss Ruth Welch and little Miss Mary Elizabeth Farmer have undergone operations for the removal of their tonsils, and are doing nicely.

Misses Helen Hayes and Alice Faulkner, of Henderson, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hayes for a few days, returned Sunday to their homes. They were en route home from a trip of several weeks to friends and relatives in Hagerstown, Md., and Hanover, Penn.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny left Sunday night for a trip to points in Ohio.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Pastor Trolinger was with us the fourth Sunday and gave us a splendid sermon. It seems that he gets better each time, and the people are liking him fine. The Lord's Supper was administered at this service, which was very impressive.

The Sunday school and other church work is moving along nicely. Our congregations seem to be increasing each Sunday. We are glad to welcome any who will come and join us.

The revival at this place will start July 22 and continue through the fourth Sunday, there being three services on that day. All who can attend are invited to be with us. If you can't come, don't forget to pray for us; first, that we as a church may be revived; and that the unconverted may be saved.

Elbert D. Apple, who has finished his course in medicine at Washington University, spent two weeks with his parents. He has returned to St. Louis to enter hospital work.

Rev. J. C. Williams and family have returned to their home at Bailey after visiting relatives and friends in this community.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

July 9th, 1929.

Cid, Denton Charge.—The third quarterly conference will convene at Piney Grove on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July at about 2:30 o'clock.

Our special meeting will begin at Cid at 2:30 on the fourth Sunday in July. Pray for us, brethren, that we may have a glorious revival. It is greatly needed.

Rev. E. A. Bingham delivered a wonderful message at Cid yesterday. It was one of the best sermons I ever heard him deliver.

Our Sunday school is getting on very well. We were glad to hear of such a good revival at the special meeting at Denton. May the good work continue.

We were glad to have a call from President Taylor while he was on our charge a few weeks ago; also Rev. Robert Short, of Roberta, didn't fail to stop to see us while passing through recently.

We enjoy so much the reports in the Herald, especially of those we know personally.

Mrs. Margaret Ward, mother of Mr. Lee Ward, is critically ill. She is nearly 89 years old.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—We had the closing exercises of the Daily Vacation Bible School Sunday night. The children gave a demonstration of some of the things which the school has sought to do. At the conclusion of our program in the church those in attendance were invited to go to the hut and see the exhibit of the things which the children had made. Of the many things which attracted most attention the 16 gowns which the girls of the Junior Department had made for the Children's Home in High Point created much interest.

We feel that our school was a splendid success, and that the credit for such a school goes to Miss Bettie Brittingham, who superintended the school. From the time of her arrival she got behind the plans for the school and did not relax until the job was completed. Any church would do well to secure the services of Miss Brittingham if an adventure is contemplated in this field of church endeavor.

Our faculty came from our own constituency here. Miss Susie Whitaker had charge of the Beginners' department, with Miss Susan Whitaker as assistant. Miss Brittingham took charge of the Primary Department, with Miss Annie Lillian Bellamy, Pattie Ruth Neal, and Mavis Smith as assistants. The writer had charge of the Junior Department with Misses Ruby McGowan, Gladys White, and Mrs. Emmet Marshall as assistants. Many others, of course, helped up in many ways whose names we cannot give here. Had it not been for the hearty support of our good people here it would not have been possible for us to have such a good school. Mrs. Marshall had charge of the making of the gowns, the quality of which speaks for itself.

The total enrollment of the school was 60, with a daily attendance of 46. The school was largely made up of the children of our church. A few came from other churches. The total expense of the school will not exceed $10. We were fortunate in having service given. In the case of Miss Brittingham, she was sent to us without any expense other than caring for her during her stay.

On Friday night of last week the Vacation School had a lawn fete on the M. P. parsonage lawn. The little folks entered heartily into the plans and we "put it across in big fashion." We had a large crowd, a good time, and sold $28 worth of ice cream, cake and lemonade. The proceeds of the fete, which amounted to $12, will be sent to the Children's Home and the Pine Ridge school. An offering was taken Sunday night for the work of our young people which amounted to $12.11.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Davidson.—We have had fine Children's Day programs at Lineberry and Alleghany churches. Mrs. Cottie Short and Miss Kate Frank made possible the splendid program at Lineberry; Mrs. N. L. Fine at Alleghany. A program is being arranged by Miss Flada Smith for Chapel Hill the third Sunday in July. The time, 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock Rev. T. F. McCulloch will preach for us.

Rev. Robert Short, a former pastor, will preach for us the second Sunday in July, as follows: Alleghany, 77 a. m.; Pine Hill, 2:30 p. m.; Lineberry, 4 p. m.

Our revival meeting will begin at Pine Hill the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. H. L. Powell from First Church, Thomasville, will be the held.

W. D. REED.

—Calvin Dudley Smith, of Tabernacle, died last Saturday at the advanced age of 88 years and over four months. Rev. H. L. Isley, his pastor, was at Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit, preaching in a protracted meeting, but was brought down for the funeral by Brother Braxton on Monday morning. The funeral service was largely attended. T. F. and J. F. McCulloch took part in the service. All bore testimony to the goodness of character of the departed brother. His monument had already been erected with appropriate inscription, lacking only the date of his death. He had ten sons and daughters, two of whom are well known in Greensboro, Mrs. Jesse Stephens, and Mr. Will Smith.

—Rev. J. P. Pegg announces an evangelistic meeting to begin with forenoon and afternoon services at Bethel next Sunday.

DIXON-WILLIAMS-SMOTHERS REUNION

On July 4th approximately 300 members of the above named families met at old Flat Rock M. P. church, in Rockingham County, for their annual reunion. At 11 a. m. they assembled in the church. The meeting was presided over by Dr. A. G. Dixon, of High Point, who is president of the organization. Rev. Roy L. Farmer, pastor of First Methodist Protestant Church of High Point, delivered the principal address. Short speeches were made by several members of the reunion and visitors. A musical selection was rendered by R. W. Crowder and two daughters, Misses Juanita and Margaret, and Miss Norfleet Dixon, of Greensboro. Miss Jay Williams, of Baily, N. C., gave a reading which was greatly enjoyed by those present. The election of officers resulted in the re-election of Dr. A. G. Dixon as president and A. C. Dixon, of Greensboro, as vice-president. The company then went into the grove near the church where a long table was laden with good things to eat. Since Flat Rock church was organized about 100 years ago by Rev. Alson Gray, it has played a very important part in establishing the Methodist Protestant church in this state. This church has sent out some of the most able preachers in our church. Rev. T. J. Ogburn, who was such a power in our church, was reared near this church. He got his early training here, partly in a prayer meeting conducted by a colored man known as "Uncle Lige" Ogburn. Rev. J. S. Williams was reared in this community. Many others whom I could mention went out from this church and became pillars in the church in the communities in which they located.

The Dixon-Williams-Smother's reunion will be held on July 4th, 1930, at Midway Methodist Protestant church in Rockingham county.

NOTICE

All churches on Northside Circuit are requested to bring to some convenient point near your church, fruits, fowls, and all usable articles for our Children's Home, July 24th, and they will be taken up July 25th. The Home needs them.

W. D. REED.

—Report comes of the death of our aged brother, Rev. W. P. Martin. He had long been in declining health. Years ago he served a number of our charges.

—California has just had another shaking up by an earthquake. Not much damage reported in property. A few persons were killed by the falling of machinery.

—Riley Leonard, aged 88, was buried from Shiloh church near Lexington last Sunday afternoon. He was a Confederate veteran as was C. D. Smith, buried on Monday from Tabernacle church.

—West Randolph county had a continuous rain for four hours last Saturday. Much damage was done to crops, fields of wheat being swept away.

—John D. Rockefeller has just celebrated his 90th birthday. His face indicates that his great wealth has not saved him from the ravages of time. He will soon go the way of all the earth, and the great question for him will be, not how much wealth he has amassed, but what kind of a character he has formed.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Hinshaw

"Life! we've been long together
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;

"Tis hard to part when friends are dear:
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time,
Say not Good-night—but in some brighter clime
Bid me Good-morning!"

Thus in the morning hours of Tuesday, June 25th, the sweet and gentle spirit of our friend, Mrs. Clifford R. Hinshaw, stole away, with little warning to loved ones, to open her eyes in that fair land, which must be a "brighter clime," since she has left her happy home, devoted husband, and two lovely children. We stand shocked and appalled by this unexpected blow. We are grief-stricken, and can but look up through our tears to wonder why this happy young wife and mother, so full of eager, buoyant strength and life and beauty, should be taken away from us, and why "her sun has gone down while it was yet day;" but we feel sure that the Master had need of this lovely flower to bloom in His garden of light.

Born 35 years ago in the town of Gatesville, N. C., Miss Lucile Walton grew up to beautiful girlhood as the youngest of a family of seven sons and daughters of the late Mr. J. T. Walton and Mrs. Penelope Walton, and was always the brightest and merriest of that happy band. She was educated in the local schools, an institute at Franklin, Va., and attended several summer schools at our State University. She also studied voice at Chapel Hill and for one year in New York. In young womanhood she was wooed and won by Prof. Clifford R. Hinshaw, to whom she was most happily married on June 29, 1918. Two years ago her husband accepted a position on the faculty of High Point College as head of the Department of Education, and with their son, Reginald, aged nine years, and little daughter, Garnett, who is five, the family moved here and made their home on West College Drive. Of genial and gracious personality, handsome and commanding presence, she drew many friends to her. Possessing a lovely voice, of which she was very generous, she gave much pleasure to the different churches and clubs of our city by her charming songs. She removed her membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church to the First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, with her husband, and at once became an interested member of the Woman's Auxiliary, and joined heartily in all its programs of work and worship.

An infant son, born a few days before her death in Guilford General Hospital, lived less than 24 hours, and was buried in Oakwood Memorial Park cemetery.

Impressive funeral services were conducted at the home on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by her pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, associate pastor of First Methodist Protestant Church, and President R. M. Andrews of the College.

An unusually handsome and profuse offering of flowers bore silent testimony of loving and sympathetic hearts, who mourn for her in unison with the desolate husband and motherless children, who are too young to realize their great loss. May the God of all comfort bind up their broken hearts, bringing to them the realization that "All things work together for good to them that love God."

Quakenbush

On Sunday morning, June 30th at about the time Brother John F. Quakenbush had been accustomed to start to the church services he passed to his eternal reward. He had been confined to his bed for about three weeks, though he had been in failing health for several months.

He was perhaps the oldest member of the First Methodist Protestant church of Burlington, being 84 years of age. He joined First Church by certificate in 1907 during the pastorate of Rev. Wm. Pirter. His church had first place in his thought and heart. He was faithful to the last. For several months he accompanied his daughter, Miss Agnes, to Sunday school and church services when it was evident that he was scarcely able to be present. Just three weeks before his death he was in his accustomed place at the house of God. His presence at the services of divine worship was a gentle but constant rebuke to those who allow trivial matters to keep them from God's house.

The funeral service was conducted in the church at four o'clock July 1st. The pastor was assisted in the service by Drs. S. W. Taylor and J. D. Williams, both of whom had been his pastor and whom he loved. The beautiful floral offerings and the large audience of relatives and friends indicated the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. Truly, as Brother Taylor emphasized in his remarks, he was a good man. And as Brother Williams said, he attended the services of the church because he thought he needed the church and because of what he got out of the services.

Five daughters and a son besides a number of other relatives and a great host of friends mourn the loss caused by his going. But while our hearts are sad because of his passing we are cheered when we think of the testimony that he left behind. During the several months when his health was failing he often talked of his loved ones who had gone on before, and of how he would soon join them in heaven; and just a few days before his death his loved ones heard him attempting to sing, "When I can read my title clear to mansions in the sky, I'll bid farewell to every fear, and wipe my weeping eyes."

Of him it can be truly said:

"Servant of God, well done!

Thy glorious welfare's past;

The battle's fought, the race is won,

And thou art crowned at last."

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

—Rev. J. C. Russell was called to Rock Creek church to conduct the funeral of a victim of ptomaine poisoning, the two-year-old child of A. F. Gregerson.

MARRIED

Alexander-Spoon

Miss Miriam Spoon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Spoon, of Burlington, and Norman Alexander, also of this city, were united in marriage Tuesday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. G. F. Millaway, pastor of Mount Pleasant Methodist Protestant church, heard the vows which were taken in the presence of members of the two families.

The bride's sole attendant was her sister, Miss Annie Lee Spoon. An altar was improvised of green and white in the living room for the nuptials.

After the vows were taken Mr. and Mrs. Alexander left by motor for a trip north through the valley of Virginia. After July 1 they will be at home in Burlington. The bride is a graduate of Salem college, Winston-Salem. The bridegroom, who was graduated from North Carolina State college, Raleigh, is a prominent young former of this section.

Spencer-Younginer

A very pretty wedding took place in the Asheville Methodist Protestant Church, June 26th, 1929. On that date Miss Eudora Younginer, a very prominent member of the church here, became the bride of Mr. James Spencer of High Point. Miss Younginer is a graduate of N. C. C. W. and has been for the last two years a very successful teacher in the High Point High School. Mr. Spencer is connected with the Van Lindley Florist Company of Greensboro.

We wish for this splendid young couple many, many years of happy married life.

Fred W. Paschall

Rogers-King

A marriage that was perhaps quite a surprise to the friends of the contracting parties took place Sunday morning, June 16th, at the parsonage of the First M. P. Church of Burlington when Mr. James Porter Rogers of Burlington and Miss Nellie Bly King of Jacksonville, Fla., were pronounced husband and wife in the presence of a few relatives and friends. The pastor of the church, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, officiated.

Mr. Rogers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Rogers, leading members of First Church. For the past year he has been principal of the Haw River school. Mrs. Rogers is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis A. King of Jacksonville, Fla. These young people venture upon the sea of matrimony with the prayers and good wishes of a large number of relatives and friends.

Gerringer-Williams

Saturday afternoon June 29th, at five o'clock in the presence of a few friends at the parsonage of First M. P. Church, Burlington, Mr. Boyd M. Gerringer and Miss Beatrice Williams, both of Gibsonville, were united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

This happy young couple have the hearty good wishes of their friends for continued happiness.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. Cleta Shipley, Sykesville, Md., two bureau spreads, 12 towels and nine wash-cloths.

We thank all of you for your gifts. However, this is a mighty drop-down for the first week in the month. We cannot tell how things will shape up here financially at the present rate of income.

Mrs. Dixon Broken Down

Mrs. Dixon is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. Through the kindness of Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who is giving us the use of her cottage, I am taking her to Jackson Springs for ten days or two weeks. We are trusting that through a few days of rest she will spring back.

Pray for us. And be patient if there are matters you think should be attended to during the next few days.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

INFINITE MIND

There is only one Mind,
Since God is all-in-all;
Ours but to reflect,
Obedient to His call.

There is only one Mind
To guide us on our way;
In Him we live and move,
We cannot go astray.

There is only one Mind,
The Wisdom from above,
One Life, Truth, Power,
There is only one Love.
—Grenville Kleiser

A BIG UNDERTAKING

They killed the Czar,
Usurped his power,
And built themselves
A mighty tower.

They sallied forth,
Like knights of old,
To conquer all
By force or gold.

The simple folk
Soon bowed their necks
And fast were bound
In dread complex.

The wiser folk
Throughout the land
Are filled with doubt—
Can't understand.

The thought of God
Is in their minds—
A thought so plain
That who seeks finds.

This thought forbids
Their bowing down
To do the will
Of Russian clown.

"We'll not be beat
By airy thought:
We'll take the steps
To make it nought.

"There is no thought
Without the thing:
We'll bury God,
Then thought won't spring."
—J. F. M.

CELEBRATING THE FOURTH

Some go to country, some to town,
There is no telling whither bound;
Some stay near home and gad about,
Sometimes indoors, sometimes out.
What's in their minds is hard to see,
They spend the day so silently.
What do they try to celebrate?
There's nothing said about the date.

And then we see another crowd.
In boisterous mood with voices loud,
Who fill the air with silly stuff
Till men cry out, "Enough! Enough!"
They glory not in country's name,
But glory in their sin and shame.
They make the Fourth a dreaded day,
And many wish them gone to stay.

Of some we tell a different story:
They have in view their nation's glory;
They know the price our fathers paid
When on the altar their lives they laid.
To them this Independence Day
Has deeper meaning than words can say.
They come together in one great throng,
They celebrate with speech and song.
—J. F. M.

—An expert air pilot last week took two friends up for their pleasure, their first ride in the air. Unfortunately he had taken strong drink and he brought them and himself down to sudden death. "Where there's drink there's danger."

—We received on Monday from Judge Michael Schenck, of Hendersonville, N. C., a highly prized relic. It is a cane that belonged to Colonel S. V. Pickens. It was made of a wood that a friend pronounces rhododendron. The handle is a natural cross-piece, one end of which is capped with gold and the other end with silver. Colonel Pickens we found to be a most genial friend, and we will prize this memento as long as it is in our possession. It bears the date 1889 and is forty years old, but it is well preserved. The receipt of this cane reminds us of a most intense recent experience. We were out for a constitutional about dusk when a white bulldog rushed out upon us. We could see his figure as well as hear his fierce bark, and we managed by violent gesticulation to keep him from an assault, but our sleep was filled that night with the most nightmarish dreams in which that white dog constantly figured, just about to seize one heel or the other. We resolved next morning that we would go prepared for that white monster by arming ourselves with a stout stick. Now we are doubly armed. We can carry a cane in each hand. Perhaps he will have respect for the gold-headed one.

—In the arranging of the program of pulpit service last Sunday for the college campaign, Calvary church seems to have been overlooked. Nobody came. Rev. T. F. McCulloch was at the last minute pressed into service. Calvary is expecting Rev. G. L. Curry next Sunday morning. We want him to know that we are expecting him and that we do not enjoy being disappointed.

—We wonder how many of our churches have special meetings on this week. Next week the summer conference will cause a suspension of most revival meetings, or rather will prevent the beginning of others.

NUMBER 37

Seen in My Travels

Around the world my travel led—
I saw rare sights by land and sea;
My mind was stirred for larger view,
For scenes still wrapped in mystery.

I wished to rise above the stars,
Explore the awful depths of space
Where God Himself has never been
Or of Himself has left no trace.

I hitched my wagon to a star,
But found the movement far too slow;
It would require an endless age
For me to make my journey so.

And then I tried the speed of light
Whose movement is so wondrous fast:
Increase was great, but not enough
To take me through while life would last.

At length I tried the wings of thought:
And soon I reached my journey's end.
About me was primeval night
Which through me did a shudder send.

Since God first said, Let there be light!
And light upon its mission sped,
There had not been near time enough
For light to come where I'd been led.

Beyond the outposts of creation,
No tracks for light had e'er been laid;
Improvements in the empty space
Had not at all as yet been made.

I gazed upon the fearsome view,
The dismal depths of dreadful night,
A fitting place of banishment
For men and fiends that shrink from sight.

Not long could I endure the scene;
With horror filled, I turned away.
I chose to go where I could see
The splendor of eternal day.

I winged my way to shining height
And found myself in unique place:
'Twas where the angels do behold
The glory of the Father's face.

Too holy the sight for eyes like mine—
Abashed I fell upon my face.
An angel came and said to me:
"Come thou with me, I'll find thee place."

He led me forth to lofty tower
From whose broad top the suns and worlds
In one clear view can all be seen,
In all their brilliance, with all their whirls.

Great telescopes of wondrous power
The distant scene brought very near:
I looked in every way at once
And had of all a vision clear.

The shining, moving worlds of God,
In countless host and varied hue,
Both came and went, and came again,
And formed for me a matchless view.

I found myself in ecstasy
With thought of One so very great
That He the whole could first conceive
And then the whole could e'er create.

In vast display, stupendous power,
Infinite mind and matchless skill
Present to view in perfect whole
Grand product of creative will.

From whole to part I changed my view
And filled my soul with new delight;
For worlds stood out in beauty clad,
With ravishing forms all sparkling bright.

The wondrous force of life had come,
And life and light together wrought
To bring to view in radiant form
The beauty of celestial thought.

And high among the living forms
Were noble beings with power of thought:
They sensed the glory and the grace
And glimpses of their Maker caught.

One far-off world now caught my eye,
A world suffused in heavenly glory;
I sought to know its history,
And heard indeed a wondrous story.

"What is this world of superlight?"
My guiding angel thus replied:
"On this bright world then bathed in night
The Lord of Glory was crucified.

"E'er since that day, now long ago,
It's borne the name, 'The Crimson Cross.'
No other world that moves in space
Can show more love for beings lost."

Then back to earth I sped in haste,
My mind all filled with pictures bright;
But God forbid that I should glory
Except in Calvary's Crimson Light!

ORGANIZATION WELL BALANCED

By REV. ROY IRVIN FARMER
Pastor First Church, High Point, N. C.

Endurance flights now run into weeks by means of organized refuelling. Dr. Brazee, the founder of the Nazarene church, was a firm believer in the power of proper organization. To illustrate this he told of the man who, somewhat intoxicated, entered the pantry of his home to get something to eat. Finding nothing, he called to his wife, "Mary, is that milk in something or is it running around loose?" To organize is to bring into systematic connection and co-operation as parts of the whole. It is the set, arrangement or structure of parts or organs by which a society of individuals is prepared for systematic co-operation. One of Matthew Arnold's clear-thinking Yankees is reported to have said, "Wherever two or three Americans get together they will organize."

To have an organization well-balanced is altogether another matter. This is to bring into or keep in equilibrium or due proportion. Mechanically it is to make the center of gravity of a rotating body coincide with the line or center on which it is supported by adding, taking away, or shifting material. A synonym for organization is adjustment. Well did Matthew Arnold say, "Balance, measure and patience, these are the eternal conditions of . . . high success." These definitions suggest the art of properly sticking together. The child Mary was sent to the store for some fly-paper. Being gone a long time, the mother anxiously looked out of the door. Seeing her slowly returning, the mother said, "Mary, have you got that fly-paper?" "No, mother," was the reply, "It's got me, but we're coming home together."

While it is my conviction that in some respects the church is over-organized, I do not believe that progress lies chiefly in dissolution. Human society representing the maximum amount of mutual interdependence will ultimately be the most happy. Knowing full well that the actual falls far short of the ideal, yet the importance of well-balanced organization I recognize. There would be little chance of success for a disembodied spirit of Christianity whispering occasionally at the door of the human heart. Nothing lasts without organization. If the church must be organized out of human life, then must we be reconciled to the human qualities in it. Our task is to seek changes making for organization well-balanced.

The machinery devised is not the proper measure of organization. It is better gauged by the success achieved with materials at hand. Well-balanced organization I take to mean a plan or arrangement of materials for effective work. A given content of sufficient material, valid in itself, by reason of imperfect or ill-balanced organization, may come to defeat or be rendered ineffective. So far as successfully meeting the day's challenge is concerned, to be satisfied with an haphazard organization is to have none at all. A colored doctor ministered to a colored woman. She grew worse and called a white doctor for consultation. He said to the colored doctor, "What have you done." The reply was, "I diagnosed the trouble as 'scattering of the inward parts,' and prescribed alum and beeswax—alum to hold her together and beeswax to make her stick." That was futile, of course, but the world still needs the drawing and holding power of definite Christianity.

With the growth of function there is inevitable expansion of organization. Orderly, well-balanced organization or reorganization for practical human good usually re-enlists the apathetic. The merger of our own Mission Boards and church papers as ordered by the last General Conference has already witnessed a revival of interest. Religious expression may wane but its impulse never dies. Facing a new century of existence, it is high time for the Methodist Protestant Church to get its machinery ready. Some of it may have to be scrapped. There can be no fruitful work without adequate tools. Organization well-balanced is simply the ability in a minimum of time to deliver a maximum of goods.

The general crisis of the last decade and a half leads me to believe that one cause of church weakness lies in defective or over-organization. It has resulted in divisions and weakness. One Christ's church, through the Roman Catholic branch, dominated the governments of western Christendom. With the development of the idea of liberty came the overthrow of church domination. Perhaps good in the main, the result has been that the church is almost everywhere submerged by the State. It is and has been largely subservient to national opinion. In the world war it was the natural expectation that the church should reveal its patriotism by endorsing the governmental course. In America and Germany alike there was little church independence. What church advocated clasping hands with fellow Christians in an enemy land? There has been too little co-operation with other parts of Christ's body to remove or lessen conditions resulting in disciples slaying fellow disciples. Christ could say, as did one of Shakespeare's characters:

"Each army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl asunder and dismember me."

How reconcile two branches of Christ's church receiving the Holy Sacrament and then going from bread and wine to bombs, shrapnel, liquid fire and deadly gas? Was there not—is there not yet a definite lack of well-balanced national, international or supernational organization, which though under differing ideas of State, should seek to outlaw war and set up Christ's kingdom as the method leading to unity and peace?

The recent Kansas City International Convention of Christian Endeavor reminds us of a near half century demonstration of interdenominational fellowship and spiritual unity in common tasks. Mr. James Kelley, of Glasgow, Scotland, who made the closing address, challenged youth to make peace-insurance a business and not talk. He said, "It is true that so far as appearance goes the cause of peace seems to have progressed, but any one who has the slightest knowledge of Europe knows the bitterness that still exists between nations. Peace, yes, some of the nations cry—but not peace without justice. And their cries have truth behind them, in some cases. . . . We organize for war. Why not organize for peace? . . . We have a minister or secretary of war in every nation. Why not supplant him with a minister of peace?" There is depth in the query.

Here the accomplishments of Christian youth united in spirit are contrasted with the lack of well-balanced organization in reference to war. That is in the field of the general church. I take it that the purpose of this address is to be a discussion of organization well-balanced with reference to the minister as leader of the church of Christ composed of laymen. It is a wide field and I shall discuss it in reference to the minister, the layman and the church.

The minister who represents that other Minister has much need today of organization well-balanced. To say that our Lord was a Teacher and Redeemer who cared naught for institutions is to be forgetful of His own loyalty to the church of His day. He appreciated and observed its heritage of festivals, worship and service. One must not lose sight of His own effective organization and training of the twelve disciples and the sending of the seventy. Definite plans were so Spirit-filled that inevitably they came to self-consciousness in the church.

Formal organization He magnificently avoided. That other Minister erected no machine. He dealt with personalities and life. He had no time for correspondence, construction and organization. His life was short but He spoke with definite aim and did His work thereby. "The works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me." (John 5:36.) He established the kingdom of God with immense plans covering vast ages of time. He knew that "Through the ages one increasing purpose runs."

No, Christ faced no world of chaos, but one of cosmos. He had in Him God's own sense and love of order. The feeding of the five thousand yields one study of organization well-balanced. Jesus planned His work. He knew chaos to be ineptitude, and orderliness to be efficiency. He spoke little about the State—He spoke less about the church, for as we know it there was no church in His day. Government, wealth, family, social customs were in His day and these He discussed unstintingly.

Without doubt St. Paul was the next great minister—the prince of ministers since Christ. He was the early church's leading organizer. If not the first Methodist, he was certainly one of the most enthusiastic of them all. St. Paul's ideal of the church was paralleled in the human body—it is the most intricate and well-balanced organization in the world. Paul's vision of the church was as extensive as knowledge of the then known world. His missionary genius planted groups of Christians in all the chief centers. He bound them to each other in the firmer fellowship of conviction and endeavor. Discovering churchmen contributing under impulse of spasm instead of a financial system, he corrected the faulty situation by submitting a definite plan. The Galatian and Corinthian churches were to base it upon a financial system or organization well-balanced—"On the first day of the week let each of you put aside from his weekly gains so that the money may not have to be collected when I come." (Moffatt, I Cor. 16:2.) He always advocated decorum and good taste in external as well as in internal affairs.

There still lingers the vestige of the idea that the minister must be a composite of preacher, business manager, salesman and janitor. It is as though a college has one man who is president, secretary-treasurer, professor, coach and field agent. In this primitive conception there is no room for division of labor. In his book, The Minister and the Community, Woodrow Wilson said, "There are two ideals between which the church, first and last, has vacillated in respect to the position a minister ought to hold in a community. One is the ideal which expects the minister to hold himself aloof from the ordinary transactions of life and devote himself exclusively, and I was about to say ostentatiously, to things which are spiritual. This is an ideal which has led to asceticism, to practices of the church which have absolutely shut the priesthood off from the life of the community, which have forced upon them an unnatural way of living and an unnatural separation from the ordinary interests of the world.

"There is the opposite ideal in which the minister is expected to be a part of everything in the community making for betterment, improvement, amelioration, reformation—to have a deep interest in everything that affects the life of the community and be at pains to live as other men live, and not in any way show himself separate from the world, not in any way that, at any rate externally, changes the current and method of his life. Some . . . would not even accept ordination but render service as laymen." These are the extremes as Mr. Wilson saw them.

There have always been two divisions in the minister's life—the pastoral and the prophetic. He proclaims Christ's message through the Christian church as a medium of society. He seeks ordination at its hands and therewith he assumes executive burdens as well as prophetic opportunities. Coeval with the beginnings of the organized church ministers have done this. Paul organized with care the relief of the Jerusalem churches—did this diminish his preaching ability? Not when one remembers the ensuing literary and spiritual power following in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians—the faith, hope and charity chapter.

Modern church machinery may be too complicated but the solution does not lie in removing the minister entirely from the executive functions of the church. But you say that Christ never allowed His life so to be organized as to make five or ten calls in an afternoon? Perhaps not, but again He was never a minister of a church organization. His ministers in this day are the trained, appointed leadership of the church. They must, therefore, be possessors of some administrative and executive gifts as well as preaching ability. Our sorest need today is for statesmanlike leaders of local churches. Personally they must practice organization well-balanced in dispensing time, energies—in reading program, consecutive study and devotional life. Ministerial laziness or carelessness is a vice. It may not always be inactivity—it may be that lesser values engross one's time, that "while thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone." (I Kings 20:40.) Every minister should plan for his rest and recreation as carefully as for his labor. Let him do his largest share of work. But none have the right, through ambition, greed, restless love for activities outside the pastorate, to wear out prematurely the wonderful engine—his body—which God has given him with which to do His work. There is a sacred rest and satisfying peace properly belonging to good health which adversity or labor cannot remove.

To do all this seems at times to require several men. Martin Luther (December 18, 1519) wrote to his friend, George Spalatin, the former humanist who was at the Diet of Worms, "My lectures on the Psalter require a whole man. My sermons on the Gospels and Genesis another man. A third is required by the little prayers and regulations of my Order. And a fourth might do the work you ask, not to mention my correspondence and my occupation with the affairs of others, including my meeting with my friends, which steals so much of my time that I almost think it wasted." Is not this earlier cry almost modern? How necessary is organization well-balanced for the minister's life!

O Lord, how can one man be a preacher, pastor and a man of affairs? Shall he declare his full independence and decline to take any share of responsibility in community work? It is related of one Dr. Watkinson that he said to his church officials, "You may have a choice between my head and my feet—it is impossible to have both." But aloofness, lack of contacts, robs one of stimulating forces. The best preaching has its roots imbedded deeply in personal fellowships. Moreover, after a people come to know their minister, to him they would rather listen than to a better preacher, even a brilliant stranger. And the man who speaks from the pulpit is wanted elsewhere in the community—in homes, places of business, social gatherings, weddings, funerals, anniversaries, homecomings—who can remain impervious to such calls? Would that I knew how one man can be "all things to all men"—preacher, member of committees, attendant of conferences, writer of articles, visitor, promoter of special days, advocate of forward movements, interested in schools, clubs and community organizations, worker and adviser and contributor in charitable and philanthropic enterprises—how do it and do it well? I have not mentioned the work among the mass of unchurched or half-Christian multitude on the fringes of the parish, some of them floating sponges with membership in another community but supporting little or none where they reside—who is able for these things?

Well, for the average minister, without a large staff affording a rare division of labor, there must be a way. Often it is in volunteer lay help. Here is an outlet, except for him who would rather shoulder a load than apportion it to laymen. But according to Acts 6:2, "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables." Strong men and women will respond when properly challenged.

Let us exalt the preaching function, teaching the central importance and dignity of it, and that to slacken up on preparation for preaching is to kill one's usefulness. School ourselves to rapid action, developing quick 'pick-up' with no waste motion in starting. Cut off things not counting. Urge the people to come to their minister with specific needs. Why should they always expect him to seek them any more than they always expect the doctor, lawyer, dentist, beauty specialist or banker to hunt up his clientele? Accept no criticism for not calling in illness if it were not known—ask why the family or person did not tell the minister or phone him of it. Develop in the laity the Master's spirit—"Non ministrari sed ministrare." Know every one in the parish as soon as possible but coddle none. Know God and spend much time with Him. Martin Luther said, "The busier I am the more I need the practice of prayer." That may be mysticism but it is part of the solution in reaching organization well-balanced. Follow Brother Lawrence in this: "Practice the presence of God."

The young God-called minister desires to spend himself upon high levels of thought and action, free from clinging garments of tradition and rigid institutionalism. With Jesus in the fields and mountains, or upon the streets and in by-ways with St. Francis, free from the trammels of organization, and spending himself wholly in the vital and spiritual, is his vision. But the dream fades in the light of facts. He must serve a congregation with thoughts and traditions and denominational connections which precede him. Christianity is institutionally organized and he must more or less adapt himself to the facts. Advance in methods comes slowly.

As in all other walks of life, the ministry has its misfits and failures. Occasionally this is due to super-independence or holding aloof from one's denominational connections.

Usually this cripples one's usefulness. There is a growing tendency to standardization and unity—perhaps to the extreme, but at least it is upon us. Dr. William P. Merrill, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York, writes: "I know a young man of the finest type, financially independent, devoted in soul to the missionary ideal, but so set upon keeping free from the trammels of denominational control that he will not serve under any board of missions. The net result of this attitude, admirable in motive as it is, has been to keep him irresolute and idle for several years. He is still undecided how and where to go ahead, while comrades of his, duller in mind, less ardent in spirit, far more poorly endowed internally and externally, have found their way into satisfying usefulness and worthy results." I think this is far too high a price for that sort of freedom from organization and connectionalism.

Other failures come from the lack of ability to keep in touch and get along with the people served. The fault is not always with the people. Washington, with no trained men, said, "If I can't have men as I want them, I will take them as they are." It is good counsel. The church houses both gentle lambs and obstreperous rams. Officers were elected before the arrival of the minister. They may be grim moralists, stern materialists, vicious scandal-mongers, greedy dollar servers, crooked politicians, short-sighted business men, lovers of tradition, but they are the best he has at the time. Work with them as co-laborers. Compromise is not the best tool, but laugh, weep or pray your way through. When a new church entrance is to be made, and one group chooses the west and the other the east side, get them to put it on the corner. If disagreement arises over a choir for a quartet or a chorus, have a movable platform to be used for both groups. Labor and pray to lead such folks to higher vision and experience.

The least and best a minister can do is to choose to build substantially, be it little or much. One will attempt to win by his own personality—ostensibly he wins and is called successful. But such growth usually paves the way for reaction and slump when he leaves the parish. This is too costly to progress in the kingdom. A business man had the secret who said, "I have my business so organized that if I should die tomorrow my clients need not know I am dead." This may not be a perfectly parallel case, but certainly every minister should so plan and labor that when God sees fit to take the worker home the work will go on, and if the minister takes another parish his successor will find it easy to build on the foundation already laid. No man has a right to conduct himself in that manner which makes it harder for his successor.

Once his pulpit and pastoral work were the chief fields for the minister. Today includes these and much more. He must be in some degree informed upon affairs of the Church School (once known as the Sunday School), the young people's society (for us it is Christian Endeavor), religious education, daily vacation Bible school, week-day religious education, leadership training schools, modern methods of finance, women's auxiliary, group organization of the parish, the every-member canvass and a host of general movements in the community if he would be a leader. And he must not forego visiting in the parish. A house-going minister usually makes a church-going people. Personal contact still counts for much. In these visits the minister learns to know his people more intimately and helpfully as well as to be known as an approachable helper and friend.

From the laymen's standpoint organization well-balanced has a mighty part to play. One of Dostoyfsky's heroes says somewhere, "We are all born on purpose to be together." This sense of dependence is the first condition of civilization. Goethe knew much of man's tendency when he said, "Only mankind together is true man, and the individual can be joyous and happy only when he feels himself in the whole." So long as man is preoccupied with the individualistic problem of "What shall I eat and wherewithal shall I be clothed," we have little or no civilization.

Spiritually-minded laity must be interested in kingdom work. In his religious activities man is commonly found at his best. The Christian religion cannot be a private, individualistic affair if it is to be socially scientific. Through organization well-balanced it must undertake, along fruitful lines, the redemption of humanity. A mother who had long been blind complimented her son by saying, "It is not so much that he does things for me, as that he arranges matters so that we can do things together." Christianity's helpfulness is thus extended through the medium of co-operative organizations. A young and lonely lad said, "Mother, I wish that I were two little puppies so that we could play together." It is the embryonic desire to serve in ranks.

In the ideal church every layman will be brought into some active relationship—young and old, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, experienced and beginners. Church loafers and spiritual slackers should be made as ashamed of their status as were war-time slackers. After all, organization is simply gauging the proper rate of advance. People should not be drugged and driven but should go willingly. Organization means all at it, always at it and at it in all ways. Every organization should be full of the Spirit of God or it will amount to nothing. But granted that the Holy Spirit is present in power, the more organization, up to a reasonable and well-balanced limit, the better. There is something from which to start.

The creation of committees offers a marvelous place for organization well-balanced. A committee is meant to get things done. Referring a matter to it should not mean impeded progress. Too often a committee is too closely related to the committal service—at least, some are surely dead. A bank commissioner in Michigan said that a committee is a thing which spends a month in doing what one man could accomplish in a forenoon.

To every committee should be made clear its purpose. The chairman should have some executive ability. Let the personnel be interested in the project, have time to meet, have ability to work together, be loyal to the church or department and its program and believers in progress by reason of faith and vision. The head of a concern said, "When I want anything done, I invariably call that young man over there. I know he will do it. He is always ready. He is geared to the organization." Geared to the organization! What a pertinent suggestion for those who are building toward organization well-balanced. What can succeed with a man out of gear? Too much time is wasted in getting him in mesh, not to speak of his liability to slip out of gear. Energy is wasted in inducing him to start. But one geared to the organization enthusiastically completes the task before others would be started. Whenever 51 per cent of the members are geared to the church and are right with God and fellow-men, problems will disappear or solve themselves.

But let us remember that organization is for the people and not the people for organization. Like the Sabbath, the church was made for man and not man for the church. Whatever is not humanly serviceable nor to the praise of God has no place in His church. In our programs and desire for advance the question is not, "Can a Methodist Protestant church be maintained here or there?" but rather, "Can the community best be served by a Methodist Protestant church?" The same might be said of the evening service, mid-week service, the men's brotherhood or club—are they merely ends in themselves or means to a definite end? In the church there may be the survival of the once-useful but now-without-function-activities. Recently I witnessed the removal of a vermiform appendix and a pair of tonsils. They seem to be an unnecessary and troublesome part of the body. May it not be that an ecclesiastical operation would at times remedy the church organization and give better balance? The church should be organized in the light of the purpose to be fulfilled in the present hour plus the demands of the future.

There is no lack in the community which, having the means, the church should not attempt to meet—playgrounds, amusements that are wholesome, home environment, social contacts—all are within its province. Yet, it should not undertake any work which can be done as well or better by some other organization. There are sufficient fields which only the church can till. Co-operation and not overlapping or antagonism should be the Christ-like attitude toward the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., schools, town or clubs. Let the church furnish the workers, the income and the inspiration and idealism through Christian membership in the groups. Perhaps much of the reason for the rise of these extra-church activities lies in the failure of the church to meet her opportunity when it was possible. If so, she is in no position to criticize or antagonize—rather, penitently should she co-operate. If, as a physician, she displaces herself in doing good, all the better. There is to be no temple at all in the completed city of God.

To some extent the church has always been organized. The primitive communal characteristics partook of this nature. Religious life without organization well-balanced is non-co-operative, non-social and individualistic. The church is the organized institution to embody concretely the religious life of society. It seems necessary if religion is to be vital. And the more highly developed a people, the more pronounced and complete its organization. Today's need is Christian co-operation instead of denominational competition. This we see, thank God, in the mission fields. May its borders constantly enlarge at home! Denominational agencies were not strong enough for war-time needs. It required the interdenominational agencies to meet the test. Only this same unity of spirit and purpose will meet peace-time needs. Rival churches vitiate their powers by magnifying differences and minimizing their likenesses. Christ's own disciples will everywhere be united in service and loyalty with all who believe in His ideals of life.

Undoubtedly our greatest fear need not be too much machinery in the church—rather it is dead machinery or engines out of steam. The church under good leadership and filled with the Spirit of the living Christ is always a power. The challenge of well-ordered, definite tasks ordinarily gets response. People are willing to pay for what they prize. Steam performs best under pressure—don't let down the standard. If there were no such organization as the Christian church, every great religious mind would dream of creating such. The happy life of shared impulses of love and convictions about the life Jesus imparted to humanity would converge into a church. Though at times functioning poorly, the church is functioning along the proper general line. In its ability to reach and include all people in every path of life, from the lowest to the highest, no organization can approach it. The business of the church is distinct—the salvation of the world. Shall we not put into the task the best—rather all we have?

Roger Babson relates that when he was a student in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology there was no dining hall. A basement lunch room was not a success. New buildings on the banks of the Charles River included the Walker Memorial with its great dining hall. But a Greek across the street continued to get the patronage and made money. The problem was turned over to Mr. Everett Morss, president of the Simplex Electric Company and president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. His advice was rather startling—better food, larger portions and higher salaried cooks. Critics said, "How succeed thus if not so at present?" But the boys came and the plan succeeded. Have we given and labored until it hurt? Then give and labor more. The church, its ministers and laymen may crawl along without putting more into its task under organization well-balanced. But she needs and can get the heads, hands and hearts of many an Everett Morss when she is ready to follow their advice. But the challenge must be consistently made and through an adequately inspiring program. Big tasks challenge big men.

When the steamship Mauretania made her initial trip, though supposed to be the fastest Atlantic greyhound, she was a disappointment. She would not come within a knot and a half of the required speed. Drafts were forced, fuel was poured into her engines, ballast was thrown off, ballast was put on, but her speed changed not. She was returned to Liverpool and a conference of Cunard officials was called. Sir William White, a celebrated naval engineer, was wired to come. He replied, "Unnecessary. Send me the blueprints." It was done. He studied them for three days. He sent this telegram: "Don't force the drafts or pour on fuel or change the ballast. Increase the area of the propellers from eighty to one hundred square feet in order that the blades may get a stronger grasp upon the water and a broader sweep in their action." O church of Christ, "Enlarge the place of thy tent, . . . spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes; for thou shalt break forth on thy right hand and on thy left." (Isa. 52:2, 3.) One church on a hill, dedicated to the worship and service of almighty God, and manned by those redeemed by Christ the Lord is greater than a score of regiments of the army. May we realize that there is more power and glory in the prayer hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," than in all the fighting anthems of the world combined.

McCosh, in his "Typical Forms in Creation," says that "Order is Heaven's first law, and the second is like unto it, that everything serves an end. This is the sum of all science. These are the two mites, even all that she hath which she throws into the treasury of the Lord; and, as she does so in faith, Eternal Wisdom looks on and commends the deed." "Brethren, I beseech you by the mercies of God" that you strive in your ministry, that we all strive among the laity in God's church to reach some degree of advancement in organization well-balanced.

Legal Process of Removing Inactive Church Members

The last General Conference adopted the following:

"Members absenting themselves from the church services and failing to give to the support of the church or to co-operate with the church in Christian work for more than one year, shall be visited by the pastor or written to by him if residing elsewhere and appealed to in loving solicitude for their loyalty to their Lord and to the church to resume active relations to the church. If after six months no change is manifest, it shall be the duty of the quarterly conference to address to each of such members a kind and Christian letter calling attention to their loss and the loss to the church of such neglect, and beseeching them not to abandon the hope of their calling in Christ Jesus, and admonishing them that if no change is made by them within six months the church will be compelled to regard their silence to mean that they wish to end their communion with us, and to drop their names from our register. If, after another interval of six months any members thus advised still manifest no interest, it shall be the duty of the pastor to report their names to the church and to show that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and the church shall have authority then to vote whether such members shall be continued or dropped. In the case of stations this action may be taken by the quarterly conference."

A Historian's Prediction Fulfilled

About forty years ago Dr. John Lord wrote a series of lectures entitled "Beacon Lights of History." In his lecture on Queen Elizabeth we find this passage: "The policy of Napoleon was retaliated in the conquests of Prussia in our day; and the policy of Prussia may yet lead to its future dismemberment, in spite of the imperial realm shaped by Bismarck. 'With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again'—an eternal law, binding both individuals and nations, from which there is no escape." We now see that Prussia has had to bow to the supremacy of this divine law.

Are Our Presidents Divinely Chosen?

Ex-President Coolidge concludes an interesting article on the Presidency of the United States with this thoughtful remark: "Why one person is selected and many others are rejected cannot be told. . . . Any man who has been placed in the White House cannot feel that it is the result of his own exertions or his own merit. Some power outside and beyond him becomes manifest through him. As he contemplates the workings of his office, he comes to realize with an increasing sense of humility that he is but an instrument in the hands of God."

—We will be permitted to publish a number of addresses delivered at the Pastors' Conference. This week we publish a thoughtful paper by Rev. R. I. Farmer on Balanced Organization. Others will be presented as space permits. You may expect to find in them new suggestions of interest.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Back Again

It is good to know that the HERALD is to be with us again this week. We are glad for the editor to have the vacation, and to be able to attend the Pastors' Conference; but we miss the paper, even when it fails to come for just a week. The HERALD has become so vital to us as a religious news-carrying agency for the conference that we could hardly keep up with what is going on among us without it. Its pages inform our minds and stimulate our zeal, and help us thereby to be better personally, and more loyal to conference and denominational purposes and programs. We are grateful to the editor for this good paper, and glad to welcome it to our homes again this week.

"Know Your Church" Leaflet

It is off the press now, and several pastors got supplies at the Summer Conference for distribution among their people. We do not claim anything for this leaflet except that it contains necessary information about the conference and the denomination that every pastor and every member should know. Many are already familiar with these facts: well and good; they will confirm them as they find them here. Some, perhaps, are not so familiar: this leaflet will enable them to become so. The facts are fully and concisely stated, we think—just brief enough to be readable, and yet full enough to give the necessary information. We will get them out promptly to pastors who have not yet received them, and the only charge is that they be distributed and read. We have had only 5,000 printed, and that will necessitate, in part at least, that the distribution be limited to families. If there is sufficient demand we can have more printed.

The Prize Contest

Up to this time only three persons have signified their purpose to write on the Country Church, as proposed in our recent weekly letter. The contest will not be put on unless as many as ten persons, at least, will agree to write. Our object is to promote the rural church, and unless as many as ten persons will write, we could hardly think that our object would be accomplished. But with 75 per cent of our churches and our membership in the country, it seems hardly thinkable that the contest would fail for lack of writers. We are anxious to get it going. Please tell us that you are "in." A card will do, and anybody, pastors and people, sixteen years of age and over, will do. The conditions were published in HERALD of July 11. Pastors can help us in this by calling attention to it from the pulpit.

Pastor's Conference—Young People's Training School

Judging from our impressions and observations, we think that the officers and others responsible for the success of these occasions should feel highly gratified with the results. The enrollment in the training school was larger than last year, and the attitude of the young people pleasing and encouraging. The Pastors' Conference was not so largely attended as last year, though a considerable number was present. Some pastors were no doubt kept away because of revival meetings. These occasions are eminently worth while, and we trust that they may grow in interest and usefulness from year to year.

What Counts

There is some confusion as to what monies raised by the women count on the G. C. B. of the local church. The North Carolina Branch budget is $12,500. Of this amount, $3,500 is kept in North Carolina for the Children's Home, Bethel Home, and scholarships for High Point College. This does not count on the G. C. B. The remaining $9,000 is used for General Conference causes, and counts on the budget of the local church. (See "Know Your Church" leaflet, page 6.)

Revivals

Many pastors are holding them now, and others will follow during August. These two months have been for years, and are still, our revival months with the rural churches. Let us have these meetings in our minds and pray very earnestly each day for the blessings of God upon them. To establish the Kingdom of Jesus Christ in human hearts is the first purpose of the church, and surely God will bless us when we turn our attention earnestly in this direction. Let us pray that many may be saved during these meetings, and that there may come to the church a pronounced evangelistic awakening.

College Campaign

We had a report today from one pastor who was out Sunday in the interest of this campaign. He did not secure pledges and cash for the entire $50,000, but he did get a part of it. We trust that others who were out Sunday in the same work may be able to report success. We must press the campaign for every dollar possible. Some may not be able to give but little; others probably can give more. But the much and the little, and the little and the more, will finally make up the $50,000. Let us keep the good work going, brethren, and make these closing days of the campaign count big in the results. And of course we will not cease to pray.

Annual Conference Day

There is a merit in "special" days. Children's Day is an illustration. A large part of the money that has been received by Dr. Brown for the past weeks on G. C. B. has come through the offerings of this day. Other illustrations might be cited, if it were necessary, to emphasize the value of such days. They get us to thinking in the same direction and bring about a concert of action that is so essential to desired results. The "special" day is indispensable to our work. We are now going to designate one—the first Sunday in September, as Annual Conference Day. This, of course, is just for this year. The purpose is to boost the Annual Conference collections, and get a big offering on that day. There is sufficient time, we trust, to work up to it, and we hope that pastors and stewards will give us their full support in making the day count for much in raising the A. C. B. We suggest that all collections on that day go for this purpose. Here we go, now, everybody toward Annual Conference Day!

Albemarle Church Building

We were glad to see the picture of this imposing structure in a recent number of the HERALD. This is the third best church building in our conference, and our Albemarle congregation, with their pastor, merit our hearty congratulations on this achievement. The blessings of God upon them!

OUR STORY PAGE

A LATE LARK TWITTERS

The trouble with the old lady was that she had been too kind, too good, too generous.

In the earlier days of her widowhood she had been comfortable, even prosperous. She had the opportunity of making money. If she had had the worldly wisdom to put a business man in charge of her little temperance hotel and herself to remain the kindly presiding spirit, seeing to everybody's wants while leaving finance to the business man, she would have made money. She had not done this. She managed the business herself.

If there are any purely financial angels in heaven they wept, but the plain angels smiled.

Her ears were ever open to the tale of woe, true or false. Nay, all tales were true to her, for she could not understand deliberate falsehood. She turned none away. Her little hotel fed the hungry, clothed the naked, housed the homeless. While there was a coin in her till and a crust in her larder above what was actually needed for her fleeting family of commercial travelers and week-end visitors, those who asked received. No one read the gospels more literally than she. But to do unto others a great deal more than you would dream of asking others to do unto you is not one of the recognized principles of commercial success. Gradually her assets dwindled. By and by the hotel passed out of her hands, and she was left, an old woman, as nearly as possible destitute.

In earlier days she would have gone to the workhouse, and lived for six weeks. Instead, she got her old age pension and lived for twelve years. She had a dingy little attic from a friend who owned some property and would accept no rent from her. It was a single room, and had two windows, one about the size of a man's handkerchief, the other about the size of a woman's. The ceiling sloped with the roof and whitewashed rafters showed within. A corner of the room was curtained off, and the space within the curtain seemed to serve as larder, kitchen, and dressing room. Water was carried in from a communal at the rear of the house.

There the old lady abode for twelve years. She was not unhappy, nay, her face glowed with joy and peace. She welcomed visitors and usually offered them a cup of tea. There was a certain circle of friends who dropped in on Saturday evenings, and who seldom failed her. If one or another member of the circle had not arrived at the usual time the meal would not be delayed, but his or her place at table would be set as usual. It would be: "I wonder what's keeping Mrs. Terry tonight?" or, "What can have come over Mrs. Blues, it's not often she's late!"

One night when I lingered a few moments behind the others the old lady told me about her greatest material fear. It was not poverty or want, but the fear that after her passing unworthy folk would step in and claim her few personal belongings on the ground of kinship. For the first time I learned that she had relatives at hand. They had behaved ungenerously to her, cared nothing about her, never went to see her or even to inquire for her.

But, she said, if anything happened to her—she meant if she passed away in the darkness some night—then they would be the first to descend upon her abode and take possession, and divide, more or less equally, her effects among them. She revealed to me how by means of much effort and self-denial she had gathered together a few pounds—sufficient to bury her with decency—so that she should be buried with her own money and not by the parish. The few pounds would see her task accomplished and her long day done. The independent old soul had been independent since girlhood, and she would remain independent right to the end. Such was her desire. Her dread was that this desire might be foiled by the cupidity of her nearest kin.

"No, Mr. St. A.," she said, "I want you to do just one thing for me. If anything happens to me—and many a night as I've lain in bed I've thought the call had come, and that before morning I would be 'over yonder'—if anything happens to me in the night, I would like you to take charge of my things—and I want you to be very particular about this Bible."

"Surely I'll do that for you," I replied; "but you mustn't think of leaving us yet. I expect you've got years before you."

"I can't have that, for ye ken I'm eighty-two, and—well, I just know it won't be long now."

"Well, you can make your mind easy about that," I answered. "I'll do my best, if anything should happen to you, but I hope it won't."

"Thank you. Now look at this Bible," she said, handing me a good-sized copy of Holy Writ. "See, that cover is slit up, and inside it is all the money of which I die possessed."

"But you're not d——"

"Wheesh!," she said, interrupting me. "As soon as ye hear I'm gone, ye're to come in here and take the notes out of the Bible, and ye're to pay for my buryin' with them. That's all."

"Very well. I shall do everything to the best of my ability as you ask."

"Thank you! You're a real friend to me, and I haven't many now. But I'll rest content. I've been a long, long journey, and I'm wearyin' to be home. Guid nicht, and thank ye."

"Guid nicht, and God be wi' ye."

I closed the door upon her and found my way down the dark, rickety stair that led into the street. As I made my way home I thought much of the old lady, and I wondered how long it would be before I was called upon to undertake her commission. She looked no worse than she had at any time for three years past. "The old lady is good for another two or three years yet," was my last thought before I went to sleep that night.

Next day I was busy, and did not hear the news till well on in the afternoon. The old lady had passed away during the night.

I hurried along to her room. I found all quiet. A neighbor let me in, and I looked upon the shining old face.

"So be my passing!

My task accomplished and the long day done,

My wages taken, and in my heart

Some late lark singing,

Let me be gathered to the quiet West,

The sundown splendid and serene,

Dear."

I looked about me. The room seemed unusually bare.

"Yes," said the neighbor, in answer to my question, "her friends were here, and they took away everything they could carry with them. You may be sure that lot wouldn't leave much of any value behind them!"

"Oh, dear me!" I exclaimed, "I wish I had heard sooner. Are you sure they took everything?"

"They have not left much, anyway," was the reply.

"There was a Bible," I went on, "that the old lady wanted me to have when she was done with it. I wonder if they have taken the Bible."

"Well," said the neighbor, "maybe they haven't. They did not look to be the sort of folk that would trouble themselves about a Bible."

I searched the room, and, thrown in behind an old settee, with its pages crumpled up, I found it. They had thrown it away as of little value to them. The notes were safe in their place within the double cover.

The old lady was decently buried on a sunny summer afternoon. The funeral was attended by a large number of people, for many knew her and had received kindnesses at her hands in days gone by. But she had remained sternly independent to the end. The money she left in her Bible just served the turn.

As for me, I do not know exactly what law it was I broke when I did privily extract from the covers of her old Bible a sheaf of slim notes that legally belonged to her heirs. I do not know. But I saw that the old lady had her wish, and I am prepared to take my chance with the law.—British Weekly.

PROFANITY

No sin is more strongly condemned in the Bible, or more inexcusable and unreasonable than profanity. At the same time it is prevalent, and a cause of grievous evil.

The third commandment has an emphasis in addition to the usual, "Thou shalt not." "The Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." We may affirm the importance of every command, but for wise reasons God himself definitely declares it.

The laws in most states forbid profanity, and yet profanity is common. That the third commandment may be violated with impunity, so far as punishment from men is concerned, leads many to esteem it lightly. God, therefore, says I will not hold him guiltless who violates this law. How foolish it is appears clearly in the light of this promised punishment. Other sins, such as lying and stealing and dishonesty, may result in temporary profit, but profanity not only brings no temporary profit, it brings certain as well as severe loss. At no point is it more evident that sin is foolish as well as wicked. To think otherwise is to think that man can outwit God.

Christians should be careful of their speech, that it is yea, yea, nay, nay; that is, simply plain and truthful—without oaths or the unnecessary emphasis of by-words. First, because whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil; and second, "Lest they fall into condemnation." These two are Scripture reasons. Swearing and much so-called slang are evil, and lead to evil.

Words, by constant use, lose their meaning, and thus pass the lips in circumstances which render them absurd. We know a person whose answer to almost every remark is "pshaw." The word to him means no more than an assent or dissent, but its use is offensive, particularly when he talks to strangers. Though not as bad as an oath, it is a blemish to his conversation.

Writers of novels and newspaper stories help to familiarize the reading public with profanity. Some pepper their pages with oaths to picture the low life they describe. Biographies may serve the same evil purpose by acquainting readers with the oaths of those whose lives are written. A writer, noting the favorite oaths of Queen Elizabeth, Andrew Jackson and others, says: "They added sanction of high places to a violation of the laws they were set to execute, as well as to flagrant violation of a conspicuous law of God." The same writer says: "In theory and practice, in word and deed, even in the use of comparatively harmless ejaculatives, let the Christian abstain from, and discourage, profanity. Let the wicked do all the swearing."—The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?

Not serried ranks with flags unfurled,
Not armored ships that gird the world,
Not hoarded wealth, nor busy mills,
Not cattle on a thousand hills,
Not sages wise, nor schools, nor laws,
Not boasted deeds in freedom's cause—
All these may be, and yet the State
In the eye of God be far from great.

That land is great which knows the Lord,
Where songs are guided by His Word,
Where justice rules 'twixt man and man,
Where love controls in act and plan,
Where breathing in his native air
Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer—
Thus may our country, good and great,
Be God's delight—man's best estate.

To the Leader

Someone has said that present-day civilization came through the church and is upheld by the church. This is a vast statement, but think about it and you will see how truthful it really is. The nations of the world which have the Christian religion within their bounds and which are guided by its principles are the nations that are held high in international affairs.

Our church and state are not united, as some are, but still we find that throughout the nation the church is a potent factor in national life and progress.

It is impossible to conceive of our nation without a church. We may picture gloom, despair and a rebellious people, but this is only a small part of the picture. Let us think of what our church has given us—much more than we realize and are thankful for. Education owes its existence to the church in a large measure. The church has mothered education throughout the years. Have not our earliest colleges and various other institutions of learning been founded by or under the leadership of the church?

The church should be the center of community life, radiating good will. The church is the hub of the community life—some churches have even accepted the hub as a name. Through the church we find various things being promoted: good ideas, better social life, the development of strong and upright character, better citizenship, civic affairs, and various others.

Through the church we need to arouse the nation to the fact that only a bit is being done; while that is great the work is yet just begun.

Suitable Songs

"The Church's One Foundation."

"The Church in the Wildwood."

"Faith of Our Fathers."

"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

"I Love Thy Church."

"We're Marching to Zion."

"There Shall Be Showers of Blessings."

(1) Preaching; (2) Inspiration; (3) Entering other communities and lands; (4) Supply of leadership for various organizations.

Prose Prizes

The Christian church serves the best and highest interests of the American republic. First, because it protects and fosters those institutions which have proved a blessing to the republic. Second, because it keeps before the young people the true idea with regard to national greatness and national strength.—David Gregg.

The church stands for the redemption of all life from sin, waste, selfishness, and uselessness. It helps by insisting on the ideals of brotherhood.—Anonymous.

The church makes a better nation because of its ethical teaching. The Sermon on the Mount is its ideal.—Armstrong.

Poetry

THE LITTLE CHURCH

A little church; the settlers come for miles,
Some few, unhearing, sit in selfish dream;
For life is vilely mingled, sweetly mixed,
Scanty or bounteous in vital force;
But here the most are really worshippers
Seeking in fellowship a sympathy
With God. Their simple faces plainly show
What feelings stir the heart, for hard looks melt,

And thin, worn wretchedness in garb grotesque
Is eased of ugliness while it feeds
On hope and love. This meager hour may lift
Some groveling face to see the blessed sky,
Master a soul, and yield it back to life,
Tempered against the evil days to be.
A little thing, this church? Remove its roots,
Ossa upon Pelion would not fill the pit.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

The executive committee of the N. C. Branch of Women's Missionary Work will meet at Bethel Home, Weaverville, N. C., at 10 a. m., August 7.

All officers, departmental secretaries, and district chairmen are on this committee.

The women who attend will be entertained at Mrs. Bates' cottage in Weaverville.

If you can attend the meeting please notify Rev. Homer Casto, Weaverville, N. C.

As I do not have a list of officers of all auxiliaries that have not merged, I am taking this means of asking each of you to send me a report by August 3.

Send names of officers, number of members, and all you have done since Branch meeting.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec'y.

LADIES' DAY AT PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE

At the invitation of the president, a goodly number of the women of our conference went to High Point College Thursday, July 18, to take part in the pastors' summer conference. Some who went early enough to attend the morning worship, which was a joint service for pastors and young people, were uplifted by the impressive way in which Dr. Johnson treated his subject, "A Twilight Walk With Jesus." His message was deeply spiritual and was a fine beginning for the school of methods that followed.

The chairman of the district, Mrs. C. W. Bates, conducted this school, and its purpose was to make clear the duties and requirements of the officers, departments and district chairmen.

At the last period before lunch the pastors joined the women in listening to talks by the president, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work, after which everybody hastened to the Children's Home for lunch. While the women unpacked and spread a bountiful picnic lunch on the tables under the trees on the lawn, the men made quantities of delicious lemonade, and the dispatch with which food and drink and ice cream disappeared indicated in no slight degree the enjoyment of this feature of the day.

After dinner the school of methods was continued, and among the many helpful things presented was the large map of the North Carolina Conference, showing the location of each church and parsonage. Miss Mary C. McCulloch, who made the map, carefully explained in detail the location and boundary of the charges in the Conference, including the location and boundary of our work in the state.

We were amazed to find that in some districts it is 150 miles between churches, and the lone chairman of such a district felt that she must have help to enable her to cover the territory and organize an auxiliary of Women's Work in each church. Our goal is to organize in each church with every woman a member and every man an honorary member.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE FRATERNAL RELATIONS COMMITTEE

Young People's 1929 Leadership Training School

In recognition of the co-operation and service rendered during the Young People's Leadership Training School of the Methodist Protestant Church, in session at High Point College, High Point, North Carolina, from July 13th to 20th, 1929, be it resolved that the school adopt the following resolutions:

First, that the school express its gratitude and appreciation to Dr. R. M. Andrews for his splendid co-operation and willingness to let us enjoy the advantages the buildings of High Point College afford.

Second, that we give a hearty vote of thanks to Rev. Fred W. Paschall, our Training School president, for his splendid leadership which has been such a strong factor in the success of the school.

Third, that we express our appreciation for the wise planning and good work of the Young People's Board which made the Leadership Training School possible.

Fourth, that we thank the following speakers for the splendid addresses during the conference program: Dr. P. E. Lindley, Rev. C. W. Bates, and Rev. R. I. Farmer.

Fifth, that we express our gratitude to the members of the faculty, especially Miss Margaret Wilson of the Maryland Conference, whose services we deeply appreciate.

Sixth, that we sincerely thank Miss Bettie S. Brittingham and the members of the recreation committee for the fun and recreational events planned.

Seventh, that we express our gratitude to Miss Mary E. Young, who so splendidly served as dean of women.

Eighth, that we express our appreciation to the Pastors' Summer Conference for their co-operation with our plans and the joint sessions held with us.

Ninth, that Dr. T. M. Johnson be especially thanked for the very effective and impressive devotional services, and Mrs. H. W. Maier for her inspirational and unique vesper services.

Tenth, that we express our thanks to Rev. E. L. Ballard and Miss Ruth Vancannon for their service as song director and pianist, and that we thank also the following for special music rendered: Junior church choir of Community Place Church in Thomasville; Junior church choir of First Church in High Point; Mr. C. L. Gray, Jr.; Miss Leo Sowell; Prof. Ernest B. Stimson; Miss Vera Smith, Miss Ruth Beam and Miss Mary Crickmore.

Eleventh, that we sincerely thank the First Church of High Point for the special services in our behalf, and for the cars furnished to transport us to and from the church.

Twelfth, that Mrs. C. L. Whitaker and her faithful corps of waitresses, dish-washers, and cooks be thanked for making this phase of the program a very delightful one.

Thirteenth, that we express our gratitude to the High Point Enterprise, the local newspaper, for the publicity given to the school and for the distribution of papers in the dormitories.

Fourteenth, that Rev. Lawrence Little be thanked for the service rendered in the book room.

Fifteenth, that we express our thanks to Mrs. P. E. Lindley and Miss Ruth Vancannon for furnishing flowers for the stage.

Sixteenth, believing that this Leadership Training School has been a successful one, and realizing its value to the church and our youth, we resolve to take its spirit and ideas back home to our local church and endeavor to build up the Kingdom in our own communities, looking forward to another Leadership Training School next year that will excel all others ever held.

Finally, the committee realizes that it is impossible to mention all who should be mentioned in these resolutions. In view of this, we thank every one, great or small, for all contributions, which enabled this Training School to be a success.

Respectfully submitted,
GROVER L. ANGEL, Chm.,
REV. J. W. BRAXTON,
REV. L. W. GERRINGER,
Fraternal Relations Committee.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Summer Conference of 1929 is now history. It is to be regretted that some things were not better and more nearly ideal, yet there is every reason to rejoice that the conference was as good as it was. On the whole it was a great conference. The addresses were fine. If we could have taken all that was brought to us back to our people and could have put into operation all the good suggestions, we would be great pastors and our people would be greatly benefited. While we will not be able to put all into effect it is certain that much will grow out of that conference that will prove to be of great profit now and in the time to come. The attendance was just about as good as it has been in recent years. There was 55 of the regular pastors present and 12 of the ministerial brethren who are not in the regular pastorate were present some or all of the time. Some of the brethren who had never missed a conference since its beginning were absent. This was greatly regretted.

Ladies' Day on Thursday was a great success. The ladies from all parts of the conference came in large numbers. Quite a number of laymen were also present. The great picnic dinner was all that could have been wished for.

Each and every person who contributed any part whatsoever to the success of the conference will please accept the most sincere thanks of the president.

The date for the next conference is June 16, 1930, and plans are now in the making for what is hoped will be the biggest and best conference ever.

COLLEGE CAMPAIGN IN TEXAS

Dear Brother Pastor:

As you are doubtless aware, arrangements are being made to re-finance our college program. For 27 years we have been struggling along but at no time has the old school been provided for in a way to enable those carrying on the work to have behind them adequate funds.

The time has come when a change is absolutely necessary. The Board of Regents has determined upon a campaign to secure funds which will give Westminster College better equipment. This cannot be done without the help of Methodist Protestant pastors and the people in the Southwest.

Under the direction of the Board of Christian Education of the Methodist Protestant Church, the first steps in this campaign have been taken. Specially selected men will soon visit your home and explain matters fully. I am asking now that you will give them your fullest co-operation. They are not coming to ask for funds. They would like to have the names and addresses of any of your people who might be disposed to make, some time in the future, a contribution for the support of the College.

As a brother pastor, you will appreciate how much we must depend upon you. Your good will and encouragement are indispensable. We are confident you will stand by us to the limit in this great work, and that you will have on hand the names and addresses of the members of all the churches on your charge. Our workers have many places to go and you can help to save their time for the College by furnishing them information.

In the name of Your College we thank you for what you are going to do in this great and worthy undertaking.

Sincerely yours,
FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

—China and Russia are threatening war on each other, but both say they don't want to fight and both signed the Kellogg Peace Pact.

—Thomas J. Finch died last Saturday after a year's illness. He was a prominent business man in Thomasville, a brother of C. F. Finch, the founder of Community Church. He lived in Randolph county four miles from Thomasville and was a member of Hopewell Methodist church. A great throng estimated at 5,000 people attended the funeral service last Sunday afternoon.

—Rev. T. A. Williams conducted the funeral of Henry M. Daniels at Level Cross church July 12.

—Mrs. D. S. Coltrane of Grace church recently returned from an extended western trip.

—The Pugh family will have a reunion at Guilford Battle Ground July 28 with an address by Dr. W. T. Whitsett.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard was missed at the Summer Conference. He is a former president and was always an interested attendant. He is resting in Weaverville, N. C. Pray for his restoration to health.

—Bro. J. A. Way, of Asheboro, had the misfortune to have a hand severely hurt in a collision of cars in Greensboro.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett was engaged to fill the pulpit of our church in Asheboro last Sunday in the absence of Bro. Pritchard. Bro. Kennett is a favorite preacher with Asheboro people as well as others.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pageland Charge.—I wish to thank the people of this charge for the splendid reception which I received when I came to the work. I was met with a hearty welcome at each of the three churches and an unmeasured hospitality has been extended to me thus far. The folk are very ready to co-operate in any enterprise of the church and seem to be very enthusiastic about the work.

New Hope: I met my first appointment at this church on Sunday, June 9, and preached at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. We had good attendance at both of the services. Much interest was shown in the work of the church. The Sunday school is doing good work. I was very much impressed with the large number of young folk in the church and the wonderful opportunity for a Christian Endeavor Society. At the evening service we discussed the organization of a society, which very readily met the approval of the people, both old and young. The society was organized with 19 charter members. Mr. Earl Richardson was elected president. The society is progressing nicely and drawing good congregations every Sunday evening. The choir has been reorganized and meets regularly for mid-week practice. Our special meeting will begin on the first Sunday in August with Rev. M. P. Chambliss as pulpit help.

Rose Hill: On June 16 I made my first visit to this church and enjoyed it very much. We have a nice little church on a good location in Pageland. The attendance at both the morning and the evening service was good, as well as at Sunday school. Our Christian Endeavor Society planned a program to carry to New Hope church on July 14, but was prevented by rain. The Ladies' Aid Society is very active; it has purchased folding doors to enclose one section of the church auditorium for a Sunday school class room and it is planning to purchase a suite of pulpit furniture and carpet for the aisles of the church. We have organized a mid-week prayer meeting which met for the first time on July 9 at 8 o'clock. Four of our young folk attended the Young People's Leadership Training School: Misses Leo Sowell, Mary Quick, Bernice Myers and Ruby Smith. Our special meeting will begin on the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. Fred Paschall as pulpit help.

Bethesda: On my arrival at this church June 30 I found a large and attentive congregation. One of their first requests was for more preaching; they seemed to be hungering for the Gospel. I made arrangements to preach for them on the first and third Sundays and Rev. Earl Cook, of New Hope church, preached for them on the second Sunday, making a total of four Sundays in succession. The Sunday school is progressing nicely. Our special meeting will begin on the fourth Sunday in July with Rev. Jabus W. Braxton as pulpit help.

T. GLENN MADISON, Pastor.

Asheboro.—Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard have been granted a month's vacation by the local church. They and Miss Nell Leach are spending the first two weeks at Weaverville and they expect to spend the rest of the time in Asheboro.

In the absence of our pastor Rev. W. F. Kennett, of Greensboro, preached yesterday. We all enjoy having Mr. Kennett come back and preach to us. He was accompanied by Mrs. Kennett.

The young people from here who attended the Leadership Training School at the High Point College reported having a fine school and a good time. They expect to make their reports to our church next Sunday evening.

Miss Mary Wade Bulla has returned home after spending six weeks in summer school at Boone, N. C. Miss Kate Bulla left Sunday for the last session of summer school there.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Lowdermilk and family, Mrs. C. H. Wood and family, Mrs. G. W. Hayworth and family and Mr. Clint Hayworth's family, also Miss Ronie Sheffield, left yesterday for a week's stay at Lake Waccamaw.

EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.

July 22, 1929.

Mizpah, Haw River Charge.—Bro. Trollinger was with us the first Sunday and gave us a splendid sermon. It seems that he gets better each time. The Lord's Supper was administered at this service, which was very impressive.

One of our former pastors, Bro. J. R. Hutton from Greensboro, was with us the third Sunday afternoon and gave us a good sermon. We were glad to have him come and preach for us.

We had our children's night services the second Sunday night in June. The children did their parts well, and everybody enjoyed the exercise. Much credit is due Mrs. Roy Steward and Mrs. George Harrison for helping prepare the exercise.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor are moving along nicely. Our congregations seem to be increasing each Sunday. We are glad to welcome any who will come and join us. Christian Endeavor meets each second and fourth Sunday nights.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—The pastor and a number of the young people attended the Leadership Training School at High Point College last week. Those attending were Misses Katherine, Elizabeth, Leona Lawrence, and Mr. John Allen Lawrence from Whitakers Chapel; and Miss Pattie Ruth Neal from Enfield. All of these young people took the course and received credit. Miss Elizabeth was honored by being made a member of the recreational committee during the period of the school. The school was one of the best I have ever attended. The credit for such a school is due largely to Rev. Fred W. Paschall, the president of our Young People's Work in North Carolina.

The people in general are rejoicing to know that Miss Virginia Whitaker, who has been ill for about two months, is improving. She has spent some time in a Richmond hospital. At the present she is at Virginia Beach, near Norfolk. We all sincerely hope that she will soon be able to return. Her mother, Mrs. S. C. Whitaker, has been by her side most of the time.

We are also glad to learn that Mrs. Egbert Barnhill is regaining her strength. She has recently undergone an operation.

Mrs. R. C. Rives has been confined to her bed for a week with malarial fever. She is improving, however, and we hope for early recovery.

Last Sunday the pastor and Rev. R. A. Hunter exchanged pulpits in accordance with the plan of the college committee. I am told that Bro. Hunter brought a splendid message, using as his subject, "Fishers of Men." Bro. Hunter helped in a meeting here two years ago and the people were glad to have him back again. The results of his visit in the interest of the college will be announced later.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

High Point.—The services on last Sunday were held as usual in First church. Beginning with the Sabbath school at 9:45 o'clock, under the capable leadership of Mr. E. L. Douglas, superintendent, morning worship was conducted in the auditorium at 11 o'clock and at the same time services for the Junior church were conducted by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, when the topic, "How to Become Strong Men and Women," was discussed with William Vance as leader. Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a very beautiful and impressive sermon on "The Master Friend" from the text in John 15:15: "Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." He said that friendship is one thing concerning which there is no argument. We want people to like us, and in order to make friends, we must show ourselves friendly. Classic literature is filled with many examples of rare and famous friendships, Damon and Pythias, David and Jonathan, Ruth and Naomi, Paul and Barnabas, Mary and Martha, and many others. Someone has said that friendship is a habitual inclination of two lives to do each other good. In Memphis, Tenn., Judge Walter Malone in speaking to a group of boys asked one called "Stumpy" what was his idea of a friend, and he replied, "It's a fellow who knows all about you and likes you just the same." "Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friends." We have a Master Friend who has done just this for us, one who has gone into the jaws of hell for you and me. Every friend builds something into his friend's life. The doctor and the minister know most about the lives of the community, more about broken vows, unfaithfulness, sorrows and heart-breaks, sickness and suffering, the dregs of sin and disease. The Master Friend has a right to expect more of us, and He pleads with us in tenderness, "My son, give me thine heart." It is only great souls that are capable of strong and abiding friendship. The man or woman who has five friends to whom he can unburden his heart in joy and sadness alike, to whom he can confide the hopes and ambitions of his very soul, and know that his confidence will be kept inviolate, is rich indeed. The Master Friend will love his own unto the end.

"What a Friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and griefs to bear;
What a privilege to carry
Everything to God in prayer!"

At the hour for evening worship an exchange of pulpits was made when the message was brought by Rev. John W. Moore, pastor of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, and our pastor occupied his pulpit.

An impressive feature of Sunday morning's service was the baptism and christening of the lovely little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Furman R. Auman, Betty Doris.

Last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins entertained the members of the choir and a few additional friends including the pastor and his wife, with a delightful picnic supper at their lovely suburban home south of the city.

The annual Sabbath school picnic will be held next Thursday evening at Luna Park, near Greensboro.

The third quarterly conference is called for Monday evening, July 29th, and the pastor and family will leave the next day for a vacation to be spent with relatives in Ohio.

The mid-week prayer service will be held as usual on Wednesday evening with the pastor in charge, when he will speak about "Voices With Which Jesus Spoke."

We are much pleased to learn that Mrs. J. C. Welch, Jr., is improving in Guilford General Hospital after a serious operation.

Little Miss Anne Blair Auman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Auman, is recovering nicely from an operation for removal of tonsils at their home on Montlieu avenue.

Miss Dorothy Rankin, who has been spending several days at Lake Junaluska, returned home last evening.

Wyatt A. Pickens stopped here a few days with home folks, leaving Sunday evening for Washington to join the Pan-American Highway delegation, which sails next Saturday, July 27th, on S. S. "Western World" for a tour of South America, landing August 9th in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The party expects to reach New York on the homeward trip November 1st, when Mr. Pickens will go to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, to resume his work in Louisiana State University. He was accompanied as far as Washington, D. C., by his sister, Annette E. Pickens, who will spend a few days sight-seeing in the nation's capital.

Miss Nellie Martin has gone to Roaring Gap to spend two weeks with Miss Annette Stowe.

Mrs. B. F. Montgomery left Monday morning for Chapel Hill, where she will be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Tom Rosemond, for several days. Her daughters, Misses Jewel and Frances, accompanied her.

Mr. L. R. Johnston, who has been teaching in Duke University summer school, Durham, is at home again. Mrs. Johnston and little daughter, Rebecca Holt, who are spending the summer with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wicker, at Elon College, spent Monday here. Mr. Johnston holds the position of principal of High Point High School.

We were pleased to see Miss Mary Young, of Henderson, dean of women in High Point College, at the Leadership Training School last week.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett spent several days of last week at the bedside of her father, Mr. John Eller, who has been ill at his home in Davidson County. Mr. Eller is 99 years of age.

Winston-Salem.—"Hip, Hip, Hooray for the army." Our "army" returned safely to Winston-Salem, Saturday, after attending the High Point Leadership Training School. It's not always quantity that counts; quality is equally important. Our quantity was—three; quality—five. These three were Mrs. J. E. Kirk, Miss Pearl Sapp, and Miss Ruth Hill; others attended part of the time. An interesting report was given Sunday morning and we were even more vitally interested than before the school was held. We hope our army will fast increase by next July.

Rev. R. M. Andrews preached for us Sunday morning. His sermon was enjoyed throughout our entire congregation. Some of the facts of High Point College were learned and pledge cards for our church were signed. Prior to the sermon the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Savior, Comfort Me." Although it is vacation time we had very good attendance both for Sunday school and church worship.

The third quarterly conference was held Monday evening at our church. Important business of the church was transacted.

The Mission Club held a measuring party Tuesday evening at the church. The Mission Club includes the children not old enough to belong to the various circles of the Auxiliary.

Next Sunday will be observed as Old People's Day. The older people of our membership are especially urged to be present.

There are quite a number of our older members who are confined to their beds due to illness. May we never forget these in our prayers. We hope, if it is God's will, that they may shortly grow back to health and strength and be with us once again.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—July 14th was a good day for us. A large congregation was present. As our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, was called away to conduct a funeral at Union Grove, Rev. I. M. Crutchfield filled the pulpit at 11 a. m. He delivered a short, but interesting talk, which was enjoyed by all. After the service the Lord's Supper was observed. Glad to see so many take part in this part of the service.

A lawn party will be given at Buckhorn schoolhouse Saturday, July 27th, beginning at 6 p. m. It is for the benefit of Chestnut Ridge church. Everybody is invited. Members of this church are urged to attend and help make the occasion a success.

Hollister.—We were very glad indeed to have the District Rally with us. We had a large attendance on Sunday. The program was good. The program began Saturday morning at 10:30 with Rev. C. I. Smith leading the devotional service. A general discussion on "The Pastor and the Absentee Member" was led by Rev. J. C. Auman in the absence of Rev. R. L. Hethcox. Dr. T. M. Johnson gave a very interesting talk on "Our Institutions." He used a chart showing where our different institutions are situated. "The Relationship of the Local Church to the Annual Conference" was discussed with Mr. Auman leading. All of the pastors took part in the discussion. We were very sorry Rev. E. G. Cowan could not be with us owing to sickness.

The program Saturday afternoon was in charge of Rev. A. D. Shelton. "Financing the Church" was the subject discussed. How we are to finance the church is one of the greatest questions that confront the church today.

Saturday evening the program was in charge of Rev. C. L. Spencer. A pageant was presented, after which Rev. J. F. Minnis gave a lecture on his work in India, using the picture slides. This was very interesting and helpful. We thank Mr. Minnis very much for coming and giving us this lecture. Mr. Auman sang a song in the language of Japan and Mr. Minnis sang one in the language of India.

Sunday morning at 10 o'clock "The Model Sunday School" was discussed with Dr. Johnson and Rev. Willie Wood in charge. They gave a helpful program, showing how a program can be varied every Sunday and making the Sunday school more interesting. President Taylor was to have been with us and preached at the 11 o'clock service, but for some reason he could not be with us. Dr. Johnson preached in his place. We are very sorry Bro. Taylor could not be with us.

The program Sunday afternoon was in charge of Rev. J. C. Auman. We were very glad to have Miss Bettie Brittingham with us. She gave us a helpful talk on "How to Conduct a Christian Endeavor Social." A Bible drama was presented by the Enfield church. Mrs. Eli Bellamy had charge of the drama. All the charges in this district were represented except Greenville Charge.

We, the people of the first district, hope to do more in the future. We have some as fine people down here as can be found anywhere.

We have organized our young people in this district. We have some splendid young people with good talents. We hope to have a District Leadership Training School so as to train these young people for service in the Master's work. We are to have our first meeting at Enfield in August with Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Auman as hostesses.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Bethany, Randolph.—We had Children's Day at our church the first Sunday in June. We had a large congregation. The children rendered their parts exceedingly well. The collection received was $7.20.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, there being 84 present the second Sunday, which is about our average.

We like our new pastor, Mr. Garner, very much. He brings to us inspiring sermons. He has just returned from a vacation to the western part of the state.

Our community was made sad a short time ago by the death of Mr. Cody Aldridge, of Flint, Mich., who was injured in a gasoline explosion March 20. He lingered between life and death for weeks, and the Lord has called him home and his suffering has been relieved. The immense crowd and the many beautiful floral offerings bespeak the high esteem in which he was held. It makes is doubly sad because he leaves a brave young widow, who reached her 19th birthday since his death. May the Lord sustain her, and help her to look to the One who doeth all things well. Mrs. Aldridge has returned to her home in Flint, accompanied by Miss Elsie Julian, a friend, of this place, who was present at their marriage in Ohio last August.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

Lexington.—Last Sunday was one of the best days we have had in the history of our church.

Sunday school was a little above the average in attendance and the message at 11 o'clock by the pastor was very fine indeed, and a most delightful feature at this service was the singing of the visiting ladies who were with us, Mrs. George Garrett and Mrs. Leon Blake, of Charlotte. Mrs. Blake and Mrs.

Garrett sang together "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" at the beginning of the service and Mrs. Garrett also sang two solos during the service, "Face to Face" and "The Holy City." All this splendid music was enjoyed by a large and grateful audience.

At the evening hour a Children's Day program was given by the children under the direction of Mrs. Bethea and Mrs. Cox. Mrs. Garrett sang two solos at this service and Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Garrett sang a duet, "Rock of Ages." Every one present was delighted by these beautiful singers. "The Holy City" was so much enjoyed at the morning service that Mrs. Garrett was requested to sing it again at the evening service. She graciously consented and again delighted a large audience.

Mrs. Blake was before her marriage Miss Carrie Muse, a close friend of Mr. and Mrs. Bethea, and well known and well loved in Lexington, having visited at the parsonage and been with us in our services when we were first organized. Mrs. Garrett was a stranger to most of us but will never be one again. Her genial and friendly manner makes friends for her wherever she goes. She is known to all who hear her sing on Sunday afternoons at a broadcasting station in Charlotte as one of the sweetest of singers. Both these ladies and Mrs. Blake's baby daughter, Carolyn, spent Sunday and Sunday night with Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and returned to Charlotte Monday morning.

Miss Sue Everheart, of High Point, spent the week-end here visiting Miss Lila Oron and favored us with a solo Sunday night. She also learned a recitation on very short notice and filled in for one of our girls who had to drop out of the program Sunday night. We are all very grateful to Miss Sue and hope to have her visit us often.

Miss Helen Harkey attended the Training School for young people in session at High Point College this week. Mr. Bethea also attended the Training School.

Mr. J. W. Lindsay, our loved and faithful Sunday school superintendent, suffered a slight stroke of paralysis last Friday night a week ago. He seems to be recovering, we are glad to state. We miss him much in the services and all are wishing for him a speedy recovery. Mr. C. L. Koonts, assistant superintendent, is very efficiently filling Mr. Lindsay's place.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—Bro. Isley filled his appointment Sunday morning. His subject was "The Man Who Was Afraid of His Wife." He gave us a very helpful sermon. He told us that not only men like King Ahab were afraid of their wives, but that all of us were more or less afraid of "things" which would mean destruction unless we were out and out for Christ.

Bro. Isley stated Sunday that the church is trying hard to raise all its Conference claims. We hope every one will do his or her part to carry on the work of Christ.

The Ladies' Aid Society is to give a supper at the church on next Saturday a week, the proceeds of which will go for the benefit of the church. Let us all come out and make this a success. The ladies are doing a great work for our church. The different auxiliaries of the church mean a great deal to the promotion of God's kingdom. Let us all work for Christ and the advancement of His kingdom.

dom, and great will be the things that God will help us do.

LENA HEDRICK, Reporter.

Harmony.—Our Sunday school is still moving along nicely.

The Christian Endeavor Society, though small, is doing its best. It seems hard to get the young people to take part in it.

The Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Society will meet the fourth Saturday afternoon in July.

The revival meeting will begin at Harmony the third Sunday in August. Rev. N. M. Harrison will hold this revival.

We are sorry to report that one of our Sunday school and W. F. M. S. members, Mrs. T. S. Crawford, is ill at her home. We all wish for her a speedy recovery.

We are still planning to have our Daily Bible school the first week in August. We hope that all the parents in the community will help us by sending their children to this school.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

Halifax Charge.—The third quarterly conference will meet with Hollister church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July at 2 p. m. We want all of the officials to be present.

C. L. SPENCER.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—We were glad to have Bro. O. C. Loy and wife with us last Sunday. This was Bro. Loy's first visit to our church. He certainly brought us a good message. At the close of his discourse he gave a brief talk on the work our college at High Point is doing, and asked for pledges to raise the college fund that is being asked for at this time. I regret to say that our people were slow to respond, but some pledge cards were taken which I think will be signed later, as some of our classes and organizations want to take the matter up later; so I think that we may yet be heard from.

Our revival meeting will begin the second Sunday in August.

We are planning for our annual Sunday school picnic some time soon.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Elbaville, Mocksville Circuit.—The third quarterly conference was held at Dulins church July 6. Every church was represented and much business, new and old, was transacted.

During the first week of July our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, conducted a few nights of choir practice, along with which he gave us some interesting lectures on Sunday school work. Both of these were very beneficial and are now being put into practice. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely and our long-sought-for class rooms are almost completed. We can now use the six rooms, of which we are more than proud. We thank God for those beautiful words that say: "Where there is a will there is a way."

Our revival meeting was held last week with Rev. H. L. Isley filling the pulpit. These services were enjoyed by all of those attending. Much good was done and much interest was taken. As Mr. Isley said upon the closing of the meeting, more good was done than we really know.

On Friday morning, July 12, 1929, Mr. George Thomas Tucker was stricken with a brain trouble as he was on his way to work and he lived only a few hours afterwards. Mr. Tucker joined this church when a young man and remained a faithful member until death. He was a loving father and a devoted husband. He was loved by all who knew him and was ready and willing at any time to lend a helping hand.

Mr. Tucker leaves six sons and six daughters with a true and devoted wife and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. There is no other way to express the love for Mr. Tucker other than by that great host of people who gathered around to pay their last tribute to his body. We pray God's richest blessings upon this grief-stricken family and may they follow in his footsteps. Far in the dim and distant future there will be a reunion that shall never close to those who can enter into the beautiful life beyond.

May the God of all comfort bind up their broken hearts, bringing to them the realization that "All things work together for good to them that love God."

STELLA BAILY, Reporter.

New Hope, Vance.—We had a good attendance at our Children's Day services, which were given July 7. We also had with us Rev. R. L. Hethcox, who helped in our revival the following week. He delivered three sermons a day, which were faithfully received. We believe that they will live in the hearts of those who heard them.

We also had several conversions. Two new members were received into the church at the close of our meeting July 12. We are glad to welcome them.

OLIVE PASCHALL.

Bessemer City.—Our revival closed Sunday night, July 7th, with Bro. T. A. Williams as pulpit help. We had a very good meeting, 13 professing faith in Christ. Bro. Williams preached some extra good sermons. We were glad to have him and his good wife with us, as he is our former pastor.

Our Sunday school is improving; we had 158 present yesterday.

Prayer meeting is held on Wednesday evening and C. E. meeting at 6:30 each Sunday.

We are looking forward to our homecoming the first Sunday in August, and wish to extend a hearty welcome to all who will come and enjoy the day with us. Dinner will be served on the church grounds. Pray for us that we may succeed in the work for the Master.

LUCY BRACKETT, Reporter.

Randolph Charge.—Since my last report some things of interest have been done. Congregations have been increasing and interest growing at all of the churches.

All of the churches except Gray's Chapel have held Children's Day services. Good programs were rendered and the attendance and offering very good.

We have begun prayer services at Shiloh church which are held each Sunday night, with attendance and interest very good, considering the fact that this church has not had prayer meetings in several years.

Bethel church has a live Christian Endeavor Society and the young people attend the meetings well. It appears that they are very much interested in the work of the society.

We had a very impressive memorial service at Bethany church the third Sunday in May.

A very good musical program was rendered by the choir. The pastor delivered a memorial sermon to a large and attentive congregation.

Considerable improvements have been made at Gray's Chapel in the past few months. The pews and the floor of the church have been stained, and carpet has been put in the aisles and pulpit. The church has purchased new pews for the arbor, and have collected about $200 with which to purchase material for recovering the arbor.

The annual memorial service was held at Gray's Chapel church the fourth Sunday in May. A large crowd came to pay their tribute of love and respect to the departed relatives and friends. The program consisted of special music by a visiting choir, the church choir, memorial sermon by the pastor, and a quartette from Greensboro. Rev. W. F. Ashburn, of Greensboro, a former pastor, was present and took part in the service.

Five new members have been received by profession of faith at Shiloh church.

Our revival meetings at Shiloh and Bethel will be held in August. The meeting will begin at Shiloh on the second Sunday in August, with Rev. N. G. Bethea, of State Street church, Lexington, as pulpit help. The meeting at Bethel will start on the third Sunday in August. Rev. C. B. Way, of West Forsyth Charge, will assist the pastor at this church. We are hoping for a good revival at each of these and the other churches.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

Kistlers Church, Claveland Charge.—Last Sunday Bro. Ridge brought us a most inspiring message, after which communion service was held.

Our revival begins the first Sunday in August and we welcome one and all to attend. We are hoping for a better revival this time than we have ever had.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely. We are pleased to note an increase in Sunday school attendance.

REPORTER.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Because of sickness in the family, your humble servant, the reporter, has not been on duty right recently, consequently some items of importance doubtless have been overlooked.

During our revival meeting in June a fairly good attendance was noted for both day and night services. Our pastor did good preaching. Bro. T. O. Pender, of Mebane, was song-leader. The song services were greatly enjoyed and especially by the children who were delighted with the opportunity to sing and recite their scripture memory verses. Our people enjoyed having Mr. and Mrs. Pender with us and trust they will come again. There were several additions to the church by profession of faith and by letter. A total of 24 members have been added to our church roll since Conference. We were pleased to receive Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hassell by letter at the morning service yesterday. They come from Mt. Pleasant M. E. church, Greensboro.

The Christian Endeavor Society at a recent reorganization meeting elected Miss Ida Guyer, president; Mr. Herman Yokeley, vice-president, and Miss Halcie Welch, secretary-treasurer.

Sunday school class No. 6 will give a play in the local Junior hall next Monday evening, July 29th. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Election for delegate to Annual Conference will be held next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Messrs. C. B. Welch and J. W. Montgomery are the nominees. It is hoped that a large number of members eligible to vote will be present.

Our Children's Day program will be presented next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. A. J. Payne and Mrs. Vivian Cook have charge of the exercises. We desire a full house on that occasion. It encourages the children as well as adults, and promotes the missionary work.

REPORTER.

Liberty, Davidson Charge.—The work has been progressing very nicely. Sunday school meets every Sunday at 2 o'clock with very good attendance. Mr. C. H. Cranford is superintendent.

Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, preached for us a very interesting sermon at the usual time the third Sunday in July.

On the fourth Sunday in June the township Sunday school convention was held at our church.

On the first Sunday in July we held our Children's Day service with a very interesting program. The attendance was good.

Our revival meeting begins at the usual time, the third Sunday in August. We should all hope and pray for a good meeting.

ANSIE HILL, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Bro. T. F. McCulloch preached for us a good sermon. He made it plain. We were glad to have him preach for us. We were glad to have him in our home Saturday night, and will welcome him any time. We enjoyed his sermon very much.

We had our Children's Day today. Mrs. Pearl Smith and Miss Flador Smith did the training. The children did well. I think everybody enjoyed both the sermon and the children in their recitations.

Our Sunday school has been real good this summer.

Our revival meeting will start next Sunday.
LIZZIE CRANFORD, Reporter.

Davidson.—Our special meetings for this charge will begin as follows: Pine Hill the fourth Sunday in July; Rev. H. L. Powell the help; Alleghany the second Sunday in August; Liberty the third Sunday in August; Pleasant Grove the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. W. L. Carson will be the help at these churches. Lineberry, the first Sunday in September, Rev. J. R. Anderson the help. Chapel Hill camp meeting the third Sunday, Rev. N. G. Bethea the help.

Our third quarterly conference will be held at Lineberry church Saturday before the first Sunday in September at 2 p. m.

Our last Children's Day service was held at Chapel Hill Sunday. The crowd was large and the program was fine. Misses Smiths and Mrs. Cottie Morris made it possible. Following the Children's Day program, Rev. T. F. McCulloch preached to a packed house. His sermon was of a high order and was heard with rapt attention. Age is dealing gently with him and he still retains his mental alertness and fervor of soul. Come again, so say we all.

We regret the illness of our aged Bro. Madison Taylor and his daughter. Our prayers are for their speedy recovery.

The people are still evidencing their love for Bro. Ridge, a former pastor, by visiting him at Lawndale. Bros. Davis, Russell, Miss Kate Frank and Bro. Van Wood's family having visited him.

And now, all together in a hard pull, working, praying, hoping and believing that we may have great meetings at all of our churches.

W. D. REED.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. W. C. Hall, died June 30th, 1929, at a High Point hospital. He had been sick for some time and had been in the Presbyterian Hospital at Charlotte several times. He had the very best medical attention, but it was of no avail. Mr. Hall was so patient in his long suffering. I never heard him complain; he trusted in God and would always say "God's will be done." He loved his charge and was faithful in fulfilling his appointments and visiting the sick. He loved his people and the people thought well of their pastor, and many hearts were made sad by his death. While he was in the hospital he made arrangements with Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte, to carry on his work.

The deceased was born December 8, 1888. He is survived by his wife and four small children; also his father, S. M. Hall, of New Castle, Ind.; one brother, Oscar Hall, of Louisville, Ky., and several half-brothers and sisters.

He was buried at Love Joy church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. George L. Reynolds and Dr. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point. The floral offerings were beautiful.

We extend to the bereaved wife and children our deepest sympathy. May God bless them and protect and care for them.

That heart so clean and white and pure,
No evil thought conceived;
Advice of truth flowed from his lips,
And in him we believed.

God give us more like this noble man,
To adorn this wicked earth.
We point you to his life with pride,
He was a prince from birth.

His body is now laid at rest;
His soul with saints on high;
He's basking in God's sunlight.
Let us meet him by and by.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

Moriah.—Rev. Paul Kennett, of High Point College, spoke to us yesterday at the 11 o'clock service. He brought a very interesting and helpful message, after which he made an earnest appeal in behalf of High Point College.

Our young people have returned from the Leaders' Training School at High Point full of enthusiasm and new ideas. They all had a good time and gave splendid reports of the training school.

Our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. C. F. Scott, and family will leave this week for Richmond, Va., to spend some time.

Mark Witty, son of Mrs. E. M. Witty, has returned home after having undergone a very serious mastoid operation at the Clinic Hospital.

Clothing and Other Gifts

There are several items to report under this heading, but at this writing we are at Jackson Springs and have not our "Gifts Book" with us, so will only report one item this time. Last week Mr. Charles C. Bennett, of Candor, N. C., gave us about 50 bushels of peaches for eating and canning. Besides those eaten and used for making pies we canned about 200 half-gallon cans for winter use. We certainly appreciate Mr. Bennett's kindness.

Being away from home, we were exceedingly late getting our Herald for July 11th, but in it I find this notice. "All churches on Davidson Circuit are requested to bring to some convenient point near your church, fruits, fowls and usable articles for our Children's Home, July 24th, and they will be taken up July 25th. The Home needs them. W. D. Reed."

That is a quick and hearty response to our suggestion for a "Harvest Home Week" for the Home. We certainly appreciate this thoughtfulness on the part of Davidson pastor and people. We are hoping that many other churches will do likewise.

Our friends will be glad to know that Mrs. Dixon is springing back to normal health and strength faster than we dared hope at first. About the time the Herald comes into your homes we will be getting back to our places in the Children's Home.

How Can You Help Us?

Well, friends, if you wish us to stay strong and well in the most taxing job we have ever undertaken, pray for us, and give a little more largely to the Home. No man and his wife can run the Children's Home on its present income. It simply cannot be done. We may wear ourselves out mentally, physically and spiritually but the Home cannot be run on the present rate of income. Somehow ALL Sunday schools should be led to contribute monthly.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

A few of us may spend hours under the juniper tree thinking that the friends of High Point College are very few and far between. This is not the case, I am sure. There are evidences of interest that should not be overlooked, for example: A few years ago Bro. L. L. Wrenn loaned the college $200. Last month he reported the note cancelled and the obligation discharged; that is, he contributed the $200 and interest. I wish I were at liberty to give you the name of the friend who has contributed $100 reported above, but by special request I am withholding it.

It will be observed that a small amount of cash is coming in. I am exceedingly anxious that this should be materially increased during the next few weeks, as there are some pressing obligations for insurance for which provision must be made in addition to the larger obligations of the Board of Education. If only these interested friends throughout the state would make a concerted move the treasurer would experience great relief, and no one would suffer.

—We counted 50 ministers in attendance at the Pastors' Summer Conference. There may have been more. We liked Bro. Curry's way of giving the program in broken doses. We can stand three meals a day pretty well, rather enjoy them, but we balk at the thought of five meals in quick succession. The dinner on Thursday at the Children's Home was enjoyed by three or four hundred people, including the children of the Home. Bro. Dixon was on hand to welcome the guests. The Young People's Training School had an increased attendance this year. The young people seemed to enter seriously into the work of the school.

"There Was No More Sea"

(Rev. 21:1)

A dreadful monster once grappled the world,
And terrified all with angry roar.
No land was safe from his assault,
His growl was heard on every shore.

Devourer of men, with insatiable maw,
As roaring lion he sought his prey:
He never slept or paused for rest,
But pressed his course both night and day.

He filled the world with fear and sorrow,
'Tween friend and friend great gulf he made;
The hearts of men were always heavy
Because of weight on all he laid.

To circumvent this dreadful foe
Was tried in vain by many men.
In course of time our God laid hold—
The Sea was never seen again.

"What Makes a College Christian?"

We find this question discussed and rather vaguely answered in a religious newspaper. It may be difficult to define with precision a Christian college, but common people will agree upon certain conditions and characteristics.

Most will agree that it must be founded with Christian people's money. The purpose of the givers seems somehow to permeate the institution and give moral tone to it. It is true that money inherently has no moral quality, but nevertheless the "taint" of ill-gotten means seems to abide and have a hurtful influence upon the institution to which it goes.

Most people will agree that the trustees of a college should be Christian men or women. The trustees elect the members of the faculty who directly influence the student life.

Certainly all Christians will agree that all teachers in a Christian college should be Christian men or women. The purpose of the Christian college is to Christianize as well as develop the character of the individual student, every student. One unchristian professor may do a world of harm if he is an attractive personality. All college teachers should be sincere and earnest Christians.

Christian people will expect that the Christian college will manifest its Christian character in the choice of its courses of study and its textbooks. It will aim to prepare for Christian service, for noble and useful living, and will be influenced by this aim in the selection of studies.

A Christian college is expected to have wholesome religious exercises, wholly Christian in character. Its chapel services should be means of Christian instruction and inspiration.

The Christian college should be careful to know the character of the speeches by visiting men made in its halls and should see that the Christian standard is not lowered by them.

The Christian college will take great care to see that nothing demoralizing enters into its amusement life. Its amusements will be wholesome.

We know well that a college that teaches atheism and tries to develop worldly and selfish ambitions is not a Christian college.

Colleges are like men: they may be very good or very bad. The existence of bad men enforces all other reasons why you should be a good man. The existence of unchristian colleges makes the existence of Christian colleges imperative.

Decision and Education

Our fathers laid the stress on decision in religion, while some in our day lay the emphasis almost wholly on education. Both decision and education are necessary in the religious life and both should be provided for. Our revival meetings are expected to be times of decision and in the preaching effort is made to influence the will most powerfully, for decision is not decision until it becomes an act of will. Without will there may be conviction, but conviction is not enough. The person under conviction must put forth his own will and determine to be a Christian by the help of divine grace and the help of fellow Christians. An individual may be kept under educational processes all his life and never become a Christian because he never definitely decides to be one. Let not educators deery revival meetings and let not revivalists despise the work of religious education. Both are needed.

—One way to lead the young folks to attend church service is to lead the old folks to attend Sunday school.

—The Sunday school is not for young folks exclusively, and the preaching service is not for old folks exclusively.

—If we would have all the people attend all the services of the church, should we not so vary the services as to accommodate all ages and classes?

—Do parents realize that the church must have their full co-operation in teaching and training their children for a religious and useful and noble life?

—If your child can stand five or six hours a day in the week-day school, could he not stand two or three hours on Sunday?

—If you are responsible for the attendance of your children at the state's school, are you not also responsible for their attendance at the church's school?

—Would not the Sunday school be more interesting if the old folks would attend, too, and would not the preaching service be more interesting if the young folks would attend with the old folks?

SYSTEM IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

By MR. E. L. DOUGLAS, at Pastors' Summer Conference

It is with some hesitancy that I shall attempt to speak to you, who are trained to speak, while I am not. At the same time I appreciate very much the honor of being asked to appear before you and hope that something I may say will direct your thought into channels that are not unprofitable.

In the community in which I was raised, in the mountains of West Virginia, there were three denominations within a radius of a mile who conducted Sunday schools, there was one other denomination which did not believe in Sunday schools; this was the Primitive Baptists, more familiarly known as "Hardshell Baptists." They made good neighbors and were good folks, but they were not progressive and did not have the vision of training the young people through the Sunday school. One of these Primitive Baptist preachers once said in derision that "the Methodist Sunday school is a hotbed to sprout young Christians." It was well said and may each succeeding year in a greater degree prove the description to be a true one. Now it is about this "hotbed" and its relation to the church that I want to talk.

Each of you knows of the changes that have come during our own lifetime. These changes have invaded every profession, they have invaded the home and the life of the individual; scarcely anything is as it was a few years ago. Most of these changes have been in the direction of improvement and have meant a forward step. Business has felt the changed condition and is continually adjusting itself to new conditions. Perhaps nowhere have changes been more marked than in education; think of the strides made in this in our own state. Just a short time ago relatively few students expected to get a high school, let alone a college education, but that day is past and he who wants an education and wants it bad enough may have it. I am proud to say that each year sees a larger number of our young people availing themselves of the opportunities within their grasp. The very fact, however, that our children have these advantages throws an added responsibility upon the church and the church school, for just as business is continually adjusting itself to changed conditions, so must the church and the church school continually adjust themselves to new conditions, and keep their religious educational program abreast of secular education. The religion of Jesus Christ is the same today that it has ever been, but the manner of its presentation can and must keep pace with the best educational methods of the day.

The greatest work in the church is the training of our young people. Are we giving them our best or not? Are we spending the right proportion of our money for them? We certainly are not. Our big church programs seem to reverse the order, and the Sunday school where the need is greatest gets the small end of the budget, if any at all, as usually the Sunday school expenses are not included in the budget, though they certainly should be.

The adults of the church are monopolizing the time and effort of our ministers while our young people who are the hope of our future church, because of the lack of a full and connected program, are either dropping out of the Sunday school or losing interest, so that they do not connect up as working church members. Our adults whose life habits for the most part are already firmly established are demanding for themselves the best preachers and paid singers they can get; in fact we have far better preachers than we deserve. But in some instances the Sunday school runs on less money than the adults pay for their choir. In fact, our own local church spends about four times as much for its music as its Sunday school spends on itself.

These things are not as they should be. First things of importance should come first, and our young people are of first importance. If you want to know what kind of church you will have tomorrow, study your Sunday school of today, for there you will find the answer. The difficulty with our churches today is that the Sunday school of yesterday failed to completely train and properly connect up its youth to the church as active working members. The Sunday school and church of today resemble a chain with a section in the middle entirely gone, making two pieces, one representing the Sunday school, the other piece the church. Now it is our job to supply the missing part and make it into one continuous chain.

We start out well in the younger departments of our schools and they rank very well in comparison with the same grades in our public schools, but as we advance in the different departments we find the difference widening between the Sunday school and public school, to the disadvantage of the Sunday school. This disadvantage of the Sunday school has probably been contributed to by the following:

First, Insufficient Time for Instruction.

Our Sunday schools probably average one hour or less per week of religious instruction while the public schools average about 30 hours per week. What chance has religious education to make the proper impress on the child's life when administered in the proportion of 1 to 30? As compared with all other influences the child comes under, not counting the sleeping hours, the proportion is about one hour of religious education to 100 hours of other influences per week. Is it any wonder our religious educational program does not accomplish all we want it to do?

Would it not be better to continue our Sunday school session from the opening time until the noon hour? This of course would mean revising our entire system, but this is a serious matter and something should be done about it.

Second, Inadequate Buildings.

It seems no matter how large a church is, still there is a lack of sufficient space or lack of arrangement to permit the use of it to accommodate all the departments needed. In our First Church, High Point, we have not sufficient space even for the departments we now have, and we are still short one department to take care of the college age, namely, from 18 to 22 years, which we want to organize and call the "College Department." The lack of this department is the missing part of our organization. Granting that the Sunday school is the most important part of the church, and I believe you will grant this, the school should have adequately arranged space and this space should be provided even before providing for an auditorium.

Whenever you build for Sunday school use, by all means call on our Board of Young People's Work for their assistance in planning the arrangement. They will look out for your future needs and are in position to know what you will need in order to properly divide your school and take care of the necessary departments. This will save money in construction, as the part to be built immediately can later fit in with the complete plan, just as I understand High Point College plans were originally made showing considerably more buildings than now exist, but when these additional buildings are added, as we hope they will be some day, then the plan will be complete, and each building will perform its part in the plan as originally made.

Most church buildings, especially until very recent years, were planned with the sole idea of providing an auditorium, and any provision for the Sunday school was a secondary thought. Let's get the other viewpoint and make provision for space for our young people first.

Third, Lack of Competent Teachers.

Volunteer service as a Sunday school teacher is certainly commendable, but it is certainly difficult to obtain sufficient qualified teachers to provide for all classes. However, the training schools which our Young People's Board is putting on are bound to increase the efficiency of our teaching staff and Brother Lawrence Little should receive the co-operation of every one in any way connected with church or school, for the promotion of these training courses.

Fourth, Lack of Money.

I have already touched on how out of proportion our church school finances are as compared with expenses for other less essentials. Our schools need adequate furniture, desks, chairs, book cases, beautifully finished walls and beautiful pictures, and we do not have them because we do not have the money. And all these things are necessary if we are to create the right impressions and attitudes in the minds of youth.

Fifth, The Lack of a Completely Graded School.

Even when there is but one department lacking it causes a break in the matter of promotions and many students take the opportunity to drop out of Sunday school entirely.

Where you do not have any of your school graded, begin grading with one department at a time, organize it with its superintendent and assistant superintendent, using graded lessons as may be prescribed by our Young People's Board. Then add additional departments from time to time, as they can be worked out.

Sixth, The Lack of Information and Understanding on the Part of Our Lay Membership.

Here at last we may have found the root of all our troubles. I very much doubt if our laymen understand the importance of our youth to the church of tomorrow or realize what a great advancement in church growth would be had if we could but correct the ills I have just been mentioning. It will pay us to correct them, but it needs the co-operation of you ministers to educate our laymen to the great opportunities that we are letting slip away from us. It may take some nerve on your part to put this up to them in plain words but our laymen need waking up to the possibilities of the church school.

The church school, and this term includes our Sunday school, our Christian Endeavor Societies, the Junior Church and the Vacation Bible School and like activities, should train our youth and turn them over to the church as live, active workers, but are we doing it? In most instances we are not. The fact that we are not to any great extent should give us the gravest concern. This is a real problem and it will not be solved until more importance is attached to the work of the church school by the pastor as well as the lay membership.

Our denomination has indeed made a forward step in having a Young People's Board; this board has set up a standard for Methodist Protestant Sunday schools. It means a grading of the school into departments with superintendents and other necessary officers in charge of each department. This standard requirement I referred to also calls for equipment that the departments may be properly housed and supplied with such furnishings as are necessary.

Every Sunday school has its problems, and these problems need to be solved, and here is where our Young People's Board can render a wonderful service to our Sunday schools. By laying your problems before that board you will find that many of them can be easily solved.

I would recommend that our board rate every Sunday school in the conference, and by pointing out our defects show us how we could correct them and thereby raise our rating. This would furnish an incentive towards raising the standard in each school.

You will note that I have not dealt with "System in the Sunday School" as a whole, but rather with certain phases of it, which could be materially improved.

I trust that such faults as I have pointed out will not be considered mere fault-finding on my part, but as constructive criticism, for such it is meant to be.

It is my hope that more thought and study will be given in the future to the adoption of plans recommended by our Young People's Board; that a greater importance be attached to the church school, and that our young people have an ever-increasing opportunity for self-expression and development through the church school and the church.

MUST WE LOSE OUR BIRDS?

An Appeal to Clubs

If the coming of the bluebird may be considered as the first sign of spring, then winter is over in Massachusetts already. He has delivered his annual message, which is, according to John Burroughs, to tell us that "if we please, spring is coming." It is pitiful that we cannot listen to his greeting with the old-time delight, but that our first thought is to wish he would hush his cheery note, and keep his sky-tinted wings closely hidden from the sight of those who seem to seek the extinction of his whole species.

The most discouraging fact that can be proved against woman is the absolute indifference with which she has met the appeals of artistic taste and of humanity to stop this horrible wholesale slaughter of the birds. It is foolish and trifling to plead longer the excuse of ignorance. If women are still ignorant of the economic waste, of the loss to scientific study, of the suffering and destruction caused to gratify their vanity, then it is an impeachment of their intelligence and their common sense, if nothing worse. Every paper in the land has published the statistics of this trade in feathers; and there is hardly one that stands for anything more than reporting the daily news of the world that has not sent out again and again appeals to women to have mercy on these helpless creatures. Nevertheless, everywhere one goes the heart is saddened by the evidences that these appeals are unheeded. One cannot sit in church and look around on the aigrettes, torn from mother-birds, whose little ones were left to starve, and on the wings that might still be glancing in living beauty through the air, making the spring more lovely, without wondering what the gentle Nazarene, whose words we repeat, whose religion we profess, would say to this. He said once that not a sparrow can fall to the ground without the Father.

At first thought it would seem as if every woman must refuse, even if only on grounds of artistic fitness, to wear that on her head which cannot fail to suggest suffering and death to those who look at her. Only a debased artistic sense can find beauty in a dead bird or in a part of a dead bird, when thus used as decoration for a woman's hat. It is not as if she were asked to choose between such ornamentation and bare, unrelieved plainness. Is your milliner so poor in ideas that she has no other resources than those supplied by a trade which robs the earth of its music and gladness and life, giving nothing as a recompense? Then it is time to choose another milliner, for there are many who are glad to second the protest against this wrong.

It is painfully instructive to hear the predictions of eminent scientists touching the influence that the war on birds must have. Already certain species are as extinct as the Mesozoic animals. Certain birds that were common within the memory of those not yet old are so rare that not a single specimen has been seen for years. John Burroughs says that the bluebird has almost vanished from New York state, and the heron is nearly exterminated in Florida. The seabirds along our coasts are disappearing, the wild pigeon has become almost a tradition, and the Smithsonian Institute predicts with authority that soon hardly any species of bird-life will survive except such as are domesticated.

These words are written in the sad consciousness that the larger number of women who still wear bird-breasts and bird-wings are impervious to appeals and arguments alike. Unless the law intervenes to protect these helpless creatures, the reproach against womanhood will continue until the last bluebird has been shot, the last robin snared in the reed swamps of North Carolina, the last brood of nestlings starved, while the mother-bird dies with bleeding breast. It is true that woman is not alone to be blamed for this wholesale destruction, but one needs only to look around him to see that she must bear her full share of responsibility. Yet it must be that there are many who, though discouraged by the fruitlessness of twelve or fifteen years of agitation on this subject, still wish that they might openly prove themselves guiltless in this matter. It would be good to belong to a study class, a woman's club, a church, in which the women had placed themselves unitedly on the right side of this question. The Audubon Society has done much good, but joining it has been largely a matter of individual action. Is it not possible for our organizations of women to consider this matter before all the spring bonnets are bought? Where is the club, not formed expressly for the purpose of protecting the birds, which can claim that not a single member seeks beauty at the cost of a life? Or is there not one anywhere?

It is doubtless true that many women believe still in "the horse-hair kind of aigrettes, which look exactly like real ones"; and possibly, some women have even believed the milliner who assured an officer of the Audubon Society in Boston that all the feathers for sale in her store had been dropped by the birds in flight! It may be equally true as the president of an association of women wrote last week, that "it is always the salt of the earth that insists on wearing them," and that "the saints are the worst offenders—such good, lovely women!" If this is really true, is not the question most serious?—Selected.

—Do you understand everything the preacher says in his sermon? Is that a sufficient reason for your staying away from church? If not, is it a sufficient reason for your children staying away?

—If you were to grade yourself in the matter of Christian influence on a scale from 0 to 100, what would your marking be?

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

July 28, Sunday.—The day was given to Mecklenburg charge in an all-day rally program at Antioch church. We preached at the 11 o'clock hour, and in the afternoon Bro. N. M. Harrison was in charge of the program, with the Sunday school as the central theme. Bro. D. A. McLaurin spoke on "The Essentials of a Successful Sunday School Teacher"; Bro. Harrison discussed "The Young People and the Sunday School"; a Miss Shell, of Beulah church (I do not have her name), gave her impressions of the Young People's Training School; Mrs. Garrett, of the Charlotte church choir, assisted in the program by singing two selections. It was our privilege also to share briefly in this program. At the invitation of Bro. Harrison an orchestra from Fort Mill, S. C., assisted in the services both morning and afternoon. The attendance was not as large as was expected, though a goodly number was present, and the day, we think, was spent to a good purpose. We are very grateful to the charge for $225 which was pledged to High Point College in the closing moments of the afternoon program.

In a business meeting which followed, arrangements were made to continue the work during the remainder of this conference year. Owing to the death of Bro. Hall the charge has been left without a pastor. Bro. Harrison, who looked after the work during the protracted illness of Bro. Hall, will continue to have oversight of the charge for the three remaining months of the conference year. Despite his heavy work at Charlotte, he is doing a splendid work on this field, and he and the Charlotte church have our grateful thanks and the full appreciation of the Mecklenburg churches for this uncompensated service. Bro. Harrison makes no charge for this extra work, in order that the salary promised to Bro. Hall may be paid. The loyalty and the interest of our people here is encouraging, and we trust that the years ahead may find them growing in strength and usefulness. It is our desire to give them every possible help. We hope to visit Zoar and Beulah at some later date.

At night it was our privilege to preach in our Charlotte church. We were impressed again, as we have been before, with the auditorium here. It is not pretentious, but nevertheless attractive and worshipful, and its well-kept condition indicates the becoming appreciation that the congregation has of the church. The attendance was gratifying in numbers and the response to our message pleasing. This church has had a steady growth for several years, and under the wise and energetic leadership of Bro. Harrison we expect this good record to continue. We were glad to hear the people speak well of him. In another report we spoke of their new and well-appointed parsonage. It is one of the best in the conference, and Bro. and Sister Harrison are happily housed in it.

We enjoyed our visit to each of these charges, and all who gave us entertainment, and in any way ministered to our comfort, have our grateful thanks.

Journals

The money received from the sale of the Conference Journals goes direct to Rev. C. W. Bates, our conference secretary. He should have it now, so that bills dependent upon this fund may be settled. Only a small amount has been sent to him. Please, brethren, attend to this matter, and do not leave it to be included in your final report at the close of the conference year. Bro. Bates will expect to hear from you within the next few days. Thank you.

College Campaign

Two brethren report this week—one with $253 to his credit and the other with $400. This is encouraging. One hundred such reports would put us close to the goal. We trust that reports from other brethren will show that they have done equally as well, and even better. The schedule under which we have been working was made out for July, with the exception of three appointments for the first Sunday in August. Further plans for the campaign will be determined upon this week, and announced next week.

Annual Conference Day

Please put it in your calendar—the first Sunday in September—and keep on working up to it. If announced repeatedly from the pulpit, and urged by stewards, we believe that Dr. Brown will be forced into a larger corner about the second week in September when these reports reach him. You, of course, expect to pay your A. C. B. Why not do it on Annual Conference Day, and have it out of the way of the other financial obligations for the year? Get your church officials behind this, Bro. Pastor, and put it over. It can be done.

Consolidation

Much has been said recently through the secular press about the consolidation of certain large banks in the state. The indications are that the merger of these banks will be consummated. Why? Evidently in the interest of economy and profits. Whatever else may be said about business now, one thing is certain; it is merging. I believe that we could let "the children of this world" teach us a lesson here that would be profitable to our conference. We have a number of churches that can hardly hope to grow under present conditions. Some of them were strong churches once, but the changes in local conditions have weakened them, and it is hardly probable that there will be any comeback of their lost strength. The remedy for this condition is to consolidate these churches with other Methodist Protestant churches that are contiguous to them, and build for these united congregations a church centrally located to all of them. The better building that the united church could have, the inspiration of larger congregations, and the more adequate religious programs that could be put on, all make it possible for the consolidated church to render service such as the smaller groups can not hope to do. Time and tact will be necessary to bring us to this idea, but it is our opinion that we will ultimately arrive.

Not Informed

An interested and influential layman said to us just a few days ago, "The reason why people do not pay better to the budgets is because they lack information about the budgets." The Conference New Century Service Commission and Budget Council had just that idea in publishing the "Know Your Church" leaflet, and they have tried to give in this leaflet just the sort of information that this layman thinks the church needs. We believe that it will be read with profit. Several pastors got their supplies at the Summer Conference. If those who did not will notify us, we will mail them supplies at once. Jones pays the freight.

Appointments

August 4, Sunday.—Union Grove, Rev. L. S. Helms, pastor, 11 a. m.; 8 p. m., Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.

August 10-20.—Vacation.

August 11, Sunday.—Shady Grove, Moriah Charge, at 11 a. m.

August 25, Sunday.—Orange Charge, as follows: Hebron, 11 a. m.; Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m.

September 1, Sunday.—Orange Charge, as follows: Union Grove, 11 a. m.; Effland, 8 p. m.

September 8, Sunday.—Creswell Charge.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

THE CALL OF ETERNITY

Some tell us that "other-worldliness" may hinder one's usefulness in the life that now is. We do not believe that there is much danger of this. On the contrary, we hold that a belief in the hereafter and in man's accountability to God that is vivid and constant, tends to incite men to nobler living and an energetic use of their powers in right service to God and humanity.

Take an illustration. Of John Wesley, his brilliant biographer, Dr. W. H. Fitchett thus writes: "In range, speed, intensity, and effectiveness, Wesley must always remain one of the greatest workers known to mankind. He seemed to live many lives in one, and each life was of amazing fullness. He preached more sermons, traveled more miles, published more books, wrote more letters, built more churches, waged more controversies, and influenced more lives than any other man in English history. . . .

"Once when tempted to linger in a lovely landscape, Wesley cried: 'I believe that there is an eternity; I must rise and go hence.' Those words expressed the temper of his life. He lived in the spirit of Andrew Marvel's strong lines:

"'Ever at my back I hear

Time's winged chariots hurrying near.'"

Was it not a feeling akin to this that was expressed by our Lord when He declared: "I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work?"

CONDUCTIVE TO IMMODESTY

We remember, in our childhood, old crones, who clung to their clay pipes, but they were objects of ridicule. They were not imitated. The introduction of the cigarette has popularized tobacco, and expedited its woeful invasion against the children and motherhood of America. Some 18,000 picture theaters augment the tobacco menace by daily parading before our daughters actresses and girls of the demimonde, who smoke, drink and present acts of indecency and wantonness. Feminine modesty and restraint are waning. Only prompt and wise action can save our wives and daughters.—The Light.

—When Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world," did he imply the existence of any duty to exert a Christian influence upon our neighbors?

OUR STORY PAGE

THE DAUGHTER OF A HERO

Myra Grant and Ellen King hurried along the country road toward home, for it looked as though another storm were coming.

"I really wouldn't mind getting caught in it," laughed Ellen, "but mother worries if any of us get wet. I can't see why, but she does, and so, if you have caught your breath, Myra, perhaps we had better run again."

The girls ran, Ellen gaily, Myra with grim determination, for Myra was afraid of the black clouds and all that they portended. It had taken every bit of will power she possessed to start for school that morning after last night's storm. It seemed to Myra that she had always been afraid; afraid of not only thunder and lightning, wind and rain, but of strange noises and dark corners, big dogs and many other things.

When she was a very little girl she would creep trembling into her mother's arms and mother would hold her tight and tell her nothing would hurt her. Then hand in hand they would investigate the fearful thing, and though she never found anything to justify them, yet upon another similar occasion the fears would return.

Some of them returned even now when she was a great girl of twelve years and a student at the junior high school. She never spoke of being afraid now, for she was ashamed.

To her classmates she seemed a shy, studious girl, caring for nothing but her books. None of them suspected that, though she occasionally went on hikes, she did not enjoy them for fear of snakes and other creeping things. But she longed for companionship.

"I can't run another step," gasped Ellen, sinking down upon the grass by the roadside. "Do look; I believe the storm is going around!"

Myra looked nervously about. "Perhaps we had better go on," she said.

"Oh, sit down and rest," laughed Ellen. "We are only a short distance from your house now. Isn't Turtle Creek high!"

Turtle Creek, which flowed along the roadside, and which was normally a pleasant little stream, was now a rushing, raging torrent.

"Father says it is more than three feet higher since the rains," said Myra nervously.

Ellen laughed. "You look at that poor harmless creek as if you were afraid of it."

Myra forced a laugh, for she would not have Ellen suspect that the dark, deep waters, the branches of trees, and other evidences of recent storms that were floating swiftly on and on were to her most terrifying.

As the girls rested, the threatening clouds receded into the horizon and the sun appeared. Myra wondered how long she could keep from her friends the fact that she was a coward. Oh, they must never know, never! She the daughter of a man who had received the Congressional medal for having single-handedly captured a machine gun from the enemy during the Great War! She the daughter of the little mother who had bidden her soldier husband godspeed and had supported herself, little daughter, and baby son on the farm during his absence.

Friends said she too deserved a medal for her cheerfulness, her unceasing toil, her leadership in the patriotic organizations of the community.

Jimmy, her eight-year-old brother, was so very different from herself, Myra felt. He attended the country school and always went across the fields, even though cattle were pastured there.

Jimmy wasn't afraid of anything, Myra mused. He loved big dogs, he caught garter-snakes in his hands. He loved to wade in the shallow places of Turtle Creek, and he was learning to swim. Father would caution Jimmy about taking out the little boat alone, but Myra knew that both father and mother were very proud of Jimmy's fearlessness.

"His father's son," friends called him, although Jimmy looked like mother. She herself resembled her father in looks, but only in looks, the girl thought sadly.

"Why so quiet?" inquired Ellen. Then, without waiting for an answer, she went on: "Let's learn to swim this summer. Most of the town girls can."

"We haven't as much time to spare as town girls have," evaded Myra. "I am planning to help mother a good deal with the flowers this summer, and I want to learn to sew."

"You are a queer girl, Myra," stated Ellen, tossing a pebble into the creek. "You could be the most popular girl in our class if you only would. You are pretty. You are," she repeated, seeing Myra's shy flush. "Maybe I shouldn't tell it, but some of the class want you for president because you are a good student, never quarrel, and are generous and brave."

"Brave!" exclaimed Myra.

"Of course, brave," asserted Ellen. "You can't help but be, for you are like your father. Perhaps you haven't had a chance to prove it yet, but my father says you quiet, retiring people can usually be counted on to do heroic things. No brag or bluster, not doing anything reckless or foolish, but when occasion arises you do heroic things."

"Let's go on," replied Myra, jumping up. "I am getting hungry."

When they reached Myra's home, Ellen's was a quarter of a mile farther on, they found Jimmy waiting for them at the gate.

"Father and mother and Mr. and Mrs. King have driven to Rockford and won't be back until after supper," he said. "They stopped at school to tell me. Ellen is to stay here until they get back. Say, Myra, can't we three have a picnic supper?"

"Oh, let's," cried Ellen.

"We might build a fire in the camp stove in the wood lot, and cook ham and eggs," suggested Myra.

"Oh, I mean a real picnic," scoffed Jimmy. "Let's go to Treasure Island!" He pointed to the tops of some willows and a rock which showed above the dark, swirling waters of the creek which bordered the lawn on the south.

"Treasure Island!" gasped Ellen. "Why, Jimmy Grant, look at Treasure Island!"

Jimmy grinned. "I am looking," he said. "Wouldn't it be fun to go across in the boat and sit on that rock and eat?"

"It would be awful," replied Ellen.

"Come on into the house," said Myra quietly. "Jimmy is being silly."

Though Jimmy had suggested Treasure Island as a joke, the possibilities of the place grew in his mind. It would be fun to sit on the rock with the water rushing beneath them.

When Turtle Creek was its placid, normal self, Treasure Island was a favorite haunt of Jimmy's. At one place the water was shallow so that it could be reached by wading across to it. It was a tiny island, narrow and not very long, with a clump of willows on one end and a huge rock in the center.

They called it Treasure Island, for years ago Myra could sometimes be coaxed to wade across to look for a toy or some other treasure father would hide there for her. Now, occasionally Jimmy could persuade the family to have supper there, and though he preferred to wade across at the certain shallow place, the others would row there in the old flat-bottom boat, approaching the island from the south, where the water was deep.

Jimmy went to where the boat was fastened. The little pier was submerged, but he managed to climb into the boat. For a while he was content to sit in the gently rocking boat, but sitting on the rock of the little island appealed to him more and more. He put the oars in the oarlocks and cut the rope.

The girls hurried about putting things into a basket. Ellen made sandwiches while Myra got plates, paper napkins, ham and eggs, cookies and pickles, and other things the well-stocked pantry afforded.

"Jimmy could be picking up chips for the fire," remarked Myra. "I'll tell him," replied Ellen, going to the door, but though she called again and again Jimmy did not come.

When they heard a faint cry both girls ran out. Jimmy wasn't anywhere in sight. Then they heard, "Myra, help!" "Myra, help!" came again an agonized wail.

Then they saw him; across the deep, swift water of the creek they saw the little figure clinging to the rock on Treasure Island. The boat was floating swiftly down the stream.

"Oh, Myra," came the pitiful wail, "Oh, Myra, come and get me! I'm afraid!"

Myra could neither move nor speak. Ellen sank to the ground, covering her face with her hands. "Myra, he'll drown," she moaned. "Oh, what shall we do?"

Myra did not take her eyes from the white-faced boy clinging to the rock. Again came the gasping cry for help: "Myra, I'm going to fall; I'm afraid! Help me!"

"Hold on tight, Jimmy!" Myra found it was herself that was speaking. "Get up, Ellen," she continued, prodding the crouching form of her friend with her foot. "Run and tell Mr. Shults to come with his boat. Get up and stop crying. Run!"

She reached down and pulled Ellen to her feet. "Hold on tight, Jimmy," she called again. "Ellen has gone for Mr. Shults."

How many times she repeated these words Myra could never afterward remember. Then came the despairing wail, "I can't hold on any more, I'm slipping!"

"Hold on tight, daddy's brave boy. I won't let you fall. See, I'm coming."

And she went. She forced her feet to step into the swift, terrible water. She gritted her teeth, she clenched her hands and went. The shallow fording place was right in line from the pier to the rock, and, though normally it was but a few inches deep at this place, the water came up to her waist, then to her shoulders. It swirled about her, it dizzied her so that she had to stop and close her eyes for a moment, but it was for a moment only.

It really was only a short distance to the rock, but it seemed to Myra that she could never get there. The limb of a tree floating down struck her arm and she almost lost her footing, but she went on and at last stood beside the rock with him.

"You can't fall now, Jimmy, boy," she said, her teeth chattering. "Your feet aren't in the dark water any more, and soon Mr. Shults will come. Hold on tight for a little longer, that's a brave boy."

Then came a man's shout, a girl's hysterical scream, the welcome splashing of oars. Strong hands lifted Jimmy into the boat, and then Myra herself was pulled in. Then she quietly fainted.

"There's my girl," said a voice.

"She is coming to fine," another. "A regular chip off the old block, Grant. It certainly took nerve to wade out into that creek; you say she can't swim? Why I am a strong swimmer and I wouldn't care about venturing out there."

Myra opened her eyes. She was in her own bed. Mrs. King was holding smelling salts under her nose. Father and mother and others were there, but she was too tired to speak. Mother's hand was smoothing her hair. She clasped the hand in her own and went to sleep.

She was petted and praised in the days that followed. Jimmy was her adoring slave. She was elected president of her class. In the local weekly there was a column about the rescue. The villagers would stop her on the streets to tell her she was a fit daughter of a hero father. But Myra wasn't happy.

She sat pale and silent on the porch step one evening. Her father sat down beside her.

"What is troubling you, daughter?" he asked gently.

For a moment Myra hesitated; then she spoke.

"Oh, father," she whispered. "I'm not brave. I was terribly frightened when I went out after Jimmy. I wish I were brave like you, father, but I'm not."

Her father put an arm around her. "Little girl, the world tells us the highest type of bravery is to be afraid and still go on. You will find, too, that by facing your fears you conquer them. This I know, dear.

"Our country has seen fit to honor me, but at that time I was desperately afraid. It was my duty, so I did it. You are my own little daughter, you see. It took courage to tell me too, didn't it?"

And Myra was content.—Jesse M. Lathrop in Western Recorder.

BEWARE OF SECRET SINS

An eagle carrying a serpent in its talons was bitten to the heart and fell to the ground. Have you ever seen a man or a woman in the church fall in the same way? You do not know the secret of the fall, but the omniscient eye of God saw it. That neglect of prayer, that secret dishonesty, that secret tampering with unbelief and error, was the serpent at the heart that brought the eagle down.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

AUG. 4: JESUS' TEACHING ON GOD'S LOVING CARE

Matthew 6:26-32

(Consecration Meeting)

Daily Scripture

July 29.—Immortal love. John 3:16.

July 30.—Minute care. Luke 12:4-7.

July 31.—Absolute confidence. John 19:8-11.

Aug. 1.—Conscious of God. John 8:16-29.

Aug. 2.—Praying for care. John 17:13-17.

Aug. 3.—Trusting to the end. Luke 23:46.

Suggestions for the Meeting

Try to make this meeting a time of real consecration. If you are not in the habit of holding a pre-prayer service, try one for about fifteen minutes before the regular time for meeting. Ask your pastor to be present if possible. Try to have every one present take some part. Assign several Bible quotations showing God's care for animals and his compassion for men. Assign these to members who seldom take part and in this way they will be brought in. Make prayer the main thing in the meeting.

Sing some of the following hymns: "Master, the Tempest Is Raging," "When Love Shines In," "There Shall Be Showers of Blessings," "Count Your Many Blessings," and "His Eye Is on the Sparrow."

You could easily have a short debate on the query. Resolved, That worry shows lack of faith in God, and is a sin for a Christian.

Let the leader of this meeting be instrumental in breaking up the topic into bits and thereby inspiring others to contribute something to the meeting. The leader, in his remarks, may in a measure introduce the scripture references.

The Supreme Message of Jesus

Perhaps the greatest message of Jesus to mankind was that of God's loving care set forth so clearly in John 3:16. All through Jesus' stay on earth we find Him in some way setting forth the loving care of the Father through parable or direct teaching.

His Unlimited Care: We can set no measure or limit on the care of God. Through the words of Jesus we are assured that God watches over us constantly, sees our needs and cares for them. God knows our every need for even as our power is finite the power and knowledge of God is infinite.

God's Care of Individuals: Through the parables and teachings of Jesus we know that we are cared for as individuals—the very hairs of our heads are numbered. In the parable of the lost sheep and also of the prodigal son we are taught that we are counted and missed if we disappear. The parables were given us in terms of the physical, but in reality they deal with the spiritual.

God's Care of the Animals: In order to show us that God cares for us, Jesus taught that God cares for the lower animals. He said: "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your heavenly Father. Are not ye of more value than many sparrows?" Also we know that the heavenly Father feedeth the birds of the air. This lesson may be taught also by the grass of the field and the flowers.

Our Part in God's Care: We are provided for by God through the laws of nature. In order for us to be benefited we must follow those laws of nature, otherwise we will suffer. If we walk in the way, our needs will be provided for, but we must put forth some effort ourselves. This is a challenge to make us seek to know and to do His will.

To Be Answered in the Meeting

1. Name several instances of God's care both in the physical and the spiritual world.

2. Discuss worry and its place in relation to the topic.

3. To whom or what are we to turn if we doubt the loving care of God?

4. What did Jesus teach about God's caring for us in time of temptation?

5. Does trusting in God's care imply doing less than we ordinarily would, or more?

6. Discuss the relationship of the soul's welfare to that of the body's.

Poetry to the Point

THE WEAVER

God fills the world with loveliness and wonder
From thread of heavenly dyes;
He weaves a thread of gold across the meadows,
Of stars across the skies.

But when He bids me set my loom in action,
I stand with drooping head;
I have no heart to weave, so neutral colored
And short my bit of thread.

Let me begin, and trust Him for the future.
Who knows what shining strands,
Twisted from jade and sunbeams, He is keeping

To give into my hands?

—Claribel Weeks Avery.

Thou shouldst be carolling thy Maker's praise,
Poor bird, now fettered and here set to draw,
With graceless toil of beak and added claw,
The meagre food that scarce thy want allays—
And this to gratify the gloating gaze of fools,
Who value nature not a straw.

—Julia Fane.

Love, only love can guide the creature
Up to the Father fount of nature.
What were the soul, did love forsake her?
Love guides the mortal to the Maker.

—Schiller.

And I will trust that He who heeds
The life that lives in mead and wold,
Who hangs you alders' crimson beads,
And stains these masses green and gold,
Will still, as He hath done, incline
His gracious care to me and mine.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Just three months and the Conference year will end, and to date not enough money has been sent in to your treasurer for A. C. B. to meet the expenses of our president. Unless we do better than this, brethren, we shall have nothing when Conference comms for superannuates and church extension. This does not speak very well for a church like ours.

I am told that money is hard to get, and the people are forced to economize. Possibly this is true; but it is not right for Christians to begin to save by withholding from the Lord and the church. The harder the times, the harder we ought to work for the Lord, and the more we ought to give to His cause.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Henderson Church, Circle No. 1, 23 towels, 12 pillow cases, 3 wash cloths, 6 ice tea glasses, 1 bedspread, 2 pillows, 1 piece unbleached sheeting, 4 dozen knives, 4 dozen forks, 6 tablespoons, 12½ dozen soup spoons, 4 yards print material, 45 pieces of girls' clothing, and 16 pieces of boys' clothing.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, 2 slips and some rolls.

New Hope Church, Pageland, one-half bushel sweet potatoes, 5 heads of cabbage, 8 pounds bacon, and 2 towels.

Liberty Church, Davidson, 1 quilt.

Enfield Daily Vacation Bible School, 14 gowns.

Miss Clara Fay Tayloe, State Street, Lexington, 1 dress.

Young Ladies' Class, State Street, Lexington, 6 dresses and 2 pieces of dress material.

Miss Mollie Wheelis, Whitakers, 2 dresses and 1 pair slippers.

Mr. Ingold, "No. 37" bus driver, 10 drinking cups, and 6 jars of candy, amounting to 9 pounds.

Winston-Salem Daily Vacation Bible School, 8 aprons, a buffet set, and some play-things.

Mr. Bennett, Pocahontas Orchards, 50 bushels of peaches for canning.

Mr. McDonald, "300-Acre" Peach Orchards, 5 bushels of good eating peaches.

Philathea Class, Reidsville, one dress for child they are clothing.

General donation from three churches on Davidson Circuit lead on by their pastor. The churches, if I got the word correctly, were Lineberry, Liberty, and Chapel Hill: 4 bushels wheat, 3 bushels beets, 4 chickens, 3 pecks onions, 2 pounds sugar, 9 heads cabbage, 3 pounds dried apples, 8 glasses jelly, 21 cans fruit and pickles, 3 pecks apples, Octagon soap, and soap-wrappers, 1 towel, 6 pieces dress goods, 1 pair pillow slips, 1 dress, 1 apron, 2 pieces of underwear for girls and 2 quilts. A splendid donation from these three churches. Chapel Hill also sent $1.55 in money which is reported above.

Philathea Class, Pleasant Grove, 2 pair pillow cases, 9 pair socks for girls, 11 wash cloths, 4 men's handkerchiefs, 17 women's handkerchiefs, 17 towels, 2 boxes washing powders, 9 cakes toilet soap, 1 tube tooth-paste, 1 little dress, 3 pieces of material for dresses.

We thank you for the money and for the gifts. The July offerings have been so much better than any other month since February. Thank you. Please keep it up.

Our desire is for each Sunday school in the Conference to send a monthly offering. We need this, and each Sunday school needs this blessed privilege. Pastors and Sunday school superintendents can help us to reach this goal.

Our Farm

Our crops are good considering the rainy season, our cows are doing well, the hogs are growing for fall meat, and the chickens look fine. Our boys and girls have worked splendidly for the summer, and we are now shaping our plans for school this fall.

School for the Next Season

Many of you will agree with us and rejoice; a few may differ, but let all of us be willing to try it for a year and watch results.

Our school here in two rooms with two teachers for seven grades is an impossible proposition. We studied it and watched, and we found that no two teachers, however good, could properly teach the students in seven grades.

So we approached the superintendent of the Jamestown schools, the county school authorities, and the State Equalizing Board. These together, agreed to bear the expenses of our children at Jamestown for six months, as per state law, and let us bear the expense for two months and thus give them the full eight months of school under so much better advantages than we can have here until we can have a school building of our own.

After the above privilege was granted we talked with the chairman of the board of trustees and he readily gave his consent. So all our boys and girls of school age will go to Jamestown this coming school year. It will cost us a little less than to keep them in school here, and be far better in other ways.

Operations

While "Mother Dixon" and I were away getting a bit of rest, our daughter, Miss Vista Dixon, together with the other workers, secured the services of Dr. S. S. Coe, Dr. J. W. Austin, Miss Chappin, of the nurses of the Guilford General Hospital, Miss Xannie Stowe, city nurse, and Miss Juanita Crowder, of Greensboro, and set up a temporary operating table in one room, and removed tonsils and adenoids from 16 children. The children are recovering splendidly.

We thank the doctors and the nurses for this service.

The greater number of these were new children which have been taken since we came here.

Dr. S. S. Coe, our regular physician, is now directing that tonsils and adenoids be removed, when necessary, before children are admitted.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

N. B. Some man and wife left a package containing two quilts, during the Summer Conference, while we were away. No report has been made yet because there was no name of persons or church in the package. Please write us, that proper credit may be given. Thank you.

Sec'y Y. P. W., N. C. Branch.

A WORD ABOUT OUR FINANCES

Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D. D.

Because of the confusion that arose at the close of the last General Conference from the merging of our missionary boards, and because of the change in the time of holding the Maryland Annual Conference, the income from the General Conference budget for the first year of this quadrennium was almost $30,000 less than that of the preceding year.

However, when we compare the income from the budget for 14 months, instead of for 12—that is, from May 1, 1927, to June 30, 1928, and from May 1, 1928, to June 30, 1929—the figures are as follows:

May 1, 1927-June 30, 1929, $220,031.98.

May 1, 1928-June 30, 1929, $222,145.00.

If we knew what Mrs. East holds of the current funds of the W. F. M. S. these last figures would be increased.

As an evidence that the unrest among our missionary women has almost disappeared, the following figures from the treasurer's report tell their own story:

Receipts From the W. F. M. S. and W. H. M. S.

May and June, 1928, $3,022.12.

May and June, 1929, $5,151.83.

(This last amount, of course, is almost altogether from the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary).

The treasurer's report also shows an encouraging contrast in our financial start this year, as compared with that of last year.

May and June, 1928, $6,797.94.

May and June, 1929, $40,506.90.

With this fine start, and with our women folks undertaking to raise $100,000 for the budget, we ought to have a great year financially. We will if everybody helps.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Anderson Charge.—July 14th was a good day for us at Liberty Hill. We had good attendance at the regular Sunday school hour and the writer at the usual hour had the pleasure of preaching to a large and attentive congregation. We observed Children's Day at the evening hour. A pageant was rendered by the Sunday school. The pageant committee was made up of Mrs. H. R. McClimon, Mrs. Rome Harrison and Miss Romaine Poole. The music committee was Mr. Glen McClimon, Mr. Nick Smith and Miss Kate Poole. Both committees are to be praised for the splendid work they did in preparing this program.

We were very sorry indeed we did not have room to accommodate all the people. The hour was very much enjoyed by all present. The offering was $9.70—not so much for a large congregation. I wish that we all would cultivate the spirit of giving. Our Savior said it is more blessed to give than to receive; why not try it.

On July 21st we had our children's day service at Fairview. The usual preaching hour was given for this service. The children did their parts well. We certainly feel proud of them at each church. There was a large crowd present to hear them and every one seemed to enjoy the program. Much credit is due Mrs. Estella Connelly and Mrs. Thurman Watson for training the children so well. The offering was $8.00. Mrs. Marshal Nally, one of our Fairview members who has been in a very serious condition at Columbia Hospital, is getting along very nicely and it is hoped that she will soon be at home.

G. B. FERREE.

Rechoboth, Granville Charge.—The fifth Sunday rally, which was held at Flat Rock church, was quite a success. Mr. Hunter, pastor of Henderson M. P. church, led the devotional. Mr. O'Briant spoke on "Rural Churches," also Mr. Clyde Finch gave us a splendid address on "Tithing." He brought out some fine points, backing them up with Bible references. He said his little girl wanted to know if he was going to preach, as he had his Bible in his hand as he was going out to get in the car. His text was based on this: "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings." We are commanded to give one-tenth of our income, this is God's command and if you do not, then God will limit our supply in some way. I have known instances when a person gave and he received doubly more than he had given.

"Be a cheerful giver," my people. For in this, we limit our own selves. "All that we have is thine and of thine own have we given unto thee."

At the noon hour a picnic dinner was served which we enjoyed.

In the afternoon, Supt. E. M. Rollins addressed us. His subject was "Education." He said this was a progressive age. We have larger schools, better roads, but we still have our rural churches. There is a question of unity in the churches as there has been in the schools. At some future date we will see our churches united. Then we will have better trained teachers and preachers.

Mr. Polk Garrett, our former president, was not forgotten. His death bereaves us and we miss him in our churches, his sweet memory in songs, and his cheerful countenance we shall not forget. A prayer in memory of him was offered and then Mr. Baity was elected to fill his place, which will be hard to fill.

The annual revival meeting, which began the first Sunday, came to a close on Friday night. Services were held evening and night. The attendance was fine until near the close of the meeting and the weather was rainy. Rev. A. D. Shelton did the preaching. He gave us some splendid sermons, and we hope they may be of everlasting good to us. The entire community was helped by the fine sermons of this consecrated man. Mr. Pope, singer, from Williamston, directed the singing, which also added lots to the success of the meeting. Several gave their hearts to God, and will unite with the church very soon.

Rev. H. F. Fogleman filled his regular appointment today with a very good sermon.

REPORTER.

July 21.

Bess Chapel.—Our work has been moving along nicely for the past month or two. Our pastor gave us a splendid sermon, as usual Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid met Saturday, July 20th, at the home of Mrs. Nettie Leonhardt and had a very enjoyable evening.

Our new church is almost finished, lacking only a small part of the inside work. We hope to be in it soon.

Our special meeting begins the 2nd Sunday in August. We ask that we may be remembered in your prayers.

REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, is helping Bro. Fogleman, in a revival this week, and we hope for them a great meeting. In the absence of the pastor, Mr. C. C. Lindley spoke at the morning preaching service and Mr. Monroe Bennett at the evening hour for worship. Both these splendid young men are workers in our local church. Bro. Bennett is a ministerial student of High Point College and a member of First Church here. Mr. Lindley is our efficient Baraca teacher and a strong Methodist Protestant.

A number of our young people attended the Leadership Training School at High Point College during the last session and reports were given at the Sunday school today by the following: Miss Kathleen Paschal, our young people's worker, Misses Margaret Rogers, and Katherine Dixon. These reports were splendid and brought many interesting facts of this work to our mind.

Sunday school attendance today was 259 and offering was $12.08. The orchestra is still very active and brought good selections, as usual, today. A junior choir of the younger members of the school is under way and a meeting has been announced for this week, the purpose of which will be to organize this choir.

The prayer meeting Wednesday evening of this week will be conducted by Miss Paschal. We are sure that the leader will give us an interesting message, so let each member plan to attend this service of worship.

The writer and family enjoyed a recent visit with Mr. and Mrs. William Pugh and children, relatives of ours, on the Sapling Ridge work, two days last week. We had a splendid time, of course, and understand that the members of Sapling Ridge are taking subscriptions to go for remodeling and enlarging of the present church building. We hope for them full success in this work.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Graham.—A unique and impressive service was enjoyed at the evening hour Sunday by an appreciative audience that filled the church. A missionary play entitled, "The Pill Bottle," was presented by a caste of characters, who are certainly to be congratulated for the splendid way their parts were acted. Miss Clara Hughes, in directing this play, demonstrated her ability in this line. The solos by Miss Elva Ausley and the quartettes by Messrs. J. D. Foust, P. S. Dixon, P. B. and C. E. Core were other pleasing features of the program. The offering amounted to $17.15.

On the fourth Monday night the Ladies' Auxiliary met at the church. Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. Louise Glenn is president, gave the program.

Several improvements have been made since our last report. The Men's Bible class room has a new front, which adds much to the appearance of the church, and the whole interior is being painted.

REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—We must report the faithfulness of our beloved pastor. He has filled all appointments in a very able and inspiring manner.

Our Sunday school is doing a great work. We have seen the fine results of faithfulness in S. S. work during the past week in our revival meetings. Bro. Morris, of Cleveland County, was the pulpit help, and he is a wonderful preacher, a real evangelist. He certainly told us many things that were helpful to all of us. There were 18 professions and five reclamations, and 18 joined the church. All the new members are members of our Sunday school, excepting one or two.

Saturday night Bro. Hunter preached, or talked, on the vows of the church. This was especially timely to the new members and all that were present enjoyed the information we received.

The third quarterly conference will meet with Shoals church on the third Sunday in August.

We are glad to report the condition of Mrs. Hunter much improved, and that she has been going about her usual work for many days.

We were glad to have with us in our revival services Mrs. Holt Hunter and her son, who are visiting in the home of our pastor.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Matthews Chapel, Greenville Circuit.—Rev. E. G. Cowan filled his appointment at Matthews last Sunday.

Our Sunday school and C. E. Society are very good.

Since our last report we have added several new members to our Christian Endeavor. Our pastor and family joined us, whom we are very glad to have with us.

The third quarterly meeting was held at Ebenezer church July 20. All churches were represented.

There will be Children's Day at Matthews Chapel the second Sunday night in August. Everybody is invited.

Our revival meeting will begin the third Sunday in August. Let us work and pray that we may have a great revival.

ODELL BOWEN, Reporter.

July 29, 1929.

Hebron, Orange.—Last Sunday at 11 o'clock Bro. Williams brought us a most inspiring sermon, after which communion service was held.

Our S. S. has fallen off some in attendance owing to the epidemic of whooping cough.

The baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Smith died from whooping cough. The funeral and burial was at Salem church. Mr. Smith and family have the sympathy of the entire Sunday school in their sad bereavement.

The ladies of the church will hold a lawn party at the church next Saturday, August 3, beginning at 6 o'clock. The proceeds will be used for the purchasing of new Hymnals for the church. The ladies will also serve the Kiwanis club a supper the last Tuesday in August.

Our revival begins the second Sunday in August with two services on Sunday, dinner on the grounds. It will be decided on Sunday as to the hours the services will be held through the week. Rev. J. E. Minnis will assist Bro. Williams in these services.

We are hoping and praying for a good meeting at this place.

Quarterly conference was held at Hebron last Saturday with each church represented. Mr. C. A. Bivins, of Effand, was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Enfield Charge.—Next Sunday, August 4th, will be the beginning of the revival meeting at Whitakers Chapel. Rev. A. D. Shelton is to be our help. We are praying for a good meeting.

The third quarterly conference will convene at the Whitakers Chapel church Wednesday night after the first Sunday at the conclusion of the regular revival services.

During the month of August the churches of Enfield will unite in union night services, with the service being held at a different church each Sunday night. The pastors will decide among themselves who will have charge.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Harmony.—Rev. D. D. Broome and his wife were with us the fourth Sunday and gave us two very splendid sermons. It seems that he gets better each time. The Lord's Supper was administered at the 11 o'clock service.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Our congregations seem to be increasing each Sunday. Sixty-three were present Sunday. We are glad to welcome anyone who will come and join us in our worship.

The officers of our Christian Endeavor were very much encouraged at the meeting Sunday night. Several topics were given out a few days ago and very good papers were gotten up from the topics.

Our Children's Day service will be held the first Sunday night in August. The public is invited to attend.

The singing convention held at our church the third Sunday afternoon in July was a good success. A large congregation was en-tained by the singers and we hope to have them with us again in the near future.

The ladies of the community gave Rev. and Mrs. Broome a pounding Saturday afternoon and many useful gifts were given.

Mrs. B. M. Morrow entertained our C. E. Society Friday evening, July 26. Several games and stunts were carried out, which every one enjoyed. After the games were played, refreshments were served on the porch by members of the social committee.

Our revival meeting will begin the third Sunday in August. Let every one hope and pray that this revival will be a great help and success to our community and the adjoining ones.

Thomasville.—In our teachers' meeting we decided that if the teachers were more loyal to their classes, we would have a far better Sunday school. During this meeting we had some very interesting talks by some of the teachers. Eighty-three and one-third per cent of the teachers were present.

On Sunday morning, July 14, Rev. Edward Suits filled the pulpit while our pastor was away. Mr. Suits delivered a fine sermon. We were glad to have a former pastor with us.

On Sunday, July 21, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, of the West End Church here, preached both morning and night, while Mr. Powell, our pastor, filled his pulpit. Mr. Whitehead's morning sermon was on "Prayer" and his evening theme was, "The Divine Shepherd and His Flock."

We were glad to see an increase in attendance at Sunday school Sunday. We are putting on a campaign to get all the Sunday school people to come back into the church after Sunday school and stay for the morning worship.

The church and community mourns the loss of Mr. E. E. Teague. Mr. Teague, before his long period of illness, was an active member of our Sunday school. He was always ready and willing to help his church in any way he could. He was claimed by death on July 23. May God be with and comfort his sorrowing wife and daughters.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

State Street.—Services Sunday were unusually good all the way through and all were well attended considering the absence of some of our folks who are away on vacation and some sickness.

The beautiful Sunday school lesson, taken from the life of Daniel, was enjoyed much by all the classes.

The message at 11 o'clock by the pastor was a very inspiring one, the text being "Looking to Jesus."

At the evening hour the Sunshine Circle gave a pageant entitled, "God's Will Be Done." Mrs. C. L. Koonts is the efficient superintendent of the Sunshine Circle, and anything done by the children under her leadership is always well done. Many visitors from other denominations enjoyed the pageant with us and were pleased and helped.

The children had given the pageant on Friday afternoon for the missionary society and it was so good that Mrs. Koonts and the children were requested to give it again Sunday night that a larger number might have the privilege of attending.

Mrs. Wilcox, of Kansas, visited friends and relatives in and near Lexington two weeks ago, and was with us in two of the services. Mrs. Wilcox was, before her second marriage, Mrs. Harky, and is well known and loved by a large number of friends here. She has been very generous to us in many ways at different times and on this last visit with us donated $5.00 to be used as was thought best. It was used on the building fund.

Brother Bethea is helping Bro. Whitehead in a series of meetings at one of his churches on the Thomasville charge this week, but will be home for the regular services next Sunday.

REPORTER.

High Point.—A large number of the pupils and teachers of the Sabbath school and their friends picked at Luna Park, the former Golden Beach, near Greensboro, last Thursday afternoon. Many went out at 3 o'clock and enjoyed various sports and games such as swimming, pitching horseshoes, riding on the merry-go-round, etc. A larger number of men came out about 6 o'clock after work hours were over, and a bountiful and delicious picnic supper was spread on tables in the grove. In addition to the menu of friend chicken, baked ham, sandwiches, deviled eggs, pickles, olives, chess pies, cakes of all descriptions, pies, "plain, kivered, and barred," as the North Carolina mountaineer expressed it, there was an abundance of watermelons and lemonade served to the happy party numbering about 250. Truly this annual affair was a delightful occasion.

At the 11 o'clock service on Sunday morning, after listening to a beautiful solo by C. L. Gray, Jr., and the male quartette sang with fine effect, we heard the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, deliver a most impressive sermon on "The Way to God." He said in part that this is a majestic and interesting statement of Jesus: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Disraeli said, "It is a great thing to read a great book, but it is greater to talk with a great individual." The aim and end of life is to be like God. That quaint prayer of a Brittany fisherman, "Keep me, my God, this day, for my boat is so small, and thy ocean so great," is a good one to be on the lips of all of us every day. The world needs to heed this way. I have not preached much about heaven and its location, but I have tried to tell you how to get ready for it, and when the summons comes, you will be prepared for it. Some children upon being asked where they were going, answered that their father had built a home somewhere in the West for their mother and them, and although they did not know its location or how it looked, they were going to live in it. That is like heaven—we do not need to be so much concerned about its location, size, or appearance, for we know Jesus has promised "I go to prepare a place for you," and "In my Father's house are many mansions." S. Parkes Cadman says, "The next great war will be a race war, and when that happens, God help us!" A lecturer made a statement that Jesus was the greatest man on earth, and proceeded to name some of his peers, when a man in the audience shouted out, "My Christ has no peers!" In the Junior church service, which was conducted by Miss Thompson, one of the helpers at the Children's Home in the absence of Rev. Lester Ballard, the topic discussed was "Our National Family."

At the evening service at 8 o'clock the minister exchanged pulpits with Rev. C. P. Coble, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, one of the most consecrated ministers in the city, and who has served for the longest period of time of any pastor in High Point.

The Junior Mission Circle composed of boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 12, under the splendid leadership of Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, assisted by Mrs. John S. Pickett, held an interesting meeting of the church Monday afternoon.

A very timely topic, "How the Church Is Making Our Nation Better," was the subject for discussion at the Senior C. E. service Monday evening. Miss Esther Pritchard presided at this meeting in a capable manner and Mrs. R. I. Farmer played "The Old Refrain" very beautifully. One of the members of this society, Mr. Arnold J. Koonce, is now president of the State C. E. Society, having been elected at the recent convention at Montreat, and the society now holds the banner presented for excellence by the City Union, which is composed of nine societies.

The third quarterly conference convened at 8:30 o'clock, and was presided over by Rev. R. I. Farmer. He and Rev. E. L. Ballard made splendid reports of their activities during the quarter. Mr. Farmer has preached six sermons outside of the church, and made 19 talks and addresses. We have lost by death two members, Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw and Mrs. Lonnie Jones. Our membership now numbers 719. Rev. Mr. Ballard reported that the Vacation Church School which continued for two and one-half weeks was a decided success with an enrollment of 152 and an average attendance of 142. This school was financed by private subscriptions from individuals. He also reported 111 registrations from First Church for the Leadership Training School at High Point College, and these were secured by the faithful efforts of Mr. C. E. Bulla and Miss Margaret Neese. Mr. E. L. Douglas, superintendent of the Sunday school, reported 52 new members for the quarter, and total money raised $291.22. Average attendance has been 352. He made a plea for stronger financial support for this school, which is the stream that feeds the church. The entire school contributes the first Sunday's collections each month to the Children's Home.

Miss Myrtle Davis, president C. E. Society, gave an excellent report; one meeting has been held at Guilford County Sanatorium, at Jamestown, and baskets of flowers have been sent there and to the sick in hospitals of the city and shut-ins. Mrs. S. S. Coe and Mrs. R. T. Pickens both gave reports from the Woman's Auxiliary, which has shown much enthusiasm since the recent merger. Mrs. Pickens as a treasurer reported the sum of $1,014 contributed for the months of April to July inclusive. The disbursements include contributions of $300 to Mr. J. S. Pickett, treasurer of the building fund; $31. for furniture for the new parsonage; $205 to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer of the North Carolina Branch for North Carolina work and New Century Service, besides several minor expenses. Our president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, makes an admirable leader, and the eight circles under their able chairmen are co-operating most loyally and heartily.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard returned Sunday evening from Bridgeport, West Va., where they attended a Leadership Training School.

Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer and children left Tuesday morning for a vacation trip of a month to relatives in points in Ohio.

It was announced at quarterly conference that Mr. E. L. Douglas has been elected delegate to Annual Conference.

Orange Charge.—The third quarterly conference met with the Hebron church Saturday, July 27th. All churches were represented. The usual business was transacted. Pro. C. A. Bivins was declared delegate elected to represent this charge in the next Annual Conference.

The exchange of pulpits between Bro. Carroll and the writer was completed yesterday. The writer was glad to visit the people of Mt. Hermon charge, and was pleased to have Bro. Carroll visit the people of Orange.

We are now looking forward to our special meetings, which are scheduled to begin as follows:

Union Grove, first Sunday in August.

Hebron, second Sunday in August.

Chestnut Ridge, third Sunday in August.

The following brethren have promised to be with us in these meetings: Ot Union Grove, Rev. G. F. Millaway; at Hebron, Rev. J. F. Minnis; at Chestnut Ridge, Rev. J. D. Morris.

We are hoping and praying that the churches may be revived and many may be born into His kingdom. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—Our revival meeting began last Sunday. Bro. B. M. Williams was the pulpit help, and did some extra good preaching. There were 14 who gave their hearts to God and three joined the church Sunday morning. There are some to join yet. Bro. Williams had to leave us Saturday. We enjoyed having him with us and we hope he will come again.

Our pastor preached two splendid sermons Sunday. At the evening service he preached from St. John 14:2, using as a subject "A Prepared Place for Prepared People." In this discourse he made very clear to us that Jesus went to prepare the home, but we must prepare ourselves for the home if we want to go there.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The assistant superintendent, Mr. Clyde Payne, has been going right on with the work while the superintendent, Mr. L. A. Teague, is on a vacation.

The church has given our pastor a two-weeks vacation any time he wishes to take it.

The C. E. Society is going at a rapid rate under the leadership of Mrs. W. G. Myers.

The Brotherhood met Saturday night in the home of Mr. S. L. Murphy with a large attendance.

The third quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening.

MRS. RALPH KENNEDY, Reporter.

Lincolnton.—A revival has been going on at our church for the last week and a half, ending Wednesday, July 25th. It was a grand meeting. A large number of sinners were saved and are now working for God. They are prepared at any moment to meet their God.

All of the girls' Intermediate Sunday school class are Christians. We are trying to get sinners in the lighted path of God. This meeting was conducted by the pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, Rev. Fred R. Love.

The topic of today's lesson was "Preparing for a Life Work." This was a very interesting subject. It was discussed fully by our teacher.

We have a very charming new member in Sunday school by the name of Miss Gertrude Hooper.

WILLIE MAE LEATHERMAN, Reporter.

Tabernacle Charge.—One of the most successful revivals held in the Julian church in many years came to a close last Friday night, July 26, resulting in nine accessions to the church, making 12 additions to this church thus far this year. Rev. C. L. Spencer, pastor of Halifax charge, came on Monday and did all the preaching until the meeting closed. His sermons were instructive and convincing. A fine spirit of harmony prevailed during the meeting, all working together harmoniously for a revival. We thank Rev. W. M. Pike for preaching on Sunday afternoon. Since the pastor had to fill his appointment at Tabernacle he did not hear the sermon, but the members speak highly of his message.

The Children's Day at Tabernacle, which was held on the fifth Sunday in June, was a decided success. The children were well trained, the congregation was large, and the offering was good. Rev. T. F. McCulloch was present and took part on the program.

We are pleased to report that the trustees of Tabernacle church have just finished beautifying the interior of the church at a cost of approximately $200.

The people of this charge continue to remember us with gifts. The following have our thanks: Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hamner, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Royal, and Miss Fannie Coble. H. L. ISLEY.

West Forsyth.—We have been engaged in our special meetings for two weeks and will be in this kind of work for two more weeks. Our first meeting was at Union Hill, which began the second Sunday. At this church we had very good attendance and some of the best preaching in years. Rev. D. I. Garner was the help, and he did a good work. The church people seemed interested in the preaching, but there was not much response to the appeals made to them to work for the salvation of the unsaved. There were not very many unsaved people in the meetings and no interest shown on their part other than the attention they gave to the good sermons by Bro. Garner.

The meeting at Tabernacle church began on the third Sunday, and Rev. D. I. Garner was the help at this church. We had splendid attendance and good interest shown on the part of the people. A good response was made by the church people and some personal work was done in the services. A larger number of unsaved people attended these meetings. There was one conversion during the meeting. The church was practically filled at every night service during the meeting, and the sermons of Bro. Garner received favorable comment from many. One comment was that the preaching was the best they had heard at that church in five years. The meetings at each church closed on Friday night. Two services were held each day, in the afternoon and at night.

The writer wishes to express the appreciation of himself and family and Bro. Garner for the splendid entertainment and hospitality extended by the people of Union Hill and Tabernacle churches during the special meetings. A nice offering was made for Bro. Garner at each of the churches.

The first new one dollar bill came into the possession of the writer as a gift from Clifford Creech, a neighbor of the parsonage family. Mr. Creech is not a Christian, but has proven a splendid friend and neighbor during our residence at the parsonage. We are appreciative of the gift.

Our revival meeting began at Baltimore church Sunday and is in progress this week. Rev. M. C. Henderson, pastor of Bess Chapel and Bessemer City churches, arrived Saturday afternoon and was present for the first service. We had three services Sunday and at each service the church was filled. On Sunday night there was an overflow congregation. Bro. Henderson made a good impression with his interesting and forceful sermons. A fine response was made by the church at the Sunday afternoon service, and also a good response was made by the unsaved people at the night service. Several requested prayer. Miss Leo Sowell, of Pageland, S. C., sang at the service Sunday night. We believe we will have a good meeting.

Our special meeting is to begin at Stony Knoll church next Sunday with three services on the first day. The pastor will have charge of the services during the day, and Rev. J. D. Cranford, of Kernersville, will arrive on Monday and do the preaching during the meeting. We are hoping for a good meeting at this church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Greenville Charge.—Our series of special revival services began yesterday at Philadelphia church with Rev. C. L. Spencer as pulpit help; first Sunday in August at Wesley's Chapel, Rev. J. L. Trollinger as help; second Sunday in August at Ebenezer, Rev. Geo. L. Curry as help; third Sunday in August at Matthews Chapel with Rev. Geo. L. Curry as help; the fourth Sunday in August at Holibs Chapel with Dr. George R. Brown as help, each meeting beginning on Sunday and running through the week following. Pray for us that we may have a gracious ingathering of souls for the kingdom during these meetings.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

PINE RIDGE NOTES

We were delighted to have with us for commencement in May, Rev. Dr. J. N. Link of Starr Church, Baltimore. He made several splendid addresses and interested us all very much. Our enrollment for last year reached exactly two hundred—the largest yet. Outstanding events since the closing of school are a rousing big Fourth of July celebration with at least six different councils of the Jr. O. U. A. M. represented, with four speeches and a patriotic pageant, and our Wolfe County Sunday School Convention, on July 6-7. At this convention the superintendent of Pine Ridge Mission was elected president of the county association for the eleventh year, and this very kind expression of appreciation was adopted, as presented by the committee on resolutions: "To Dr. T. R. Woodford, who has served this county faithfully for ten years as its chief officer, we wish to express our greatest thanks. He has endeared himself to the Sunday school people of every community and we feel that his influence has been far reaching."

Our work program for the summer is fuller than usual. The dam for our greatly increased water supply was finished in May, engine and pump are ordered and we are now laying pipes and completing the storage cistern which will hold fully one thousand barrels of water, located just back of Everett Hall so the water will flow freely to all the building. Only those who have been here can appreciate what a wonderful blessing to the school this will be.

Our saw mill is running hard on a big job of fine timber less than a mile from Pine Ridge, and thus we will be supplied with an abundance of first class lumber of various kinds for our many needs and to meet the demands of the community. Our limestone crusher has done valuable service in providing lime for agricultural purposes, as well as rock for concrete work and roadbuilding.

We have a much larger acreage of oats and soy beans than ever before and because of the favorable season so graciously provided by our heavenly Father, these and all other crops are very prosperous and encouraging.

We are making rather extensive improvements on the original Alvan Drew school building, which will greatly increase its usefulness and make it possible to accommodate a much larger audience at our entertainments, although the cost will be comparatively small. We also have plans to build additions to two of our dormitories to be used principally for toilet rooms.

Our store business continues to develop and already we have some demands for a winter's supply of second-hand clothing, so, friends, get busy as soon as your vacation is over and have a shipment coming to us by the first of October if possible, and we hope will come much sooner. Our freight and express station is Slade, Ky. via L & N R. R. Post office, Pine Ridge, Wolfe county.

It was a great privilege, which I thoroughly enjoyed, to attend the Maryland Conference in June. Although the sadness was beyond expression, I was glad to be in that fellowship—the dearest on earth to me, though there were so many missing. That was my vacation. Aside from that, Mrs. Woodford and I have had one day in Lexington playing with our grandchildren. We hope to have another before school begins August 19th. Praise His name for the strength He gives and the joy of service.

Sincerely,
A. R. WOODFORD.

NEAR HOME CHURCHES

Protestant churches are sacred, and a class is as a family—sacred. A church (over the nation) has its individuality, and is sacred. The M. P. church has come up through persecution so peculiar that she has great reason for taking care of her sacred "individuality." Her creed is worth its weight in gold. The individuality of the M. P. church is so peculiar that she can not afford to spoil it by combining with some other persuasion for the sake of numbers.

Wherever churches hastily combine for the sake of the "multitude" undue excitement is created. The thing to do in all our ways is to look to God to open the way.

The M. P. church is up in front with the finest and the most sacred organizations in the world—and every little class is thus privileged.

The local, and the domestic is very precious.

A hired boy, who was not so domestic, got a larger price on a farm than a "domestic" girl; he earned less money, but got more pay—but the (poor) girl was the loyal one.

OBSERVER.

TROLLINGER REUNION

The Trollinger reunion will be held this year on Wednesday, August 7th, and all relatives of the Trollinger family are urged to be present and a special invitation is extended to all.

The reunion will be held at Haw River on the Methodist church lawn, which is remembered as "The Old Walnut Grove," and Rev. James H. Trollinger is president of the organization and much credit is due him for the interest he has shown in this affair. It was through his efforts that the first Trollinger reunion was ever held, and this year it promises to be one of unusual interest and a special program is planned, and several prominent speakers will be present and make talks that will be interesting.

HENDERSONVILLE ANNUAL BIBLE CONFERENCE

The annual Bible Conference sponsored by the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, will this year be held at Hendersonville, N. C., from Sunday, July 28, through Sunday, August 11. For the 15 days of intensive Bible study a group of eminent and capable speakers will be on hand. Among those announced are: Dr. John Thomas of London, rated as one of the most eloquent Welsh preachers of this generation; Mr. H. A. Ironside, popular Bible teacher of Oakland, Calif.; Mr. A. H. Stewart, a Canadian Bible scholar much in demand, and Rev. J. F. Harrison, of the Moody Extension field staff, who is building an enviable reputation as a young people's worker and Bible teacher of unique power. The conference, under the direction of Mr. W. Earl Robinson, who will also direct the music, will hold its sessions in the auditorium of the high school building.

EASTERN PASTORS' FEDERATION

On July the 27th at Littleton the pastors east of Raleigh met and organized themselves into a federation to be called the Eastern Pastors' Federation of the Methodist Protestant Church of the North Carolina Conference. The pastors present were Dr. T. M. Johnson, Revs. R. A. Hunter, H. F. Fogleman, A. D. Shelton, E. G. Cowan, I. C. Smith, C. L. Spencer, and J. C. Auman. Bros. Hethcox, O'Brian and Thompson were absent.

Dr. T. M. Johnson was elected president; Rev. R. A. Hunter, vice-president, and Rev. J. Clyde Auman, secretary-treasurer.

By motion the officers were asked to be the executive committee of the federation.

The next meeting of the federation will be held on Monday after the fourth Sunday in September at 10 o'clock at the Littleton church.

Mrs. J. M. Cutchin, Jr., the chairman of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First District, was present and made inquiry regarding the possibility of more Women's Auxiliaries being organized. The pastors were asked to co-operate with Mrs. Cutchin in this matter.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Sec'y.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Stafford

J. A. Stafford died July 5th, 1929, age 68 years 10 months and 16 days. He was married to Emma Lindley Perry Oct. 21, 1888. To this union were born four children, two of which died in infancy. He is survived by his wife Emma Stafford, and the following children: Mattie and Carl Stafford. He was a faithful and loving husband and father and an excellent neighbor. He was a loyal member of Center M. P. church, and will be greatly missed in his home, community and the church.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. Ed Harris of the Friends church and his body was laid to rest in Center church cemetery.

J. A. BURGESS.

Johnson

The hearts of the people of Friendship church, Chase City, Va., were made sad by the death of Lusky Johnson, July 6th. This young man came from North Carolina when a small boy. His father and mother moved to Virginia several years ago with their family and located near Chase City, Va. They helped to build Friendship church that they might have a church home. Lusky was converted and joined the church about four years ago. He was 20 years old last February and had been married about five months. He died in the hospital at Chase City where he had some serious operations performed.

He left sweet testimony of his trusting in the Lord in his last hours.

His body was placed in the new burying ground at Friendship church. His young wife and all the bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire church.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Tucker

Almost without warning, Friday morning, July 12, Mr. George Thomas Tucker was called to be with his Master. Mr. Tucker was 64 years of age and was in good health until a few hours before his death. He arose as usual to be about his daily task as a prominent farmer of Davie county, but just as he reached his place of work he was stricken with his fatal illness and at about the hour of 10:30 a. m., his Master called him to take up his work in a better world.

Mr. Tucker leaves to mourn his death, a loving companion, Mrs. Tucker, and twelve children. He was the first, called by death, to break the family ties. He also leaves one sister and three brothers to follow him.

Mr. Tucker was a faithful member of the Elbaville M. P. church for many years and will be greatly missed in that community, not only as a church member but as a farmer and as a friend and neighbor.

Funeral service was conducted at Elbaville church Sunday, July 14th, at 4:30 p. m., by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Rev. C. H. Whitaker, a former pastor. The great host of friends which attended the funeral was evidence enough of Mr. Tucker's esteem in the community. Probably more than twice as many as could be accommodated were present to pay tribute to the departed brother. May God keep and bless the bereaved ones, and may we all, "Watch and pray for we know not the hour when the son of man cometh."

Consolation

Not dead—oh, no! but borne beyond the shadows

Into the full, clear light;

Forever done with mist and cloud and tempest,
Where all is calm and bright.

Not even sleeping—called to glad awakening

In heaven's endless day;

Not still and moveless—stepped from earth's rough places

To walk the King's highway.

Not silent—just passed out of earthly hearing

To sing heaven's sweet, new song;

Not lonely—dearly loved and dearly loving
Amid the white-robed throng.

But not forgetful—keeping fond remembrance

Of dear ones left awhile;

And looking gladly to the bright reunion
With hand-clasp and with smile.

Oh, no, not dead! but past all fear of dying,
And with all suffering o'er—

Say not that I am dead when Jesus calls me
To live forevermore.

—The British Weekly.

Martin

Rev. W. P. Martin was born December 25th, 1850, and died July 6th, 1929. Bro. Martin lived a long and useful life. Born and reared in the Burk's Chapel community, Burke County, he professed faith in Christ and joined the M. P. church at Burk's Chapel at the age of 14 years. From the time of his conversion he began to do active Christian work, holding prayer meetings and any kind of service that he could do to promote the kingdom of God, and continuing in this way until the age of 15 years, at which time he entered the active ministry and spent the rest of his life in preaching the Word and calling on men to repent of their sins. As a result of his preaching many were brought into the knowledge of the truth. He lived a good life and died in the faith.

Bro. Martin leaves to mourn their loss his wife and seven children; four preceded him to the glory land several years ago. Bro. Martin was twice married, first to Miss Jane Albee, second to Miss Lillie Harrington.

"Servant of God, well done; thou art crowned at last."

L. S. HELMS.

Moton

As the church bells were ringing out their summons to all on Sunday morning, June 23rd, 1929, Rev. J. H. Moton answered the summons of other bells and took his flight to the Higher Church to attend the services in heaven, leaving behind him the memory of a life that is an inspiration to all who were fortunate enough to know him.

We that loved him do not yet understand just why God called him, but we know that he has gone to be with his Redeemer over on the other shore and may we remember the words of David, that we cannot bring him back but we can go to him. May the loving hand of God be upon Mrs. Moton, the children and the grandchildren, whom he loved and cherished so dearly.

He has gone, our precious father, he is sleeping in the tomb.

Calmly sleeping till the dawning of the resurrection morn.

They have placed him in the casket and have borne his form away

'Neath a mound of blooming flowers, cold in death our father lies,

But his spirit's with the Angels, in the Home beyond the skies.

Oh, 'tis lonely here without him, in this world of toil and care,

Eut we'll join him with the ransomed in that Land so bright and fair.

Yes, 'twill be a happy meeting, when we meet to part no more

With our friends and loved ones waiting on that bright Eternal Shore.

A Friend.

Cooke

Saturday, June 29th, Mrs. Bhula Fuller Cooke after eating her usual noon meal was taken violently ill with an attack of acute indigestion and before medical aid could be administered she was gone. Her going was a shock to the whole community.

Mrs. Cooke joined Graham M. P. church in 1916 and had been one of our faithful members since coming into the church. She leaves her husband and two small children, also her parents and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. The crowded church showed that she was loved by the whole community. Rev. D. R. Williams her former pastor assisted the pastor in the service.

J. F. MINNIS, Pastor.

Paschall

Arthur Edward Paschall died July 9, 1929, age 10 years 7 months and 9 days.

This little boy had been afflicted the greater part of his life. He had received every attention both from his parents and medical aid but could not be well. Death was a relief to the little boy, for he had suffered so much. Just why he had to suffer thus we can not tell but God does all things well and makes no mistakes. He can and will bring good out of it all and some day we will understand.

His little form was laid to rest in a family burying ground near his father's and mother's home (Mr. and Mrs. Keith Paschall). These dear people have the tender sympathy of all New Hope church and community.

Garmon

Rev. Henry Durant Garmon was born December 17, 1856, and passed on to God July 23, 1929. Bro. Garmon lived a long and useful life. He spent most of his life in the service of God. At 20 he began to preach. He made many sacrifices for the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. He did not consider big salaries, but always considered the will of the Lord.

Bro. Garmon preached on the Connelly Springs charge for 32 years, most of this time as pastor of the charge. He was active until God said "Stop." On the first Sunday he preached at Shady Grove and with the presence of the Spirit with him. On the second Sunday he taught his Sunday school class. The third Sunday also found him at his place with a large class. He said to me: "Brother, teach for me this morning." I refused, feeling that God had a message for us through him. Monday he went about his work as ever. Tuesday he awoke to look another beautiful day. At breakfast he complained of feeling badly. After eating a light breakfast he lay down and in a few minutes went home to glory.

Bro. Garmon leaves to mourn their loss his wife and eight children and six brothers and one sister. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Lowder, a retired M. E. preacher.

May God's blessings rest and abide with the family and host of friends.

Resolutions of Respect

It is with hearts torn with grief that we, the members of Circle No. 5 of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, North Carolina, record the sudden and unexpected death of our beloved friend and co-worker, Lucille Walton Hinshaw, which occurred June 26, 1929.

We realize in her passing that the church has lost a useful and consecrated member, the Woman's Auxiliary a faithful and efficient leader, and we as individuals a sincere personal friend.

Therefore, Be It Resolved:

First—That we bow in humble submission to the will of God, who in His infinite wisdom saw fit to transplant this beautiful full blown rose to a cherished spot in His garden.

Second—That we try to emulate her lovely Christian character by our usefulness and devotion to the work she loved, and carry out the plans she outlined for us.

Third—That we express our heartfelt sympathy to her devoted husband and two precious children, to her mother, brothers and sisters, and assure them that we share with them in this irretrievable loss.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the permanent records of the Circle, and that copies be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and to the family of the deceased.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. C. L. WHITAKER,

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD.

Pritchard

Thomas Pritchard passed away at his home four miles east of Asheboro on the afternoon of July 12. He had been ill for several months.

He was born near Danville, Va. While he was only a boy his father and mother moved to North Carolina. They settled in Davidson County. About 18 years ago he moved to Randolph, where he had resided since.

Forty years ago he married Miss Mary S. Craven, of Davidson County. He is survived by his wife and seven children, five daughters and two sons. They are as follows: Mrs. Thomas Glasgow, of Central Falls; Mrs. Samuel Sechrist, of High Point; Mrs. Murphy Wright, of Cedar Falls; John T. Pritchard, of Washington, D. C.; Zemri F. Pritchard, of Randolph County; Mrs. Jeremiah Glasgow, of Thomasville, and Mrs. Ray Williams, of Thomasville. He is also survived by 22 grand-children, one great-grandchild and one brother, John Pritchard, of Randleman.

The funeral services were held at Spring Hill church, of West Thomasville Charge, on July 14, at 11 o'clock. Services were conducted by the pastor of Mrs. Pritchard, Rev. T. J. Whitehead.

Allred

Annie Hester Cagle Allred, daughter of the late George and Mary Cagle died July 9, 1929, age 65 years and four days.

In early life she was married to James C. Allred, who preceded her to his reward on April 23, 1927. To this union were born eleven children, nine of whom still survive, three son and six daughters. She is also survived by three brothers and three sisters.

She was a staunch church member and friend, and until afflictions forbade her, she was a most devoted mother and wife.

The funeral service was held at Grays Chapel Methodist Protestant church on July 10, 1929, at 2:30 p. m., by Rev. T. A. Williams, Rev. C. W. Bates and the writer. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morning. May the bereaved be comforted by the comforting Spirit of the Master.

REV. H. D. GARMON PASSES

Word came to us Sunday of the passing of Rev. H. D. Garmon, a licensed preacher of Connelly Springs charge. He died on Tuesday, July 23, and was buried on Thursday at Shady Grove church. We understand that his pastor, Rev. L. S. Helms, was in charge of the funeral services. Bro. Garmon's home was within the bounds of Connelly Springs charge, and for a number of years he was assigned to the charge as pastor. He impressed us as being a good man. Our tender sympathies are hereby extended to the bereaved family.

WESTMINSTER COLLEGE CAMPAIGN

The campaign is under the direct management of the Board of Christian Education, personally supervised by myself. You will appreciate the responsibility involved and that such an added and heavy task cannot be carried on without the fullest co-operation of all concerned. This plan is being followed in order to keep the expenses down to the lowest possible figure. Special financing agencies can be employed but that would double the cost of the campaign.

1. Our headquarters are in the college at Tehuacana, Texas, and all correspondence relating to the campaign or the college should be sent to me here.

2. Rev. A. R. Corn, Adrian, Michigan, and Rev. J. W. Shell, Beaver Falls, Pa., together with Mr. C. A. Sutton and Mr. Paul Howell, of the Oklahoma Conference, graduates this year of the college, will assist in this work.

3. The first thing they will do is to gather the names of those of our friends who are able to make a subscription to the college.

4. We will correspond with these people and try to inform them of the work, needs and prospects of the school.

5. The next step will be to visit these friends in their homes and secure their pledges.

It is a simple plan but it will fail utterly if the pastors of this area do not give us all the help and encouragement in their power. We know you will do your best.

Sincerely yours,

FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

Whereas, The State of North Carolina in the first quarter of the 20th century has made an astounding record of progress which should now be reviewed by our citizens and made known to all interested Americans; not in a spirit of pride or boasting should this be done, but in a spirit of thanksgiving, aspiration, and dedication to the far greater tasks that lie yet ahead of us. We must make "That which we have done but earnest of the things we yet shall do." And

Whereas, in this spirit the last General Assembly of North Carolina provided for the Statewide observance of the week of October 14-19 as "North Carolina Home-Coming Week" with the request that all native sons and daughters of North Carolina now residing outside the State be invited to return that week and participate in a great State homecoming celebration at the State capital and in local celebrations in every progressive county of the State where such meetings can be arranged for.

Now, therefore, I, O. Max Gardner, as Governor of the State, in accordance with this act of the Legislature, do hereby proclaim the week of October 14-19 as "North Carolina Home-Coming Week," and call upon all officials, citizens and the press of the State to co-operate in promoting this progressive movement.

Life's High Privilege

God hopes to make a man of you:
Let His high aim be your aim too.
Don't be a bear or snarling dog,
A cunning fox or greedy hog,
A sneaking snake or croaking frog.
Be a man!

God hopes to make a saint of you:
To thought of God be ever true.
Don't wallow in the mire of sin,
Don't give yourself to wine or gin,
Don't fill the air with horrid din.
Be a saint!

God hopes to make an angel of you:
Keep His high hope in constant view.
Give up your schemes most cheerfully,
Stand by and wait most willingly,
Speak out and say, O Lord, send me!
Be an angel!

God hopes to make a son of you:
What greater thing can He e'er do?
Will you prefer to be a slave,
To be a fool, to be a knave,
To stand at last in hell's conclave?
Be a son of God!

God's Natural Deliverances

Readers of the Bible are much impressed with God's supernatural deliverances: Noah from the Flood; the Israelites from the Red Sea; Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego from the fire; Daniel from the lions. In all these cases the merciful and mighty hand of God appears. Such is the force of these narratives that some would almost lose faith in God's providential care should these accounts be proved mere stories. But as a matter of fact are not God's natural deliverances much more numerous and much greater than these described by Bible writers? Think of the deliverance of the world's present population from death by famine. God does it year after year and the fact excites no wonder. But isn't it really wonderful? Then think of the numerous possible causes of death to men. Death from wild beasts, death from poisonous reptiles, death from deadly plants or insects, death from disease germs, such as the typhoid bacillus. In the midst of innumerable foes, man is preserved generation after generation. Our lives are due to the invisible restraints of God upon the forces that would bring us death. He may not save us in the lions' den, but He saves us from the lions' den. He saves us from dangers that we never see or know. Our God is not simply an occasional deliverer, He is a constant deliverer.

Bishop Cannon's Defense

Various attacks upon Bishop Cannon have moved him to write at length in his own defense. We have read most of what he says in reply to the charges against him. We are convinced that aside from his purchase of stocks there is no ground for any of the charges. In the matter of purchasing stocks it takes an expert to discriminate between the legitimate and the illegitimate transaction. And Bishop Cannon by reason of his many business activities had become something of an expert; certainly he was not a novice. Moreover, he declares that he gave the matter the closest scrutiny to assure himself that the deal was legitimate.

The main question in judgment of Bishop Cannon is not whether he erred in some one or more transactions. The main question is what his general moral character is, whether his personality is now on the side of morality or immorality. Our judgment is that friends of morality and good government have in Bishop Cannon a sincere co-worker and strong advocate of their cause, and they ought to assure him of their confidence and pray that he may be spared to continue his powerful onslaughts against the enemies of society and good government.

Edison Casts His Mantle

Edison, the famous inventor, is 82 years old. He is conscious of the value to the world of his researches and inventions and perhaps wishes to perpetuate his name. He has therefore sought for one fit to be his successor. He has gone about it in a methodical way, holding a contest in each of the states for candidates, and then has had a final contest among the states' candidates. This resulted in the selection of a young man from the state of Washington, Wilbur B. Huston. He is described as "a spectacled youth," and is the son of a Protestant Episcopal bishop. He is to continue his education at Edison's expense at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Most inventors are said to be weak in business qualifications. Mr. Edison has been an exception to the rule. He has known how to commercialize his inventions. He is unquestionably a great inventor, but we believe there are others as great who do not bulk nearly so large in the eyes of the world. Whether young Huston will succeed to the place of influence held by Edison can be determined only by time. The position of the young man is not wholly enviable. It may spoil a good Huston to make a poor Edison.

PILLARS OF SOCIETY

MODERN CHURCH BUILDING AND EQUIPMENT

By G. L. REYNOLDS, at Summer Conference

Location

Of the many problems confronting those who contemplate the building of a modern church, none is more important than the wise choice of a site. A mistake made in the location will not only hinder the growth of the church but will mar its usefulness along many important lines. In this consideration there are many things that may be thought of, and the first we consider is that of convenience. Of course it is impossible to locate near every member's door, yet locate somewhere as near as possible to the geographic center after giving all other matters proper consideration.

The modern church should be a beacon light in the community to which people may be attracted; so located as to be most easily seen, and a reminder of religion and worship. It is false economy and an unwise business method to choose a location under a hill or on some back alley just because some kind-hearted brother offers to give the site or sell it cheaply. Some might argue the advisability of accepting the cheap or donated lot and thus be able to erect a more costly building. To do this we are satisfied would be a fatal mistake.

Another matter too often unthought of and unappreciated is its landscape environment. A church, so distinct a type from other buildings, calls for a setting, appropriate, adding emphasis and beauty to its architecture. If possible, it should have land enough for a playground. If this can not be had on the church lot, then purchase a playground as nearby as possible. The modern church will have this playground and a competent manager who will meet with the children, discipline, instruct, and direct their physical powers. Then, too, the church lot should be large enough for a front lawn or terrace where trees, shrubbery, and vines can be planted. A beautiful church lawn adds both beauty and dignity to any church building. Facing a park, or at the intersection of residential streets, is a very desirable location, as it becomes a constant reminder of the service which it is called upon to render. Because of the limitations of the site, both in its relations to the other buildings and its form and size, it is impossible for many churches to enjoy the beauty of a lawn or a shady grove.

Last but not least, the modern church should be located in a quiet place. No one can possibly keep himself in a worshipful mood when passing trains or rapidly moving automobiles make it so he can hardly hear the voice of the leader.

In the location of a country church we would suggest a place that can be easily seen and reached from the highway. Locate near some good highway and yet far enough away so as not to be disturbed by the traffic.

Architecture

Among the different styles of architecture the ones most suited to church building may be brought within the range of Gothic, Classic, Romanesque, or Renaissance. There are many styles and if interested we would refer you to the "Encyclopædia Britannica," vol. II, page 382. There you can get all the information you may want. Suffice it to say here that the church architecture of today is a conglomerate growing out of the effort to continue the architectural types of the past, while the demands of the modern church and the conceptions of its task have undergone radical and far-reaching changes. The most significant change has come about within the last few years in the new emphasis upon the teaching function of the church and the more complete provision for the organization and direction of the activities of the membership. This requires of the church building that it shall be a school building, and a workshop, as well as a place for worship and preaching. This conception of the function of the church, as embracing the great task of religious education, with its schedule of instruction and training and the organization of all the forces of the church for service, is not only supplemental or subsidiary to more important functions of the church, but is of the very essence and heart of the work which the church is set to do. It is just as much a part of the work of the church as preaching and worship in the congregation. It therefore follows that a type of church architecture intended to fulfill the idea and purpose alone of serving a single congregation met to hear preaching and engage in worship is neither in spirit nor in form adapted to the complete needs of the modern church. The evolution of the church program necessarily calls for the evolution of the church building. Then choose that form of architecture best suited to the actual needs in the building.

Cost

It is not our aim here to attempt to say how much it would cost to erect a modern church building. That would depend upon the size of the building, materials used, etc. We would say, however, "Keep the cost within the ability of the folks to pay." Make no debt unless the people are both able and willing to pay it. Making debts beyond the ability and willingness of the members to pay is a bad policy, and one that has more or less weakened the cause in some localities. We would not say, "Never go in debt." Some people will help more in the payment of a debt than in the first cost, but as pastors, we should not leave an embarrassing debt for our successor to handle. This places upon him a handicap that ought to be avoided. It is much easier to go in debt and build a fine church or a fine parsonage than it is to follow and pay the bills.

The Plan

The modern church should be the noblest, the most beautiful, and the most stable building in all the community. No imitations or shams should enter into the construction of God's house. If available funds are sufficient, the house should be built of stone, but if this can not be done, then use brick or any good material the price of which should be kept within the ability of the folks to pay. If compelled to use wood, get the very best obtainable and see to it that no shoddy material is used, as no church building should reflect the dishonesty of building in the things which deceive the eye or mar the possible beauty of the house.

The modern church must house the congregation assembled for the purpose of worship, and in addition to this it must also house a departmental Sunday school. It must be built not only to meet present but future needs. It is doubtful if there are any churches in our conference today but that now or soon will be in need of more rooms.

The departmental Sunday school as now organized recognizes seven grades or departments, as follows:

Cradle Roll Class (years two and three); Beginners' Department (four and five); Primary Department (six, seven and eight); Junior Department (nine, ten and eleven); Intermediate Department (twelve, thirteen and fourteen); Senior Department (fifteen, sixteen and seventeen); Young People's Department (eighteen to twenty-three); Adult Department (twenty-four and over).

Each department should have an assembly room with adjacent class rooms for each division. We no longer doubt the necessity of having separate class rooms to meet the intellectual needs of the child. With the fuller study of child nature and the discovery of his widely divergent intellectual needs has also come the idea that his devotional needs vary with growth and development, just as do his intellectual needs; and the Sunday school, as the school of religion, must provide for the training of his devotional and expressional life. And in order to do this there must be a worship service adapted to the needs of his group. No wonder it has become so difficult to get the children to remain for the worship and preaching service of the adult congregation, when the entire service is beyond their ability to comprehend. This is being remedied to some extent in some of our larger churches by the organization of the Junior church; but this Junior church does not meet the needs of all the grades. Then in order to meet this need for a worship service adapted to the needs of the group and to provide for the direction of activities and for the development of leadership within the group, the modern Sunday school building must provide not only separate class rooms but a separate assembly room for each grade or department.

Before leaving this part of the discussion, we would suggest that each department have its own library. The Juniors, Intermediates, and Seniors do not need the same reading matter. Then, too, for each department to have its own library and librarian would be a help in preparing the children for similar services higher up in their stages of development. Insist on promptness and proper care in handling all matters pertaining to the library.

In the basement we would have an assembly room for the Sunday school same size as main auditorium which can also be used for dining room. Adjacent to this would be the kitchen, and in the rear we would have mothers' room, cradle roll, Beginners' and Junior Departments. There should be plenty of windows so as to admit all the light needed.

On the first floor would be the main auditorium to house the congregation assembled for worship. This should not be too large but large enough to house the entire membership of the church and a reasonable number of visitors. On this floor we would have ladies' parlor, pastor's study, choir room, and a separate room for the Sunday school superintendent. We would also house at least two of the departments of the school and perhaps two or more adult classes. On the second floor we would have whatever rooms are needed to finish housing a departmental Sunday school. This is just a brief outline of what we consider a "modern church." The architect would be expected to make any necessary changes and put on the finishing touch.

Equipment

After the church has been finished and pronounced "modern" in every respect, the best work can not be done unless our equipment is also modern. It is not our purpose here to discuss this in detail but rather along general lines.

Comfort should be the main thing sought not only in seating the auditorium, but in all the departments and class rooms. No child will be attentive unless comfortably seated. No adult can worship properly unless at ease physically. I would, therefore, see to it that all rooms within the building have comfortable seats and all furniture needed to make everybody feel at ease. There should be built-in blackboards, teachers' desks, chairs, maps, charts, and whatever may be needed to teach in a modern way. This applies to all departments of the Sunday school.

The most important equipment any church can have, as we see it, is a spiritually-minded congregation, and a properly trained teaching force in the Sunday school. Isaiah tells us that when the church travails there are sons and daughters born into his kingdom. No pastor, with a worldly-minded and spiritually dead congregation can do the work God wants done in the modern church. By a properly trained teaching force we mean:

1. Those who have been actually trained in the art of teaching.
2. Those who have been regenerated and still know God.
3. Those who regard the Sunday school as a real school.
4. Those who understand children.

In our public schools we have only the very best trained teachers money can hire. When our children are under the care of these for five days in the week, and then go to the church on Sunday and have as teacher some one as described by Bro. E. S. Wills in the HERALD a few weeks ago, no wonder he forms a low idea of the Sunday school and the Lord's house. Our Sunday school teachers should not only instruct and train the pupils in right living, but should help them "develop a personality." They should not merely be content when they instruct the pupils and help them to gain knowledge, but should help them live Christianity. The responsibilities of the modern teacher are unusually great and we fear many have not yet waked up to that fact.

In closing we would say that the "modern church" should have a fireproof vault somewhere so that all records may be safely kept. These records should contain a correct history of the church and all events of importance that may happen.

JAZZ CHURCH MUSIC

It may sound rather odd to many people to say that we permit jazz tunes in many of our church services, but it is nevertheless exactly what many of our modern churches are doing.

I do not advocate dull, lifeless music for the church service, but I do think we should substitute for some of our present songs those that have a greater inspirational theme in them. I was struck very forcibly a few weeks ago by a statement made by Miss Flora Davis, North Carolina Sunday school leader, in an address she delivered at a township Sunday school convention in Davidson County.

Miss Davis said that such hymns as "Brighten the Corner Where You Are" and "In the Garden" should have no place in our devotional services. I heartily agree with Miss Davis.

On the one hand, the rhythm of "Brighten the Corner Where You Are" tends to make one pat the feet and hands, while it is being played, and I do not think that the church of God was ever intended for such things. It is more sacred to me than to want to see it desecrated in that way.

What are the words of the song "In the Garden" but a sickly, sentimental theme in both words and music?

What about the rag playing of our pianist in our churches? I wonder how many like to hear the pianist rag the church music? I know that this is called the "Jazz Age," but I do not think it should extend into our church services.

I was in a singing recently where the pianist literally tore the piano up; ragging the music for a quartet. I am sure that the story of the song would have been carried to the audience more forcibly and with greater spiritual effect had the pianist refrained from the ragtime theatrical playing. Instead of getting the story in song, the rhythm went to a large majority of the audience's feet, I vouch to say. I say we do not need this kind of playing in our churches.

I have served as pianist for a number of years; but when I cannot go to my church and play in the spirit God intended we should play, then I shall refrain from playing at all.

I also think that we have sadly wandered away from our "Church Hymnal" in many of our churches in the past few years; where can we find a greater collection of inspirational, gospel songs than in our Church Hymnal?

Let us use our snappy, jazzy, raggy songs on our picnics and outings, but even then discriminate between the good and the bad; but let us refrain from using these in our Sunday school and other church services.

In conclusion I would say, let us be careful what songs and literature we place into the hands of our children. It is just as easy for us to create within our young people a taste for the higher, good, and worthwhile music as it is for the low, cheap, and jazzy type.

I would be glad to hear from others, through the HERALD, of their opinions in regard to our present-day church music.

Denton, N. C., Aug. 6, 1929. W. MARVIN SEXTON.

BEHIND THE PURDAH

Purdah is the Hindustani word for curtain, especially for that curtain or screen which separates the women and girls from public observation. Zenana is a term, common to Hindustani and Persian, to designate the part of the dwelling in which the women and family live. Sometimes, too frequently perhaps, it is synonymous with harem.

The style of architecture prevalent in India has an open courtyard in the center of the house. In poor homes, the courtyard is small and ill paved; in the homes of the wealthy it may be spacious, well kept, and, if water is available, beautified with flowers and gardens. The doorway from the street leads through a passage, often dark, into the court and thence to the rooms and various apartments built around it. Rarely are there windows or other doors opening to the outside. Usually the houses are of one story, but if there be more, access is had to the upper stories from the inside. Where roofs are flat, they are frequently screened and used for living quarters in the cool of the day and for sleeping purposes at night. In wealthy homes, the ceilings are high, often being twenty to twenty-five feet to give protection from the heat. Sometimes those of the poor are scarcely sufficiently high for the European of ordinary height to stand erect.

Among both Hindus and Mohammedans the home is kept ceremonially clean. But, according to standards of hygiene and sanitation, ceremonially clean may still be wretched and squalid: piles of refuse and waste food brushed into a corner; inadequate drainage; innumerable flies and other insects; poor, if any, ventilation in the rooms.

The joint family system prevails: that is, the earnings of the entire family are given over to the father or grandfather; or, in event neither is living, the eldest son takes charge. When the sons marry, their wives come into the house and the entire household and all its activities are under the direction of the head of the house, who dispenses money to his own family and to the families of his sons for all their needs—as he sees them.

Into the zenana and behind the purdah comes the new wife, and in hundreds of thousands of instances never again leaves until she is carried to the grave—among the Mohammedans—or to the burning-ghat—among the Hindus. In those instances where she does leave her home, the Mohammedan woman wears a boorkha—a long, bag-like garment extending from the top of the head to the ground, with only two tiny openings through which to see—and the Hindu woman rides either in a screened doolie—a little seat about two feet square suspended from carrying poles—or in a closed palanquin. Both of these are carried by coolies. Should a journey by rail be undertaken, the women will be placed in a special compartment reserved for their sex, or, if they travel by ordinary coach with male members of their family, they huddle in a corner, carefully wrapped in their veils or purdahs.

In North India the seclusion is usually thorough and absolute, and it penetrates far into the South as well. Women have come to accept it as part of their fate, and regard it as indication of their modesty and chastity; for no respectable woman, except peasants, may appear publicly. In Bengal, however, which prides itself on being most advanced, and in the hills, the seclusion of the purdah is much less prevalent and strict.

Rarely do the women behind the purdah have even the most elementary education. Only two per cent of India's women are literate, and ninety-eight per cent of that two per cent are among the Christian community. They spend their days in cooking—always awaiting the pleasure of the male members of the family to eat and never eating before the men are served—and in living amicably or querulously with the various in-laws, and in looking after children. They have no breadth of intellectual interest, but only gossip and perhaps some simple handicraft wherewith to while away the time. An event of unusual interest is the visit of a friend of their husbands or brothers and more especially if he be a European. Themselves unseen, but peeping through the purdah of thin cloth or bamboo screen, no particular of the visitor's dress, intonation, slightest gesture, or his appreciation of the refreshments, which are always served as a mark of hospitality, escapes their minute observation. And for days and days to come the review of such visits enlivens the routine of the inmates' monotonous existence.

One of the most potent factors in brightening the lives of the women in such homes is the work done by wives of missionaries, Indian Christian women, members of foreign mission groups, and occasionally by modern social reform enterprises. Women of these groups visit the women in the zenanas at regular intervals and teach them to read and write in their vernaculars, sewing, simple hygiene, caring for children, ways of making their homes more attractive and livable, and in all instances bring a depth to their mental and spiritual outlook which rolls back the vistas of their simple horizons to distances far beyond any that they had ever dreamed existed. That these Memsahibas and Missahibas bring comfort and joy and that their efforts are sincerely appreciated is abundantly evidenced by the interest and anxious pleasure with which the women await these periodic visits, and by the fact that husbands and sons are constantly imploring workers to add their homes to the visiting lists. Frequently it is to these unselfish workers that homes turn first in times of difficulty, distress, and sorrow in the hope that they may be able to find that for which they have nowhere else to seek.

Where work among purdah women has been long established, purdah parties are sometimes held. It is no simple task; weeks in advance preparations begin. To the woman of the purdah who has not previously attended, on hearing that such a party is to be held, come new and strange emotions: traditional modesty, anxiety for her respectability; a dread that once outside of her home she should not again find it or be returned to it; fear lest some male member of her race might chance to gaze upon her face; anticipation of a ride through the streets; opportunity to meet a large group of women; the universal feminine problem of dress; but, greatest of all, the difficulty of securing the consent of the house! Fathers and husbands make careful inquiry and satisfy themselves that the Memsahibas and Missahibas will take proper precautions in screening the scene of the party so that no outsider may see within.

The hostesses have their problems too. If a large hall is available, it is somewhat simplified; if not, the lawn must be screened to a height of at least eight or ten feet; refreshments, usually consisting of "sweetmeats" served on little clay dishes or plates made of leaves, and sherbet in clay tumblers, must all be arranged in advance by ceremonially clean hands, with those for the Hindus placed in one section and those for the Mohammedans in another; little gifts of trinkets are to be secured; and screened carriages with trustworthy drivers provided to bring some of the guests and to return them to their homes, and in some cases timidity or male authority requires that they be personally escorted to and from the party. Before the day set, the hostesses try to know the number they may expect, but even the most careful estimate is highly problematic: half as many as expected or twice the number invited may appear!

The day comes. Hours before the appointed time the less timid begin to arrive, and until the hour for closing they straggle in. What, after all, is time? When they have satisfied themselves that all is safe, they lay aside their veils and boorkhas and give themselves over to a minutely intimate examination of every part of the house and of each other. With an enthusiasm far keener than that of a child let free from school, they rush about to inspect chairs, pictures, voices coming out of a box, and so many things of new and strange uses. Those who have been to such occasions before help initiate those who have come for the first time. Hubbub, confusion, a vast multitude—perhaps as many as two hundred people—chatter, chatter, chatter. The refreshments, the gifts, and the task of getting the guests into their conveyances and safely home in due time. "Memsahiba, let us stay just a little longer." "Why must we go?" And the anxious hostesses know that the hour is late and that not to keep faith with the home folk would bring displeasure and that the poor women would suffer. But the lives of the women behind the purdah have been brightened and for weeks and months they live over and over again that glorious afternoon. "All the world was there!" And, until the party of next year, time drags on with that unending tediousness which eventually brings Christmas and the annual pilgrimage of Santa Claus to childhood.

Sometimes into the hearts of fathers and mothers of such homes as these—orthodox and strict in ceremonial observances beyond our ability to understand or comprehend—the Memsahibas and Missahibas are able to implant a desire to send their daughters to some school and college, despite the protest that "she is only a female and not worth educating." And there the girl finds companionship, interests and opportunities to develop in womanly modesty and loveliness, and an opportunity for knowledge that through centuries of India's history has been denied her. In even orthodox Moslem and Hindu schools many of the stricter customs are not rigidly followed, and in Christian schools and colleges the girl has the option as to how far she wishes to follow her traditional "purdah" seclusion. In many cases she lays aside most of the restrictions, at least until she is compelled to adopt them on returning to her home. Invariably her schools and colleges show higher percentages of passes and higher results obtained in government examinations in exactly the same subjects than do her brother's.

Of far greater significance than her ability to learn is the self-reliance that she develops and the greater dignity and respect that she attains in her own estimation and that of society at large, in a country where seclusion and abasement of women is universal. There was a time when men did not care whether or not their wives were educated, but now one can scarcely take up an Indian newspaper in which there are not to be found advertisements in which fathers are seeking girls with certain standards of education as wives for their educated sons. The Indian woman is beginning to move out without her boorkha and coming, to a limited extent, at least, from behind the purdah—and that with confidence—and men are becoming proud to move about in the companionship of their wives and daughters and mothers and sisters and are beginning to think of them in terms of greater or less equality.

These glimpses at the changes behind the purdah, few and slight though they be, are indicative of far more than the surface of the picture shows. The earnest work of hundreds of Memsahibas and Missahibas throughout India is quickening in the souls of the women a desire for a broader, fuller, richer life than has been theirs for ages past. And the fruits in their homes are causing the men to desire that their wives and daughters and sisters shall have it. All this points to a day when the Indian woman shall be liberated physically, mentally, and spiritually, and when the men themselves shall rejoice in her emancipation.—Zion's Herald.

A SUGGESTIVE INCIDENT

A father one morning took his little boy to the city where he transacted his business. When noon came he went with the boy to a restaurant where he often had lunch. It was in the days before prohibition and the waiter, knowing that it was the father's custom to have a bottle of wine, asked the boy what he would have to drink. The boy replied: "I'll take what father takes." The father, realizing the serious situation, quietly beckoned the waiter and countermanded the order.

During the afternoon when he went to his office the words of the boy, "I'll take what father takes," were constantly ringing in his ears. He went home and, after dinner, he repaired to his study, but he could not work, for he could not forget the words of the boy, "I'll take what father takes." Feeling that he could not bear it any longer, he decided to settle the matter. He knelt down and prayed to God for guidance. That night he vowed he would never touch a drink or anything else that might be a source of danger to others.—Selected.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Aug. 4, Sunday.—In the morning we were with the Union Grove charge, attending Sunday school and preaching at 11 o'clock. Since we visited this church last year four Sunday school rooms have been added, and the interior of the church has been painted. We found quite a number of young people in the Sunday school—a hopeful sign for the future of the church. Bro. T. Glenn Madison is from this church, and his brother also, who graduated at High Point College this year. The brother will teach in the high school located hard by the church. Mr. Taft White is another promising candidate for the ministry from this church, and is a student, also, of High Point College. This church is fortunate in its location, being right at one of the best public schools in Iredell County. The housing equipment is being enlarged by the erection of a $20,000 brick building to be used exclusively for high school work. And of course a reasonable expectation is that the church will grow with the school. The educational life of the community will, of necessity, be reflected in the church. We were glad to visit the church again and to find a spirit of hopefulness and progress prevailing. Bro. Helms, the pastor, could not be with us, owing to his appointment at another one of his churches. The people spoke well of him personally and of his work. Fifteen dollars was subscribed to the college fund, for which we are grateful. We trust that this may be a year of spiritual and material achievement for this charge.

At night our appointment was about 75 miles farther west, at Shady Grove church, on the Connelly Springs charge. We arrived in ample time, and after attending a C. E. meeting we preached to a congregation that practically filled the house. This church is just outside of Connelly Springs and Rutherford College, and a very short distance north of highway No. 10. We had the impression that a marker had been placed on the highway indicating the church, but we failed to see it. We do hope that this may be done. This church seems to us to have a mission in this community, and we are sure that it is serving to a good purpose. We greatly hope that its usefulness may increase. Bro. Helms is encouraged with signs of progress. He is popular with the people, and we believe that this will be a good year with this church. We missed Bro. H. D. Garmon in the service. For many years he has been a regular attendant at this church and served it as pastor a great deal of this time. His body rests in the church burying ground while his spirit, we believe, is with the Lord.

Aug. 5, Monday.—We were in Shelby in the interest of our work at that place. Our growth there is not in keeping with what seems to be our opportunities. Our location appears to be ideal. We are in the midst of a growing section of the city, and ours is the only church in this section. We are greatly handicapped by the lack of a suitable church building, and it is doubtful if we can do much until this handicap is overcome. If we can find a way of putting more into our work there, it seems to us that we should grow into a church of splendid service.

"Eastern Pastors' Federation"

In pursuance to the plan inaugurated some months ago to effect group organizations of our pastors, the eastern brethren met in our church at Littleton on the 27th of July and organized, with Rev. T. M. Johnson, D.D., president; Rev. R. A. Hunter, vice-president, and Rev. J. Clyde Auman, secretary-treasurer. We have twelve ministers in that section of the conference, and all were present at this meeting but four. Only two pastors were absent. Their territory includes all of our work east of Durham. The name adopted by this group seems fitting—"Eastern Pastors' Association." The entire conference is now organized in the three contemplated groups—Eastern, Center, and Western. It seems to us that the idea of designating the groups according to geographical location, as followed by the eastern brethren, is a good one. We suggest that to the other groups. If they adopt this idea, we would then have Eastern Pastors' Federation, Central Pastors' Federation, and Western Pastors' Federation. This would seem to be a proper designation. We are glad that these organizations are now effected and ready to function. Our faith is that they will prove highly beneficial to the conference.

Our Littleton church has become quite an assembly place for our eastern people. In the early part of the year we were there in a well-attended meeting of the Littleton charge. The pastors were there since for this organization, and in September they are to go back for their second meeting. The church is well located as an assembly place for our eastern charges, and these frequent meetings will be stimulating to our cause in that section.

College Campaign

Our schedule for the college campaign ended Sunday. We have had neither time nor opportunity to make further plans for the future. We hope to be ready for this by the next issue of the HERALD. In the meantime, will pastors please report to us the full results of their work? One pastor reports today. Others have already reported. Several have not. A card will do. Please!

"Precept Upon Precept—Line Upon Line"

Scholars tell us that these words are the irritated expression of the Jews because the prophet was continually telling them of their duty, as though they were children, and needed to be warned, and taught, and admonished over and over again. The prophet was much wiser than they were. He knew that there is a very vital sense in which we all must be taught and admonished many, many times about our duties and our obligations and our opportunities. But I am not a prophet and I am not writing to children, but to earnest, faithful pastors and stewards and church members about Annual Conference Day—the first Sunday in September. Week after week it must be kept before us, "lest we forget." But you won't be irritated? Of course you won't. Rather, you will realize joy and satisfaction, we trust, in helping to make Annual Conference Day a great success. Please push this, brethren, please push it, and let us raise on this day our full allotment, either in cash payments, in pledges, or in both.

The Country Church Contest

Four persons to date have signified their purpose to write. Unless we can have ten, as first announced, the contest will be called off. But surely in a rural church, such as ours, we should have ten persons who are sufficiently interested in the country church to make this contest possible. We will wait a few days longer and unless we hear from others we will close the matter. Anybody may write who is sixteen and over—pastors and those who are not pastors. HERALD readers are missing a great deal of good reading which they would read with a zest, because this contest is not going. Just six more names and it starts. Come on now and be one of the six, and let us know what's on your mind about the country church.

A MAN IS POOR

If he is without friends.

If he has low ideals.

If he has a guilty conscience.

If he has lost his self-respect.

If his morals are questionable.

If he has lost his grip upon himself.

If he is selfish, uncharitable, or cruel.

If he has forfeited his health for wealth.

If his mind and soul have been neglected.

If he has traded away his character for money.

If he has a disagreeable disposition that makes enemies or repels his friends.

If making money has crowded out the cultivation of his spiritual life.

If worldliness has caused him to lose fellowship with Christ.

If love of money has hardened him until the love of Christ and His Gospel doesn't stir him to do his best for missions.

If all his investments and possessions are laid up on earth and he has no treasures in heaven.—Quoted in the Uplift.

Who Is Meant?

Wm. T. Ellis in commenting on the story of Daniel has these words:

"Religion has few better proofs to offer the world than saintly old men and women, with purity and peace written on their faces. A certain famous criminal lawyer in America is a vociferous atheist; but one glance at his unhappy, hopeless face is a sufficient argument against his creed. 'Without God and without hope in the world,' is the instinctive comment of one looking upon this miserable man. Righteousness bears its fruit in old age, as it did with Daniel."

—The annual home-coming service will be held at Fairview M. P. Church, near Altamahaw, Sunday, August 11.

LIVING BY GIVING

Is thy cruse of comfort failing? Rise and share it with a friend!

And through all the years of famine it shall serve thee to the end.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse, or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving: all its wealth is living grain;

Seeds, which mildew in the garner, scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy? Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to lift thy brother's burdens—God will bear both it and thee.

Lost and weary on the mountains, wouldst thou sleep amidst the snow?

Chafe that frozen form beside thee, and together both shall glow.

Art thou wounded in life's battle? Many stricken round thee moan;

Give to them thy precious ointment, and that balm shall heal thine own.

Is thy heart a well left empty? None but God its void can fill:
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain can its ceaseless longings still.

Is thy heart a living power? Self-entwined, its strength sinks low;

It can only live by loving, and by serving love will grow.

THE MOST FORMIDABLE OF ALL

Gross worldliness and fierce persecution sought to crush the infant church, but their efforts were unavailing. Philosophic infidelity, as expounded by Voltaire, Rousseau, Darwin, Huxley and others made its assault upon the bulwarks of Zion, but failed to demolish them. Oratorical infidelity, as typified by Ingersoll, hurled its shafts at her, but they were unable to pierce her towering walls. Now we have a moneyed infidelity—that is seeking to strip the church of her power and to undermine her very foundations. Will it succeed, where the other attacks failed? Nay, verily; for Christ will not forsake His people. But it may greatly curse the world, wreck ecclesiasticisms, hinder the operations of the true Zion, and delay the coming of the Kingdom of God among men.—Selected.

—The first copy of the new Methodist Protestant Recorder came to our table this morning. Its first page shows the three first (not first three) editors, the president of the Board of Publication, and the two publishing agents. Dr. Davis has in this picture an opportunity to show how homely a man was the great orator, Thomas H. Stockton. Brother Darling looks as though he might be a first cousin to Herbert Hoover. We turn over the leaves and find that the paper looks like the Methodist Protestant and reads like the Methodist Recorder. It has no light responsibility in filling place of these two papers. We wish the best possible success to Dr. Davis and his co-workers. We hope more of our readers will also become readers of the general church organ. The new paper has 32 pages and costs only $2.00 a year.

OUR STORY PAGE

A PANIC-STRICKEN PRISONER

I took my car into a garage one day, writes a contributor, to have some small repairs made on it.

"See our humming bird?" said one of the men, pointing to the ceiling. A strange place for so delicate a creature! The little bird was spinning back and forth on whirring wings, all the time keeping its head so close to the ceiling that its shining black bill just grazed the wood. It both whirled and revolved; it drew curves and loops all over the ceiling—and the men said it had been doing it all the morning. It had flown in late the afternoon before and had at once started its crazy dance. The windows all along the wall were up at the bottom and down at the top; the big wide high double doors were open; yet the poor dazed bird had apparently only one idea, to cut a way out with its beak.

"Any one would think it would see the sunlight coming in and make for that," I remarked.

"But it doesn't," replied one of the men. "At least it hasn't yet."

"A meter on its wing would indicate several hundred miles by now, I reckon," added another.

"I've read that the humming bird has extraordinary endurance of wing," I remarked. "It makes the trip from the northern part of the United States to Mexico and back each year in about as good time as larger birds make."

"He's still going," said the foreman. "I can't see but that his wings make as many vibrations a minute as they did when he started out fresh yesterday afternoon."

"It hasn't the ruby throat, so it is probably a young bird. If so, it is pretty strong of wing, considering that it was hatched not earlier than June and was no larger than a bumblebee. But what are you going to do with it?"

"Guess we'll have to wait till it gets tired enough to drop down where we can catch it," said the foreman. "Then we can put it out."

"But by then it will be so weak it won't be able to find food or a safe place," I objected.

"Then I suppose I'll have to take it home and have the wife feed it. I'd really like to know how long it can keep this up before it drops."

I didn't like that idea; I felt sorry for the bird. "If you can think of a way to get it down, go at it and take it out of my time," I suggested.

"But how are you going to reach it?" inquired the foreman. "A stepladder's no good, 'cause you can't move it around fast enough."

"Might get a broom and sweep it over toward the fellow on the stepladder."

We tried it, but the bird kept skillfully out of reach of the broom.

"Wait, I've got it!" I cried. "Where can I get some flowers?"

"My wife has some—four blocks down the street," said the foreman.

When the woman learned why I wanted a bouquet she gathered the flowers herself, some petunias and nicotianas and scarlet beans, which she said humming birds are particularly fond of. She went with me to see if the scheme would work.

One of the men tied the bouquet to the end of the broom handle, and we all stood about while he hoisted it up in front of the fear frenzied bird. At first the creature shied off a bit as if impatient that anything interfered with its mad dance. Then it collected its scattered wits and lowered its beak to the bell of a petunia trumpet. For an instant it hovered there; then it plunged in to the shoulders. Before it had finished with the flower the bouquet was out in the alley. The hungry bird drained several different honey jars before it finally sailed away on whirring wings—free.—Selected.

A FOURTH OF JULY STORY

"Mother, may I go to the State House and help grandfather?" asked the boy.

"Yes, indeed, son, if thy grandfather needs thee."

"Indeed I do, daughter; my old legs grow weary trotting about these days, and each day the meetings are longer while our wise men are discussing our rights to liberty."

"Dost thou think they will sign the letter to the king today, grandfather?" asked the boy eagerly.

"That no man can tell. Truly 'tis a bold thing to do; but the king hath brought it upon himself, and the time has come for us to declare our independence."

"Then it may happen today. Oh, I am so glad to go with thee, grandfather, and I will help thee all I can!"

And the old sexton and his grandson took their way over to the State House.

"The City of Brotherly Love" was usually very quiet and peaceful, but today all was confusion and noise as the people swarmed down the streets talking about the important paper. "Will they sign it today?" "Do they dare?" "It is very wrong." "No, neighbor, thou art wrong. It is a just deed."

Although the hour was early, crowds were pressing close about the doors of the State House, and the old sexton and his grandson had difficulty in reaching the hall. The large room was opened and aired. The young lad and his grandfather dusted the chairs and set things to rights on the table. As the grandfather brought fresh ink and sharpened the quill pens he said solemnly: "These tools will be used today in the freeing of a country."

Then the delegates filed into the great hall, and as they took their places the grandfather led the boy aside and pointed out the various members of Congress:

"That man who has just seated himself in the tall chair behind the table is John Hancock, the president of Congress; and the young man standing near him is Thomas Jefferson. He was the one chosen to draft the paper, and then he read it to his committee—John Adams, who is sitting over there; Roger Sherman, Robert Livingston, and our own Benjamin Franklin. This committee approved of the paper, as presented by Jefferson, and with a few changes, they submitted it to Congress, and day after day they have spent discussing it; but mark my word, lad, this day, July 4, 1776, will end our weary waiting."

"Now, I will tell thee our plan: When the paper is signed they wish the news spread to all the waiting people outside; so I will climb to the bell tower, ready to ring the great bell. Thou must wait below here in the hall, and when they tell thee it is signed, thee must run with all good speed and give me the signal to ring the bell. Come, lad, to the bell tower, and I will show thee where I will stand."

The boy followed his grandfather to the bell tower and there he gazed at the bell hanging high overhead. "I can see words on the side of it, grandfather," said the boy. "Dost thou know what it says?"

"Yes, child, verily, the words are these: 'Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto the inhabitants thereof.'"

"Oh!" said the boy, his eyes shining with enthusiasm. "And that is what the great bell will do when I give thee the signal. It is truly a liberty bell, is it not, grandfather?"

"Yes, lad; but now run to thy post; the signal may come at any moment."

All day long they waited while the eager and impatient crowd surged through the street; and all day long the earnest men discussed the important question and answered the roll call of the separate states. At last they made it a unanimous vote, and one after another came to the desk and signed their names.

John Hancock, president of the Congress, was the first to sign. He dipped his pen far down into the ink and wrote his name in large, black letters; and as he did so he said: "There, John Bull can read my name without spectacles. Now, let him double the price on my head, for this is my defiance." Then he turned about, and, looking at the other members of Congress, said: "We must be unanimous; there must be no pulling different ways—we must all hang together."

"Yes," said Franklin, his eyes twinkling with humor. "We must all hang together or most assuredly we shall all hang separately."

Finally the Declaration of Independence was signed, and one of the members went to the door and whispered to the little lad who had waited so patiently outside in the hall. The boy fairly bounded up the staircase and, as he ran, he called loudly to the old man waiting above:

"Ring, ring, grandfather, ring! Ring out for liberty!"

The old man grasped the bell-rope, and soon the iron tongue was striking the great bell and its deep tones were pealing out upon the air. Surely it did "proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof;" and truly now it was a liberty bell.—The Sunbeam.

MARJORY'S WAY

"I will have it! Give it to me, Bob, you bad boy!" screamed Mary, snatching at the doll which Bob held teasingly out of reach. "I'll tell mother how you bother us!"

"Will you have it now or wait till you can get it?" inquired Bob, making a long arm and seating Miss Genevieve Eleanor safely on top of the wardrobe.

"I'll have it now! You've got to give it to me!" Mary made another snatch at his arm, but Bob was gone, and the echo of his laugh reached them. Mary turned to Marjory, who was gazing at their darling, so utterly out of reach. Genevieve smiled down at them both as much as to say: "I am quite happy and comfortable here. Don't worry about me."

"Never mind," said Marjory, soothingly, as Mary burst into tears of rage. "I guess Bob will take her down after a while. Let's not care."

"But I do care! You came to spend the day with me, and Bob spoils our fun this way! I'll just pay him back!"

"Oh, no, Mary. What good would that do? Let's make it come into the play. I know! We'll play Genevieve was the Fair Lady with the Golden Locks, and she is enchanted and has to stay up in that tower till a prince comes to rescue her from the wicked fairy who put her there."

"That's Bob! He'll play with us without knowing it," laughed Mary. "Well, how shall we work it to get her down?"

"Why, we have to go about it very carefully or the fairy will enchant her more still. At any rate, the walls of her tower are made of glass, and we can see that she is safe and as beautiful as ever. He might have put her inside and locked the door, and then we couldn't even see her lovely face smiling at us as sweet as ever."

"We might put up a ladder and scale the wall of the tower," said Mary, warming to the spirit of the game. "I wonder if we could bring the stepladder up here."

"No. Let's make a rope ladder and fling it up to her," proposed Marjory.

Mary liked this plan. She found some cord, and, with a good deal of trouble, they contrived to make a doll's ladder which they flung up to Genevieve. After several trials it caught on her stiffly outstretched hand and hung there.

"Oh, I believe we really could get her that way," cried Marjory joyfully. "You pull very carefully, Mary, and I'll hold my frock to catch her. See, she's holding on!"

The plan succeeded. Mary pulled the ladder. Genevieve moved, tipped and finally tumbled heels over head down into Marjory's widespread skirt, landing safely, though somewhat rumped.

And when Bob remembered what he had done and ran up to rescue the Lady with the Golden Locks, he beheld a tea party, at which Genevieve sat in state none the worse for her imprisonment in the high tower. He contributed a handful of candy to the refreshments by way of making up and ran whistling away, leaving two happy little girls behind him.

"Your way was the best," owned Mary. "It was lots nicer than quarreling with Bob."

"Quarreling doesn't do any good, and it spoils the fun," said Marjory wisely.—J. L. Glover, in Exchange.

RESCUED IN MID-OCEAN

"Gee, Ted," said Joe, taking in a deep breath of the salt air. "This is the life, believe me."

We were standing on the bridge of the steamship Swift Arrow, watching the spray breaking over the bow, and listening to Captain Bensen tell the helmsman how to steer. I was just lucky, I guess, to get on this big ocean ship the way I did, because none of my folks are sailors. But Captain Bensen is Joe's father, and Joe is my chum.

"I like it pretty well myself," I said. "And I'm not anything like the sailor you are."

Joe was real sea-going, even if I do say so myself. I used to watch him so I could tell how to act myself, and never once did he lead me wrong. But Joe and his father had different ideas.

"I tell you, Joe," his father used to say. "I know what the sea is, and I don't want you to follow in my footsteps. When you get back from this trip, you are going to the doctor's school, so you may as well make up your mind about it."

"Imagine me in a doctor's school!" Joe used to say. But that's what his father wanted, so he guessed he'd have to go. One thing he wasn't going to do, however, and that was to let the thought of it spoil this sea trip, because it might be his very last one.

Suddenly Joe gripped my arm and said:

"Look, Ted! Doesn't that look like a wreck?"

I looked in the right direction and for a moment saw something riding high on the crest of a wave. Then it disappeared from sight.

"What is it?" demanded Captain Bensen. "Did you see something, Joe?"

"Dad, I saw a wreck or a raft or something off in that direction, there. I only saw it for a moment or so, and then it disappeared."

Captain Bensen put his marine glasses to his eyes and adjusted the lenses so that they were focused on the spot pointed out by Joe.

"Do you see it, Dad? There—there it is again!"

"Put your wheel hard a-starboard, helmsman," ordered Captain Bensen, sharply. "Joe, ring 'Stand By' on the engine room telegraph. There's a sinking ship over there, and men are lashed to the masts. We'll have to do our best to save them!"

Already the Swift Arrow was swinging toward the distressed vessel. Already the sailors, in answer to three blasts of the steam whistle, were climbing up the ladders to the boat deck.

"Stop the engines, Joe," commanded his father. "We don't want to get too close because this wind and sea will blow us down on top of them. Go back to the boat deck, Ted, and tell the mate to lower lifeboat No. 4, on the starboard side."

I ran back and gave the mate his orders. Then I helped the men take off the boat cover and clear the falls for lowering. It looked as though the rescue was going to be a speedy one, but that's all I knew about it. When the lifeboat got within four feet of the water, a huge wave slapped under it and turned it over, leaving two men hanging to the falls and throwing three others into the water.

We threw them life-rings and ropes, and by good luck managed to haul the three of them on board, while the other two came up the falls hand over hand and saved themselves.

"The sea is too rough to launch a lifeboat, sir," called out the mate. "We'll lose every one we try, to say nothing of injuring the men."

"We've got to do something," replied Captain Bensen. "We can't let the men on that ship drown while we're looking at them. And it's getting dark, so whatever we do we'd better do in a hurry. Suppose I pour oil on the water. That will prevent the seas from breaking over, and may help you to get a boat safely away from the ship."

But even that didn't help. "Dad," said Joe, speaking up for the first time. "Why don't you use the breeches buoy?"

Captain Bensen looked at his son in surprise.

"What do you know about the breeches buoy?" he asked.

"I've read about them," Joe replied. "And it seems to me that we could use it in this case."

"Joe, I believe you are right. The breeches buoy is used mostly when a ship which is ashore on the coast wants to land men on the beach through the surf. But I see no reason why it shouldn't be used to transfer men from one ship to another. Mr. Mate!"

"Yes, sir."

"Get the gun ready. We are going to try and shoot them a line."

All this was like so much Greek to me, but as I watched I saw Joe's idea being carried out by the eager sailors, who were in favor of it as soon as they knew what it was. They brought a small cannon to the main deck of the Swift Arrow and loaded it with cartridges that are made specially for it. The gun is made just for this sort of thing, too, and it is called a Lyle gun, after the man who invented the idea. When the gun was fired, instead of a bullet coming out of the end of it, a long steel rocket flew out and on the end of the rocket was a line, long enough to reach as far as the gun could shoot.

The aim was good, and the men on the sinking ship caught hold of the line as it fell across the deck. They knew what we were trying to do, also, so they hauled on the line when we gave them the signal and pulled over a heavy rope that we had tied on the end of the thinner line. Then one sailor climbed the mast and lashed the end of the rope on the Swift Arrow, and then on this tight rope stretched between the two ships we sent over a rope and canvas seat rigged up on a pulley.

One by one the men climbed into this "buoy" and were transferred across the water to safety. The last man to come was the captain.

"We sprung a leak," he said, after he had thanked us for what we had done. "And we couldn't use the pumps because they got clogged up with the cargo, which was sulphur. That last idea of yours is what saved us."

"It was not my idea," said Captain Bensen, proudly. "It was Joe's. He's my son."

"Is he on his way to be a sailor?" asked the saved captain.

"I guess he is," answered Joe's father. "You couldn't very well make a doctor out of a fellow with ideas like his, could you?"

And when Joe heard that, he looked over at me and grinned. To hear his father say that suited him better than anything else in the world—and maybe I wasn't glad, too, because if Joe goes away to a nautical training school it will be all the easier for me to persuade my mother that I ought to go, too.—Selected.

SHALL THEY TURN ASIDE?

When the risen Lord called His disciples together he gave them marching orders and a promise. Is it possible that we may forget His order and remember only His promise? Shall we expect Him to be faithful when we fail to march as He has sent? Shall we even expect of those who have dedicated their lives to the task of witnessing, that they shall march while we fail to provide them with the support they need? Shall any of them be obliged to turn aside to other occupations because we fail to help them to carry on the church's task? As we draw toward the close of another year, and as we read the reports of the treasurers of the various departments of our work, such questions as these become very pertinent. Several years ago it was said that the Southern Presbyterian Church had gotten together an unusually strong body of foreign workers and had sent them out to make bricks without straw. Through more generous offerings in more recent years not many are obliged to work without straw. And now shall we permit that they or any others of our church workers shall have the straw withdrawn while they labor on trying to complete their task? Within a few weeks the books must be closed. Let us all consider carefully and if we have not already done so, let us bring the tithes into the storehouse that the cause of the Lord may not suffer. —C. C. Knight.

AUGUST 11: GOD'S GOODNESS REVEALED IN NATURE

(Psalms 104:10-18)

Daily Readings

Monday.—Nature's voice. Ps. 19:1-6.

Tuesday.—Divine provision. Acts 17:23-31.

Wednesday.—God's faithfulness. Matt. 5:45.

Thursday.—God's care for creatures. Ps. 145:15.

Friday.—Divine provision. Acts 14:17.

Saturday.—God in His World. Rom. 1:20.

To the Leader

Make the meeting one of sincere praise to God for His goodness to us. At the end of the meeting name a few of the ways by which God's goodness is revealed in nature and try to induce others to join in the discussion. Open discussion is helpful in many ways; possibly it will help your timid members. Use some of the following hymns: "Master, the Tempest Is Raging," "When Love Shines In," "For God So Loved the World," "My Father Watches Over Me," "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

Leader's Talk

In this topic the scope is broad, including both the goodness of God and the uses of nature. We are prone to forget God often. In this busy world of affairs we are inclined to look only at the creation and forget that back of every creation, great or small, there must be a moving force, a Creator. We are taught that though we cannot see God that we are to know of Him through the things we can see, through His creations. We enjoy the blessings God bestows upon us daily and how often do we fail to thank the Giver and to praise the Creator.

God reveals Himself to men through His Word, but not only that but through His works. Nature is the work of God. By studying nature we find how well He prepares for us, how He protects and cares for us. In the study both of God's Word and God's work we will find that there is no conflict, but harmony such as He rightfully expects among His followers.

Through nature we find the provision has been made for the most minute living matter. All things have had a place in the divine plan. If we begin to meddle and change things we will find how true this is.

God thinks so much of His creation that He is willing to reverse the natural order of things in order that He may speak to us in a way that we will surely hear.

To Be Answered

What happens when we break one of God's laws?

Name some of the natural laws we should observe.

What did Henry Drummond teach about natural law in the spiritual world?

Do you think God created this world and then left it?

In what way may we show God that we are appreciative?

Give some concrete examples of the laws of God we see every day.

Quotations

The law of habit is designed apparently to make things easy for us. After we have mastered a thing, habit does the work for us.—Anonymous.

It is well to consider subjects that show that man is little and God is great. We are too ready to criticise the God whom we do not understand.—Sydney Smith.

Laws of nature are finite—they are God's ways of working. God, however, is infinite. Nature does not exhaust His character. It merely shows a small part of it.—Martineau.

Let us love God, and then nature will compass us about like a cloud of divine witnesses, and we shall see God everywhere.—Anonymous.

Poetry to the Point

God's time is never wrong,
Never too fast or too slow.
The planets move to its steady pace
As the centuries come and go.

Stars rise and set by that time;
The punctual comets come back
With never a second's variance
From the round of their viewless track.

Men space their years by the sun,
And reckon their months by the moon,
Which never arrive too late
And never depart too soon.

Let us set our clock by God's
And order our lives by His ways,
And nothing can come and nothing can go
Too soon or too late in our days.

REITZEL REUNION

The eleventh annual reunion of the Reitzel and allied families will be held at Richland church, about four miles east of Liberty, N. C., on Thursday, August 15, 1929.

All persons related to the Reitzel family, either by blood of marriage, as well as all friends of the family, are cordially invited to be present.

The program will start promptly at 10:00 a. m., and promises to be very interesting. Following the program and business session, dinner will be served picnic style and all are asked to bring well filled baskets.

A HOT-WEATHER AVALANCHE

A man sat in the bus by me,
Obviously hot as man could be;
Coatless, restless, hat in hand,
He mopped his face and wildly fanned.

"Pretty hot," I gently said.
His face assumed a lurid red.
"What's pretty hot?" he hurled at me.
I wanted to abruptly flee.

But tarried on a little while,
And with ingratiating smile
I ventured quietly to say:
"It does seem hotter here today."

"Hotter? How do you know it is?"
I quailed before that gaze of his.
"Er—I suppose it is," said I,
And glanced around for means to fly.

"What makes it hotter here than there?"
Sheepishly I met his stare
And ventured, "Why, the sun, I think,
While ice supplies us cooling drink."

"Tee," gulped he, "What kind of ice?"
He knew he held me in a vise.
I mumbled like a man that's lost;
"Why, ice that's f-frozen by the f-frost."

"What are you bleating of?" he cried.
Just then I felt parboiled and fried.
"The—the weather," I tried to say,
"It seems to me quite hot today."

"You think you know!" he fiercely screamed,
His face all purple, bloated, steamed.
"I thought I knew, but don't, I see."
The man stood up and glared at me.

"No, Sir, you don't, not one ding thing.
You don't know what the seasons bring,
What makes it hot in summer time,
And shivering cold in far-off clime."

"You don't know why the trade-winds blow,
Or how great cyclones come and go,
What causes dew to fall at night
And dry up when the day is bright!"

"The icicles, tell me how they're made,
Or why it's cooler in the shade?
Meteorological signals, too,
Are just like so much Greek to you!"

"You don't know this, and it is queer,
The average rainfall for the year.
Why, Sir, you don't know one ding thing
Of what tomorrow's weather'll bring!"

"You're like a million men I know
Who bleat of weather all for show:
You want to make me think it's hot
While all the time I know it's not!"

"Hot weather talk is tommyrot!
Hot weather cranks, I hate the lot!
Hot weather fiends should all be shot!"
He gasped and swooned there on the spot!

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

FROM CHAIRMAN DISTRICT 13

In June Rev. N. M. Harrison, chairman of this district, and Mr. Poole, assistant chairman, arranged for a district rally on the charges in South Carolina that belong to the N. C. Conference. My name having appeared on the program, it fell my lot to visit these churches, and a very pleasant visit it was. I have never been among a group, or groups, of strangers that would take you in and make you feel so welcome and at home as did these fine folks.

On June 21 at 8 o'clock services were held at Yarbrough Chapel. This was a splendid service. The orchestra, the young people and the children singing added much to the program here. Meeting Rev. Mr. Broome and his splendid wife of a few weeks was a pleasure to me. They are fine young people and are doing a good work here. We spent until afternoon the next day in this community and found the ladies whom I talked with very much interested in getting an auxiliary started at their church. With the help of the pastor's wife I am sure we will soon hear from these folks saying they are organized and doing fine work.

From here we went to Harmony on Yarbrough Charge. Harmony has a foreign mission society and the ladies at this place are doing fine work. We had the pleasure of visiting their society Saturday afternoon, it being in session when we arrived. Saturday evening at 8 o'clock the rally services were held at this place. The service seemed to be enjoyed by all present. This church appears to be small in number but large in spirit. When people go in their midst they go away feeling stronger. With this great spiritual influence we expect to hear wonderful things from this church.

Sunday, June 20, was rally day at Fair Grove Church, Anderson charge, all-day service with dinner on the ground. Rev. Mr. Ferree has charge of this work and is getting along fine. It was a great pleasure to meet him, his good wife and children. President Taylor delivered a very helpful sermon at 11 o'clock. The afternoon service was very impressive as every one present was given an opportunity to have a part in the service. The congregation complied freely. It was indeed good to be there. We went away feeling that much and lasting good had been accomplished. The ladies of this community are doing some fine local work and I am hoping they will soon have an auxiliary that the Board of Missions and the General Conference will be hearing something of the splendid work they are doing.

Sunday evening at 8 o'clock we were at Liberty Hill, same charge. We were most heartily received by these good people and a wonderful service was enjoyed that evening. I don't think President Taylor meant to do it, but it seemed he had saved the best for the last. He gave the message in such a pleasant way and the congregation received it in the same mood it was given. Every one went away happy because of having been there. The ladies of this church are workers, things in the church show that they have been at work beautifying and making it attractive to those who enter their church. With the interest manifested and the great possibilities at this place we are looking forward to an auxiliary here that will mean much to that church and the entire denomination.

At each of the named churches above I tried in the best way I know how to impress upon the minds of those present, first, the precious name of mother; also of the many privileges the women of this nation enjoy, hoping that some day the women in the foreign land may at least enjoy some of the privileges we do. Second, what it means to a pastor, a church and a conference to have the ladies of the church organized and working in union. Third, why we should have missions as well as local work. Jesus had nothing to say about home missions, foreign missions, local church programs, but placed his stress upon building a spiritual kingdom. To help build a spiritual kingdom on earth we must help carry on his work in all phases and at all places. Fourth, naming many of the different institutions in our home and foreign fields and also the consecrated Christian men and women working in the different institutions, of the progress being made and the great good being done. Fifth was the explaining of our work at Charlotte. Our auxiliary, the different officers, our circles, the work of each, how we had combined our home, foreign and local work and find it to be much easier to do the work through one organization.

I am hoping that each church I visited will organize an auxiliary, do all their work under one head, send part of what they raise each month to the Board of Missions, remembering while we help others God helps us.

I am planning to write one lady in each church on this work a personal letter soon. And if there is any question any one wishes to ask, if you will send it to me right away, stating which church you are from, I will do my best to answer it when I write.

I wish to thank the ladies who so generously received us into their homes. Those hospitalities will never be forgotten by me nor my little son, Joe Wall.

Yours truly,

MRS. J. J. ADKINS.

810 N. Caldwell St., Charlotte, N. C.

Calvary Circle 3

Circle No. 3 of Calvary held its August meeting on the church lawn with 14 present. The devotionals and program were carried out. We are to have a booth at the county fair this year and we made some plans. We have made 53 visits this month and carried flowers to 48. Our ladies are making a name quilt. Money collected, $11.40.

For the convenience of the state officers and also those of the auxiliaries we will when requested publish once in this department lists of newly-elected officers. But addresses should be included so that state officers may properly direct any mail they send to the officers of the auxiliaries.

SELF-EXPRESSION

Loud advocate of self-expression,
He swore: "I'll do just what I please;
The nature in me must come out
As sure as leaves come out on trees."

The world was made for him, he knew,
And he proposed to have his own:
He'd not be balked by squeamishness
Or satisfied to gnaw a bone.

He passed a stall of luscious fruit
And filled his hands, also his mouth:
The angry owner called a halt;
He only said, "Young man, go south."

In hands of cop he found himself,
And then before the judge was brought;
In his defense he simply said,
"I must express myself, I thought."

His honor quickly made reply:
"You need to live in other zones
And learn aright the things you know:
You'll serve your time at pounding stones."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Haw River Missions.—We held our third Quarterly Conference Sunday evening, July 18. A good number were present. Mr. J. W. Crutchfield was elected delegate for the annual conference.

Our pastor Mr. Chambliss is away, helping in a revival meeting in Vance county. Rev. Mr. Holmes filled his place Sunday, bringing us two very helpful sermons. And we were glad to have him back with us. We were also glad to have the orchestra from the M. P. church of Burlington with us for the evening service. The music was greatly enjoyed by all.

We are planning to have the dedication of our church the fourth Sunday in August, and we are glad that at last we can dedicate this church to our Lord and Master.

The M. E. church and our church are to combine in a series of meetings, to begin the 18th of August. Mr. Herbert the pastor of the M. E. church and our pastor are to do the preaching. These meetings will be held in the M. E. church. There is much preparation being made, and we are hoping for great things during these meetings. For without prayer and preparation these meetings cannot be the revival we are hoping for.

With best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting at Baltimore church closed on Thursday night of last week. We had a good meeting. Rev. M. C. Henderson did some of the best preaching that has been heard at that church in several years, according to some of the people. There were twenty-three professions and one reclamation. At the last service of the meeting on Thursday night sixteen young people were received into the church. Those joining were: Paul Cornelius, Alden Doub, Wade Cornelius, Laura Lee Hutchins, Ruth Doub, Nada Pilcher, Josephine Long, Kermit Phillips, Sheril Wooten, Bryce Carter, John Wesley Long, Paul Pilcher, Ray Cornelius, Maud Carter, Edith Doub and Louella Doub.

The people of other churches in the community of Baltimore church attended and co-operated in a fine spirit in the services. Miss Della Hobson, of the Baptist church, was one of the helpers, rendering a solo, leading in public prayer and working in the congregation when the invitation was given to the unsaved. Rev. D. C. Norman, of the M. E. church, South, and Rev. Mr. Wooten, of the Friends church, were ministers attending the services and rendering help.

The pastor is appreciative of the kind hospitality shown by the Baltimore church people during the revival meeting and enjoyed the visits to homes. Bro. Henderson was entertained in the splendid home of Mrs. Ella Doub, member of the Baptist church, and a generous supporter of our church. It is the home of Rev. J. W. Doub, superintendent of the Sunday school at Baltimore church, and local preacher of West Forsyth charge. A splendid offering was taken for Bro. Henderson at the last service of the meeting.

The pastor and family were delighted to have Miss Leo Sowell, of Pageland, S. C., as a guest at the parsonage on Sunday.

The revival meeting began at Stony Knoll church last Sunday with large congregations present for the three services. The pastor preached at the morning and afternoon services and Bro. Allen, a local preacher of the M. E. church, spoke at the night service. A quartette was organized during the dinner hour and rendered a selection at the afternoon service and also sang at the night service. Rev. J. D. Cranford, of Kernersville, is expected to arrive today, Monday, and do the preaching during the remainder of the meeting. We are optimistic over the prospects for a good meeting.

Bro. John Blackburn, faithful member of Baltimore church, was taken to the Baptist Hospital at Winston-Salem on Monday of last week and is receiving treatment for internal trouble. The writer has been to see him at the hospital twice, and he seems to be improving. A visit from some of our Winston-Salem Methodist Protestants will be appreciated. He is in a ward on the second floor of the hospital.

One of the young sons of Bro. Ammon Shore, of Stony Knoll church, was taken to the Lawrence hospital at Winston-Salem last Sunday for an operation for appendicitis. We trust that the operation will prove successful and that he will be able to return home soon. A visit to him will be appreciated.

Bro. R. P. Petree, member of Pleasant Hill church, and merchant at Tobacoeville, suffered a painful injury about three weeks ago when he fell through a faulty floor of a building at his home place near Pleasant Hill church. He received treatment from a physician, remaining at his home. He is reported to be improving nicely.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Bethesda, Pageland Charge.—For the past three years we have not had a report from a layman of the church. We wish to thank the president for the splendid young man, Rev. T. Glenn Madison, whom he has sent to be our pastor. The people are all well pleased with him and his efforts to build up the work and to serve the work in the best way possible. When he came here the work was in a run-down condition with the people discouraged and almost ready to give up. But he went to work with great faith and courage. He is on the job both as a preacher and as pastor. He has been giving us as good Gospel sermons as have ever been preached in old Bethesda church and they are bringing results in the lives of our people who hear him. We wanted a man who was willing to associate with us, and Brother Madison has proved just what we were looking for in that respect. He has been visiting from house to house day by day. He is giving his undivided time to the charge and this church has received more preaching since he came here than it had for several months, and we appreciate it too. What we hate most of all is to give him up when he has to go back to school in September. We wish we could keep him all the time. We hope Conference will give him back to us when he gets through school.

Our meeting is now in progress. Many souls are being saved and the meeting is the best we have had in many years. As it is not over yet we are unable to give the total results. Rev. J. W. Braxton is the pulpit help. He is bringing to us wonderful revival messages and they are reaching the hearts of both saints and sinners. Everybody is well pleased with his preaching. And we like him, too, because he is sociable and willing to visit us. We don't think our pastor could have found any better help anywhere. We are glad to have Brother Braxton with us and hope he will come again.

I am glad to know that our Conference has some young men growing up to fill the places of the older ones. May God bless our young preachers.

M. D. ROSCOE.

Gibsonville Church.—Three of our young people, the writer included, attended the Young People's Training School at High Point College. Two of us took the Standard Leadership Training course. We hope to put some of the knowledge received into practice and thus be a help to those who did not attend the school.

Our Sunday school attendance has been off for the last few Sundays due to mumps and other sickness. Since our last report Mr. F. R. Owen, the superintendent, has undergone an operation for appendicitis. He has recovered and has attended Sunday school for the last two Sundays.

Miss Addie Faucett has had an operation for appendicitis and is reported as getting along nicely. We wish for her a speedy recovery and hope that she can soon come back to Sunday school and Christian Endeavor.

Last Sunday morning we took our Junior and Primary Sunday school outdoors for the worship service. Our theme was "Thanking God for His Help." We had a splendid program and all the children seemed to enjoy it.

Dr. Lindley preached a splendid sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. He and Mrs. Lindley also sang a duet which was very much enjoyed. We have learned that they are useful in many ways in our church programs and we always enjoy having them participate in any part of the work.

Last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the Senior and Intermediate Christian Endeavorers had a union meeting. Rev. J. F. Minnis came from Graham and gave us a stereopticon lecture of our work in India. We were glad to have Mr. Minnis with us and hope he can come again.

REPORTER.

Lincolnton.—Our Sunday school is still improving with 250 on roll, an average attendance of 150. The superintendent, E. E. Eurey, gave a Testament to the one giving the best suggestion for the increase of the Sunday school. The winner was Miss Helen Eurey, the suggestion being to send postal cards to the absentees and to those who are uninterested in the Sunday school.

The meeting that has just closed at our church was of great interest to the people, especially the young folks, with 56 conversions, mostly young boys and girls. Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, delivered soul-stirring messages. The church was full every night.

In the past week we received ten new members into the church.

On August 4 we had the Kannapolis Y. M. C. A. string band with us for an all-day program. We had Sunday school at 9:45, after which the 11 o'clock hour was given over to the string band. At 1:15 we assembled in the church where the M. P. quartet and the Kannapolis Y. M. C. A. string band rendered some beautiful music until 2:45, after which they went to play for one of our own members, Mrs. Elmore, who has been an invalid for six months.

Mr. R. A. McNeely organized a Young Ladies' Evangelistic Club one week ago with 19 on roll at the present time.

May the rich blessings of the Lord rest upon you all.

Harmony.—We enjoyed a fine time during the week-end of July 26 to 28. We made nine visits, preached twice, attended missionary meeting, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor Society. Preaching services were well attended with more than one hundred at each service. At the morning service communion was observed with a good number of participants. The Sunday morning collection was unusually good ($31.60). Sunday school attendance was 68. The pastor deeply appreciates all the interest of the people at Harmony in the Master's Kingdom.

On Friday night, July 26, the Christian Endeavor Society held its regular social at the home of Mrs. Davis, where the young people had an enjoyable evening in games, music, and other social activities. An unusually large crowd was present.

On Saturday evening as we were making plans to visit we were asked to spend the night at the home of Mrs. Taylor and Miss Kate Medlock. During the evening while we were there a number of callers made short visits to the kitchen. Before retiring we were called to the dining room where we found a table loaded with the choice foods of the community and other useful household articles. Before leaving the community our car groaned under its weight. It is hard for the pastor to find words to express his appreciation for these needful gifts, especially at this time of year.

Harmony will hold its Children's Day service Sunday, August 4. We are expecting one of the best services of the year.

Our revival meeting will begin at Harmony church August 18. Rev. N. M. Harrison, a former pastor of this church, will conduct the revival. We desire the prayers of all God's people that we may have one of the greatest revivals in the history of Harmony church. The third quarterly conference will be held at Yarborough's Chapel August 11 at 3 p. m.

D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

High Point.—We were grieved and shocked beyond measure to learn the news of the tragic accident that cost the life of Mr. R. C. Boyd, one of our most faithful and highly esteemed members. As he was crossing the Southern Railway tracks at 5:15 o'clock Monday afternoon the fast train known as the Piedmont Limited struck and instantly killed him. He owned and operated two grocery stores, one the English Street Grocery and the other on Prospect Street, both in the western part of the city, and he was delivering groceries in a light Ford truck at the time of the fatal accident. The truck was entirely demolished and Mr. Boyd's body was badly bruised and mangled. The engineer said that he was evidently on the tracks before he realized the approach of the train, and tried to turn his truck down the tracks to avoid the crash.

Mr. Boyd would have been 39 years of age August 9. He came to High Point in 1912, and taught in Welch and Delane schools near the city, and for a time served as postman. Eight years ago he established business for himself. In 1917 he was married to Miss Callie Vuncaunon, of High Point, who survives him, and they have four little daughters, Hazel, Mary Louise, Eunice, and Dorothy Marie Boyd. His mother, Mrs. Mary F. Boyd, and stepfather, Mr. Andrew Boyd, of Pine-town, also survive.

Mr. Boyd was a member of the Board of Stewards of First Church, and superintendent of the Intermediate Department of the Sunday school. He was one of our most active workers, was faithful in attendance upon the church services as well as the Sabbath School, and contributed liberally to every cause and interest of the church. A splendid husband and father, he lost his life at his post of duty while pursuing his vocation and taking care of his family. Who can explain this tragedy of human sorrow and suffering? Last Sunday morning he and Mrs. Boyd and two of the young daughters knelt at the communion table and partook of the Lord's sacrament, and today the young mother and her fatherless children are heart-broken and grief-stricken. Truly the ways of Providence are mysterious and inexplicable. Of modest and unassuming nature, Mr. Boyd was cheerful and genial in manner, and was well known and esteemed by a large circle of friends, who mourn deeply his passing. Truly "he bore without abuse the grand old name of gentleman."

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by a former pastor, Dr. Brown, of Reidsville, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard in the First Methodist Protestant Church.

A solemn and impressive communion service was observed last Sunday morning with Rev. E. L. Ballard officiating, and a large number joined in this holy sacrament. There was no service Sunday evening, but according to the annual custom for August, the four congregations in the northern part of the city united in worship at Wesley Memorial M. E. Church. Next Sunday we will have two services, the evening service being held in our church, and Dr. P. E. Lindley will deliver the message.

The executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting session Monday afternoon with 10 members present. Plans were made for the Dollar Social, to which every member is urged to bring and donate one dollar, which she has earned herself, and tell how it was done. This meeting, which will be the general auxiliary meeting for August, will be held Tuesday evening, August 12 in the assembly room of the church. Plans for the thank-offering service in September were discussed at length, and it was decided to hold it on Wednesday evening, September 11. A covered dish supper, to which all the men of the congregation are invited, will be served at this time, and the collection will be sent to the Children's Home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Sr., and younger children have returned from a trip to Lenoir, Banner's Elk, and other points in western North Carolina.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Charge.—The Sunday school is doing very well; for the last few Sundays the attendance has been greater.

We were glad to have with us the third Sunday in July Rev. H. L. Powell, from Thomasville. He delivered an interesting sermon.

Our pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, has not been with us for the past few Sundays for various reasons, but was back with us Sunday. He brought with him an interesting and impressive message on "Why the Church?" "Why do we go to church?" he asked. In one sense of the word we go for the pleasure it is able to give. Some go because they have nowhere else to go. Others go because they need the church and the church needs them. The third Sunday he will preach to the old people. We hope there will be as many present as possible.

We were very glad to have with us at the morning worship Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Teague and their sons, Felton, Harrell and Joe, from Missouri.

The C. E. Society held its first meeting the fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock with a good number present.

The third quarterly conference met at Cannon Saturday afternoon with only a few present, although the business was transacted.

REPORTER.

Haw River Mission church will have a home-coming day August 25, 1929, and at this time we plan to dedicate our church. We will be glad to have all the ex-pastors with us and any one else who would like to come. We plan to have the dedication service at the 11 o'clock hour, after which we will serve dinner on the lawn in picnic style. The afternoon hour will consist of the reading of the church history and special music.

MISS ESPA BULLARD.

Draper Church.—We have been having a good meeting with a good number converted. Six have joined the church. The Sunday school is growing nicely. W. T. Howell is supt. We have a nice class of junior girls. We have about 23 girls in this class. We have about 25 in the ladies class, Mr. W. H. Troxler is their teacher.

M. A. CHANDLER, Reporter.

Enfield.—The work at our church is moving along nicely. Our pastor, Mr. Auman, gives us very helpful sermons each Sunday. We appreciate these messages.

Our Christian Endeavor, both Junior and Senior, are progressing with increased interest. It was the writer's pleasure to meet with the Juniors the fourth Sunday evening in the absence of the president, Mrs. Eli Bellamy. ~~These young boys and girls are proving what~~ leadership training means. It also means progress for the future of our church. We need more such leaders as Mrs. Eli Bellamy. Our Christian Endeavor will hold a joint meeting Wednesday night of this week with the Whitaker Endeavor. We have planned an outdoor meeting and will combine a picnic with business.

We are preparing a program for Children's Day next Sunday. Mrs. Cecil Matthews and Mrs. S. Peirson are training the children. Let us lend them our support and help make this the best Children's Day we have ever had.

During the month of August the churches of Enfield are not holding regular preaching services at the morning hour, but are having union services at night. Next Sunday the service will be held in the M. E. church.

Mr. Auman began a revival meeting at Whitaker's Chapel last Sunday with Rev. Mr. Shelton as pulpit help. Mr. Spencer is also conducting a meeting at Eden this week with Rev. H. L. Powell as helper. May spiritual blessings attend these meetings.

Our Ladies' Aid with Mrs. R. C. Rives as president is progressing. Our meetings are attended with increased interest. The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. S. Peirson. The Social period was conducted in a very profitable manner, that of measuring the waist line, each lady paying a penny per inch of waist measurement. I say "profitable" because some of our ladies are not so slender. Probably we will repeat this measuring party, reversing tape lines and measure heights next time.

We are glad to have with us again two of our young people, Mrs. Exum Bellamy and Miss Ruth Bellamy who have been attending Miss Dicie Howell's school of music in Hendersonville, N. C.

MRS. P. S. BELLAMY.

MARRIED

Routh-Davis

Thursday morning July 11, at eight o'clock, in the presence of a few friends of the contracting parties in the West End M. P. church, Greensboro, Mr. Bright Routh and Miss Esther Davis, both of Greensboro, were united in marriage by the pastor of the groom, Rev. J. D. Williams.

Mr. Routh is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Routh, and Mrs. Routh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Davis.

This happy young couple have the good wishes of many of their friends.

Huffman-Lynch

In the early morning hour, at seven-thirty, July 15th, Mr. Glenn Adams Huffman and Miss Mabel E. Lynch drove to the First Methodist Protestant parsonage of Burlington and were united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer. Just a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. After the marriage they motored to Asheville and other places in the Western part of the state. They are now at home in their new home on Lexington Avenue, Burlington. These splendid young people have the hearty congratulations and good wishes of their many friends as they set out together upon the voyage of life.

Sulphur dioxide, which will be substituted, is more deadly but it carries a noxious odor; methyl chloride is odorless.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

BROTHER MOTON—A TRIBUTE

While it will be impossible for all, who would like to, to pay their tribute to this good man, may I have the privilege of adding this further word of appreciation. I was indeed his son in the gospel and in the ministry. It was he who preached me into the kingdom and into the ministry. It was he who laid his hands on my head when I was both baptized and ordained an Elder in the Church of Christ. His last official act for me was to marry me. The brief mentioning of these important events in my life scarcely tells the whole story. I feel as I write them as I often do when reading the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. I need to go back and read a fuller account.

The larger number of the North Carolina Conference as brother Moton knew it so well are in heaven. I have thought what a joyful time when he met Brothers Ogburn, Cecil, Plyler, Hartsell, Whitaker, Fogleman, Bowman, Kennett and many more ministers and myriads of laity in the place where they come from the East and West, North and South, and sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. There these good ministers of Jesus Christ would have a reunion far surpassing any they had at an Annual Conference. I can imagine how they would unpack their saddle bags and exhibit their trophies they had won in this world. The life of the Methodist itinerant has its rewards. God only had one son and He was given to the itinerant ministry.

It is not my purpose to write an obituary. I will leave that for those better prepared and selected for the purpose. I would like to close this brief word with an incident that seemed to be characteristic of his entire ministry. He, Rev. Reed and I were spending the night in the home of Dr. G. M. Gold of Polkeville, Cleveland Co., N. C. An aged colored woman working for Mrs. Gold requested that she might be permitted to attend family worship and that Brother Moton might conduct it. Both requests were granted. Those of us present will never forget as he read the word from God and interceded before God for us. Truly he had a Gospel message for all mankind.

W. A. LEDFORD.

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE

We, the members of the Flat Rock Woman's Missionary Society, desire to offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Wade, who was called from our midst to her heavenly home. Feeling that we have lost a kind friend and our church a faithful member.

Therefore be it resolved, that we as individual members hold in loving remembrance her Christ-like spirit.

2nd. That we strive to follow her example and be of greater service to our church and our community.

3rd. That we extend to her bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this writing be sent to the bereaved family, and to M. P. Herald for publication and a copy be preserved in the records of the Woman's Auxiliary of Flat Rock church.

Sharpe

Ludrick P. Sharpe, aged 74 years, died at his home in Burlington July 16. He had been ill for several months and the end was not unexpected. The funeral was held at Friendship Methodist Protestant Church, where he had been a member for a great number of years, the afternoon of the 17th, conducted by Rev. L. W. Gerringer and Dr. S. W. Taylor.

Surviving are his widow and four children, fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters.

Brother Sharpe was a good man. For a great number of years he had attended the services at the First M. P. Church in Burlington, though he still held his membership at Friendship. The sorrowing relatives have the prayers and sympathy of those who have learned of their loss. May the Lord bless and sustain those who sorrow.

THE "OLD YADKIN" ONCE AGAIN

The "Old Yadkin" fund is still climbing and the old bell which has been rung by many a hand for almost fifty years will soon be rung by electricity. The following are some of the recent donations:

Mr. Ernest Teague, of Greensboro, $1.00 for self and $2.00 for mother, Mrs. W. J. Teague; Mrs. Lewis, of Asheboro, $1.00; Mr. J. A. Clodfelter, of Winston-Salem, $1.00; Col. Ruby D. Garrett, of Kansas City, Mo., sends $3.00, $1.00 for self, $1.00 for mother, Mrs. J. N. Garrett, and $1.00 for sister, Miss Vera; Dr. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, 50c.

Now for a few more good subscriptions and this matter will go over the top. Come on, Yadkinite, or any other good friend of the cause.

It is hoped that all new donations as well as all payment of pledges will be in on or before August 13. It is hoped that the matter may be closed out by that time so that the bell may be placed and be used for the school year.

Here is hoping that donations may be prompt and large until a sufficient amount is realized.

Fraternally,

GEO. L. CURRY.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Some one was kind enough to leave a bundle on our front porch early Monday morning, and upon investigation we found it was sent to us by members of the Henderson auxiliary.

Circle No. 4: 7 sheets, 18 Turkish towels, 3 linen towels, 1 bedspread, 3 cakes toilet soap, 4 dresses, 1 gown, 5 pillow cases, 4 pieces of dress goods, 1 dozen teaspoons, and 1 pair of socks. Circle No. 1: One bedspread.

Mr. W. F. Grabbs is giving us quite a lot of apples these days. He asks that we make one trip per week to his orchard for a few weeks now. He also gave us some very fine grapes. Bro. Grabbs is one of the most cheerful givers we have ever met. Mrs. W. L. Kivett also gave us about five bushels of apples, and invited us to come back again. These are helping out wonderfully, and will help next winter, for we are drying and canning some of the apples.

Special Need

"Mother Dixon" asks me to say to you that in making up your packages to send to the Children's Home for the next few weeks please remember that our special need is table linen. We thank you for these gifts and for anything you may bring or send that would be of use in any home.

Cash Basis

We started in on the first day of August to run on a cash basis just as far as possible, or not to go at all. Right at once we perhaps cannot follow this rule in the absolute, but we are going to work to do it.

We can save a great deal on what we consume in the way of food, clothing, shoes and other things by buying at wholesale, and to do that we must pay cash. We are sure our friends will appreciate this move on our part and that as crops begin to move you will respond liberally to help us to live up to a cash basis, and not suffer for clothing or shoes. Also please help us pay old bills and it will then be easy to go on a cash basis.

The Farm

We are beginning the cash basis right now because we are getting quite a lot of farm produce at this time, and feel that it is a good time to begin.

We are milking fourteen cows and making all the butter we need. We raised a great many chickens and are using the culls for our Sunday dinners. We are getting corn and cabbage and beans and beets from our gardens. We gathered about 125 bushels of potatoes last week and have at least 40 bushels more to get in. Then if our fall crop is good we will at least duplicate that in potatoes this fall.

Harvest Home Week

We are asking all our farming people to gather together farm produce, fruits, jellies, chickens and other things such as you use in your own home. Set a time and collect the materials, and then send it to us or let us know and we will send for it. We thank you, and may God bless you.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

GREENSBORO, N. C., AUGUST 15, 1929

NUMBER 40

Converted

So small am I among the great
I can't expect to be in view;
My smallness hides and keeps me hid,
I'll simply sit and nothing do.

So weak am I among the strong
That no one thinks that I can work;
My weakness shields me from all calls,
And I don't do a thing but shirk.

So poor am I among the rich
That no one thinks that I can give;
They pass me by quite every time,
And all I do is just to live.

But God now shows a better way:
I'll do my best the whole day long;
He saves me from my nothingness,
He'll make me rich and great and strong.

What the Stars May Teach Us

The stars might have been placed so far from the earth that they would be invisible to men. What a great difference to us that would have made: the night sky unadorned by any twinkling stars! But the stars may be to us far more than decoration for the heavens. We believe they were meant to be more than that when they were given their places in the great universe of God. The Creator I believe placed them with reference to us, having in view not simply our pleasure, but also our instruction. If He had not had our comfort in view, He might have placed the stars much nearer to us. They might have been placed so near to us that they would be scorching suns, making our climate all the year round and in all the 24 hours of the day distressingly hot. But God avoided the two extremes and placed the stars where they may minister to our pleasure and to our instruction. And what are some of the lessons they may teach us?

They may teach us to be calm in the time of storm. The clouds may gather, cyclones may sweep with terrible fury, earthquakes may shake the very foundations of the earth and it may seem to us that the end of all things is at hand. But we look up through a rift in the clouds and see the calm faces of the everlasting stars beaming upon us. We are at once reassured. The great framework of the universe stands intact. It is but a tempest in a teapot we beheld. God's world stands fast. He built it for permanence and it will endure.

The stars may also impress us with the immensity of God's creative energy. This impression has been greatly reenforced by the discoveries of astronomy. In former times men saw only a few thousand stars and received no impression of their immense magnitudes. Now millions of stars are seen distinctly and beyond the reach of present instruments star clouds are seen which future inventions may resolve into millions or billions of additional stars. And many of the stars have been measured or weighed and found to be much greater than our sun. Incomprehensibly great is the mass of created things. How mighty God must be!

And the stars may show to us not only the stupendous greatness of what we might call God's blind creative energy, His power to produce matter, but they show us this matter completely and wonderfully organized. The universe is not a vast display of dead matter, but it is a marvelous mechanism of organized matter. It is a going concern, it is full of motion, and all its manifold movements are wonderfully harmonious. Back of the world and in the world is not only power, but intelligence. The stars tell us of God—His great power and wisdom.

The stars should teach us humility. What petty and puny beings we are in comparison with God. "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?"

And the stars should inspire us with hope. It was for such as we are that the stars and suns were made. No sun or star has power to appreciate the greatness and excellence of God. No one of them can sing or speak the praises of God. Truly we were made to be sons of God and in this fact we have ground for glorious hope.

A Good Self-Culture Course

In the past several years there have appeared advertisements offering courses that would in a very short time result in the development of all-dominating personalities. Some of them would link you up with infinite power and make your will all-prevailing. Those who were simple enough to believe these representations and invest the considerable sums charged for the courses would soon learn their mistake. Instead of finding themselves giants in intellect and prodigies in social power and influence, they would learn rather that they belong to the class of men who receive the not very honorable title of "suckers."

But there are self-culture courses of real value, courses that are not magical but rational, leading if faithfully followed to a real development of native powers. One of these is described in a book of about 600 pages published by Funk and Wagnalls Company, New York, entitled "How to Build Mental Power." We heartily recommend this book to those who have the noble ambition to make the best of the powers with which they are endowed. And most people, we believe, are more richly endowed than they realize. Every human being, not born an idiot, has in him the making of a splendid personality. Happy are they who recognize their potentialities and who devote themselves earnestly and persistently to the work of true self-realization.

The book to which we refer was written by Grenville Kleiser, formerly a professor in Yale University, now a successful man of letters.

IMPORTANT MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

The complete transfer of all work and property of the North China Mission of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions into Chinese control is announced by the Rev. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, secretary of the board. This transfer is said to give full recognition to the nationalistic aspirations expressed by the Chinese Christians of the North China Mission in May when their representatives drafted a constitution for an indigenous or purely Chinese church organization.

The American Board is the foreign mission agency of the Congregational churches in the United States. The churches of the North China Mission through their new constitution have established their own independent ecclesiastical organization under the name of "the Promotional Board of the Chinese Congregational Churches of North China." This board will control either through gift or loan, all property of the American Board in North China except the residences of the missionaries. The missionaries themselves will be loaned by the American Board and will be entirely responsible to the Chinese Board.

According to the Rev. Dr. C. Y. Cheng, of Shanghai, who is now in Boston, the American Board is the first missionary organization to place the entire responsibility and control of its Chinese work and property in Chinese hands. The Rev. Dr. Cheng is general secretary of the National Christian Council of China, moderator of the Church of Christ in China and a member of the International Missionary Council.

The transfer of the control of all mission activities to the Chinese is in accordance with the declared policy of the American Board for all its missions and has been the goal for the work in North China since it was started in 1860. The formation of the new North China Board was accomplished with the counsel of the missionaries on the field, among whom was the Rev. Dr. Fairfield, who had served in North China twenty years until this spring when he was appointed a secretary for this country.

The arrangement for entire Chinese control is also said to be in accordance with the findings of the International Missionary Council at its meeting in Jerusalem last year.

The new relationship between the churches of the North China Board and the American Board and the churches it represents in the United States is indicated in the constitution of the Chinese Board:

"This board is directly responsible to the Congregational churches of North China in the conduct of a missionary program for the advancement of the kingdom of God in China. However, this board recognizes a stewardship on behalf of the American board in administration of property, funds and personnel granted or loaned by the American Board for the purposes for which this Promotional Board is established.

"While this Promotional Board now relies largely upon support of its work by Christians in America, it looks forward to the day and seeks to encourage an increasing support of churches of North China."

The missionaries under their new status are to serve on a basis of complete equality with their Chinese associates. They are expected to become members of a local Chinese church and will receive their assignments from the Chinese Board. All questions of location, transfer, furlough and resignation are to be settled by the Chinese Board in consultation with the missionary concerned. The missionaries are to receive their first appointments to China and to return after a furlough only upon invitation from the Chinese Board. Their direct allegiance while in China is to be to the Chinese churches because experience teaches "the importance of avoiding dual control."

The American missionaries who will be under the Chinese Board are 117. They comprise twenty-five ordained men, five men physicians, one woman physician, eleven other men, thirty-six wives and thirty-nine single women. The Chinese force comprises fourteen ordained men, 291 teachers and 266 evangelistic workers, including eighty-seven women.

A preliminary stage to the complete transfer of the administration of the mission work to the Chinese occurred in 1914 when the Mission Council was reorganized on joint American and Chinese basis. Gradually increasing control was placed in Chinese hands until some years ago the missionaries relinquished all special prerogatives which they had in the administration of the local associations into which the churches are organized.

The administrative work of the new Chinese Board is outlined in three divisions—evangelistic, educational and medical.

The organized churches number 225, and the places where services are held 557. The communicant membership is 17,349, and the affiliated constituency 45,760. The cost of the church and evangelistic work is $110,000 annually, of which 10 per cent comes from Chinese contributions.

The educational work includes participation in Yenching University, Peking, and Shantung Christian University, Tsitan. In addition there are two theological schools, thirteen middle schools and eighty-three primary schools and kindergartens, a total of 109 schools with 6,879 under instruction. The cost of the education work is $130,000, of which $95,000 is paid by the Chinese in tuition and fees.

Eight hospitals, nine dispensaries and two nurses' training schools comprise the established medical work which will be under the Chinese Board. Last year the in-patients numbered 3,286 and the out-patients 17,266. The cost of the medical work was $100,000, of which 40 per cent was met from fees and Chinese contributions. Ten per cent was appropriated by the American Board and 50 per cent was raised through special gifts in America.

THE PRESS AND PROHIBITION

"Prohibition in the United States began with local option in the townships and villages. It spread into the larger county unit, then to the state and finally to the nation. But the metropolitan areas were the last to be touched with the prohibition sentiment," explains Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

Upon leaving college Dr. Cherrington began his business and professional life as owner and editor of a village newspaper. He has kept in close connection and touch with the publishing business all his life. He is the son of a Methodist pastor, whose charges and circuits for the greater part were in the villages and smaller towns of southern Ohio, and he is, therefore, well acquainted with the life and sentiment of the smaller communities.

"The village newspaper always, and almost without exception," his statement says, "has always been for prohibition and against the beverage alcohol traffic. The attitude of the editors of these papers has not changed unless it be for stronger advocacy of prohibition, since the eighteenth amendment went into effect."

"Newspaper directories disclose the number of weekly newspapers in the United States to be 12,228, a gain over 1928. Despite the increasing expense of getting out weekly papers, and the extension of daily newspaper service to the most remote of rural sections, the number and circulation of weekly papers are growing.

"As a rule the editor and publisher of a small town weekly are the same man, a man known personally to practically all of his subscribers and advertisers, a man identified with the local lodges, church, village government and town-boosting organizations, a man of much influence in his community.

"The foes of prohibition have never been able to make much of a dent in the solid front of the weekly press in its attitude in favor of prohibition and law enforcement, and that is one of the reasons prohibition will stand."

GOD BREAKING THROUGH

Will God ever break through? It seems in vain that we look for him. We have looked so long and longed so much without avail that our heart sinks within us. Will he never answer by fire or in some other way so that the people of today may know that the Lord is at hand? By our prayers and by our work we say much to God, but to us God seems not to say a word. Yet if God is as we believe him to be it does not seem wrong for us to expect to see some sign of his presence. A God always absent, the heart must give up at last.

It may be that he is not speaking or that we have lost the sense of hearing. Whichever it is, the life of man is wilting and perishing through lack of God as flowers die through lack of rain. The "infallible" is no more. Faith is shaken, and more and more people are finding it hard to believe. The language of the soul is a foreign tongue to many of the younger people, and the fear is that if God does not soon break through and move mightily upon the spirit of man the next generation may be atheist and ignorant of spiritual communion. Without vision of God the people perish, and it is for this reason we cry, "O Lord, how long?"

Once, in the fullness of time, God broke through, and in the life and death of Jesus men saw him. Could we in our day but have the direct and actual knowledge of him that those people had who knew him in the days of his flesh, we should be delivered from the sin and misery of life and never again could depression descend upon our soul. So we say and so we think. But such direct knowledge did not seem to suffice for the earlier disciples, and we might not succeed where they did not. The great break through at Pentecost was needful to establish apostolic faith. What would be necessary to recreate ours? None can say. We can but recall Pentecost and also remind ourselves how that once the Spirit broke through and blew upon the dying embers of medieval religion and gave us the Reformation. The Evangelical Revival in the 18th century saved religion for the English-speaking peoples, and the full story of the Salvation Army's work for Christ's kingdom has yet to be told.

How different were John Wesley and William Booth! Yet of the work of each, one can say that it was the work of the hand of the Lord God. Each man was the vehicle of the Divine Grace. The initiation, the power came from the Other Side, not from this. That is the lesson we still have to learn: to learn to believe in Divine Grace as distinguished from human prayer and striving. By no act of ours can we cause the Divine power to break through, and it can be very sinful to try. What we are praying for and longing for is another Divine invasion. The next move is God's. Why does he delay? If ever in the tortuous history of our race the times have needed God, these are the days. Much of life now is settling down to irreligion, but there is also the other side where one sees a splendid pervasive idealism. Men outside the churches are wistfully looking for the Way, and everywhere there is abundant evidence that they are finding out that Christ's law can never be surpassed.

You remember that beautiful incident of the appearance of Jesus to the two disciples going to Emmaus. They did not know him. Why not? Because he appeared to them "in another form." Perhaps God will break through and we shall not know him. What if his new manifestation be of a kind we of the church do not approve? Suppose we resisted God's new "messiah," his message for our day, even as the religious folk of Christ's time resisted his teaching? When God broke through long ago in Palestine they derided him and laughed him to scorn. As Christ's people our prayer should have the urgent petition that we may have the grace given us to recognize God when next God breaks through. Whether it be primarily as new insistence on social righteousness, or as a change of emphasis from the dogma of Christ's religion shall come out in the open and love his neighbor as himself; however it may chance in the wisdom of God, we Christians must pray to have charity and spiritual insight instead of welcoming God's next move we may retard it.

Meanwhile, patience. Let us be as those who watch for their Lord. We must not be guilty of the unlit lamp and the ungirt loins.—Christian World.

BEGINNING

One of the most striking things in one of the most striking books of the Bible is the statement that is made in Malachi, when the people were complaining that God seemed to be taking a delight in those who did evil. God's reply was that it was only that He was gracious to them, for when He came who would be able to abide the day of His coming; for he is like a refiner's fire and like a fuller's soap. "And He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and He shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant to the Lord as in the days of old."

This is a wonderful picture of our God. When the refiner of silver works he takes the ore, which is crude and ugly and thoroughly unfit for any use to which it is put, and puts it in a crucible after having beaten it up into as small bits as possible. Then the furnace is heated to white heat, and the crucible put into the flame. First, it begins to get hot; then the ore gets white hot; then it begins to get soft; then to melt enough to be poured. What was solid and hard when it was put into the flame is now so soft that it is liquid. But gradually it begins to change in appearance; it is no longer the dull black thing that was put into the crucible; it begins to be shimmery and silvery—the dross is being burned out and the white metal, which can stand any amount of heat, is being left in its purity.

But where is the refiner all of this time? Ah, he has not left the precious metal. He has been there all the time watching it change from the dull ore to the pure silver. And now that it is at white heat, he watches it all the more closely; for he is looking for something; he is watching to observe when he can see the reflections of his own face in the melted ore, for then, at that very moment, is the time when all of the dross has been burned out, and it is time to take the metal, purified now, out as fit for use. If he leaves it in longer it will oxidize, and will not be as valuable.

Just so it is with our God. Providences come into our lives that are strange; we cannot understand them; we know He is a God of love and does not willingly afflict the children of men; but we do not know why these things have come into our lives. Sometimes it is the taking of a loved one; sometimes it is business trouble and care beyond our strength, it seems; sometimes it is as though God did not hear any prayer that we make, that the heavens above us are brass; sometimes it is misunderstanding and opposition of those from whom we might rightly expect just the opposite—oh, there are so many things that come into our lives that are just as hot as any furnace fire ever was to a crucible of ore. We feel the heat of it; we feel the blows that break us up; and we are very prone to wonder why, to be restive under the heat of it, to be bitter against God, to doubt His love. Oh, soul, be patient and trust. The Great Refiner is there watching until He can see the reflection of His own face in our lives; then, at that very moment, He will take us out of the fire, for we are then fit for His use. All the dross has been burned out; the silver is ready for service!

“Spirit of the Living God, fall fresh on me;
Spirit of the Living God, fall fresh on me.
Break me; melt me; mould me; fill me!
Spirit of the Living God, fall fresh on me!”

—North Avenue News, Atlanta.

ON READING THE BIBLE

Read the Bible, and read again, and do not despair of help to understand something of the will and mind of God, though you think they are fast locked up from you. Neither trouble yourself, though you have not commentaries and expositions; pray and read, and read and pray; for a little from God is better than a great deal from man; also, what is from man is uncertain and is often lost and tumbled over by man; but what is from God is fixed as a nail in a sure place. There is nothing that so abides with us as what we receive from God; and the reason why Christians at this day are at such a loss as to some things, is because they are content with what comes from men's mouths, without searching and kneeling before God to know of Him the truth of things. Things which we receive at God's hand come to us as things from the minting-house, though old in themselves, yet new to us. Old truths are always new to us, if they come to us with the smell of heaven upon them.—John Bunyan.

A LIBERALIST'S CONCESSION

A noted German scholar was compelled by the simple facts to say, “The traditionalists have one thing that we have not, and that is power.” And so they have and always have had. The Holy Ghost has always spoken through a ministry that has preached the gospel as it is recorded in the Holy Scriptures. It is scarcely to be expected that He would inspire men to state truth which in these last times He inspires them to repudiate, directing His administration in the twentieth century to the correction of errors which He inspired in the first century.—Selected.

LET'S SUPPOSE

Suppose the membership of your church was limited to one hundred people. Would you be “in” or “out”?

Suppose you had to “run” for church membership as a candidate runs for political office. Would you win or lose?

Suppose this membership were good for one year only, and that re-election depended upon the good you had done in the church during that time. Would you be re-elected or not?

Suppose there was a long list of those waiting to get in. Would you not be more alive to your duties as a Christian?

Suppose you were called on to explain just why your church should keep your name on the roll. Have you a record of helpful service to offer in your own defense?

Suppose every member of the church did as much for the church as you are doing. Would more seats be needed, or would the doors be shut and nailed?

A candidate for office makes certain promises and takes certain definite stands on the question of the hour so that people may know what to expect of him. After election he cannot repudiate these promises to the people; he must carry them out. The people must be pleased.

Yet, once in a while you run across a church member who seems to think that his Christian experience ends the minute he gets his name on the church roll. He thinks that he is on the high road to heaven merely because he has joined the church. All he has to do from then on is to go to the services when he feels like it, put in his dime when he does go, and send the children to Sunday school. If he was of as little value to his employer as he is to his church, he would be dismissed in a week.

Joining the church does not justify your sitting back and taking it easy. It's time to buckle down to work, to put your shoulder to the wheel and push.—Selected.

I PROVED GOD

“I am so glad that out of the thousands of church members God found me. I sang in the choir, taught a Sunday school class; but I never had victory in my heart. I never knew Christians could live above sin. I had such a temper, and I loved the things of the world just as other ungodly people do, and our home was about broken up.

“But surely I had an opportunity to prove whether the Gospel is real or not. One night I bowed my knees at the altar, repented of my sins, and God came into my heart and made a real change. I didn't have to guess about it. I thank God, it has been real for over eleven years, and where there used to be strife and turmoil, today we have one of the happiest homes in Portland.

“I have proved what God can do. He healed our little boy when he was down in the jaws of death. God raised that child up when he was blue; his finger nails had turned purple. His mind was left in such a terrible condition, but one day God instantly healed him and restored his mind. I surely owe God my life for what He has done for us.”—Selected.

THE LINE OF LEAST RESISTANCE

Some one has said, wisely and wittily, “A river becomes crooked by following the line of least resistance; so does a man.” It's a thought worth pondering. No man is worth much who does not have a purpose to which he sticks through thick and thin. Honor and glory are for “him that overcometh.”—Selected.

EVANGELISM

Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

AUGUST 10-20—VACATION

College

The campaign for funds, as authorized by the trustees, and scheduled for July, has been completed. It seems best now to suspend our efforts in this direction until further recommendations are made by the trustees. We understand that they will have a meeting soon, at which time the matter will no doubt be considered.

—We have received a copy of the Anti-Saloon Year Book for 1929. It is a booklet of more than 200 pages, filled with information regarding the great work of this organization.

—The meeting at Tabernacle, Rev. H. L. Isley, pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan assisting, was an interesting one with some good results in the way of conversions and accessions to the church.

FATHERHOOD

Fatherhood is God-likeness. Every father ought to be like God to his children, as God likens himself to a father, in love and tenderness. Children feel this when they see God-likeness in their parents, or when they fail to see it. This truth is beautifully illustrated in the following incident given by a Philadelphia reader:

Children are looking to their parents for example. They very soon learn to know the true worth of kind words, of sympathy, and of nobleness of character. The following compliment was paid by a little girl, five years of age, to her father, and is the best reward I ever knew a parent to receive from the lips of a child. This man is always kind-hearted, sympathetic, and gentle with his three little children. A few days since, his wife was absent from home, and the children were left in charge of an aunt. The little girl above referred to came to her and said, "Aunt, I think my papa is a very good man, and if he wasn't human I would think he was God." How many parents would be entitled to such a compliment from their children?

MY BEST FRIEND

Dr. John C. Carlile, editor of The Baptist Times, London, England, recently told of his first introduction to Catherine Booth, mother of the Salvation Army. While he was a student Mr. Carlile went with a number of others to an early morning prayer meeting at which Mrs. Booth was to speak on "Friendship." Her words were simple, crystal clear. Her passion for souls breathed through every sentence. At the close of the meeting the little woman with the angel face and burning eyes went to the door and shook hands with each one. As I passed she said, "I hope you know my best Friend." Some words become wounds that leave scars, others are seeds that germinate and develop flowers. I could not forget, "I hope you know my best Friend." It seemed to ring in the bells as their chimes rang out that Sunday night. I whispered it to myself as I went to sleep. I did not know "my best Friend." Looking back it is easy to understand Catherine Booth's power. She was psychic to her finger tips, but far better her life thrived and thrilled with the power of the Holy Spirit.—The Watchman-Examiner.

THE REAR GUARD

"Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life." Psalm xxiii.

But why "follow" me? Why not "go before"? Because some of my enemies are in the rear; they attack me from behind. There are foes in my yesterdays which can give me fatal wounds. They can stab me in the back! If I could only get away from the past! Its guilt dogs my steps. Its sins are ever at my heels. I have turned my face toward the Lord, but my yesterdays pursue me like a relentless hound! So I have an enemy in the rear.

But, blessed be His name, my mighty God is in the rear as well as my foe. "Goodness and mercy shall follow me!" No hound can break through that defense. Between me and my guilt there is the infinite love of the Lord. The loving Lord will not permit my past to destroy my soul. I may sorrow for my past, but my very sorrow shall be a minister of moral and spiritual health. My Lord is Lord of the past as well as of the morrow, and so today "I will trust and not be afraid."—First Church Bulletin, Greensboro, N. C.

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH

From the time General Booth was sixty-three until he was seventy-eight he was the hardest worked man in the world. It is said that in his lifetime John Wesley preached 40,000 sermons and traveled 250,000 miles. William Booth preached nearly 60,000 sermons, and for every mile that Wesley traveled he traveled twenty. Of course he had better facilities; but the whole round world was his parish, and he was flying back and forth over the earth's surface like a weaver's shuttle.

He died in 1912, at the age of eighty-three, after spending some months in blindness. He had very little schooling, but in 1907 Oxford gave him the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law, along with Mark Twain. He rarely had an extra pound in life, but he left an institution which had assets of multiplied millions. He started alone at Mile End Waste, Whitechapel, but at the time of his translation there were at least a quarter of a million men and women in all corners of the globe clad in red shirts, with "Salvation" on them, preaching the everlasting gospel which he loved more than life.

When asked the secret of his success, just a short while before he died, he said: "God has had all there was of me. There have been men with greater brains than I, men with greater opportunities; but from the day I got the poor of London on my heart and a vision of what Jesus Christ could do for them, I made up my mind that God could have all there was of William Booth."—The Worker's Council.

CONQUERING FAITH

My gallant ships they sailed away
Over the shimmering summer sea,
I stood and watched for many a day,
But only one came back to me.

Joy was caught by pirate Pain,
Hope ran upon a hidden reef;
Love caught fire and foundered
Mid seas of whelming Grief.

At last Faith came storm-tossed and torn,
But recompensed me all my loss;
For as a cargo safe she brought
A Crown linked to a Cross.

AN EFFECT OF EVOLUTION

If this theory is accepted we must look for a widespread lapse from all Christian faith, and, as conduct follows belief in all intelligent creatures, we shall see also great moral declension.

To the ordinary man, the matter appears in this light: If we cannot believe a man's statements, we will not take his advice. If we cannot believe the Bible's narratives, why should we believe its religion? If it is not trustworthy as to facts of this world, why depend upon it as to the other world? If it cannot teach correctly the nature of insects and animals, why should it be able to tell us the nature of God? The common man reasons rightly. The Bible must stand or fall by its reliability all along the line of truth of every kind.—The Gospel Message.

A BOY MARTYR

The story is related of a little boy in Scotland, in the days of the martyrs. Some of God's people were forced to hide in caves and rocks to save their lives. This boy's mother used to send him to carry food to them. One day as he was going on his way with a basket of food, up the mountain path, he was met by some of the wicked persecutors.

They caught him and demanded of him where those men were in hiding. He refused to tell, willing to die rather than betray his trust. Then they cruelly took him and held him out at arm's length over a deep precipice, and told him if he did not tell, they would drop him down on the rocks below. He looked down and shuddered, and said, "Oh, it's deep, but it's nae sae deep as hell!"

When they saw they could not force him to tell, they let him fall, and his body was broken and mangled on the rocks; but God's angels were there to carry him to Heaven. Many children were martyred, as well as their parents, in those days, and it was wonderful the grace God gave them to suffer.

In these days God's people are not being burned at the stake and thrown to wild beasts as they were in those days; but there are persecutions to meet if we stand true to God. We have known many children who loved God, that have had the finger of scorn pointed at them, and have been mocked and hooted at, because they stood true to God. It means something to be a soldier for Jesus Christ even in these days. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him." (II Tim. 2:12.)—Selected.

KEYS TO SUCCESS

Success is another one of those things every one is wanting. Here are a few ideas:

"You must keep on absorbing new ideas as well as new air."

"When a fellow has half knowledge of a subject he finds that it's the other half that would really come in handy."

"The successful worker is one who can do what he ought to do when he ought to do it, whether he wants to do it or not."

"Know what you are after before you start out for it."

"All men cannot be the best, but every man can be his best."

"Make yourself necessary to the world and it will give you bread."

"Enthusiasm breakfasts on obstacles, lunches on objections, dines on competitors and rests in the peaceful slumber of their scattered tail feathers."—Selected.

IS THERE AN ETERNAL HELL?

God's Word says there is a place of "eternal fire." Jude 7. "Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." Mark 9:48. The wicked shall be "cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched." Mark 9:45. "Everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Matt. 25:41. "Tormented day and night for ever and ever." Rev. 20:10.

As sure as God's Word teaches an everlasting Heaven, it teaches an everlasting hell. Men ought to tremble before God Almighty, and forsake sin, and "flee from the wrath to come."—Selected.

BOUGHT AND PAID FOR

In these days when so many things are bought on the installment plan, it is easy for one to understand some things in a spiritual way better than otherwise. Until all the installments have been met, the title remains in the seller; when the last payment has been made, the title is transferred to the buyer. The article is bought and paid for, and then is the property of the buyer, and not until then. After that he can do with it as he pleases; until then he has to observe certain restrictions that were imposed upon him at the time of the sale. But when it has been bought and paid for, it is his to do with as he pleases.

It is here that the great spiritual truth lies. Jesus Christ came into the market when we were slaves to sin and Satan; He bought us out of the market, so that we are no longer for sale at any price. He did not buy us on the installment plan, but paid the price in full at the time of purchase, and the title is in Him from then on. We are not our own; we have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. We have been bought and paid for.

Since, then, He has bought and paid the price in full, we belong to Him and are not our own. As his property He has a right to demand of us whatever He pleases. When we buy an article we buy it for a definite purpose, and we expect it to do what we have had in mind when the purchase was made. Even so, Jesus Christ had a purpose in mind when He bought and paid for us. Here are some of the things that He has told us He wanted us to do: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with silver and gold—but with the precious blood of Christ—see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." "Desire the sincere milk of the word." "Abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul." "Being dead to sins, live unto righteousness." (That is, not being at home" when sin calls, live righteously.)

There is another thing that this relationship entails. Slaves had no rights of property; all that they have belongs to their masters and owners. Then, since He has bought and paid for us, all that we have in our possession belongs to Him, is His right of purchase; it is merely entrusted to us as stewards.

How much are we recognizing in our lives this right of ownership that is His ever since He bought and paid for us? Think this through for yourself. Have you confessed Him as the rightful owner of your life? If not, will you not do so today? Have you been using His time in a way that He would approve? If not, will you not begin today to do so? Has that talent that He has entrusted to you been used for Him, or for some selfish motives? He has bought and paid for you; shall He be cheated out of His possession?—North Ave. News, Atlanta.

TRUE LOYALTY NEVER COWARDLY

There is no such thing as absolute loyalty to Christ without the courage and heroism to fight for His cause and to do battle against the enemies of that cause. "They that forsake the law praise the wicked, but such as keep the law contend with them" (Prov. 28:4). It is "the wicked" who "flee when no man pursueth"; "the righteous" are not of that stripe—they "are bold as a lion" (Prov. 28:1). Cowardly failure to contend with those who trample the law under their feet discounts a person's profession of loyalty to Christ. —Baptist Advance.

THE PRAYER MEETING

There were only two or three of us
Who came to the place of prayer;
Came in the teeth of a driving storm,
But for that we did not care,
Since, after our hymns of praise had risen,
And our earnest prayers were said,
The Master himself was present there,
And gave us the living bread.
We knew His look on our leader's face,
So rapt and glad and free;
We felt His touch when our heads were bowed,
We heard His "Come to Me."
Nobody saw Him lift the latch,
And none unbarred the door,
But "peace" was His token to every heart,
And how could we ask for more?

Each of us felt the load of sin
From the weary shoulder fall;
Each of us dropped the load of care,
And the grief that was like a pall;
And over our spirits a blessed calm
Swept in from the jasper sea,
And strength was ours for toil and strife
In the days that were thence to be.

It was only a handful gathered in
To the little place of prayer;
Outside were struggling and pain and sin,
But the Lord himself was there.
He came to redeem the pledge He gave—
Wherever His loved ones be,
To stand Himself in the midst of them,
Though they count but "two or three."

And forth we fared in the bitter rain,
But our hearts had grown so warm,
It seemed like the pelting of summer flowers,
And not the crush of the storm.
" 'Twas a time of the dearest privilege
Of the Lord's right hand," we said,
As we thought of how Jesus Himself had come
To feed us with loving bread.

CARELESSNESS

I do not care who you are, lawyer, minister, farmer, teacher, laborer, anybody.

I do not care whether you are rich or poor, old or young, strong or weak, every one.

I do not care where you are, at home, on the street, on the train, anywhere.

I am more powerful than all the armies, more deadly than guns or poison gas, more cruel than the most uncivilized man or the fiercest beast.

I steal millions each year, but give nothing to any one.

I always tear down, never build up.

I rejoice in bringing you trouble, sorrow and suffering.

I am defeated each day by many, yet I never give up the attack.

Who am I?

I am Carelessness.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE CABIN IN THE WOODS

It is said Abraham Lincoln once wrote out a story about a little girl who, years ago, was stranded near his Indiana home. With her mother and sister, she was traveling through the woods in a prairie wagon, the axle of which broke near the Lincoln cabin. They cooked their dinner over Abraham's fire, and after luncheon the mother read the children wonderful tales from a strange book. The little girl won Lincoln's heart. Possibly, in after years, that little girl may have told her children a story something like this:

Grr-grr, groaned the wheels of the prairie wagon. The little girl under the canvas hood wrinkled her nose and sniffed. The ill smell of the purple papaw tree drowned the sassafras, but a new odor drowned the papaw.

"I smell bacon frying, mammy," she cried.

"We are coming to a clearing," replied the mother. "See the pigs and the hens hunting under those brown leaves? Look out for that stump, Dannie!"

She was too late. The great wagon gave a sudden lurch. There was a crash; and mother, two little girls, and Dannie tumbled out in every direction. The little girl who is the center of this story found herself sitting up in a bed of ferns just uncurled in the spring sunshine. Rubbing her eyes, she saw Handy and Dandy, the two mules, in a confused mass of struggling legs which Dannie was trying to untangle. Little Sister clung to her mother's skirts, as she sat in a blackberry bush.

"O Dannie, the axle of the wheel is broken," exclaimed mother. "Can we mend it? Look out for Handy's legs! Wait until I get to their heads. Look out, children; keep out of the way! We must cut the harness so the poor things can get up. Oh, what is the matter with Rover?"

Rover, the shepherd dog, gave a yelp of anguish.

"Dandy kicked him. See his poor leg!" cried the little girl.

"Oh, it's broken," exclaimed the mother. "The poor dog! What next?"

The dog yelped and howled, and his leg hung limp. Tears ran down the children's faces, and the mother looked as if she had broken her own leg.

To the sound of crashing and thrashing, last year's hickory nuts, moss, sticks, and stones fell in showers. Dannie was trying to help the mules to their feet. At last he succeeded, but their harness dangled from their backs and they trembled from their struggles.

"The axle to the rear left wheel is broken, marm," said Dannie. "I'll go and find out whether there is a cabin where that bacon is frying."

"What are we going to do for Rover?" cried the little girl, wringing her hands. "Hear him cry!"

Her mother looked at the broken harness, the wheel on the ground, and the moaning dog.

"Children," she said, "the poor dog is suffering. We can't allow that."

"O mammy, he mustn't die, he mustn't. He's taken care of us all the way from Ohio, and he's going to drive our sheep when we have our new home in Missouri, and he will frighten away the bears and the wolves and the Indians. O Rover, dear, please don't hurt so!"

"What is the matter? Can I help you?" At the sound of a voice coming from behind the walnut tree, the little girl looked up, and there stood a tall, thin boy. The wind blew his blue jean shirt like a balloon from his straight back. His lank black hair hung limp over his ears. Soft, deerskin breeches covered his long, thin legs. His bare toes dug into the muddy moss. A man who came slowly behind the boy asked:

"What is the matter, strangers?"

"Have you anything which we can use to make a new axle for this wheel?" asked Dannie.

"And can you help Rover?" pleaded the little girls.

"Yes," answered the boy briefly.

"Abe," said the man, "take the women folks to the house. They are hungry."

The mother looked into the wreck of the wagon.

"We have our own provisions," she said. "While we are gone, will you end the misery of our poor dog?"

The little girl laid her head gently on the dog's and poor Rover feebly tried to lick her cheek.

"When you have taken the strangers to the house, son," said the man, come back and help the man and me to mend the wagon."

"My name is Lincoln," he added, turning toward the mother. "Thomas Lincoln. And this is my son Abraham."

Abe took the little girl's hand, saying, "Come with me. This is the path between the trees and the briers. Look out for the thorns, marm. Little girl, the berries are good to eat. Try one. They taste like baked apples. And hear the bees buzz! I know a honey tree where we can find all the honey we can eat."

The little girl looked into Abraham's kind gray eyes. Meeting a fellow child in the spring woods was a wonderful adventure. How happy she would be if it were not for poor Rover! Abe saw a tear rolling down her cheek. He squeezed her hand and said, "Hurry and we shall see our cabin in a moment. Don't you worry about that dog. He's all right. There's my mother, and there's my sister Sally, and cousin Dennis, and those are mother's children, Jack and Tilda. When my mother came to us, she brought with her a bureau. And now I have a true bed. Have you one?"

Before the little girl could answer, Mrs. Lincoln caught sight of them. Her broad face shone with pleasure.

"Who comes here? You are welcome, strangers."

"Marm," said Abe, "their wagon is broken down, and they are to cook their dinner over our fire while we men mend the axle wheel."

"You needn't have brought anything to eat," exclaimed Mrs. Lincoln. "Dennis hulled and ground the corn this morning, and Abe brought in honey from the woods. Very likely Tom may shoot a partridge, and there are plenty of potatoes. Sit right down. Where did you come from, and where are you going?"

"From Ohio," answered the little girl's mother, "and we are bound for Missouri, where my brother has a clearing. I don't know how we could have mended our wheel without your help. My husband is dead, and we travel alone with our faithful boy, Dannie, to help us."

"Our dog, Rover, broke his leg, and he is to be our sheep dog," added the little girl.

"Yes," continued the mother, "but we must forget poor Rover now. I have brought a book, the Arabian Nights, to read aloud after our dinner. Perhaps your children would like to hear the stories too."

Abe's eyes shone. What a joy to hear new stories! Occasionally a wandering parson visited them, and read from the Bible. If the teacher had time, after drilling the pupils in the three R's, he read Cowper's poems. No one else ever read aloud. What were the Arabian Nights? He had never heard the name.

"I must go back to the wagon," he said. "I'll not be away long, and I will bring some water from the spring, mother. Don't you get it!"

The little girl followed him to the door of the smoky cabin. She was timid with the other lively children, but she liked Abe. The bacon was sizzling over the hot ashes. The corn cake was browning. The sunshine brightened the narrow panes of oiled paper. Mrs. Lincoln blew a horn, and the men and boys came trooping in. Abraham had a pail of water.

"What are you doing now, Abe? Giving a drink to the cats before the humans have a chance to look at the water?" asked his father.

"Marm," exclaimed Dannie, "that boy has contrapted a hickory axle for the wheel, and now the old wagon is better than when it left Ohio. And the stories he has told us!"

"We have tied up the harness," said Thomas Lincoln.

The mother's face lightened. "We can go on once more," she cried, "thanks to you all. We are in a hurry, for we must clear the trees before we can do our spring planting."

"Why doesn't some one ask for Rover?" thought the little girl.

After they had eaten the bacon and the corn dodgers, the mother brought out twelve precious russet apples. "Yet here is something still better," said she, opening the Arabian Nights. A strange world came to life as the mother read. The little girl almost forgot Rover. Abraham's brown cheeks grew red with excitement. At last the mother shut the magic book.

"We must be on our way, or we will not reach the forks tonight," she said.

"That is a good book," said Abraham.

"And you are a good boy," replied the little girl's mother.

The little girl, walking slowly behind the others, thought of Rover. No kind dog friend would greet her with a cheerful bark! She would always be afraid of bears and wildcats now.

Abraham was not as kind as she had thought. He was whistling as he skipped from rock to rock. How could he have forgotten Rover? Presently they came to the familiar wagon, with Handy and Dandy ready to carry them on their way.

"Want to get in the back of the wagon?" Abe asked the little girl. As he drew back the curtain, she scrambled inside. "Oh-h-h-h!" she cried rapturously.

"What is it?" asked the mother.

"It's dear Rover," called the little girl, "with his leg tied to a stick."

"I set it," exclaimed Abraham, "as father did the cow's. It will grow together all right. I reckon a live dog can bark off bears better than a dead dog, even if he has a leg tied to a board."

"Oh," cried the little girl joyfully, "I'll give you my coral beads, my pink dress, Arabian Nights, or anything you wish."

"No," said Abraham, gray eyes twinkling. "I'd take a book away from nobody who is lucky enough to have one. And coral beads and a pink dress? Pretty, but not just the right thing for my kind of work."

"We'll never forget you, Rover and I," said the little girl earnestly.

"That's a better payment than all the beads and dresses in the world," the tall boy told her. "Good luck to you all in your new home!"

Gr-grr, ground the wheels of the prairie wagon, as it again creaked on its way.—Sarah E. Mulliken in United Presbyterian.

AN ITALIAN FOLK TALE

Little Peppina seated at her grandfather's knee in the glory of a summer sunset loves to hear the old story of the Gold in the Orchard. This story is a great favorite of the little Italians and it is told to them by their grandfathers as they heard it from their grandfathers who learned it from the lips of their grandfathers. So little Peppina settles herself beside the old man and begs for her favorite tale.

Once, long years ago there lived an old man who had a fine olive orchard. His trees were the pride of his life and under his care they thrived and prospered. Now, besides the olive orchard this man had three sons. Alas, his pride in them was not so great, for he knew them to be lazy and careless and more eager for adventure than for steady daily toil. So he feared for the future of his splendid orchard, and when the time came for the old man to die, he called his sons to his bedside and entrusted to them a great secret. "My sons," he said, "if it is adventure you wish, you need not go far to seek it. In our own orchard there lies buried a pot of gold. If you would find it you must dig for it. Yes, dig for it." In vain did the eager sons beg their old father to tell them in what part of the orchard the gold was buried. The old man merely shook his head, and would say no more. When their father died the sons were anxious to begin their search for the pot of gold. They held a council and decided that since they did not know where to begin their search, they would begin in a line at one end of the orchard and dig until one of them should find the treasure.

So they began to dig. They dug and they dug until the soil from one end of the orchard to the other had been turned up. They dug around the tree roots and between them. There was no spot of ground that had not been turned under the spade. But their search was unrewarded. No pot of gold was found. If it had ever been there, some one must have stolen it, or more likely, they agreed, the old man had been wandering in his mind. The next season the olive trees in the orchard bore more fruit than they had ever given. The fine cultivating they had from the digging produced so much fruit and of such a fine quality that when it was taken to the market and sold it yielded the brothers a whole pot of gold.

A pot of gold! Suddenly the three sons understood what their wise father had meant when he said: "There is gold hidden in the orchard; dig for it."—Selected.

WHAT SALLY SAVED

It was oh, so nice to be home again. Sally had enjoyed every minute of her visit with her three cousins, but mother and daddy were so 'specially precious.

Sally sat at the supper table and talked and talked, and mother had to say, "Please eat, Sally. Save some to tell later."

So Sally ate three bites of johnny cake and then began to giggle.

"You see, mumsey, Mary, Bobby and Susanne are all older than I am, and sometimes I did not know what they were talking about. They laughed at me about the horse."

"What horse, Sally? Eat some more applesauce, dear."

"Yes, mother. Bobby asked me what sort of a hobby I rode, and I said that I did not know how to ride horseback yet, but that I hoped to begin next spring. Then they all tried to explain at once that Mary's hobby was blue-printed flowers and grasses, and then scrap-booking them; and Bobby's hobby was collecting all kinds of old bird's nests and making notes about the ones the mothers are sitting on; and Susanne's hobby is collecting shells, and she has more than two hundred different kinds all sitting on cotton batting, and I want to hobby something very, very much, but I don't know what."

Daddy spoke up very clearly and distinctly.

"Sally, dear, you had better make it your hobby to eat more and talk less at the table."

"When I was a little girl," said mother, "I used to collect paper-lace mats out of candy boxes."

"When I was a little boy," said daddy, "I used to collect beetles, and grasshoppers, and caterpillars and would make cocoons, and I had boxes with air-holes punched in them on our back porch."

"Aunt Margaret collects old glass," said mother.

"Grandmother Abbott is collecting old samplers," added daddy.

"Bugs, and stones, and shells and old glasses do not seem to interest me," Sally said with decision. "I want something that is clean and instructivating."

"Oh Sally, darling. Do trot to bed. You are so tired you hardly know how to talk."

"Perhaps you will have an inspirational dream," chuckled daddy, as he gave Sally a 'specially home-again hug.

Nothing was said about hobbying at breakfast.

Sally saw the postman coming a little later and ran out to the front steps to get the mail.

"Quite a bunch for your folks today," announced Mr. Eames. "I noticed there was one with a Chinese stamp on the envelope, and say, there's one of those U. S. Lindbergh Air Mail stamps. You are pretty lucky this morning." He handed Sally the whole bunch of mail and went cheerfully whistling up the street.

Sally sat right down on the top step and began looking at the envelopes. A Chinese stamp; which one? That must be it with that cunning little Chinese junk and laundry check marks in the upper corners. This must be the Lindbergh one he mentioned, with the Spirit of St. Louis flying from New York to Paris right on it. And Sally had thought that letters always had a pink George Washington or a green somebody else on them.

"Here's the mail, mother," she called as she put the letters on the lowboy in the hall. "Please be most particularly careful of all those envelopes. I have just made a discovery. I'm going over to Grandmother Abbott's a minute."

Down the street she raced. Grandmother was delighted to see her, of course, and wanted to hear about the visit, but Sally had but one thought in her mind.

"Yes, I had a lovely time. Grandmother, you must have had lots of letters from Uncle Ralph when he went to Africa. Where are they now? Where are the envelopes? May I see the stamps?" Sally hopped around on both feet while grandmother went to her desk and took out two bundles of letters, and then watched Sally with smiling eyes, as she eagerly examined letter after letter.

"My, grandmother! they do not have one stamp for the whole of Africa. Uncle Ralph must have gone to lots of different places, and each place has a different stamp. Here is an Arab on a running camel, and it says Sudan, and here are some African men paddling a queer boat, and I cannot read what it says, and here's a tiger stalking in jungle grass, and see this dear little elephant under a tree, and who's that king there? It says Gambia. Where's Gambia?"

"Sally, dear," laughed grandmother, "I have been hoping you would want those stamps, and I have been saving them just for you. I will help you get them off the envelopes. You will have to use your father and an atlas to answer all your questions."

On the way home a visit was made to Aunt Margaret, and letters from all her friends who were traveling in Europe were examined.

By the time daddy came home to supper that evening Sally had discovered so many new and interesting things about stamps that she began to do all the talking at supper again.

"Hold on," said daddy, "if you will just give me a chance to make a few intelligent and important remarks, I will give you a liberal and appropriate reward tomorrow when I get home."

She let mother say three sentences, and daddy two.

So the next night, when she sat down to supper, she found a package at her place which contained a stamp album just the right size for a little girl who was beginning to save stamps. Inside it said, "To Sally from Daddy, because she found a clean and instructivating hobby."—The Leader.

GOLDEN WORDS

There are some people who seem to think that education and learning are the only things needed to usher in the millennium—there are actually some preachers and church papers that talk that way—but character far outweighs culture, and goodness is a more valuable asset to society than intellectuality. We commend to those who have a wrong conception of this matter the following golden words of the late Hon. W. J. Bryan:

"There never was a time when people needed the inspiration of the Scriptures more than they do in the present day. And there is not a community which cannot be improved and purified by a better knowledge and larger application of the Bible. No money that is invested pays so large a dividend as that spent in the religious uplift of a community. I am inclined to believe that we have overestimated the value of mental training and underestimated the value of the heart's development. A good heart can use a very dull mind and make that mind serviceable to society; but a bad heart cannot make a good use of any mind, no matter how brilliant."—Selected.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Law of recompense. Gal. 6:8.

Tuesday—Law of increase. Matt. 25:19-21.

Wednesday—Law of habit. 2 Peter 1:1-8.

Thursday—Law of love. Matt. 5:43-48.

Friday—Law of generosity. Matt. 7:1, 2.

Saturday—Law of faith. Mark 11:20-26.

Plan for Meeting

Prepare a chart partially filled with several laws of nature that have been harnessed, by whom, and a sentence concerning each. As the meeting progresses have these discussed more fully and try to add to the ones on your chart. You might begin with the more commonly known ones: gravity, steam, electricity, air, photography, compass, etc.

Use some of the following hymns: "I Walk With the King," "Sowing the Seed," "Work, for the Night Is Coming," "Bringing in the Sheaves," "In the Garden," "This Is My Father's World."

Leader's Talk

Read to the society the eighth Psalm, making some comment. These laws of nature are of vital concern to each of us. God is no respecter of persons and for this reason there is no escape from the natural laws nor from their penalties if we disregard the laws. So long as we obey the laws both physically and otherwise the laws do not bother us. It is when we try to break a law that they break us. We can no more hide behind ignorance in the natural laws than we can in laws made by man.

It is our business to try to discover these natural laws and to understand them. The laws of nature which have already been harnessed and used to the good of mankind have been harnessed because some one first found out the law and studied it until he understood its workings. Man-made machines of all classes are so common to us that we too often see only the machine itself or its results and fail to remember that God through nature has made possible these things.

In any work we undertake we can be successful only as we work with nature. There is power, safety and guidance in knowledge and destruction in ignorance.

Topics for Talks

1. The law of character building—requirements.

2. Sow a habit and reap a character.

3. Sowing and reaping.

4. The stability of the natural laws.

To Be Answered

1. Name three natural laws which are easily broken.

2. Can we change nature's laws?

3. Discuss briefly ways by which Jesus illustrates His points through nature's laws.

4. What lessons have you learned from observation of nature.

Quotations

Nature's laws cannot be changed except by applying higher laws. As we gain in knowledge, we learn to use and trust the law.—Anon.

Walk often on the same trail and you make a path. This is an illustration of a habit. The more often you do a thing the easier it is to do it.—Morse.

Punishment for sin is not something laid upon us from the outside (except civil punishment). It comes from within. It is the action of moral law violated, and no one can escape.—Rogers.

Poetry to the Point

FINDING GOD

All lovely things have helped me to find God:
Sweet music and the quiet house of prayer,
Cool gardens and the breath of lilies there,
And violets lifting fragrant from the sod;
The passing of sweet singers, silver shod;
All tender poems, pictures dim and rare;
High deeds of men who greatly live and dare;
The ways of sacrifice their feet have trod.

I find Him thus. But what of those for whom
No beauty gleams, no tender songs are sung,
For whom no high deeds wait, no lilies bloom,
On whom the shadows of the world are flung?
These, too, for whom the blood of Love was shed,

In His white light are soul-transfigured.

—Marion B. Craig.

For I have learned

To look on nature, not as in the hour
Of thoughtless youth; but hearing often times
That still sad music of humanity,
Nor harsh, nor grating, though of ample power to chasten or subdue.

And I have felt

A presence that disturbs me with the joy
Of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime
Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting sun,
And the round ocean and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man;
A motion and a spirit, that impels
All thinking things, all objects of thought,
And rolls through all things.

—From "Tintern Abbey," Wordsworth.

Intermediate Topic

TRAINING SCHOOL IN TEXAS

A successful training school, under the auspices of the Methodist Protestant department of Christian education, was held at Lone Grove, Texas, from July 29th to Aug. 2nd. This was the pioneer training school held in the Colorado-Texas Conference.

The faculty consisted of Dr. G. O. McMillan, president of Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas; Rev. J. A. Richardson, and Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Board of Christian Education, Durham, N. C. Dr. McMillan taught the New Testament course of the Standard Leadership Curriculum, which was offered to those over 18 years of age. Three other courses for young people were offered. Mr. F. L. Gibbs taught the Science of Leadership and Life Investment, and Rev. J. A. Richardson, "The Master Leader—Jesus."

There was a total enrollment of 29, 26 of whom were young people. Classes were held from 8:30 to 12 o'clock, except a short recreational period. During this period the young people's class called themselves High Point College, played baseball against the other class, which was known by the name of Westminster College. Wednesday Westminster was victorious, but Thursday High Point won. Friday morning was stunt morning. Dr. McMillan again led Westminster to victory. The winning stunt was known as "The Kitchen Orchestra."

The help rendered by this training school is invaluable; and we are proud to be the pioneers of this section of the country. We feel that this school has been a great success, and shall be glad to have it brought to our community again next year.

By TWO STUDENTS OF THE SCHOOL.

CHOOSE YOUR DELEGATES

The No-Tobacco League of America will hold its annual convention at Winona Lake, Indiana, on August 26 and 27. The reports of the officers will show that it has had one of the best years in its history.

One of the principal matters to be considered at the convention will be the perfection of a campaign for securing signatures to petitions to Congress to pass the Smoot Bill. The purpose of the bill is to amend the Food and Drugs Act by extending its provisions to tobacco and tobacco products.

This campaign has been under way more than a month and is making splendid progress all over the nation. Plans must be enlarged so as to take in every school district in the land.

Churches and other organizations interested in counteracting the efforts of the tobaccoists to spread the use of tobacco among the women and children of our land are invited to send delegates to the convention.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THE EXECUTIVE MEETING OF WOMAS'S MISSIONARY WORK

The executive meeting of the Woman's Missionary work was held on the veranda of the Bethel Home Wednesday, August 7th. The following officers were present: Mesdames W. C. Hammer, C. L. Whitaker, S. W. Taylor, T. L. Speas, C. W. Bates, H. G. Paschal, D. S. Coletrane, F. W. Paschal, and Pearl McCulloch.

The morning session was given over to the reports of the various officers and secretaries. The reports from the auxiliaries showed that they are falling in line with the new plan splendidly, and there seems to be a renewed interest in the missionary work. It was decided to make a strenuous effort to organize new auxiliaries and by the pastors co-operating with the district chairmen it is hoped that much may be accomplished in extending the missionary work.

The treasurer's report showed an advance in finances over the report of last year.

A dinner was served the executive officers and visitors by the Bethel Home, which was elegant in every detail, even to the artistic centerpiece of pink asters, which was arranged by Mr. Casto. The place cards were attractive souvenirs furnished by Mr. Altman.

The afternoon session took up the unfinished business of the morning. Mrs. F. W. Paschal, secretary for Bethel Home, reported some of the needs of the home, such as a new kitchen sink, help in making payments on an electric refrigerator and a new mattress, but the latter was given by Mrs. Lewis, one of the visitors.

During the afternoon "the Sisterhood" enjoyed a delicious box of candy which was a gift from Mr. Altman.

Several solos were given by Mr. Beers, of the Bethel Home, accompanied by Miss Novella McIntyre, which were much enjoyed by all present.

An informal discussion of plans and problems was entered into by the members of the different auxiliaries present. Mesdames C. L. Whitaker, M. P. Harrell and Miss Mary Young were elected a committee on High Point College Student Loan Fund.

The following visitors were present at the meeting: Revs. C. W. Bates, Homer Casto, N. M. Harrison, F. W. Paschal; Mesdames J. S. Lewis, N. M. Harrison, J. S. Williams, J. P. Younger, E. C. Fausette, N. T. Holcombe, Lindsay Blackwelder, Wiley Garrison, F. O. Edwards, McPeters, and Misses Bettie Brittingham and Novella McIntyre.

The executive officers then enjoyed a delicious supper with the Bethel Home family. Again the ladies were favored by solos by Mr. Beers, accompanied by Mrs. Hattmer, who is also in the Home.

This closed a very delightful day spent in the Bethel Home, after which the executive officers returned to the Bates cottage, where they were having a most enjoyable time.

These visitors were so charmed with the gracious hospitality and the beautiful surroundings that they decided to spend Thursday, on which day they were entertained by the Weaverville Ladies' Aid Society by a most delicious picnic supper, at the home of Mrs. Guy Edwards. They greatly appreciate the many courtesies extended them during their stay in the mountains and look forward to the meeting a year hence.

REPORTER.

SQUARING UP A DISAPPOINTMENT

The hour was punctual, always is,
The place was there, as true as steel;
And I the time and place both met
And did no ill foreboding feel.

The call was urgent, needs were great;
Most surely all will understand
And every effort be put forth
That all the group may be on hand.

I waited long and no one came.
I felt aggrieved and also vexed.
If faithful men can thus respond,
What under the sun will they do next?

I sought for words to fit their case
And make them know just how I felt,
For it would serve them just and right
To deal a blow beneath the belt.

I wrote a note quite stiff and strong
And copied all for every man;
I wanted all to see and know
That black is black and tan is tan.

With scorching words I sought to burn
And cure the callous hearts of men,
Awaken feeling and insure
That they would not do so again.

I posted quickly ten fat letters,
To Uncle Sam paid four cents each,
And gloried in the timely lesson
My note to them would sharply teach.

I then sat down in sweetest rest,
With blessed sense of duty done.
I chanced to glance at calendar,
And saw I'd gone a week too soon!

—J. F. M.

A PSALM OF PRAISE

To thee, O God, we render thanks
For all thy mercies sure;
Thy tender love environs us
And will through life endure.

Teach us to know thy perfect will
And truly humble be;
May we in gladness praise thy name
Throughout eternity.

Thou art our refuge and our strength,
There is no other power;
When sudden danger threatens us,
We find in thee a tower.

To thee, O God, we render thanks
And call upon thy name;
A psalm of praise to thee we sing,
Thy wondrous love proclaim.

—Grenville Kleiser.

The Glow-Worm

Nor crush a worm, whose useful light
Might serve, however small,
To show a stumbling-stone by night,
And save man from a fall.

I sent no report to the Herald last week. I hope you missed it and wondered why it did not appear. I had a good reason for not sending it. The French call it "ennui," but Americans, when they tell the truth, as I am trying to do, call it pure, unadulterated laziness. This is the principal excuse for most of our delinquencies, but few of us are honest enough to admit it. Well, that is that, and the "cat is out of the bag."

Two months and a half until our Conference year ends, and we haven't started to pay our A. C. B. What we have contributed so far will just about meet our incidental expenses. We have far, very far, to go if we have any intention of reaching our goal. If all the members of our church become infected with your treasurer's disease, I am afraid we shall all be lost.

CALLS FOR HUMAN AID

A giant pelican of Santa Monica, Calif., recently appealed to a man to relieve him from a pain he could not cure himself. After hanging around in the air for some time he finally settled down upon the Municipal pier near Mr. Ed Hendricks, who was fishing there near a group of other men. They all noticed that the bird was evidently in pain of some sort, and when Mr. Hendricks gently reached out his hand the pelican stood still and let him make an examination. A little exploring discovered a large fish-hook embedded in its flesh and it was necessary in the ensuing surgical operation to use a pair of pliers, to which the bird submitted courageously. Several times it squawked out in pain, but made no attempt to use its huge bill or wings in anger, and when it was over flew away as happy and relieved as a boy would feel after having had a bad splinter removed from his foot.—C. E. Howard.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—The pulpit of First Church was occupied by Dr. A. G. Dixon on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. We were delighted to hear him again, for he served as pastor of this church for nine years, from 1908 to 1917, and greatly endeared himself for all time to the membership here. He spoke on "Teaching the Things That Jesus Taught," from the text in Matt. 28:20: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." He said in part that people are thinking for themselves these days more than ever, especially the youth of our land are seeking for the truth. It is the business of religious leaders to lead them into the way of truth. There are four powerful agencies that mold and shape the lives of our young people: the home, day school, press, and church. The press is a necessity, but dangerous, too. Why are our daily papers filled with wrecks, murders, suicides, broken homes, and other abominable things? Why do they not publish all the good things that individuals, churches, and other agencies are doing all over our land? It is said that the average person's name appears in the newspaper just three times in his life: at his birth, marriage, and death, and in order to "get on the front page" you must do something criminal, while "all the nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love" are never recorded. It is a great thing to be a leader of youth, a director of young people's religious thought and life. They with all their eagerness and enthusiasm are looking up into our faces and saying, "Teach me!" The great mass of young people today are splendid, and endowed with a divine unrest. Judge Ben Lindsey, of the juvenile court of Denver, Colo., said that out of all the boys haled into his court, only two were regular attendants at Sunday school, and if parents will keep their boys in the Sunday school until 14 years of age, they will not become criminals. If you would leave an imperishable memory, write your name on the heart of a child. Dr. Dixon referred to the great changes that have taken place since he was pastor in the little gray brick church next door—inevitable changes in the times, customs, thoughts of the present generation. His sermon was forceful and timely, and much enjoyed by his hearers. In the absence of Prof. E. B. Stimson the organ was played beautifully by Miss Florence Blair. Mr. Blake Harrison sang "A Prayer Perfect" with fine effect, and the choir rendered the anthem, "Jesus, My Saviour, Look on Me."

In the junior church services the topic was, "Why Is Truth Best?" and was led by Miss Sue Everhart. On next Sunday morning the adult congregation is invited to worship with these juniors, and a special program is being prepared by Rev. E. L. Ballard.

At the evening service Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, who once served as pastor here, delivered an inspiring and helpful message. Mrs. J. H. Allred sang very beautifully "I Shall Not Pass This Way Again."

On Monday evening the Endeavorers, who are earnest and faithful in spite of the warm weather, will discuss the topic, "God's Goodness Revealed in Nature's Laws," and the leader will be Mrs. Theodore Ballard.

On Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock the Woman's Auxiliary will hold a Dollar Social in connection with their usual monthly general meeting in the assembly room. All members are urged to bring one dollar, and the funds will be used for the scholarship in High Point College. We are trying to give a whole scholarship this year, which amounts to $100.

Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, director of music, and his sister, Miss Kathleen Stimson, went to Asheville and Hendersonville last week to spend a vacation of a week or more.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague and children have returned from a short vacation which they spent at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard went to Winston-Salem today, where the former will assist Rev. R. C. Stubbins in a special meeting at Hickory Ridge.

Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown, of Reidsville, attended the funeral services of Mr. R. C. Boyd last Wednesday.

Mrs. Weaver M. Marr, of Jacksonville, Fla., nee Miss Helen Brown, of this city, was the guest of Mrs. P. V. Kirkman for a few days last week, and was accompanied by her attractive young son, Weaver, Jr., and daughter, Marie.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. A. G. Dixon is improving after a stay at Jackson Springs, and is back at the Children's Home.

Orange Charge.—Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, will visit this charge as follows. The fourth Sunday in August, Hebron at 11 a. m.

Fourth Sunday in August, Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m.

First Sunday in September, Union Grove, 11 a. m.

First Sunday in September, Edland, 8 p. m. Annual Conference days will be held at the above appointments.

At Union Grove on the first Sunday in September, in addition to above announcement, dinner will be served on the grounds and a missionary meeting will be held after dinner. Please come and hear our president.

The revival meeting began at Union Grove Sunday, August 4th, and closed August 8th. Bro. Millaway came on Monday and remained until the meeting closed. His sermons were well received. The services were not as largely attended as such services usually are at this church. The last day of the meeting we were practically rained out.

Visible results of the meeting were four conversions and one addition to the church.

Bro. Millaway is a splendid preacher and a good man to be with. May God continue to use him in the extension of Christ's kingdom.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Winston-Salem.—It's vacation time! Some go, some come and others remain the same. Well, anyway, our pastor and his wife are gone for a vacation. Many others from our congregation are gone also. We hope they are all having a wonderful time.

Due to the absence of the pastor, the pulpit committee had to do a little work—well, not exactly work—but to invite someone to fill our pulpit. We had a good "refill" Sunday. Rev. Mr. Brewster, from the Moravian church, preached for us. He brought a message which was of interest to all. He is expected to preach for us again next Sunday.

Our Sunday night services have been called off during our pastor's absence.

The workers' council had its monthly meeting recently and many things of importance were discussed and settled. As Rally Day is drawing near a committee was appointed to serve and to begin its work now. Another committee was also appointed for Promotion Day. It is hoped that the different classes and also departments will be able to give, on this day, to the Sunday school some of the things the teachers have tried so hard to teach them.

Miss Pearl Sapp will be our delegate to the Annual Conference this year. Another year's work is nearly ended. How many of us have given to the Master something for His goodness toward us and according to our prosperity? We have nothing except that which God gives us, therefore we owe Him money, time and thought. May another year help us to find our specific duty and fulfill that duty to the best of our ability.

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

Henderson.—Our Sunday morning service was in charge of Rev. J. Clyde Auman. His message was well chosen and forceful. He used for his subject "The Idealist." He said we should set as our ideal Christ and His ability to visualize great things in the future. Strive to reach our ideals, by pressing forward and living the truths in our everyday life, just as we hear them preached from the pulpit. Our lives can influence others for better, only as we live after the life of the Ideal, Christ. We regret that a larger congregation was not present.

A very sad incident occurred last Thursday when Richard Gooch, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Gooch, was accidentally shot in the leg while in camp with the Henderson Home Guards. He later developed pneumonia and is critically ill at Morehead City. His parents are with him. We pray that God will see best to restore this young boy to his health and back to his family, friends and church.

Rev. R. A. Hunter and family have returned from the Summer Conference and a visit to relatives.

Mrs. W. Blannie Hight, leader of the Girls' Mission Band, was hostess to that society on Tuesday night, July 11th. Mrs. Hight conducted the devotionals and an open discussion of the present work of Home Missions of the M. P. Church was held. The society voted to give "A Trip Around the World" at the church on a later date, charging five cents to each country. During the social hour a contest was held in which Miss Wilma Wilburne, house guest of Miss Mabel Hayes, was the winner. Delicious punch and cake was served by the hostess.

Circle No. 4 of the Auxiliary met Thursday night, July 18th, with Miss Lucy Taylor. Mrs. Clyde Finch had charge of the devotionals. During the business session articles were collected for the shower for the Children's Home. The various reports were given, and plans for a bazaar and dinner to be given this fall were made and voted on. At the close of the meeting ice cream and cake were served by the hostess.

REPORTER.

West Forsyth.—Our revival meeting closed at Stony Knoll last Friday night. There were two professions and two accessions to the church. Rev. J. D. Cranford, of Kernersville, arrived on Monday night and preached twice daily during the meeting. His sermons were interesting, forceful and effective. Some of his discourses brought tears to the eyes of both Christian and sinner. The people received his sermons with a marked interest and attention. The attendance was good throughout the meeting, the church being filled at all of the night services. The two young men uniting with the church at the last service were Everett Douglass and Fred Hunter. We appreciate the splendid entertainment given us by the people of Stony Knoll church during the revival meeting.

The pastor is grateful to Rev. James Ring, Quaker preacher, for meeting the appointment at Union Hill last Sunday morning. After being in revival meetings continuously for four weeks, the pastor rested last Sunday. We visited an uncle near Greensboro and drove over to Calvary church and heard a good sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Bates. Calvary church has been requested to entertain the Annual Conference in November, since our Concord church has found it will be impossible for them to have the Conference meet with them.

The meeting of the third quarterly conference for West Forsyth Charge will be held at Tabernacle church Saturday of this week, beginning at 11 o'clock. After a sermon, dinner will be served at the church and the business session of the conference will be held in the afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. We are expecting Rev. H. F. Surratt, pastor of the Winston church, to preach the sermon. We are expecting a large attendance of the official members from the different churches.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Pleasant Hill at 11 o'clock and Tabernacle at 2:30 o'clock. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

South Lexington.—Bro. Isley was absent Sunday. Bro. C. L. Hedrick filled his appointment with a very helpful message.

Our Sunday school is doing good work. We have a very good attendance. Much interest is shown.

The supper given by the ladies was a very good success. The proceeds from the party amounted to $57. We are grateful to the ladies for what they are doing for our church. May they get full co-operation from the entire church. The Christian Endeavor Society is also doing good work. The C. E. helps so much to develop the lives and ideals of the boys and girls.

Our people are moving forward with the conference claims. May every one work and give until we close up this year with our work finished. Pray for us that we may do more work for our Master.

REPORTER.

State Street.—We were glad to have Mr. I. A. Teague, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Kennedy from Pleasant Grove with us in the morning services Sunday. Mr. Teague is superintendent of the Sunday school at Pleasant Grove and Mrs. Kennedy is superintendent of the primary department, and Mrs. Murphy has charge of the beginners. Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Kennedy visited these departments of our school. Mr. Teague visited the Men's Bible class.

At the close of the Sunday school Mr. Bethea gave an object lesson and short address for the children. He used a drawing of four trees—the pine, oak, elm and palm—and brought out in an interesting way how some of the Christian virtues and characteristics were like tree. It was very much enjoyed by the grown-up part of the congregation as well as by the children.

Bro. Bethea went Monday to Shiloh on the Randolph Charge to help Bro. Garner in a series of meetings. Bro. Bethea will do all the preaching for this meeting and next week will go to Mount Pleasant to help Bro. Milla-way in a revival meeting.

The meeting at Mount Carmel, for which Bro. Bethea did the preaching, closed last Thursday night. This was a very successful meeting and resulted in a large number of converts and a great strengthening of the Christian people of this congregation.

Last Tuesday night Miss Helen Harkey entertained her Sunday school teacher and classmates and a few other friends with a delightful social, given at her home on Salem street. Among the guests of honor at this social were Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and Mrs. H. S. Lanier. Mrs. Lanier was for several years the faithful and well loved teacher of this class. Mrs. H. C. Rodgers took the class when Mrs. Lanier resigned some time last spring and is doing fine work.

Last Wednesday night the C. E. Society gave a social at the close of the regular meeting of the society. This was to be an outdoor affair, but had to be given inside because of a heavy rain. Lunch was served in the church dining room at the close of a very enjoyable social hour.

The Warlick reunion was held last Saturday in Cleveland County, near the home place of Mrs. Bethea. Mrs. Bethea, who was Miss Warlick before her marriage, attended the reunion and reports a fine time at this gathering of relatives, in-laws and friends.

Mrs. Pearl Leonard, one of our most esteemed members and workers, is quite ill at the Davidson Hospital, having recently undergone a major operation. We miss Mrs. Leonard greatly and are hoping and most earnestly praying for her speedy recovery.

Mr. J. W. Lindsay is improving and we hope will soon be entirely recovered from his recent stroke of paralysis. REPORTER.

Burlington, Fountain Place.—The work of the Sunday school and church in all departments is going along very nicely. We realize, however, that there is yet much to be done before the close of the Conference year. Our Sunday school went out to the country home of Mr. Patterson, one mile from Altamahaw, on Saturday afternoon, August 3rd, for the annual picnic. Some spent the time boat-riding, some bathing, some pitching horseshoes, and others in friendly conversation. As a climax, all partook of the good eats which had been prepared for the occasion. Late in the afternoon we returned, after having thanked Mr. Patterson for his kind hospitality and all agreeing that it was a most enjoyable occasion.

Miss Swannie Coble has just returned from an extended trip north, which included points in Canada, Niagara Falls, New York City, and various other places of special interest.

Pastor Chambliss recently assisted Rev. J. L. Trollinger in a revival meeting at Midway, on the Haw River charge. He is away again for a stay of ten days or more, assisting Rev. Mr. Madison in a special meeting in South Carolina.

In the absence of the pastor last Sunday, we were favored at the 11 o'clock service by an excellent sermon by Rev. G. W. Holmes; and at the evening hour, by a splendid address by Miss Paschal, who is doing special work this summer at the Davis Street church. We appreciate the services of these visiting speakers, and hope to have them with us again. CHAS. L. JONES, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Circuit.—Our revival began Sunday, July 21, and continued until the following Friday night. We had good preaching. Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, conducted the services. Six converts and three new members added to the church: Mrs. Billy Canipe, Misses Mabel and Bessie Lee Warlick. We all feel that this meeting has helped us to live better lives.

The fourth quarterly conference was held here at Pleasant Hill on Saturday following the special meeting. Bro. Chas. Grant preached at 11 o'clock, dinner at 12 o'clock, and then the quarterly conference was held in the afternoon.

The Junior Order, Casar Council, met at the grave of their deceased member and brother, Mr. W. M. Warlick, Sunday afternoon, July 28, and held a memorial service, placing flowers on the grave. It was carried out beautifully and so much appreciated by the members of the family.

LUCILLE WARLICK, Reporter.

Hollister.—The attendance at Sunday school has been off for the past few Sundays owing to revivals. We were very glad to have Mr. Yarborough, of Richmond, Va., with us Sunday. He gave a very interesting talk on the Sunday school lesson.

Our pastor, Mr. Spencer, is busy in revival meetings. He has been working in revivals for the past month and he is engaged now until the last of September with the exception of the third week in August. He is planning to visit his daughter near Asheville at that time and take a rest.

Rev. Willie Wood filled Mr. Spencer's appointment at Hollister Sunday evening. There was a large congregation out to hear him. Mr. Wood used for a subject, "Being Alone With God." We need to get alone with God more and talk to Him and let Him talk to us by reading His Word. In this fast age in which we are living we fear we are letting other things take our time and we do not take the time we should to talk to God and let Him talk to us.

The revival is going on at Bethesda this week. Dr. T. M. Johnson is assisting Mr. Spencer in the meeting there. Our revival will begin the fourth Sunday in August with Rev. J. R. Anderson assisting. Please remember us in your prayers for this revival.

Five of our young people attended the Leadership Training School at High Point College. We are all hoping we can go back next year to the Leadership Training School. Those attending the Training School from Hollister were Rev. Willie Wood, Mr. Ollie Knight, Misses Sallie Wood, Florence Crawley and the writer. REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Our special meeting began the fourth Sunday at 2:30 with Rev. W. E. Hill, of Denton, as pulpit help. He preached the opening sermon, which was soul-stirring and uplifting. Also, Bro. E. A. Bingham brought some fine messages from time to time. Both speakers were highly congratulated; right large congregations from start to finish. The meeting closed on Saturday night and with all the good work by them and the laymen, sinners would not be reached, although there was good interest manifested by the Sunday school scholars and I believe that it was good seed sown on good ground and will multiply and bring forth a good harvest some day. The church was revived right much.

On the 11th instant, at night, Rev. Bunch Surratt, of Denton, accompanied Bro. Bingham to Cid and delivered an uplifting sermon. He was accompanied by his lovely wife and children; Bingham also accompanied them.

The special meeting began at Piney Grove on the 11th, with two sermons by Rev. W. E. Hill and they were delivered in the old-time way of the Gospel that brought many tears to his hearers. A right large crowd was present. There were a lot of fine rations on the ground. Those Piney Grove people know how to treat their fellow man. Cid and Canaan were well represented.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wright are all smiles—a fine son.

Mrs. Nannie Bynum, of High Point, was visiting her sister, Mrs. N. W. Lanier, for the past week.

The wedding bells are expected to ring around Cid shortly.

We are having a fine Sunday school.

Rev. William Carson, of Shelby, passed through Cid Saturday, going to Alleghany church. The writer and family were real glad to see him.

NOTICE

Rev. G. H. Hendry, of Concord, North Carolina, expects to start revival services in Greenville, South Carolina, the first Sunday in September. Will the readers who know of any Methodist Protestants that have moved to the said place please notify Mrs. J. Lee Poole, Overbrook, Greenville, South Carolina?

—We suggest the following for a marker on the highway near Shelby:

TO ALL MULES THAT PASS THIS WAY
Don't you dare stop to read this sign
Put here by friends of all mulekind:
Read as you run and run in high gear,
For something dreadful happened here.
On a summer day of twenty-nine,
With nature calm and weather fine,
A mule grew mulish at this spot;
A preacher came, the mule was not.

—Rev. W. L. Carson met with a serious mishap recently. He was driving his auto on the highway and suddenly discovered a mule in the road before him. He made a mighty effort to avoid hitting the animal, but did hit him and dragged him several feet, the injuries resulting in the death of the mule. It seems that the animal had balked, reared, plunged, thrown himself into the side-ditch and then out into the road just in time for the car to hit him. The court decided that Bro. Carson should pay for the mule.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Hayes

On Tuesday, August 6, at 5 o'clock, p. m., Mrs. Nancy Vickery Hayes went to the great beyond. She was the wife of E. L. Hayes and a daughter of Jonathan and Nancy Vickery. She is survived by her husband and six children, four boys and two girls: Eli Hayes, of Lexington; Mrs. L. D. Vuncannon, Charles and Robert Hayes, of Randleman; Will Hayes and Mrs. Ivan Siler, of Greensboro, and several grandchildren and five sisters and two brothers, who are Mrs. J. E. Rush, of Liberty; Mrs. K. G. Coltrane, D. W. Vickery and W. D. Vickery, all of Randleman, Route 1, and Mrs. T. E. Marley and Mrs. A. G. Toomes, of Pleasant Garden, and Mrs. J. S. Davis, of Sophia.

The funeral was held from New Salem church on Thursday, conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, and a former pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Neese, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hinkle, of Greensboro, and a Baptist preacher of Randleman, after which she was tenderly placed in the cemetery there by the side of her son and daughter, who preceded her several years ago.

She had been a great sufferer for several years and while it was hard for her husband and good children to give her up, God knew she had suffered enough so He said, "Come."

Loving sister, safely landed,
As I know on heaven's shore,
In this world of sin and sorrow
I shall meet you nevermore.

In the Father's heavenly mansions
With the ransomed ones above
We shall meet, departed sister,
In that home of peace and love.

There no parting words are uttered,
There will be no sighs or tears,
But in fullness joy and pleasure
Shall flow on through endless years.

Sister, we shall see each other
On that brighter, better shore,
And the Savior praise together
Through the long forevermore.

Her sister,

MRS. T. E. MARLEY.

"How'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good;
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

Suddenly and without warning, on the afternoon of Monday, August 5th, the life of this fine, upstanding young man was cut off by a tragic accident when one of the Southern Railway's fastest trains, the Piedmont Limited, which passes High Point at 5:20 p. m., ran over him at the Prospect Street crossing. Born August 9, 1890, at Pinetown, Beaufort County, near Washington, N. C., Mr. Boyd soon after attaining his majority came to Guilford County as a teacher at Welch school, near this city, and later at Delane school. At one time he served as postman in High Point. In 1917 he was happily married to Miss Callie Vuncannon, of this city, and they are the parents of four bright and attractive little daughters, Hazel, Mary Louise, Eunice, and Dorothy. About eight years ago Mr. Boyd established a grocery business on English Street, and later opened a store on Prospect Street. In 1918, during Dr. George R. Brown's ministry, he united with the First Methodist Protestant Church, and at the time of his passing was a member of the Board of Stewards, and superintendent of the Intermediate Department of the Sunday school. Always an active and tireless worker in business, he applied the same industry to his church relations. He was prompt and punctual, and at 9:30 o'clock each Sabbath morning was found at his post in the Sunday school, although his work often kept him busy until midnight on Saturday. He was most generous and liberal, and according to his means was perhaps the largest contributor to the First church and her interests. For a period of several years he had paid for the literature of the Intermediate Department.

In the presence of a large throng of sympathizing relatives and friends, impressive funeral rites were conducted on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in First church. The choir sang "Rock of Ages" and "Sometime We'll Understand." Rev. E. Lester Ballard and a former pastor, Dr. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville, paid high and gracious tribute to his worth as a Christian worker, splendid husband and father, loyal friend, and gentleman of the highest type. Burial was made in Oakwood Memorial Park. The offering of flowers was unusually beautiful and lavish. To his heart-broken mother, the bereaved wife and fatherless daughters who sit in the shadow of grief and loneliness, we extend loving and hearty sympathy. May the God of all comfort be very near to them, and bind up their sore and bleeding hearts.

"How fares it with thee now? 'Tis but a day
Since in these earthly ways thou didst tread;
Now, sudden, thou hast gone so far away
We cannot reach thee. Wither art thou fled?"

Hast thou forgotten all thou here didst love?
The flowers of spring, the thrush's mellow
song?

Is there no tender, yearning thought above
For those whose lives were bound with thine so long?

O strange, deep mystery! Sudden from our sight

Thou passest like a shadow—all in vain
Our questionings and our grief; for us the night,

For thee the day where suns unsetting shine."

High Point, N. C., Aug. 12, 1927.

SPEAK GENTLY

Speak gently; it is better far

To rule by love than fear:

Speak gently! let not harsh words mar
The good we might do here.

Speak gently! 'tis a little thing,

Dropped in the heart's deep well,

The good, the joy, which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell.

The $2.75 credited to Flat Rock on Flat Rock Charge came from Summerfield with no church designated, but we supposed it came from Flat Rock.

The amounts reported from the three churches on South Winston are the amounts contributed when we visited all three of these churches on one Sunday and presented a program by the children. We had a good day and the folks seemed to appreciate the program.

We hope to go to Lincolnton, Bess Chapel, Fallston, and one point on Cleveland next week-end.

We think we have a very good program and will be glad to visit a few churches through the remaining Sundays in August and on into September. Please let us know if we may come.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Two weeks ago a basket of towels, pillow-cases and other nice things were credited to the Philathea Class of Pleasant Grove Church when it should have been the Christian Endeavor Society.

Liberty Church, Davidson, 20 2-cent stamps, 2 sheets, 1 towel, 1 pair pillow-cases.

Young Ladies' Class, State Street, 1 little dress.

Mrs. W. L. Kivett, apples.

Mr. W. F. Grabs, apples.

Octagon soap wrappers keep coming in. Thank you so much for the money, and for your help in many ways. The needs for our family of 92 are just the every day needs of any ordinary home. We thank you for ever keeping us in mind and for responding in so many ways to those needs.

Special Need

Our special need for the present is for table linen.

Remember Harvest Home Week

During some week this fall, the most suitable for your section of the state, please set the time and gather together grain, vegetables, canned goods, chickens and farm produce of any kind, load it on someone's truck and send to us, or phone us and we will drive for it. You can help us wonderfully in this way, and I am sure you will.

We are planting cabbage, collards, turnips and beets this week, thus doing our best to help provide for ourselves.

Thanking you for your thoughtfulness of us and for your prayers, and with a prayer for God's blessing upon you in all your work for Him, I am,

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

The Christian Ministry

A class of men called out by God,
A school of men inspired of God,
A band of men sent forth by God
To show to men the way to God.

Their calling high, their urge profound,
Their mission grand, their doctrine sound,
They can but be a mighty force
In turning men from evil's course.

The grandeur of the moral law,
Inspiring fear and painful awe,
Declare they all with solemn voice
And yet can make each heart rejoice.

For God has found a wondrous plan
To make of sinner a righteous man,
To straighten out the crooked life,
To fill with joy and free from strife.

The glorious light of love divine
In darkened hearts of men does shine;
Its warmth and comfort each one feels,
The rebel soul draws near and kneels.

And marvel deep of every age,
The wonder still of every sage,
By faith in One who bled and died
The guilty soul is justified!

A peace too deep to understand
Fills full the soul of troubled man;
The joys of Heaven come down to earth
Because a soul has found rebirth.

But God's great work is just begun,
The babe's not yet a perfect son.
The newborn soul must e'er be fed
With sincere milk or living bread.

Before the victory must be fought
By soldier clad in armor bright.
The man of God must have a care
Unready souls to well prepare.

This high ministry to the souls of men,
Honoring our God with tongue and pen,
Working and praying that none may fall,
Demands the best that's in us all.

Just such work might angels covet:
Shall not we much more than love it?
When work is o'er and crowns are won,
What joy to hear God's great "Well done!"

God's Ways and Ours

God has on the earth some people who speak English, some who speak French, some who speak German, and others who speak Italian, Swedish, Norwegian, Polish, Russian, and so on. Does this require that God know all these human tongues in order that He may talk with all His children? It sometimes seems to us that if God would only address us in our own human language (English), we would know exactly what He means and would be satisfied. Or if He would address us in Hebrew, with words clearly enunciated, we could find a Hebrew rabbi to translate and interpret for us and this would be highly satisfactory. But God never does either of these things. Yet who of us can say that God never speaks to us? He does speak to every one of us, but His way of speaking is not our way. He does not need the bungling device of human language to reach our minds and hearts. He speaks directly to our inner consciousness and we know what He means without an interpreter. In times of temptation He speaks to us words of warning. Human friends may not know of our peril, but He knows, and He never fails to warn us. In times of sorrow He speaks to us words of comfort and hope. The bitterness of our souls may not be suspected by our nearest friends, but He knows us altogether, and He makes us feel His sympathy. God's ways are so much higher and better than man's ways! Why should we ever wish that God would come to us in human ways of approach? Yet God did once yield to this demand for a human mode of approach: In the person of Jesus Christ He appeared to fleshly eyes, He addressed men through ears of flesh, He was touched and handled by human hands. But that was only for a brief season. It was expedient for us that He return to His heavenly mode of approach and communication.

A Closing Prayer for Sunday School

We print elsewhere a form of prayer for closing the Sunday school session. This is presented by one of our readers. He asks for a discussion of it. As he does not offer it as a model prayer for general adoption, our readers may feel free to object to it or any part of it, if they find it objectionable.

We wonder why there is prayer for teachers and officers and none for the scholars. We also wonder why the church service about to begin is ignored. Why not pray that all may be helped by the preaching service, and thus suggest that all who can stay for that service instead of suggesting that all go home immediately?

—Working and praying go hand in hand. The things you pray for in the deep of your heart are the things you work for most earnestly. If you would increase your activity, pray more. If you are doing little or nothing, it is a sign that you are not praying much.

NEGLECTED TRUTHS OF THE ATONEMENT

By H. H. SMITH

In Dr. James Denny's splendid book, The Christian Doctrine of Reconciliation, attention is called to two important truths concerning the atonement which are often overlooked. He reminds us that Jesus brought not only forgiveness to the sinner, but also evoked repentance—enabled the sinner to realize his guilt and repent of his sins. Speaking of the repentance of the woman who was a sinner, and the repentance of Zaccheus, he elaborates this thought:

"In both cases, and one may say in all others that the gospel records, it is important not to forget that Jesus was present, and that it was His presence which made possible all the experiences which are included under reconciliation or regeneration. This is sometimes overlooked by those who are jealous for what they call free forgiveness. Thus a recent writer on this subject says: 'The free forgiveness of sins was the vital spark of Christ's teaching. "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Wherever He found repentance, there He scattered forgiveness; it was as water to the tender plant.' "The simplest answer to this," says Dr. Denney, "is to say that Jesus did not 'find' repentance at all. It was not there ready-made, waiting for forgiveness. He had to create or evoke repentance, and there was something in His character and in His attitude to the sinful which evoked powerfully to this end. . . . We do not first repent of our sins and then come to Jesus; it is the visitation of our life by Jesus to which we owe first repentance and then all other spiritual blessings."

How true are the words of this great theologian. The world is not ready and waiting to repent and accept the offer of salvation. A revival comes only after Christ has been faithfully preached day after day and the sinful are moved by the sacrificial love and boundless grace manifested at Calvary. Who can name a great evangelist, or any great preacher, who was not noted for the central place of Christ in his preaching? We deplore the lack of deep repentance today; the fault may be right here.

The other neglected truth was so strongly emphasized in Paul's experience that it is a wonder it has been overlooked. Dr. Denney says: "Reconciliation to God is not realized unless it includes reconciliation to the order of God's providence, and to the circumstances of our life as fixed for us by Him. We are not really reconciled to Him if we are at war with the conditions of human existence, and lead a resentful, querulous, or despondent life. True reconciliation confronts the world in another mood. It can say, 'I have learned in whatever state I am therein to be content.' It can say, 'We glory in tribulation also.' It can look the most painful things in the face—tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, sword—and cry, 'In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us.' It is of the utmost importance to keep this in mind when we think of the life of the justified or reconciled. There is a way of conceiving justification or reconciliation which reduces it as nearly as possible to moral nullity; it is something with the nature of fiction about it, something which speaks in terms of imputation as distinct from inspiration. This is not the Pauline view."

Whenever we are tempted to be discontented with our lot, we should bear this important truth in mind, that, to be reconciled to God, means to be reconciled to all His providences for us.

CARING FOR THE WORLD'S UNDERPRIVILEGED CHILDREN

By DR. PAUL S. LEINBACH

Increasing the breadth of its scope, Golden Rule Sunday observance after six years of operation is now launched as an international, interdenominational, and inter-racial movement, with a program of "good works" to which all mankind can subscribe.

The continuance of the movement and its evolution comes in response to a demand for the preservation of the ideals and principles of thanksgiving and sacrifice for which it has become emblematic.

The Golden Rule Foundation

Sponsoring this worldwide movement for constructive benevolence are men and women prominent in the fields of philanthropy, education and finance, who have formed the Golden Rule Foundation, incorporated under the laws of the state of New York, to receive gifts, legacies and bequests toward a fund which is to be administered "for the benefit of mankind." In short, a People's Foundation, rendering for the average citizen a service similar to that rendered their respective founders by the larger private foundations. Gifts will be administered on the basis of the greatest need, through existing approved organizations.

While no report of the world's most outstanding needs has as yet been rendered by the Committee on Research and Survey, comprising a body of experts in that field, suggestions from its advisory board indicate needs that are overwhelming in their immensity and bring one to a new realization of the scope for this new universal movement. For the present the needs of underprivileged children will be stressed.

With millions of children starving in China due to famine and fighting of which they are the innocent victims, it is probable that that country will receive a large part of the contribution made in 1929, Golden Rule Sunday date having been fixed as December 8. Sharing with China will be unmet needs under our own flag. These have not as yet been determined upon but attention has been called to the suffering in Porto Rico, which is still staggering under the blow dealt to its crops and industries by last September's hurricane. So great is the poverty there that more than one-half of the children in the rural districts subsist on one meal a day, resulting in malnutrition and a heavy mortality.

Constructive Child Welfare Program

The Foundation cannot hope to feed every hungry child but it can save the lives of thousands and can demonstrate in those countries what they can do for their own children and through the application of approved scientific methods of child welfare point the way toward a future self-supporting child program.

Golden Rule Sunday observance not only creates a medium for international philanthropy but stresses the spirit of giving and sharing to such an extent that established and customary sources also reap benefits. The contributions of Golden Rule Sunday will be made to the fund of the Golden Rule Foundation, and in general will be allocated according to the plans of the Survey Committee, of which Bishop Francis J. McConnell is chairman.

The officers, trustees and incorporators of the new Foundation include the following well known men and women: Honorary Vice-Chairmen, John G. Agar, S. Parkes Cadman, John H. Finley; Felix M. Warburg; Executive Vice-President, Charles V. Vickrey; Secretary, William B. Millar; Treasurer, Fleming H. Revell.

THE CHURCHES' PART IN THE CHILD WELFARE MOVEMENT

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

President Hoover has struck at the root of all national and social problems by appointing an extraordinary Child Welfare Commission. He perceives—as does everybody else who gives thought to the subject—that the most important concern of any nation is the well-being of its youth. The health, the intelligence and the moral ideals of the country's boys and girls are obviously of first importance; as the President said, "the greatest asset of a race is its children." Here is one major public issue upon which the minds of all the people are united, and their hearts warm.

This call from the White House should resound in the deepest consciousness of the church as a summons to special activity in her own field of work for childhood and youth, which is the Sunday school. Naturally, the new Child Welfare Commission cannot deal with the religious training of young people, and so will leave this most important phase of the problem outside of its scope. But parallel activity by the churches, stimulated by public interest in the national movement, is opportune and proper. All the considerations which weigh with the President's commission apply, with added force, to the Christian agencies of child nurture.

Here we have a clear challenge to revivify and enlarge the Sunday school. Only about half of the children who are the natural field of the Protestant Sunday schools are at present enrolled. First and plainest of all the activities indicated for the churches by this new national enterprise is to get the boys and girls into the Sunday school. Other steps will logically follow—we may trust the brains and devotion and resourcefulness of the Sunday school teachers and officers themselves to see to these—but, first and fundamentally, get the boys and girls into the Sunday school.

As a general statement, the situation calls for a doubling of every school's present enrollment. Also the formation of many new rural schools will be necessary. And an enlarged personnel of workers is required. All of these ends are attainable if once the churches give themselves to the appealing and congenial task of getting every last boy and girl into the Sunday school.

Here is a slogan for all of the denominations, and for all of the individual congregations: "A doubled Sunday school membership within five years!" Each communion may make its own plans, and every Sunday school association or council may swing into support by its own methods; but all should concentrate upon the one simple, central aim of securing the attendance at Sunday school of all the youth of the land. Preliminary censuses of child population and church relationship will stimulate interest.

For the time being, let the advanced theories of "religious education"—which have of late years supplanted enthusiasm and activity for the simple promotion of Sunday school organization and growth—be set aside. The more important and immediate objective is to get the boys and girls into the Sunday school itself, where even the simplest form of Bible teaching is bound to affect their character.

Parents will be found in a mood to co-operate; for the moral and social unsettlement of the post-war period has brought concern to the mind of everybody. Even the most worldly parents want their children to be good. All conditions make this a most opportune time for doubling the Sunday school enrollment.

Incidentally, a nationwide movement for the Sunday school, under the prestige and impulse of the national activities of the Child Welfare Commission, will call forth a new crop of lay leaders. In the past fifteen years the great leaders of Sunday school work, like Jacobs, Bailey, Hartshorn, Warren, Wanamaker and Heinz, have passed away, leaving no successors. Here is a field for the fullest expression of strong men's powers and consecration. In the denominations and states, and in the national field, there is crying need for the clear-headed leadership of laymen who seek to serve Christ and their own day in most effective form. Already there are a legion of such in the posts of Sunday school teachers and superintendents; this present emergency would enlarge their sphere.

An enthusiasm for the Sunday school is easily created. Every Rotary Club and Woman's Club and fraternal organization in the land will lend a sympathetic ear to a plea for co-operation in getting the boys and girls into Sunday school. The Hoover Commission will surely go to the limit of propriety in lending aid.

Adult Bible classes, already an immeasurable force in the nation's life, will naturally multiply in number and membership under the impetus of a nationwide Sunday school "drive." Fathers and mothers will find it easier to take the children where they go themselves.

It is to be hoped that the Catholic churches and the Jewish synagogues will undertake similar efforts to increase their religious activities for their own young people, in consonance with the National Child Welfare Movement.

No mention is here made of the large consequences which will inevitably flow from a doubled Sunday school enrollment—such as the increase in church membership; the diversion of boys and girls from the associations and influences which breed criminals; and the putting of a high moral purpose and of Bible standards into life. The one thought to be held central is that this is the hour to get boys and girls into the Sunday school. All incidental questions of curricula and methods should be held in abeyance; and it will not be easy to repress the day's rampageous theorists and the highbrows. Our present objective is to get all the boys and girls of the land into the ranks of the Sunday school, where the mass psychology will favor righteousness, and where the Bible itself will be studied and the influence of godly men and women felt.

Will the reader make it his personal business to bring this proposal to the attention of his own church and denomination? Let the church at least keep in step with the state in caring for the boys and girls.

WHY AN ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

By ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON, LL.D., Litt.D.

General Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism

Until prohibition has ceased to be an issue, the Anti-Saloon League of America has a task to perform. Valuable as were the services rendered the American people by this organization in the campaign to secure enactment of the 18th amendment and the national and state laws for its enforcement, much more important are the services it renders in the current campaign for effectuation of that amendment.

EVANGELISM

*Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit;
so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.*

Work Time Again

The ten days allotted for our vacation are up, and we start again on our visitation of the churches next Sunday. During our "off time" we worshiped at Shady Grove, Moriah charge, and Calvary, preaching at the former place on the second Sunday morning, and worshiping in the evening at Calvary. On last Sunday we "drew a bow at a venture" in two efforts to worship in our rural churches, Tabernacle in the morning and Moriah at night. We found that the Tabernacle service would not be until the afternoon, and that there was no service at Moriah that night. On our way in from Moriah we stopped at Calvary and worshiped there.

Our visit to Shady Grove was our first official visit at this point. The church is situated six miles southeast of Greensboro, and very near the home place of Rev. A. W. Lineberry, D.D. Some of his descendants are there now and active in the church. Bro. Carmichael, the pastor, was present during our visit, and was beginning a series of meetings that day. We trust that the results were good. He is handicapped in his work here for the lack of a better preaching schedule and more time for general administrative attention. However, this is one of our 1928 Honor Roll churches and we have confidence that this good record will be maintained this year.

College Campaign

Two brethren report this week—one $1,225, with the prospect of making it $1,500; the other, $3,000. All returns are not yet in, though a considerable amount has been reported. For the number of churches that we were able to reach, the results are gratifying. As was announced last week, the campaign is suspended until we have a further word from the college trustees. We wish here to express our grateful thanks to all who worked in the campaign; to the churches that loaned their pastors for the work; and to all who gave of their means to this worthy and necessary fund. Let us continue to pray for the college.

Pastors' Reports

Several have been promptly returned. We hope to have them all in by the last of this week. The report is brief, but to the point, we think, and sufficiently comprehensive as to give us an understanding of the general condition of the field. The usual digest will be published when the reports are all in. We are sure that the brethren will let us have them at their earliest convenience.

Church "Jazz"

We are glad to see that the laymen are writing on this subject. There are so many good church song books that it does seem totally unjustifiable to develop in our people a taste for the inferior, "jazzy" sort. We will get rid of it when the laymen "excommunicate" it. We were with a pastor recently who had just gotten a new book for his churches—"Revival Gems." The book is what the title signifies, and the cost is very small—about 12 cents per copy, we believe. Other books, as "New Songs for Service," sold by our own publishing house, Baltimore; "The Cokesbury Hymnal," sold by the M. E. Church South publishing house, Nashville, Tenn., and "Hymns of Praise," sold by the Hope Publishing Company, Chicago, are all worthy books, and we commend them to our people. We believe that "Revival Gems" can be had from the publishing house at Nashville. Any and all of them can, we think, be gotten through our own publishing house at Baltimore. And first and above all, we recommend our own book, The Methodist Protestant Hymnal. Why not have the Hymnal taught in the singing schools of the church?

Rural Church Contest

Seven persons have signified their purpose to write in this contest. We now lack only three. When these names are secured we will put the contest on at once. Surely it will not fail for the lack of three more persons who are sufficiently interested to write on this important subject! We are giving again the conditions of the contest.

Here's Good News

At least we hope it is. By the generosity of friends we are able to offer two prizes for the best and next best "write-up" on the Country Church. These papers are to be published in the HERALD, and are not to exceed twelve hundred words. The contest will run for three months. Any one sixteen years of age and over is eligible to enter, but we must have the names of at least ten before the contest will begin. Unless we can have the assurance that as many as ten will write on the subject, we would think it hardly profitable to go forward with it. After the contest begins, one paper will be published weekly for three months, and in the order in which they are received. All papers are to be sent direct to the editor. In case two or more are received on the same day, he will run them week after week until each one has been published. If a number of papers are unpublished when only one week of the contest remains, the one bearing the earliest date will be given priority. If two or more of these bear the same date, the editor will make choice by lot, and the paper thus chosen will be published. When enough papers are in to fill up the time allotted, the editor will make announcement and request that no more papers be sent for the contest.

These papers are to deal with the place of the country church in the life of the community—the opportunities, needs, problems, and best ways of promoting the country church. This, in general, is what is contemplated in this discussion.

The prizes are as follows: for the best paper, $5.00; for second best, $2.50.

Three competent judges will pass on the papers, and award the prizes. All papers are to be signed by the writer, but only numbers will be used when they are published.

Seventy-five per cent of our churches are rural, and the same percentage of our people are in these churches. This would seem to justify this undertaking. Now for a real lively, earnest, good time, writing and reading about the country church. Come on now, contestants, and sign up.

Annual Conference Day

Don't overlook it, brethren—the first Sunday in September. We very earnestly hope that much may be made of this day. For several weeks now we have been calling attention to it regularly, and we trust that plans have been made to raise the A. C. B. at this time. If the amount is not secured in cash, try to get it pledged for future payments. We must put forth every possible effort to raise our full Annual Conference assessment this year. Obligations are upon us that make this imperative. We are expecting to have to meet a Church Extension obligation this fall—a loan—of $1,500. If we have to take this out of what we usually raise, there will be practically nothing left for Superannuates and the Church Extension apportionments that have already been made. And besides this, the G. G. D. is to be paid. The needs are urgent, very urgent. But if we can raise our full assessment, our obligations can be met.

A challenge: Every dollar of our $26,550 Annual Conference budget, and all of it provided for on Annual Conference Day.

Note This

It has become necessary to change the meeting place of the Annual Conference. When Concord invited us last year they expected to have a new church for us to meet in, but circumstances are such that they find it best not to undertake to build now. For this reason they feel that they cannot entertain the conference, and have officially notified us to that effect. Calvary Church immediately came to our rescue with an invitation to meet with them. The standing district committee has most heartily and gratefully accepted the invitation. The next Annual Conference will be held at Calvary Church, Greensboro. We are sorry not to go to Concord, and we are glad to go to Calvary.

Our Tender Sympathies

Bro. J. R. Hutton and his family are passing through a series of afflictions. Only recently the father of Mrs. Hutton died in a Baltimore hospital, and today her sister, Mrs. H. E. Knight, who also died in a Baltimore hospital, is to be buried. Our tender sympathies are extended to the family.

We are notified also of the passing of one of the strong supporters of our Whitaker's church—Miss Mamie Johnston. Our sympathies go out, likewise, to this family, and to the church to which she was so warmly devoted.

DO WE FORGIVE?

Forgiveness is a miracle. Very few people really forgive. Do we know the joy of the miracle in our own lives? Have we tasted the blessing of forgiving some one who has wronged us? Andrew Murraw once wrote this sentence: "Lord Jesus! . . . teach thou me to forgive and to love." Have we let the Lord teach us this and fulfill his teaching in our lives? Have we realized that unless the fact "and to love" is a part of our forgiveness, it is not forgiveness at all? What a travesty on forgiveness is the expression, so often heard, "I have forgiven, but I can never forget." The one who says this can never forgive. Unless we are ready to forget we are not ready to forgive, and we have not forgiven. "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you" (Eph. 4:32). That is the standard for the only forgiveness worthy of the name—the kind of forgiveness God gives us for Christ's sake. God's own perfect and unfailing love goes with his forgiveness. Our love—the miracle love of God himself in our hearts for others—must be part of our forgiveness of others, even of our enemies. Therefore such forgiveness is always a miracle, for it is utterly beyond our human power. But it is not beyond God. When through surrender and faith we live "the life that is Christ," we love those whom we forgive, and we forgive all our enemies.—Sunday School Times.

SALVATION

Lord, I was blind—I could not see
 In thy marred visage any grace;
 But now the beauty of Thy face
 In radiant vision dawns on me.

Lord, I was deaf—I could not hear
 The thrilling music of Thy voice;
 But now I hear Thee and rejoice,
 And all Thy uttered words are dear.

Lord, I was dumb—I could not speak
 The grace and glory of Thy name;
 But now as touched with living flame,
 My lips Thine eager praises wake.

Lord, I was dead—I could not stir
 My lifeless soul to come to Thee;
 But now I hear Thee and rejoice,
 I rise from sin's dark sepulcher.

Lord, Thou hast made the blind to see,
 The deaf to hear, the dumb to speak,
 The dead to live; and lo, I break
 The chains of my captivity!

SOME IMPORTANT BATTLEMENTS

"Thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof." Deut. 22:8.

My house is girt with battlements
 To keep the careless feet
 Of its venturesome little ones
 From falling to the street.

Along each side is strongly built
 A parapet of prayer,
 With rock-hewn ramparts from the Book
 Uplifted here and there.

The tower of pure-toned literature
 Promotes a sure defense,
 While e'er a bastion rears its head
 For total abstinence.

But most of all I mend and keep
 That palisade in place—
 A candid and consistent life,
 Upbuilt by His grace.

My house is girt with battlements
 To guard the faltering feet,
 The fitful, undetermined ones,
 The frail and indiscreet.

Notably in its educational work, the provision of up-to-date, accurate information on the varying phases of prohibition, its wide distribution of literature upon this subject, its co-operation with churches, organizations, speakers, publishers, writers, newspapers, the radio and the moving picture, the Anti-Saloon League today is rendering vital service to those who realize the importance of an alcohol-free civilization in this country.

The Anti-Saloon League is not a super-government. It is not responsible for the enforcement of the law. It does not dictate to public officials concerning their actions. It does not control legislation nor elections. It does, however, continuously furnish its constituency and the public with authentic information on the status of enforcement activities, on the character of legislation proposed or passed, upon the attitude and record of legislators and other officials. If it were not for the service thus rendered it is questionable whether the citizens in many sections of the country would know exactly what was being done in their name by those who are, by euphuism, called their public servants.

The intensity with which prohibition is opposed by a small, well-financed and carefully organized group who are today the spokesmen for the outlawed brewers and vintners, is a measure of the need for an organization such as the Anti-Saloon League. By informing and organizing public sentiment of the country, it enables the friends of this cause to present a united front to a united enemy. Without such organization, the majority would be in the position of a great mob, helpless when confronted by the small band of drilled and regimented foes. There is a strength in unity.

The value of the Anti-Saloon League may be measured not merely by what its friends say concerning it, but also by the unwilling testimony to its achievements which is continuously being given by the forces opposed to prohibition. The League is in no peril of that "woe" which comes "when all men speak well of you." Possibly no other organization has been so bitterly assailed, so wantonly attacked, so frequently and fruitlessly investigated as has this one. Had there been improprieties in its conduct during the decades since its organization in 1893, they would long since have been exploited by the enemy.

The tasks of investigation, of scientific study of the whole alcohol problem, the preparation of data and publication of brochures and leaflets—to cite only one item among the multitudinous tasks performed for the church by the Anti-Saloon League—would involve for any single church attempting it enormous financial expenditure. Through the united effort of many churches combined, this task, like so many others which concern the success of prohibition, is accomplished by the Anti-Saloon League out of the comparatively small offerings received when the league holds its field day meetings in the churches.

The league is controlled by the churches. Its directors or trustees in the various states are the elected representatives of the various denominations in these states. These directors or trustees elect the league officials, determine the policy of the organization and regularly review its activities.

The Anti-Saloon League is, in a peculiar way, not merely an agency of the church, but by the official action of many denominations it is the actual representative of those churches in the fight against the liquor interests of the nation. The liquor problem is not parochial. It is not denominational. It is not political in any partisan sense. It is a great social and moral question, affecting all churches, all communities, all classes. A question of this character can be solved not by individual action only nor by local or denominational or other group action, but by the concerted action of a majority of the American people so overwhelming that there can be no serious dispute concerning the mind of the nation upon this subject.

THE LOVER OF NATURE

To the nature lover the universe constantly pours out its wealth. Daily he gathers the fruits of seed sown in the beginning of the world.

For him no season is dull, for each is successively absorbing: In Spring he is entranced by the awakening of myriad forms of life; Summer reveals the maturity of all creation; Autumn brings the fulfillment of earlier promises; Winter lulls life to sleep, with its assurance of the resurrection.

Each day is good: In the morning life awakens with him; through the noon it works; the peace and quiet of evening shed their benediction upon him.

He knows no dull moments; he seeks not to hurry time. If he be delayed, he may discover something never before seen by man, and his impatience is forgotten.

His youth is filled with the joys of discovery; in middle age the marvels about him hold his interest undimmed; he awaits old age with calmness, for he is one with the universe, and is content.—Edward A. Preble.

Funny Things That Never Happen

Most of us worry about dreadful things that never happen. It is a much more enjoyable exercise to amuse ourselves by imagining funny things that never happen. If we have a lively sense of humor we can do it. I recall from my boyhood school days an incident that illustrates. A girl was convulsed with laughter and seemed unable to control herself. Nobody else could see anything to laugh at. The teacher demanded an explanation. For a time she refused to give it, but at last said: "I was just thinking, what if Jane Snow (the girl in front of her) should get her head fastened inside her desk and couldn't get it out!" We may carry this kind of exercise to an extreme and become "silly gigglers," but most of us have occasion at times to thank God for a sense of humor. It is a safety valve that may prevent destructive explosions.

YOUR JOB

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,
I said: "You get somebody else—or, wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out, but He seemed to get along;
But I felt kind o' sneaking-like—knowed I'd done God wrong.
One day I needed the Lord, needed Him myself, needed Him right away,
And He never answered me at all, but I could hear Him
Down in my accusin' heart—"Nigger, I'se got too much to do;
You get somebody else, or wait until I get through."
Now, when the Lord He have a job for me, I never tries to shirk,

I drops what I have on hand and does the good Lord's work;
And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get through—
Nobody else can do the job that God's got marked out for you.

OUR STORY PAGE

A TOUCHING OF HEARTS

Mrs. Newberry, in her crisp morning dress of black and white, looked across at her secretary.

She was a very old lady, indeed, but stately and beautiful still. Her eyes were dark and flashing and her hair, white as silver, was always carefully arranged. A diamond ring or two sparkled on the old hands, aristocratic to the finger tips.

To all who studied her, she was a revelation of what old age may be, if one but meets it bravely and sturdily. She kept herself up, and that not only referred to her physical being, but her mental as well.

She was informed on all current topics of the day, and she employed a young woman for the sole purpose of reading to her, answering her letters and attending to the things which her febleness and infirmities no longer permitted.

"Miss Langdon," she said, "you may read, if you please, the account of last night's meeting before we go into anything else. That man interests me. I wish I could attend every service myself."

A great evangelist had lately come to the city and was holding two meetings a day in the auditorium.

Thousands packed in at both services. Even business men and those in the professions dropped everything to listen to his words. People in every station of life were there. The rich society dame, as well as the poor working woman, sat side by side. Broadcloth brushed against calico—yet, somehow, no one cared.

And yet, he was but a man, simple, quiet, not particularly eloquent. But such was his power that people hung enthralled upon his words. People who were tired of feeding on husks, people who were weary of sin, people who were sad, bereaved and discouraged. These mostly were the types that flocked to hear him day after day, night after night.

And listen—and many of them found peace.

Miss Langdon, thus bidden, found the account of the meeting of the evening before and read it every word. She read it well. It happened to be a sermon on the Syro-phenician woman. When she had finished the last words, "That woman's cure is thine and none other," she looked up.

The old face was illumined.

"What do you think of it?" she asked gently.

For a moment Mrs. Newberry did not speak.

"I think," she said at last, very slowly, "I think a man like that shows contact with God. There is an intimacy there, a fellowship that many of us Christians lack. If more of us set ourselves apart, we too might be saviors of men. But we're not living as we should. We're not unselfish enough, we're too full of the world."

Miss Langdon returned to her paper. "It seems too bad all the ministers in the state can not come and be benefited," she said. "Here is a letter from one out on one of our home missionary fields, thanking the press for the good accounts that have reached him through the newspapers."

"Read it, please," said Mrs. Newberry.

And Miss Langdon, bidden again, read these words: To the Editor of the Blade:

Dear Sir: I feel I must thank you for the splendid reports your paper is sending out regarding the great meetings held in your city. How it would delight me to hear that wonderful man, but since I can not, I want to thank you again. These outlying fields, sometimes, are apt to be forgotten, but we are trying to bring the message to these people the same as others are doing in more prosperous districts. Again thanking you, I am gratefully yours,

RUPERT WILLIAMS.

"Where is that written from?" demanded Mrs. Newberry.

Miss Langdon looked.

"Cedar Edge," she replied. "I believe I can tell you about where it is. A little station out in the alkali districts. It is a shame, isn't it, that we give so little thought to our home missionaries? We let them 'sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish,' just as the case happens to be."

There was no reply and she went on from that to the news of the day.

Isabel Langdon was a sweet, gray-eyed young woman of twenty-two and very much attached to her employer—and Mrs. Newberry was to her.

After lunch that day Mrs. Newberry called to her.

"Miss Langdon," she said. "I've been thinking of that home missionary. Somehow that little letter of thanks, together with what you said, touched my heart. I would like him to hear the evangelist. I wish you would write a letter at my dictation, and enclose him a check for thirty-five dollars. And please see that the blue room is in perfect order. He must come to those meetings."

* * * * *

"Not going to the office again, dearest?"

"I must, Katherine. I am anxious for the paper. Oh, my heart has been so stirred by that wonderful messenger of God. Sometimes it has seemed to me that I must drop everything and go to hear him. But there is the railroad and the hotel bill. I know it is not to be thought of—but yet—"

His wife looked at him. There was sympathy and understanding in the sweet eyes.

"I know just how you feel, Rupert," she said.

"It would be such a help, such a blessing to get under his teaching, if only for a day or two," he went on. "Dearest heart, I need it so. Somehow I get so discouraged and I question things. It is bitterly hard to go on without any encouragement. Does anybody care? And yet, I could not give it up."

She rose, this pretty, slender woman with the sweet eyes, and went over to him.

"Yes," she answered gravely. "God cares and it is for him we labor."

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

"We will miss some things, dearest, but we must not miss that. Now you need cheering up. Though that two miles to the office will tire you, I will not say a word."

Among the papers that he received when he reached there was a letter. A most aristocratic letter, sealed with a beautiful monogram and addressed in a clear hand.

He opened it wonderingly.

Pinned to it was a slender slip of blue paper and it ran as follows:

Dear Mr. Williams: I am an old woman, but I read your letter in the Blade this morning, and was touched by it. I enclose a check for thirty-five dollars so that you may come to the meetings. I have also put in order a room for you in my house, which is No. 676 Madison Avenue. Please don't hurt me by refusing, and don't have any reluctance as to accepting the money. Somehow I believe God is leading me in the matter. Your letter made me realize my own privileges and other people's privations, especially home missionaries, whom most of us think too little about. Now don't fail to come. You will find it the opportunity of a lifetime. With best wishes, I am yours faithfully.

FRANCES ELIOT NEWBERRY.

"Well, dearest," asked his wife when he came back, "were there the papers?"

"Yes, and a letter."

"A letter—who from?"

Without answering, he handed it to her and watched her while she read it.

It was good to see the sparkle and light flood the delicate face.

She went over to where he stood and kissed him.

"How glad I am," she said happily. "No one knows more than I how you've wanted to go to that meeting and now it is possible. Why, dearest, you couldn't refuse. Don't you know only this morning you were doubtful as to anybody caring? Here is a direct refutation of it. Some one does care—has cared enough to send you this money."

And so with all a wife's spirit of self-denial and sacrifice she got ready the well-worn clothes, packed the clean linen and bade him goodbye.

"I hardly like to leave you," he said reluctantly.

"Ah, but you must," she cried smilingly. "Why, I shall be as happy as a queen because you are having your wish. And thank her for me, Rupert—tell her how I love and honor her for what she is making possible for you."

* * * * *

Mrs. Newberry received him in her usual stately fashion, but there was a warm welcome shining in the dark eyes as she took his hand.

"And so you are the home missionary," she said, "from Cedar Edge. I'm glad you have come. Now you must go to your room and take a good rest before the evening meeting."

And in that beautiful home of wealth and station the home missionary stayed for eight days. And somehow, in those great meetings as he listened to that mighty man of God, as he heard that wonderful chorus of voices, he was glad for everything.

"Glad for that humble portion of the great vineyard that he nursed and tended. He thanked God for all of it. The hard tasks, the long stretches of alkali and sagebrush and cactus, the toil-hardened hands that clasped his own. He would not change one jot or tittle of it all. Was not his ministry as great as any other, since it was for God? Oh, he would go back to his work resolved to live closer to him, to do a better work, to rejoice—always."

When he came to say good-bye to Mrs. Newberry he could not speak.

He took her hand; both were silent.

He looked at her. The fine mouth quivered.

"I'm a man," he said smilingly, "but if you don't watch out, I shall cry—cry of joy. You don't know—you can not fully—what this has meant to me. All my life I shall thank God for the privilege you made possible. I'm afraid I have not always been as satisfied as I should have been. I've had my dark hours, but, somehow, it has all been glorified—changed—through you."

There were tears in the old eyes.

"You are making too much of me," she said gently; "but there, don't thank me any more. I realize—I understand all you would say!"

And so, with a full heart, he left her.

The home missionary went back to the alkali district and to the hard work—to the patient, gentle wife and the plain little home. But he went back a new man, blessed, uplifted and refreshed. Rejoicing and happy because he realized, for the first time, fully what it was to be a co-worker with God.

As she unpacked her husband's clothes, at the bottom of the suitcase she found an envelope. It was addressed to her.

"Dear little wife of Rupert Williams," it read, "I wanted to send you something, but could not quite determine what it should be, and, for fear I might make a mistake, I decided to send you something you could use. Enclosed please find twenty-five dollars. Praying that the blessing of God may rest upon you and yours, I am yours sincerely.

FRANCES E. NEWBERRY.

RAISED IN THE CHURCH

"I was raised in a church—lived thirty-five years in the church, and was counted one of their best Christians. Even sinners said if there was a Christian I was one. I was a deacon when God sent some of His people on the street corner of the town where I lived, to tell what God had done for them. I never heard such testimonies and singing. They gave me a paper, and when I opened it, I read a passage of Scripture. I said that God's Word didn't read that way. I got my Bible, but to my surprise it was that way. I told my wife we had something to do. I had no one to talk to, but would read the paper and the Bible, and such conviction seized on me that I promised God I would go to the camp meeting if He would open the way.

"In the winter, before I was saved in August, I took the flu—was so sick. I never knew anything about divine healing. I was taught there was nothing to it. I was not able to sit up—was just burning up with fever; and one of these papers came in the mail. I laid that paper on my face, and asked God to answer the prayers of God's people. And God said to me, 'If you believe, get up.' I just jumped out of bed and as soon as my feet touched the floor the power came down and I was made every whit whole. The fever was gone. I walked the floor and sang praises to God for what He had done for me.

"God opened the way in August for us to go to camp meeting. I was saved the first day I was there. God sanctified me two days later, and two years later He baptized me with the Holy Ghost and fire.

"Oh, how I praise Him for this mighty Gospel! He has kept me for over nine years. I have never needed a doctor or medicine since. He has done all the healing for my family. Glory to His name!

"I knew nothing about the Bible—could not answer a question in Sunday school, nor even quote a verse in the Bible, but God is using me now to tell the Story to a lost world. Oh! how I love Him for what He has done for me."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Elizabeth Hanner, President C. E. Society, High Point College

August 25: Are Missions Proving Successful?
Romans 10:9-16

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—A successful mission. Jonas 4:1-11.
Tuesday—A home mission. Luke 10:1-9.

Wednesday—Organizing a mission. Acts 13:1-3

Thursday—Missions to foreigners. Acts 10:1-5, 34-48.

Friday—Mission to Rome. Acts 28:17-31.

Saturday—First mission to Asia. Acts 16:9-15.

To the Leader

Why not vary the meetings some? This time would be fine for a flying tour. If possible secure a good-sized globe so you will be able to see where you are going. Your leader will be the navigator and the song leader the pilot. In flight from one country to another sing songs. Leave the United States, visiting the countries of our own mission work—India, China and Japan; return to the United States and touch on home missions. Be careful not to slight the home mission work. At each step have one or two persons tell of work that has been done or is being done in that country. Have the navigator make a few remarks just before starting about the success of our mission work, the terms by which we measure success, the hindrances that have to be met and the results. Sing missionary hymns. These are good: "Throw Out the Life-line," "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," "It Pays to Serve Jesus," "The Morning Light is Breaking," "Must I Go, and Empty-Handed?"

If possible have some returned missionary or some one who is really acquainted with the work to give some first-hand information. Urge prayer for the missionaries and for the mission work generally. Remind your people to back up their faith with material support.

Topics for Talks

1. Failure and success.
2. The measure of success.
3. The motive of the missionary enterprise.
4. Missions at home and abroad contrasted.
5. The debt of Christians to missions.

To Be Answered

1. Should we be eager to give up so-called unsuccessful missions?
2. What are the missions of our church?
3. To what extent do we feel responsible in the world of missions by the great commission given by Christ?
4. What statement, if any, is there in His great commission about success?

Quotations

Christianity promises to heal minds, to lift souls out of sin, to create a new heart, and the story of missions shows that this is being done.—Person.

Christianity has conferred upon India moral, social and religious benefits. It has covered the country with charitable institutions. It has protested against caste. It has given a new idea of womanhood.—Lalit K. Shah.

The missionaries no longer talk about native helpers. They feel that they are the helpers, and that the mission will be fully successful when they themselves can be dispensed with.—Andrews.

The minds of the people in most countries are more open and favorable to the wise and friendly approach of Christian missionaries than at any time in the past.—John R. Mott.

Poetry to the Point HE COMETH LATE

The strings of camels come in single file,
Bearing the burdens over the desert sands.
Swiftly the boats go plying on the Nile,
The needs of men are met on every hand,
But still I wait
For the messenger of God who cometh late.

I see a cloud of dust rise on the plain,
The measured tread of troops falls on my ear.
The soldier comes, the empire to maintain,
Bringing the pomp of war, the reign of fear,
But still I wait
For the messenger of God who cometh late.

They set me watching o'er the desert drear,
Where dwells the darkness, as the deepest night.

For many a mosque there comes the call of prayer,

I hear no voice that calls on God for light.
But still I wait

For the messenger of God who cometh late.

Judging from this report most of our pastors and churches must be on their vacations. When they return we hope they will have so much pep that they will work the socks off the treasurer. A sockless treasurer would no doubt be something new in our conference; but it would be better by far for him to go sockless than for some of our dependents to go without money.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TO THE AUXILIARIES

When the new officers for the Branch were elected about a month ago I was made secretary of Scholarship Loan Fund for High Point College.

For those who are not familiar with the fund, it is the plan to raise a fund through which students can get loans of $100.00 without interest until they have graduated and get work so that they can pay off the loan. The loan begins to bear interest as soon as the student goes out from the college and gets work.

When it is refunded it goes back into the Student Loan Fund to be loaned again to worthy students. This is a splendid plan to do perpetual good with your means.

We are having more applications than ever before from students that need help. If we raise all of our budget we can only help six students at the present rate of distribution. Will you not make an effort to do something special for the Student Loan Fund for High Point College? How many auxiliaries will raise a full scholarship loan of $100? Please make every effort to do this; but if you cannot raise that much, send as much as you can, and when you send Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, N. C., what you want to go to Student Loan Fund for High Point College, be sure to designate that it is for that purpose. If you can't raise the money at once, please make a pledge that you will raise it by the spring semester and write me what your pledge is.

Students cannot attend college without satisfactory arrangements. Some might be able to enter if they knew they could get the loan in the spring.

College opens September 9th and these applications are before us. Let me urge each auxiliary to do its best.

One thing we need is leaders and I believe by helping our boys and girls to get through college we will have leaders in the churches.

Let's rally to the support of these young people.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Eden, Halifax Charge.—Our revival meetings began on Sunday morning, August 4, and closed Friday evening, August 9. We had a great revival, such as we have not had in several years. Brother Powell delivered some wonderful sermons and we are sure his influence will live on indefinitely. Our membership was increased by nine. Eight were received on confession of faith and one by letter.

Our Sunday school is progressing under the supervision of Mr. J. W. Hardee. Mr. Hardee has been untiring in his efforts to keep the Sunday school alive and growing. We are glad that most of our church members go to Sunday school. We regret, however, that so many of them prefer going to Sunday school at some other church than their own.

Our Ladies' Aid is still functioning and we hope to be able to report something interesting from that source soon.

Our highway marker is in place. It is just as good as the best and looks it. Thanks to Bro. Spencer for the attractive design and we also thank him and Mr. Z. A. Hardee for placing it.

We met at the church on August 1 and gave the church and the cemetery and church yard a thorough cleaning. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—Attendance at the Sunday school and preaching services today was very good, considering it was the third Sunday in August when so many of our members go away for revivals in the rural districts.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn A. Huffman are back from their honeymoon and are residing in their new home on Lexington avenue of this city.

Our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, is bringing us some splendid and very helpful sermons, as usual. Some time ago it was voted that the pastor be given the month of August for his vacation. As yet the pastor has taken only one Sunday off and stated that he would fill his pulpit, as usual, each Sunday, but might be away some between Sabbaths.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Moore was baptized at the preaching service on August 4th. The little baby of Mr. and Mrs. Yank Smith was baptized on last Sunday. Bro. Gerringer officiated in both cases. We wish for these little ones a life of much happiness and usefulness in the Master's vineyard.

We are anxious about the condition of Mrs. S. M. Hornaday, one of our faithful members, who is very ill in the Wesley Long hospital in Greensboro, and we pray that she will soon be much better and entirely recovered, if it be our Heavenly Father's will. May the Lord bless and keep her in this hour of trial. Last reports were that she was slightly better and the family and the doctors were hopeful for her.

Summer is coming to a close and the conference year will soon end; therefore, let's each one busy in the work so that a worthy reckoning may be made at the Annual Conference.

L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Our revival meeting was held the third week of July. Our pastor had for his helper one of the older preachers of the conference, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, of Greensboro. Some of us learned to love Brother Ashburn several years ago, while Brother Hutton was our pastor. This reporter was then a student in elementary grades of school, but she has not forgotten or ceased to love them both. Brother Ashburn came on Monday and remained during the week. Meeting closed Friday afternoon. I am sure we were all greatly benefited by Brother Ashburn's and Pastor Pegg's sermons.

Miss Bernice Sharron and Lizzie Taylor Purgerson have credit for collection of a little donation for Brother Ashburn, which I am sure did not pay a tenth for the service he gave us.

Our people were real sorry Mrs. Pegg and little Sarah Edwards could not attend the meeting. We missed them so much. Mrs. Pegg was called home by the illness of her sister.

As a result of the meeting five boys and girls were converted, a part of them bright boys and girls from our Sunday school. The Sunday school remains about the average. Some of our people are looking forward to the Rockingham county Sunday school convention at Midway church the second Saturday and Sunday in September. Am hoping a good number of our people can attend.

Mrs. Jennie Landreth, one of our feeble and aged members, has been very sick while visiting her son at Germanton.

REPORTER.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Our revival meeting began the second Sunday in August. Bro. Carson, of Shelby, N. C., was the pulpit help. He has done some of the greatest preaching we ever heard. He preached plainly and that is just what we need. Will we all take our part or will we put it off on others? It is easy to see others' faults when it is our own that hurts. We have had a good meeting and it is still going on. There have been a number converted and the church and community greatly revived. We hope to see a great many more converted before the meeting closes. There have been large crowds all the time, especially at night more than could be accommodated. Our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, preached for us yesterday, the third Sunday. He preached an able sermon. His subject was the Judgment, and he made it plain to us. Mr. Reed is an able preacher and we enjoy his sermons. We ask the prayers of the Christian people for the church and community.

ABIGAIL COGGINS, Reporter.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our annual revival at Tabernacle church began on the first Sunday in this month and closed the following Friday night. The large auditorium could not accommodate the people on Sunday; the attendance was gratifying for every service. Rev. J. M. Morgan, pastor of Fallston charge, preached every sermon during the meeting. There were twelve conversions and reclamations and two additions to the church. Others,

I think, will join later. Brother Morgan preached with power and determination.

Four young ladies from Tabernacle church attended the Leadership Training School at High Point: Miss Nova Fields, Miss Kate Smith, Miss Reynolds, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Coble (now Mrs. Joseph Shore).

Brother Cyrus R. Fields and members of his family are visiting friends and relatives in Indiana.

We missed Brother W. T. Hanner from the preaching service at Julian last Sunday. He had just had his tonsils removed and was unable to attend church.

Brother Cecil M. Fields will represent Tabernacle charge in our next Annual Conference. H. L. ISLEY.

Hebbron, Orange Circuit.—Our revival began Sunday, August 11, and continued until the following Friday night. Rev. J. F. Minnis, of Graham, came Sunday morning and did the preaching. His sermons were plain, interesting, forceful and effective. Results of this were 33 converts, a good many of these being renewals. Seven united with the church.

We feel that much good was done and the church greatly revived, although some of our Sunday school boys and girls would not be reached. The attendance was good throughout these services, especially at night. We all enjoyed having Bro. Minnis with us, and hope he can be with us again. Our prayers go with him wherever he may go.

We were glad to have Mr. T. O. Pender, of Mebane, with us on Sunday and also Monday night to assist in the singing. Sorry he had to leave and could not be there more.

To Bros. Minnis and Pender we feel grateful indeed for their services rendered us during these series of services.

Our Sunday school is growing now. Many who have been kept at home for some time on account of whooping cough are now back in Sunday school and we are very glad.

We are glad to know that our president will preach for us next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

English Street.—Our third quarterly conference was held last Thursday evening, and the attendance was very good. The usual order of business was gone through with and the reports made were fairly good. Bro. J. A. Bowers was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

The pastor and his family wish to thank all who took part in a recent pounding which left them well supplied with food to last for several days. Besides this, they wish to thank Mrs. C. J. Burton for apples and beans, also Mrs. Kivett, of near High Point, for two bushels of fine Magnum Bonum apples. All these gifts are highly appreciated not only for their monetary value, but for the love and good-will that prompted the giving. Mrs. T. S. Goebel, president of Ladies' Aid Society, was largely responsible for the pounding.

Our Children's Day program was rendered the first Sunday to a very attentive congregation. The children who took part acquitted themselves well. The collection amounted to $7.51. Later in the week, Mrs. T. S. Goebel and Mrs. I. L. Elliott each gave us five dollars for missions which brought the collection up to $17.50. The pastor and church truly appreciate the splendid work these ladies are doing. They are not only doing a fine work as teachers in our Sunday school, but they are helping in every department of church work, giving money liberally to help meet our church obligations.

English Street, we believe, has a great future, but at present we are held down because of the debts that have been accumulating for the past several years. When these old debts are lifted, we expect to go forward much more rapidly than under existing conditions.

The week following the third Sunday we will be in a special meeting at Mt. Pleasant, West Thomasville charge, and at Mt. Zion the fourth Sunday. These churches were once a part of Uwbarrie circuit and we find some true Methodist Protestants at each church. Mt. Pleasant has a very fine Sunday school, due largely to the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Briles. When Sunday school rooms are added, this church will move forward very rapidly. We have here a very fine set of young folks whose interest will increase when proper arrangements are made to house a departmental Sunday school. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our revival meeting began at Zoar the second Sunday in August with Bro. J. D. Morris as pulpit help. Bro. Morris did some extra good preaching. We had very good attendance. The crowd was much larger at night than in the day. The church people seemed interested in the preaching, but there was not much response to the appeal made to them to work for the unsaved. Bro. Morris received many comments from many. Several comments were that the preaching was the best they had heard at that church in several years. The church was greatly revived. There were three conversions and one accession to the church. The members were indeed glad to have Bro. Morris in their homes. We wish him god-speed in his work and may he be the means of winning souls into service. We wish to thank the good people of the Baptist and Presbyterian churches for their co-operation with us during our series of meetings. REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Hebron Church.—The special meeting began here Sunday, August 11, and closed August 16. Rev. J. F. Minnis did all the preaching and did it well. A fine spirit of co-operation and devotion prevailed throughout the meeting.

The church was revived, several reclaimed, 15 or 20 converted, and 7 accessions to the church, others to join later.

We feel that this church is in the best condition spiritually it has been in for some time. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—The special meeting at this place began second Sunday in August and continued till Friday night. Mr. Spencer gave us two fine sermons Sunday morning and night, and on Monday Dr. T. M. Johnson came to preach the rest of the week. His sermons were of a high order and were much enjoyed, being marked by that plainness and simplicity so often found in men with a broad range of knowledge and experience. His talks to the children were especially good. We had excellent piano music, furnished by Mrs. E. R. Nelson, of Henderson, and Mrs. Ernest Swaringen, of New York State, who were here for a few days with their mother, Mrs. N. M. Harrison. Mr. Swaringen was also present.

Mr. Spencer and son, C. D., left today for Asheville to visit Mr. Spencer's daughter, Mrs. Robards, and bring back Mrs. Spencer, who has been away for several weeks.

Mrs. H. W. Mitchell, president of the Ladies' Aid here, has recently gone to Chimney Rock to join her husband, and they will spend some time in the mountains.

M. H. S., Reporter.

Eiland, Orange Charge.—Our pastor has been busy in revival meetings for some time. The meeting began at Chestnut Ridge Sunday with Rev. J. D. Morris as pulpit help. We, the people of Eiland, were glad to have Rev. Mr. Morris to preach for us Sunday night. He brought us a message of gospel truths. More ministers that bring these heart to heart messages are greatly needed in this fast age.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. But one special need is a regular attendance. If every one on roll would do his best to be present every Sunday, just think what a large Sunday school we could have. No one gets the best out of anything who isn't always on the job. So let's do our best to attend more regularly and put our best into the work.

The ladies of our church plan to give a lawn party on the church lawn next Saturday night, August 24. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the church. Every one is cordially invited to attend.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—The appointments for last Sunday were with Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches. We were at Pleasant Hill in the morning. The attendance in both Sunday school and the preaching service was not as large as usual. There were other events, including an annual family reunion, which explains the decrease in attendance. The congregation was very attentive to the efforts of the pastor in delivering a message. Owing to the rain the Christian Endeavor meeting was not held according to schedule Sunday evening.

The service at Tabernacle was changed last Sunday from 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon to 8 o'clock in the evening. Due to the rain and thunderstorm just before the hour for service, a small congregation assembled. There was preaching at another church about two miles from the church, which accounts in part for the small attendance.

The conference year is rapidly drawing to a close. We have a little over two months until the Annual Conference will be in session. There will be only two more appointments at Pleasant Hill, Tabernacle and Union Hill churches during the remainder of this conference year. The other three churches will have three more appointments before conference. There will be a hustling around of stewards in all of the churches in the conference during the next two months.

September 1 is to be Annual Conference Day, and we are planning to observe the day on the West Forsyth charge.

Fairview-Glen Raven.—Our special meeting at Fairview began the second Sunday in August. Rev. T. F. McCulloch, an ex-pastor, preached an able sermon at the morning hour. A home-coming service was held in the afternoon. Brief talks were made by a num-

Our third quarterly conference was held at Tabernacle church last Saturday according to schedule. We were disappointed in not having a neighbor pastor to preach the sermon, as was previously planned. The sermon was delivered by the pastor. A splendid dinner was enjoyed during the noon recess. The business session of the conference began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and the business of the conference was transacted in a fine spirit of harmony.

The pastor's report showed that five revival meetings had been held on the charge this year, with an addition of eighteen members. A total of 342 pastoral visits was reported for the year. The total amount paid on the salary was $449.37.

The Sunday school superintendents present made encouraging reports of the work of the Sunday schools on the charge.

The votes for delegate were counted by a committee and the result announced. Bro. J. Henry Spease, of Stony Knoll church, was declared elected. Bro. C. G. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, was the other nominee.

The pastor and family are grateful to Mrs. J. F. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, for a bucket of honey and a bucket of lard, and to an unknown person for nice corn, which was left at the parsonage when the family was away.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be with Harmony Grove church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

ber of visitors. Special music was also a feature of the program.

Dr. Brown came over for the evening service and delivered a fine message. The meeting closed Friday night. Dr. Brown preached the plain, unadulterated doctrines of the gospel in a forceful and masterful manner. Visible results were not apparent, but visible demonstrations are not always an infallible gauge by which a real revival is proved. We are quite sure that much good was accomplished.

On Thursday night of the meeting the writer was ordered to leave his car unlocked. Then a little later he was ordered to go inside the church. After service the Ford coupe was found loaded to capacity with a genuine pounding. Miss Elsie Lee was the author and leader of the pounding group. She and all the rest are graciously thanked.

Acting upon the recommendation of the writer, the Sunday school at Glen Raven decided today to order a comparative record board. Such a board is a valuable Sunday school requisite.

WM. H. NEESE.

Asheboro.—After a vacation of one month for the pastor and two weeks for the congregation, services were resumed yesterday, both morning and evening. The morning congregation was fairly good and the people seemed glad to get back to church. The Sunday school attendance has kept up remarkably well during the time there was no preaching. We are grateful to Rev. W. F. Kennett and Dr. J. D. Williams for preaching during the pastor's absence. The people seemed pleased with both of these.

The writer wishes to express his appreciation for the many fine letters wishing him a speedy recovery from the recent illness, and this is to say that the writer is greatly improved in health and feels that with care and patience he will soon be himself again.

Our people here generally are greatly distressed at the loss by fire last Friday morning of a large part of the Home Building Co., Inc., one of the largest manufacturing plants in our city. This plant was owned and run by the Ross family and J. A. Way, all of our church. Several members of our church also worked in the office and other departments of the plant.

We are expecting to observe Annual Conference Day the first Sunday in September as requested by President Taylor. We hope to make the day worthwhile.

Our third quarterly conference was held some time ago and it was found that Brother L. F. Ross was elected delegate to Conference. Brother T. F. Bulla was the other nominee and it was an exceedingly close vote, showing that the people would have been glad for both to be in the conference.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Mt. Pleasants.—Missionary Circle No. 1 will give a miscellaneous program at Mt. Pleasants schoolhouse Saturday evening, August 24, at 8 o'clock. The entertainment will include a play entitled "A Woman's Won't." Special music will be given by a lady from Greensboro. The program is full of variety and is one that you will enjoy. The proceeds will go into the missionary treasury.

REPORTER.

Pageland.—Our pastor, Rev. Glenn Madison, filled his appointments here last Sunday, bringing us two very helpful sermons. One of the members stated that the sermon Sunday night was the best yet. It is true that Rev. Mr. Madison has rendered splendid service from the beginning, and has brought wonderful messages which the people have enjoyed. I believe I speak the sentiments of the charge as a whole, when I say we esteem Rev. Mr. Madison highly and regret to lose him so soon. We feel sure that he has his work at heart, and with the co-operation of his people is doing all that is within his power for the betterment of his churches.

Our revival meeting begins Sunday, August 25. We are hoping to obtain lasting results from the meeting. The Rev. Fred Paschall of the First Church, Asheville, N. C., is to be our pulpit help.

Thursday of this week has been set apart for clean-up day at the church. We hope to have the grounds and the inside of the church looking nice by Sunday. Never was there a more splendid co-operation shown than on last Thursday when 50 or more met at Rose Hill cemetery for the purpose of cleaning off the grounds. In a short time the work was finished and the cemetery speaks for itself; as much as to say, "Your loved ones are not forgotten."

We reorganized our weekly prayer meeting more than a month ago, and are again enjoying the spiritual blessings received from them. We realize what we have been missing, and feel that prayer meeting is very essential to any church.

We are planning to go down and worship with the Bethesda people in a rally day service on Sunday, September 1.

The Senior Christian Endeavorers are working to give their play in a short time.

LEO SOWELL, Reporter.

Albemarle.—Our Sunday school had a very enjoyable picnic on last Wednesday afternoon at Richie's Lake. One of the features of the afternoon was the watermelon feast which was enjoyed by both young and old alike. A number of the older people passed the afternoon fishing in the lake, while the younger ones went in swimming. At 6:30 a sumptuous supper was spread and all present did full justice to the occasion. Those who failed to attend this outing surely did miss a treat.

Rev. Mr. Anderson spent several days last week in Atlanta, Ga., visiting relatives. Mrs. Anderson and children, who have been on an extended visit with her people near Atlanta, returned with him. Miss Lois Covie, a sister of Mrs. Anderson, accompanied them home, and will attend high school here, where she will graduate this term. We are indeed glad to have her with us.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton have as their guest, Miss Beulah Moton, of High Point. Miss Moton is the attractive daughter of the late Rev. J. H. Moton.

The families of J. E. Gantt, J. D. Gantt, and Boyd Gantt left Monday for Catawba county to attend the camp meeting which began Sunday. This is quite an outstanding event in that part of the country, and it is a custom of the Gantts to return every year to their home county for the meeting.

A very interesting program was rendered Sunday night, by members of the junior department of the Sunday school. The program consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues and a one-act play. Mrs. C. S. Moton arranged the program and trained the children, and she has never had greater success than with this exercise. A silver offering was taken and the response was very generous. This will go toward paying for the piano in the junior department.

The Ladies' Aid society held an ice-cream supper and cake sale on last Friday night on C. S. Moton's lawn. Although some fall coats were in evidence on account of the cool weather, they didn't fail to eat ice cream and drink lemonade. The cakes were auctioned off after the supper and these brought a nice sum. Twenty-five dollars was added to the treasury from this affair.

MRS. JOHN H. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

High Point.—There was no service held in First Church for the adult congregation on Sunday, but at 11 o'clock the members worshipped with the junior church in the assembly room and enjoyed a delightful service with Rev. E. Lester Ballard conducting. This church service for the children is one of the most influential organizations of the church, and the attendance keeps well up to an average of 100. They sing hymns to a piano accompaniment, have prayers and a sermon by Mr. Ballard, and sometimes one of their own members leads the discussion of the topic, which is fine training for our youth.

The different circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the following homes: No. 4, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, chairman, with Mrs. H. A. Moffitt on North Main street; No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. L. F. Ferree on East Green street; No. 6, Mrs. P. S. Kennett's, with the chairman; No. 7, Mrs. Ben T. Moore, chairman, with Mrs. Lewis Teague on Johnson street; and No. 8 with its chairman, Mrs.

J. G. Snipes on Steele street. The members of the auxiliary held a delightful "Dollar Social" last Tuesday evening, August 13, at the church, and much merriment was enjoyed when every woman and girl was called on to tell how she made the dollar. Some washed their own hair and saved it, others sewed, others dressed chickens, many sold beans and other vegetables, while others laundered clothing. The sum of $40.00 was turned in that evening, while at least $30.00 more will be contributed. This money will be used for a scholarship in High Point College, which will be called this year the Lucile Walton Hinshaw scholarship in memory of a dear and precious member, Mrs. Clifford R. Hinshaw, who left us in June.

The young girls of Mrs. R. I. Farmer's circle will meet Thursday evening with Miss Grace Koontz, and the members of Miss Young's and Miss Nellie Martin's circles will have a picnic this (Tuesday) evening near the city.

We are much pleased to know that Mr. Vernon W. Idol, who had the misfortune to sprain his ankle at the Sunday school picnic, is able to get around on crutches.

Mr. and Mrs. June Gray and the boys returned Monday from Charlotte, where they have been guests of Mrs. Gray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutchison.

Miss Lucile Pickens returned Monday morning from New York, where she has been taking summer school work in Library Science at Columbia University for six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Ballard of Baltimore arrived Saturday for a visit of two weeks with their son and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. Lester Ballard.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, their daughter Claire and two sons, Kent and Robert, are spending a vacation of two weeks in Asheville.

Miss Annette Pickens has gone to Concord, N. C., to spend a week with her cousin, Miss Alice Armfield.

Mrs. C. C. Robbins and sons, Charles and Frank, are spending several days at Paradise Point.

Mrs. S. S. Coe and daughters, Julia Elizabeth and Mary Anne, and Miss Vera Idol left last Friday for Myrtle Beach, S. C., to spend ten days.

Mr. R. Lynn Trout, who has a position as traveling salesman, is spending a few days in the city.

Draper.—The Sunday school is still growing. The church has planned to have a picnic at the old battle ground near Greensboro. We all are expecting to have a nice time.

Sister Lankford has been very ill but she is improving. One of our sisters, Mrs. Etheridge, has been ill for some months but is now improving nicely. Our pastor, Rev. W. T. Totten, is doing some good preaching for us. He is loved by all of the people in our town.

MRS. M. A. CHANDLER, Reporter.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Our revival began the second Sunday in August with three services that day. Our pastor, Brother Lindley, did the preaching on Sunday. The writer heard many favorable comments on his sermons. Of course we knew that we had a splendid preacher, but there were a number of people there who had not heard him before, and we are glad that they were so favorably impressed.

On Sunday evening we were favored by having Mr. Lashley and his choir from Pleasant Hill sing for us. Also Mr. Bowman and a part of his choir from Mt. Pleasant. Everybody seemed to thoroughly enjoy this song service and we hope that they will visit us often.

On Monday Rev. J. C. Russel, of Liberty, came as pulpit help, and did the preaching during the remainder of the meeting. He did some good preaching, although the results were apparently not what we had hoped for; but we hope that seeds were sown which will bring forth much fruit yet.

We were glad to have Rev. C. G. Isley, our former pastor, and his mother, worship with us at two services during the meeting.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS AT FRIENDSHIP, MT. HERMON

By H. E. COBLE

These Graves Are But Milestones to the Place Where All Roads Meet

A memorial day is, of course, one touched with sorrowful memory. When we turn with half averted glance to the things past and gone, when we live in memory with those we have known and loved, it brings a pang of sadness to our hearts. Yet I for one do not see why we should have any thought of pity for the people whose memory we honor today. We should envy them rather, because theirs is a work accomplished, while we are living in the midst of a work unfinished—testing our strength against many obstacles where theirs has already been tested.

As I said, there is a touch of sorrow, but there is also a touch of reassurance—reassurance that we too may come down to the end of a life and lie down to pleasant dreams even as they. For we are traveling the same road that they did, meeting more obstacles probably, and rightly so, for we should be better able to overcome them. Each generation should and I think does find itself a little farther along than the preceding one. We can see mankind in a blind struggle, often losing its way in the mire, often mistaking the path, yet with bloody hands and battered knees passing over the slow stages to the day when we shall live in the full light that will illumine all mankind shining direct from the face of God. Yes, we are traveling the same road and personally endowed with the ability to get there, and these graves that we decorate today are but milestones to the place where all roads meet. There all the happy souls that ever were shall meet with gladness in one theatre and all shall know there one another face to face. "There shall the brother with the sister walk, and sons and daughters with their parents talk. There shall we see the vision of our Savior face to face in His eternal Kingdom, where we sit, equal with angels and co-heirs of it"—the place where all roads meet.

On this day we are to pay tribute to the past—to those who are gone, but it would be no profit to eulogize these dead if we did not take to heart the lessons they have taught, if we did not take to ourselves the principles they have unconsciously lived by. The Chinese have too much regard for their ancestors—they worship them and expect them to keep all evil away, but we Americans go to the other extreme and have too little regard for ours. We are rushing along at such a pace that we haven't time to look back or go in memory to those we have known and loved. This is a day of action to be sure and no one could wish it to be otherwise, but a time that we should make haste slowly. There is such a thing as making haste slowly. We are due for some terrible jars as we rush along, forgetting the past bad place in the road where we might know, should know, that there will be others just ahead. It is to the past then that we turn to pay tribute and we do it, not because those who are dead need our eulogy, but because we need it ourselves. We cannot know where we are tending till we know from whence we came, and we cannot know from whence we came till we think of those who are gone and gauge ourselves by them.

We think back to the time of our birth as American people—only a short time. We see that old Puritan spirit first of all, that indomitable spirit that caused people to brave the perils of the Atlantic and face the dangers of a new land that we might enjoy the privileges that we do, and who would say that the Puritan spirit is dead? Even though those people have passed away we can still see the work that they so well did. We honor the great men of that time—the Edwards, Mathers, Franklin and others. We see the stirring scenes of the war for independence and who would say that the spirit that prompted those people to action in '76 is dead? The Civil War comes and we remember men like Lee, Lincoln, and others. The World War is the same. We honor the great men of all time because it is their ideals and principles that have guided us in the main through many trying times—it is they who have helped us through the crises of history. But listen, they are not the only ones. It is those who have never been called great that mean most to you and me. It is they who are responsible for this community as a decent and fit place in which to live, it is they who are responsible for this church, it is they to whom we turn for guidance many, many times whether we admit it or not; it is they who deter us from wrong. No, we cannot judge greatness, we cannot know the value of a life, because we cannot know who nor to what extent some one is being influenced by the people who are gone. We have no right to say that because this grave is short that the life could not have been worth much because we cannot always see the value of a life. Even a babe may influence a family to the extent that the whole family is reformed.

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene

The dark unfathomed caves of oceans bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

God is a just God and He works in ways that we are not supposed to understand. We cannot understand why some one is cut down in the prime of life, and we do a lot of speculating and at times grow skeptical because of it, but who knows but what it was done to draw some of the rest of us up. Not long ago I came near seeing a terrible tragedy—three girls and one boy were walking on opposite sides of a road when the driver of a truck suddenly realized that he must strike one of the groups. He swerved to the side of the road and killed the boy instantly under the very eyes of his mother. Not even she could condemn the driver for his action, not even she could have wished he had done otherwise. We sacrifice one for three or four or more and think nothing of it. Would you say that God is not a just God when He sacrifices one for more than one? We know that many examples are set for us every day and many of us overlook them as being for some one else. Past heroes are but guideposts for us and we seem to think they are for some one else. I think it would be well for the church to keep a biography of every person in its cemetery. I think it would be well if we who are players on the stage of life would remember those who have just gone off and I am quite sure those who are to come on would be more like what God intended them to be if we did.

Then we must pay tribute to the present, for it is the present that is so close to us and means most to us—that ever present now that many of us idle away, putting off until tomorrow the things that can't be done then, for in actuality there is no such thing as tomorrow. The destiny of nations is being shaped by people who are working in the present, thinking of the problems as they exist now and not by people who are living in the future and that only in the imagination which leads us to that old saying that we have heard many times, "By the street of by and by one arrives at the house of never." By and by I will attempt the reformation of my own life, by and by I will make friends with my enemies, by and by, ultimately arriving at the house of never. We would pay tribute to the future only as we see greater things arising for it out of the life of the past. It is the future that is most glorious and allows room for a great deal of speculation. We can go away on great flights of the imagination, but we are soon dropped with a thud and it jars us some.

As we think of this road that we are all traveling—we who are on this side of the last milestone to the place where all roads meet—we wonder what life is. Yet it is simple, being is simple, the whole universe is simple. Complexity arises out of ignorance and self-delusion. We must forget self and cease to live a fragmentary life but live life as a perfect whole. We say that the stone has no life—that the trees, birds, flowers and people have life. Yet we can see every form of life reaching upward—the trees reaching out always toward the sun, the flowers opening at a time they will be less likely to be destroyed. People are always reaching out too—"ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for," reaching out, yes, not necessarily to benefit self but to benefit the perfect whole. We are but a part of the universe with a work to do, a work that no one else can do for us. If we could but realize that there is disappointment in heaven when we fail to do our duty, if we could but realize that a part of God's great plan for the perfection of this universe is thwarted when one of us fails to do the things that only we can do, it would cause us to turn the spotlight on ourselves and see if there is anything we can do to alleviate the misery and suffering of this world.

But we were on the question of life. We know that a well-balanced life has three sides to it—the physical side, the mental side and the spiritual or religious side. Unless they are all developed simultaneously, a lop-sided person is the result. The physical side can be developed by training, by much care. We know how to be good animals whether we use the knowledge or not. Of course the mental side can be developed by careful training as well, and every effort is being made to do just that in the school. But consider the tragedy of people developed physically and mentally and whose spirituality is dead. Many of us are lop-sided in that respect. We know that a tripod will not stand up if one leg is taken away unless the other two are stuck down in the mud or mire. A person cannot stand up without religious training unless he is rooted in the mire, and we idealists fail to see it. Some one is to blame for practically half of the American people being without religious training. Some blame the church for it, but the churches are doing what they can with the support they get from us. It is we who merely hold on to the church as a means for maintaining our social status that put the church in a bad light. No one would think of going without food for a week or month, no one would treat his physical self that way. Yet we go without spiritual food longer than that and think nothing about it. There is but one source of spiritual food and that is found in the Bible. It has been abused, villified, torn up, criticised, and ignored and in spite of it all it stands. There are those who would have us discard it as out of date. I would not have you hold on to some outworn creed, neither would I have you accept every new idea that presents itself, for they are not always logically sound, but I would not have you reject the Bible.

We are of but minor importance in this world of affairs, but we have important work to do. We cannot understand our origin exactly and we do not need to. Get what the poet said about it:

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting.
The soul that rises with us our life's star
Hath elsewhere its setting and cometh from afar

Not in entire forgetfulness
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God who is our home.
Heaven lies about us in our infancy.

The world is becoming more complicated every day and we ought not to be foolish enough to think that we can understand all of it. There are some simple things in the world, however, and one of them is principle. For instance, the principle of common honesty that keeps us from tearing at the throat of our fellowman every time we see him helps us to be fair with ourselves, our God, and our fellowman.

Every day we live we are carving the epitaphs on our tombstones, every day we live we are saying and doing the things that will be remembered of us. We do not long remember what the minister said about some one at a funeral, and we do not often read what some one else carved on the headstone, but we do remember what you did from day to day. We will soon forget you if you had a lifelong enemy, we will soon forget you if you failed to support this church as an institution for the uplift of this community. You will be remembered if when you come to die you have no major regrets, and you will have some major regrets if you failed to treat every man as your brother—if you failed to recognize in the human race a kinship. I believe the spirits of these departed ones are with us at this hour. I hope you feel the compulsion of their presence. I hope you realize the significance of their presence. I hope you realize that there is something greater than giving a life for a community and that is giving a spirit an influence that will live after you and bring honor to yourself and to those left behind.

There can be no regret as we approach the end of life, for a life cannot be destroyed and we know from that that life cannot be. We will let the poet say it—
Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first was made;
Our times are in his hands.
Who saith a whole I planned
Youth shows but half; trust God nor be afraid.

There is no death. We do not live as if we actually believed it. But we merely pass the last milestone to the place where all roads meet. Lord Lytton has written a poem entitled "There Is No Death," and it will do to quote at this time.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore:
And bright in Heaven's jewelled crown
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain or mellowed fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize,
And feed the hungry moss they bear;
The forest leaves drink daily life,
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall
And flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away;
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate,
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad these scenes of sin and strife,
Sings now an everlasting song
Around the tree of life.

Where'er he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint and vice,
He hears it to that world of light,
To dwell in paradise.

Born unto that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them the same—
Except their sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead.

Those whose memory we honor today have passed the last milestone to the place where all roads meet.

A COMMON PRAYER

How is this for a Sunday school closing prayer, immediately preceding the preaching hour:

"O Lord, we thank Thee for the Sunday school, and for the hour we are spending together today. Bless, we pray Thee, the superintendent, the teachers, and all the officers of the Sunday school.

"And now as we separate, and go to our homes, do Thou go with us, and bring us together again in Sunday school next Sunday. In Jesus' name. Amen."

Is the above sample adequately comprehensive?

What is the psychological effect of this type of prayer?

This writer would like to read somebody's discussion of these questions.

NEPHEW.

JAZZ CHURCH MUSIC

In regard to jazz music in the church I want to say: Don't get jazz music mixed up with sacred songs as seems to be the case with some. The song "In the Garden" is a beautiful one and if we will do as it says, walk and talk with God, we will reach that place Jesus has gone to prepare for those who love him. We read in the Bible where people of old walked and talked with God. Why even Jesus himself went out in the Garden of Gethsemane to pray.

If you want your life to shine for Jehovah just brighten the little corner in which you live. If we don't do this our lives will be a complete jazz.

You can take the best sacred song in all the world and sing it within yourself without God and what will it be but jazz? So if you are guilty of the least you are guilty of the whole.

Then let us all go to the garden alone in prayer just like Jesus did, believing that he will be with us always, even to the end.

Again let me say that "Brighten the Corner" or "In the Garden" will not mix with jazz.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Smith

Calvin Dudley Smith was born February 24, 1841, and passed from this life July 6, 1929, being a little more than 88 years of age. July 24, 1862, he was married to Miss Cynthia Hunter, a sister of the late Bro. David H. Hunter. This proved to be a happy marriage. Ten children were born to this union, all of them now living. More than 50 years ago Brother Smith united with Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church, remaining a loyal member until death. He was a good citizen, a good neighbor, and a sincere Christian. He has gone to receive the reward of the faithful.

The writer, assisted by Revs. J. F. and T. F. McCulloch, conducted the funeral at Tabernacle church on July 7, and the burial took place in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Enos Smith

The Tabernacle community was saddened last Saturday, August 17, when it was learned that Brother Enos Smith had passed from "the land of the living." Until a few weeks ago he was one of the most faithful attendants of Tabernacle church at both Sunday school and preaching. He had reached the ripe age of 76 years. When a young man he accepted faith in Christ and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church, and was faithful to this church until death. A good man has gone to his reward. During his last days he expressed himself to the pastor as trusting in Jesus for salvation. Brother Smith is survived by his widow and six children, five sons and one daughter.

Funeral services were held at Tabernacle last Sunday afternoon, August 18. The pastor was assisted by Revs. T. F. McCulloch and J. M. Millard.

H. L. ISLEY.

Durham

Brother Wm. C. Durham passed from labor to reward on August 9. He was living with his daughter, Mrs. O. N. McPherson, at the time of his death. He had been ill for quite a long while. He lived to the ripe age of 79. The following sons and daughters survive: I. A. Durham, Pittsboro; Mrs. O. N. McPherson, Graham; L. L., C. C., G. B., and G. W. Durham and Mesdames M. J. Hinshaw, E. C. King, J. T. Daniel and D. E. Lambert, Burlington; one brother, I. W. Durham, Chapel Hill, and three sisters, Mesdames S. J. Henderson, C. W. Lutterloh, and C. M. Justice; 17 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted in the First Methodist Protestant Church of Burlington Sunday afternoon, August 1, at 3 o'clock. Dr. Buck, of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. E. C. Durham, a nephew of the deceased and pastor of Web Avenue M. E. Church, assisted the pastor in the service. Many beautiful floral offerings and a great congregation of relatives and friends showed the high esteem in which Brother Durham was held.

During the pastorate of Rev. G. L. Curry Brother Durham professed faith in Christ and united with the First M. P. Church 14 years ago, and since that time has been a consistent member of the church.

All the relatives and friends who are bereaved at his passing have our sympathy and prayers. May the God of all comfort be your consolation!

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

THE USEFUL DRAGON-FLY

One of the most useful of insects is, owing to the ignorance of the public, forever being killed, says a writer in "The King's Own." It is known as the dragon-fly, the needle-case and the devil's darning-needle. In its larval state it subsists almost entirely on those small, squirming threads which may be seen darting about in any still water, and which hatch out into the sweet-singing mosquito. As soon as the dragon-fly leaves its watery nursing-ground, it climbs some friendly reed, throws away the old shell and flies away. It is helping man again. Its quarry now is the fly.

Not long ago, an observer saw one of these insects knocked down in a veranda, where it had been doing yeoman's service. The children and women seemed delighted, although they shrank back from the poor, wounded dragon-fly.

When the observer took the insect up, there was general wonderment, which was increased when a captured fly was eaten by it. The boys of the household will never harm a dragon-fly again.—Selected.

LONDON

Slumbering city,
Wrapped in grey;
The curtain rises,
Now 'tis day.

Bustling city,
Business thriving;
Men and women
Eager striving.

Blithesome city,
Surging throng;
Silvery laughter,
Evening song.

Slumbering city,
Midnight bell;
God keeps vigil,
All is well.

Arched with grey
Or radiant blue,
Dear old London,
I love you!

—Grenville Kleiser.

—Four hundred and seventy thousand, one hundred and sixty-one tons of meat London's 8,000,000 people consumed last year. This meant 1,060,000 bullocks and calves, 6,000,000 sheep and lambs and 1,350,000 pigs.

—Eighty-seven hours of agony—three days and four nights—this was the experience of Joseph Schneider, a trapper, caught in a bear-trap in the wilds of Colorado. The story he told of his sufferings is too gruesome for us to print. He declares that if he recovers from the results of tearing himself loose from the grip of the steel jaws he will never trap another animal. He knows now what it means.

—Brother Enos Smith, who was buried at Tabernacle last Sunday was, we believe, a man of extraordinary piety. We had special evidence of this one morning a few years ago. We think a revival meeting was in progress at Tabernacle church. Brother Smith had occasion to come to the city in the early morning. We met him with one of his sons as they rode along in a market wagon drawn by horses. At the time of our observation the horses were left to pursue their own course at their own gate, while Brother Smith and son both reverently bowed their heads in prayer. We supposed they were praying for the success of the meeting at Tabernacle.

—Asheboro had two destructive fires last week on Thursday and Friday nights, mysterious in their origin. The Redding Chair Company suffered great loss by the first and the Home Building Company was much damaged by the second. Brother Ferree Ross, manager of the building company, expects to resume operations at an early date. The old Roller Mill was also destroyed, though it was not being operated. The movements of some strangers in town aroused suspicion that they had started the fires.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson was called to conduct the funeral service of one of the most devoted members of our church at Whitakers —Miss Mamie Johnston. She had served as a member of the Annual Conference and was in every way interested in the work of the church. She filled so large a place in her local church that her place will be hard to fill.

—Tuesday morning's paper reported the death of Mrs. Donnie Knight, sister of Mrs. Rev. J. R. Hutton. She died in a Baltimore hospital. Her father died about two weeks ago, Mr. P. R. Coble.

—Russia and China say they are going to observe the Kellogg Peace Pact, yet both seem bent on war operations. We hope these two giant nations will somehow be restrained from coming to severe blows.

—We heard recently of a minister with three preaching speeds, low, middle, and high. He begins low, proceeds through middle, and as he warms up passes into high. The man describing said that in high the preacher talks so fast you can't understand him, but that he later drops down into middle and explains it all. He reminds one of the negro preacher who in describing his pulpit method said: "First, I tells 'em what I's gwine to tell 'em; den I tells 'em; and last of all I tells 'em what I's done told 'em."

—Rev. S. W. Taylor has been enjoying a well-earned vacation, though his mind has been all the time on the work. His vacation is now over and he will be heard from again.

—Rev. C. W. Bates will assist Rev. J. A. Burgess in an evangelistic meeting next week. His pulpit an Sunday morning will be filled by another.

—Seven or eight persons have signified their purpose to enter the writing contest, discussing The Country Church. Only two or three more required. Several articles are already in, waiting for the race to begin.

—Rev. R. C. Stubbins was in Greensboro Monday night.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. W. L. Kivett, several bushels of apples. Mr. W. F. Grabs, several bushels of apples. Either of these people who so kindly give so freely of their apples to the Home would be glad to sell apples at their orchards at reasonable prices.

Last Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Hauser came from Shoals community in a truck and brought: cash $3.00 (reported above), one bushel string beans, two bushels potatoes, about three pecks of tomatoes, half bushel apples, and six young chickens—a splendid pounding.

Mrs. T. S. Piper, Pittsburgh, Pa., one quilt. Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Pas-hall, for the Daily Vacation Bible School, Asheville, seven aprons.

On last Friday Rev. G. L. Reynolds and three of the ladies from English Street church came and brought for the Ladies' Aid society 15 new print dresses, 15 slips, 5 pair bloomers, 3 yards print material. They had bought the goods and made these 35 garments and brought them out and dressed up 15 of our girls. Besides that they brought two slightly worn dresses, one ladies' coat, two hats, and two coats for boys. A fine donation from English street, and they did seem to enjoy it so much.

Fall is Approaching, School Will Open Soon

Mothers who have children of school age are going through their supply of clothing getting their children ready for school. If you find clothing which your children have outgrown and which you yourself would use if it were not too small, then please bundle it up now and send to us. We must prepare about 75 children for school. Any good worn clothing or shoes you may send us within the next few days will help greatly in our preparations.

Miss Annie Belle Thompson is directing our sewing department and much clothing is being made this summer by our own girls, but we will appreciate your help just the same.

Another Way to Help

We are planning to buy our fall shoes at wholesale. Thus we hope to get our shoes at an average of about $2.50 per pair. If we buy only one pair per child you see we must get 86 pair, and if we do succeed in getting them for $2.50 per pair they will cost us $215.00. And if we pay cash on delivery we will get 5 per cent discount on the bill. Up to date we have had to buy our shoes and much of our clothing at retail and time prices at that, so you can wonderfully help the Home by continuing to send us those splendid monthly offerings so we can buy at wholesale and pay cash. Thank you. By your help we are working toward that day rapidly.

Our special need at this time is table linen.

Faithfully yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON.

Another Chance

Our gracious God is wondrous kind!
Those who can't see it must be blind.
He tries to keep us pure within,
He lets us live although we sin;
He grieves for those who go astray
Whom He in wrath might sweep away.

Much more than this can one well say
Of His good deeds from day to day.
Unjust or just, we share His grace,
He seeks to bless the human race,
To every man some token gives,
And tries to save each man that lives.

And when we fail and sadly fall,
Disgrace ourselves, offending all,
When hope is gone and doom seems fixed,
Our cup of woe all sorrows mixed,
The ugly slate is washed all clean,
He gives to us a chance again!

An Open Letter to Dr. Isidor Singer

My Dear Sir:

I thank you for the copy you sent me of the correspondence between Dr. A. W. Anthony of the Federal Council of Churches and Mr. Louis Marshall, "the uncrowned King of the Jewish commonwealth of this country," regarding the relations between Christians and Jews.

I will endeavor here to respond to your request for my comment.

The prominence and intelligence of the parties to this correspondence give to it extraordinary interest. Discussing the propriety of proselyting efforts on the part of Christians toward Jews, it is not surprising that the two writers did not find themselves in agreement. The reader finds to his regret that the correspondence ends in a painful sense of discord. Dr. Anthony knows that He whom we own as Lord commanded us to preach the Gospel to every creature. Mr. Marshall believes in the sufficiency of Judaism. Before he can consent to the bringing of the Christian message to his people, he must be convinced that Jewish teachings are insufficient. Jews have found in them "an exalted and satisfactory philosophy of life." Dr. Anthony does not undertake the problem of converting Mr. Marshall to the Christian view, but abruptly closes the correspondence with the remark that he does not like controversy—"seldom does it accomplish any good."

I feel that the effort to establish proper relationship between Christians and Jews ought not to end in despair. It is as you say: "We both live, and intentionally so, as moral and social strangers, one beside the other, precisely as the white and colored populations live in the South." I believe we ought to understand each other better. I think there is more in common between us than we realize. Some time ago I bought a copy of the Jewish scriptures, the "Old Testament" Christians call it, and I was pleased to find it almost identical with the copy I had read in the Christian scriptures. It strengthened my faith in the reliability of the book. It was a case of two witnesses in agreement. Cannot Jews and Christians offer a united testimony to the world that still lies in the darkness and confusion of polytheism? Cannot Jews and Christians co-operate in works of mercy that will help to convince the unbelieving world that our God is a God of compassion? Will not Christians concede to the Jews that God spoke to their fathers through the prophets? And will not all Jews accept as a working hypothesis that God spoke to our Christian fathers through His Son? Surely there is ample ground for mutual respect.

I am not surprised that persecutions of the Jews have awakened in the minds of many a distrust of Christians. "Did not those who persecuted us call themselves Christians?" To be sure they did; but equally sure it is that they were not Christian in the spirit and act of persecution, if they were Christian in any respect. True Christians should not be censured or distrusted for what merely nominal Christians did. Have there not been those who called themselves Jews and were not Jews? Certain it is that many have called themselves Christians that were not Christians.

There is of course no way to reconcile truth with error. To be in harmony we must both imbibe truth or both imbibe the same error. Neither of us can rationally wish to build on a false foundation. Neither of us should assume that all error is on the other side. Both of us should be willing to make the effort necessary to discover the truth. Both of us should be willing to discover our own errors and depart from them. All of us should be and acknowledge ourselves to be seekers after the truth God would reveal to us. In proportion as we become children of our common Father we become brethren. Would not God have us be brethren and dwell together in unity? How good and pleasant that would be!

We would ask our Jewish brethren to fashion their conceptions of our Christ not by the misrepresentations of those who called themselves His followers and were not, but by the representations of those who knew Him and wrote of Him in the New Testament. Where else does the world's history or the world's fiction present to us such a character? He was a Jew, but too great to belong to any one race or nation—He called himself the Son of Man. A few times He called himself the Son of God. Making such claims and manifesting such powers as He did, should Christians be asked to offer any apology for believing in Him? And when Christians find His promise of His perpetual presence and guidance fulfilled in their lives, and in His service realize a blessedness they never knew before, should they be censured if they covet for their fellowmen the same rich experience? I feel

A GREAT STORY WELL TOLD

There are many histories of Methodism and many biographies of Wesley, but until recently—as far as the writer's knowledge goes—there was no illuminative "Story of Methodism." A few years ago two gifted writers of the Northern Methodist Church, Dr. Luccock and Dr. Paul Hutchinson, published a most fascinating "Story of Methodism." History is usually a record of bare facts, but in writing a "story" we take more liberty; the facts may all be stated, as in history, but expressed in such a vivid, picturesque style as to make the reading a fascinating pleasure as well as a profitable employment. The writers mentioned above have made a most valuable contribution to Methodist literature, and this book should have a large circulation. Not satisfied with drawing pen pictures to describe the thrilling story of Methodism, they employed an illustrator to draw sketches of some of the more important events. This adds much to the interest of the volume.

When we finished reading the book there were many marks on the margin. Only one or two paragraphs may be quoted here.

Writing on the subject of "Militant Methodism," the author says: "Methodism was born in a prayer meeting, but it learned to walk on a battlefield. Brickbats were a constant and enlivening feature of its early history. Nor were all its battles those of defense. The Methodist movement did not grow up in a theological vacuum, but was inextricably in the midst of life. The social evils of the time engaged the attention and energies of John Wesley and many of his followers, and the militant character of Methodism was firmly established."

Of Wesley's bearing when charged by a mob it is said: "We have several records of wounds suffered by Wesley. It is significant, however, that most of these came from stones thrown from a distance or from blows delivered from behind. When John Wesley got a man in front of him and close enough to look him in the eye, it was seldom that there was any violence. Wesley never used a weapon, never lifted his hand in self-defense. But his bearing and the flash of his eyes were defense enough."

It was with this heroic spirit that Jesse Walker introduced Methodism in the West: "I have come in the name of Christ to take St. Louis, and by the grace of God I will do it." And he did, for "before the year was out he had a church membership of sixty, a church building and a free school for poor children."

Of the ministry of song among the early Methodists, the author says: "Charles Wesley once said that he could tell the houses of the Methodists by the marks of violence on them. But there was a better way to discover the house of an early Methodist. It was to look for a distinguishing mark that Charles Wesley himself had put there. That mark was the sound of singing."

After speaking of John Wesley's contribution to the singing mission of Methodism, especially his work of translating hymns into the English language and carefully compiling hymn books, the author makes this pertinent observation: "Namby-pamby hymns stood no chance with John Wesley. One wonders what he would have said of the musical slosh that passes for 'gospel songs' today! Probably he would reiterate the refusal he placed in his hymnal of 1780 to 'longer be accountable either for the nonsense or for the doggerel of other men!'"

Methodism is a theme for a thrilling story, and, happily for the church, that story has been thrillingly told.

MAKING FIRES

Fire worship seems to be instinctive in some children. All children delight in fire and at one time or another desire strongly to set fires and see the flames rise. Even you and I, grown wise with the years, can stand to watch a fire that is costing us nothing, as long as the firemen and police hold their patience.

But it is no trifling matter for the mother of a child who has the fire-setting notion strongly to the fore. It seems impossible to teach the young fire lover the danger of his quest. He weeps and promises to reform, waggles his head solemnly in token of understanding, and sways it from side to side with the gravity of a true mourner in token that never again will he so much as look at a match. And then he does it again.

Usually he is somewhere between three and five years of age. He is a creature of instincts rather than of reason, and talking to him, reasoning with him, does not help. Only experience can teach him. We have to learn to say little. Impress him with the feeling that his offense is so great it can be spoken of only in whispers, gestures of distress. And let the weight of the difficulty fall upon his shoulders as far as possible.

After you have put out his little fire, make him "put it out," pouring on water, or sand, in as great a quantity as time and place will permit. If possible let this process inconvenience him. Then let him clean up the mess as far as his abilities permit. That, too, is to be as arduous an undertaking as you can allow under the conditions. All the time you say as little as possible. Your marked silence will speak louder than your words.

Do not tell of his exploit before him, or in fact behind him, if you can help it. The less said the better. The less drama, the less fear, the less excitement he gets out of the occasion the less likely he is to repeat it. The more inconvenience to him personally, the better. But do not burn his fingers; do not beat him; do not scream at him. Keep still and let him find his own way out of the trouble as far as possible.

Some children set one fire and never set another. Some will set two or three and the phase is over. Now and again there is a child who keeps on setting fires until he is nine or ten years old. That child needs the attention of the child specialist.

All children love a bonfire. When boys take old pots and put fire in them and signal each other, as warriors of old, never mind. When they gather waste materials for an election fire, direct them as to the place and the time and supervise them. These fires are purposeful; they are in celebration of a rite. They have no relation to the desire of the child to set a fire just for the love of the flame and the smoky smell and the excitement.

It is the setting of the tiny fire in the corner of a room, in the empty room, under the bed, in the corner of the cellar, that the three and four-year-old enjoys. This is the instinct of old and must be redirected. Don't be frightened. Watch and keep calm. Guard the matches without making parade about it. Give him, if possible, a new and absorbing interest. But don't beat him.—Angelo Patri.

THINK IT OVER

If I knew you and you knew me,
How little trouble there would be!
We pass each other on the street
But just come out and let us meet
At church next Sunday.

Each one intends to do what's fair
And treat his neighbor on the square;
But he may not quite understand
Why you don't take him by the hand
At church next Sunday.

This world is sure a busy place,
And we must hustle in the race;
For social hours some are not free
The six days, but all should be
At church next Sunday.

We have an interest in our town;
The dear old place must not go down;
We want to push good things along,
And we can help if we are strong
At church next Sunday.

Don't knock and kick and slam and slap
At everybody on the map;
But push and pull and boost and boom
And use up all the standing room
At church next Sunday!"

THE ENTRANCE OF THY WORD

Dr. A. F. Ragatz, Secretary of the Western Agency of the American Bible Society, contributes this incident of his work to the Bible Society Record:

Going to the hotel in a small town, the colporteur was greeted by the man at the desk with, "You surely timed your get-away when you were here last fall! You weren't gone an hour when a woman came demanding her money back for a Bible you had sold her."

For several days the colporteur sought in vain to find the woman who had been dissatisfied; then, calling at a home and announcing his mission, the woman said to him:

"Yes, I remember you well. You called at our home last fall, and I bought a Bible of you—and, if you had not left town so soon, I'd have made you take it back."

"Why did you want to return it?" he asked.

"I didn't want to give it back," said the woman; "but my husband objected to my keeping it, and told me to take it back and get my money."

"What did he say when you had to keep it?"

"Well, I can't tell you all he said; but he was pretty mad about it."

"Shall I take the Bible back now?" asked the colporteur.

"Oh, no!" came the instant reply. "You see, when my husband found that you were gone and saw the Bible around the house, he finally said, 'Since we have the book we might as well read it.' And, do you know, he was so interested in it that he could hardly wait until he got home nights to read it.

In less than a month I noticed that he was changing; he stopped swearing and became more contented in his work. Then one Sunday morning he suggested that we go to church—and we've been going ever since.

"And, now," concluded the woman, with a grand sweep of her arm, "look at my home. I've never had so many things before; my husband has not only kept his job, but has had his wages raised. He has stopped drinking, stopped swearing, is contented and happy, and our home seems like heaven to me."—Selected.

A DYING MEMBER

A story is told of a certain pastor who mourned over a backslider in his congregation, once a regular attendant at the prayer service, who for months had not been seen in the "upper room." Unable to stand it longer, at the close of one of the meetings in which the voice, formerly accustomed to lead in prayers, was sorely missed, the minister went straight to the man's home and found him sitting before the open fire. The absentee, somewhat startled by the intrusion, hastily placed another chair for his visitor and then waited for the expected words of rebuke. Had the rebuke been spoken, no one knows what the reply might have been, or what mistaken, yet lasting anger, might have been kindled. But not a word did the minister say. Taking his seat before the fire he silently took the tongs and lifting a glowing coal from the midst of its fellows, laid it by itself on the hearthstone. Remaining painfully silent, he watched the blaze die out. Then the truant opened his mouth to say: "You needn't say a single word, sir; I'll be there next Wednesday night."

—John W. Inzer.

that Jews should pardon us for wishing that they might through Jesus Christ come into the same happy relationship with God.

And we wish that all our Jewish friends would give St. Paul a square deal. Was there ever a more faithful and devoted adherent of Judaism than Saul was before Jesus spoke to him from the sky? And after he became a preacher of the faith he once sought to destroy, was he not always deeply concerned for his own people, the Jews, willing that he might be accursed for their sake? Paul did not cease to be a Jew when he became a Christian. He had a most difficult task to perform, and what he did and what he suffered that he might be true to his task prove to us the depth of his conviction and the greatness of his courage. Jews should honor Paul as one of their very great heroes. Paul belongs to both Jews and Christians and we may unite in doing him honor.

I appeal to Jews and Christians to recognize each other as children of a common Father, and, if I may be pardoned for it, I would appeal to both alike to strive earnestly to be more perfect children that they may be more perfect brethren. Away with narrowness and provincialism in the religious world. Turn away from the maze of human error and fix your mind and heart on the clear truth of God. It is error that has divided us, not truth. Error can never unite us. We must seek union and peace and joy and efficiency by way of truth. May the Spirit of Truth lead all our minds and hearts!

LOVE IS NOT ALWAYS GENTLE

There is an idea abroad that he is most religious who is most complacent and tolerant in dealing with wrongdoing. So widespread is this notion that no matter what evil is done, no matter what outrages are perpetrated, if one is to be accounted spiritual after the present-day conception, he must look calmly on and utter no word of protest. Scarcely any view could be more erroneous than this. The noblest type of Christianity is not that which perpetually flies the flag of truce. The spirit of compromise is the great weakness of the church today. The ambition to please rather than to save is the unmaking of many a minister. The hope of humanity lies not in a negative, but in a positive, aggressive righteousness. The capacity to feel moral indignation when right is trampled underfoot is an attestation of noble character. As Dr. B. M. Palmer, the eminent Presbyterian preacher, said, the more robust and sinewy one's moral nature is, the more these generous resentments against evil will flame forth. Weak, indeed, is he in the finer, richer elements of manhood who can see the helpless crushed, or injustice done, and lift no arm to strike in their defense.

The following interesting passage, written a few years ago by one of the editors of our church, bears pertinently on this point:

"But true love works through gentleness, may be the retort. Was our Savior lacking in love when He poured out on the Scribes and Pharisees the most scathing and terrible denunciation to be found in human annals? Had He no love for Peter when He denounced as a snare of Satan that one's well-meant though fearfully mistaken protest? Is punishment of the child evidence of the absence of the parent's love? Is the skilled surgeon's zeal for life-saving sluggish because with firmness and dispatch he presses the knife home to the most vital organs of his patient? Can there be the truest and fullest vision of the prophet without at the same time the keenest realization of wrong and sin, and without an impelling call to denounce them as they are?"—Selected.

A GOOD TIME

"Will you have a good time?"

This is a question particularly to be addressed to young people preparing for, or entering upon, active life. The query is suggested by a remark made by a well-known and distinguished church worker, who, reviewing his busy life career in a sentence, said: "Well, I have had a good time." Taken in a certain sense, that was a complete statement.

The common idea as to young people is that they are out looking for a feast or a frolic—some form of sport, or some dash of adventure. Business men are supposed to be always seeking financial profits—they have a good time when they get the goods. This, now, is neither all right nor all wrong. Man feels by a sure intuition that he is made to be happy. It is not this intuition that is essentially evil, but the kind of interests in which it is by many invested. The good time must be had in a good way. That is not only a religious teaching but also good psychology and philosophy. Certain things fit the nature of man, as a candidate for morality, and other things do not. One of these fitting things is liberality, another is faith, another still is love. These higher aspirations of man are implements or instruments of a happy life. They are not to be sought just for that reason alone, but that will be the result of their use. The spirit that gives is gladdened; the liberal soul shall be made fat; he that sows unsparingly of the best seed will return bringing his sheaves with him, and making others share in his rejoicing. It is right action that gives the love and lift to life.

The conditions of a "good time," then, lie within the man. Nothing external can make a right person who is radically wrong. Let a man be, and serve, and he will enjoy existence.—Zion's Herald.

THE VICTORY

Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. . . . O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—I. Cor. 15:20, 55-57.

She had come from Indianapolis and was a student at the Moody Bible Institute. It was Christmas night in a Chicago hospital. Several times during the day she had said that she knew she was going and that she would be glad to go.

"I have been studying to know the Word," she said, "and now I am going to see the Word."

She was never delirious, but conscious to the last.

Just before death came her face brightened, and she said, "Why, there's Mother!"

In a moment she added:

"And Grandmother, and Minnie!" (Her sisters say that she had never seen either of them in life.)

She named one after another who had passed away, and then she seemed to see others whom she could not name, adding,

"I wonder who those boys are? I don't know them."

And she was gone.

What is it that can explain a beautiful deathbed experience like the above? There is nothing of which we know other than the glorious truth resting on that historic fact revealed to us in that Holy Scripture quoted from Paul's Epistle to the Corinthians.

Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory!—From the Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

"DOES JESUS CHRIST LIVE HERE?"

There is a story of an eccentric preacher who was riding along a country road. He was attracted by a farmhouse. It looked so comfortable, its flower-bordered walks were so perfect, its whole air so peaceful, it looked like an ideal abode. He left his car and went to the door. A middle-aged woman answered and he asked: "Madam, does Jesus Christ live here?" The woman stared. He repeated the inquiry, but received no answer. When he had gone away, the woman ran out to the shed where her husband was chopping wood, and told him of her caller. "Didn't you tell him we belonged to the church?" demanded the old man. The wife shook her head. "Didn't you tell him we give money every Sunday?" Again the gray head made its negative motion. "'Twasn't anything like that he wanted to know, John. He wanted to know if Jesus Christ lived here; that's different." Different indeed! It takes many of us a long time to learn that it is not a name on a church roll, nor money in the collection plate, but the living Christ in the heart, that makes true Christians.—The Expositor.

Thank-Offering

There is some confusion as to whether or not this counts on the G. C. B. of the local church. The General Conference and the Board of Missions makes this very clear. I quote first from the report of the Committee on Finance, General Conference Journal, page 96, sections 2 and 3:

"We recommend that four special days be observed, as follows: Rally Day, for Christian Education; Christian Endeavor Day, in the interest of Young People's Work; Easter Day for Home Missions; Children's Day for Foreign Missions, and thank-offering services, as arranged by the Board of Missions.

"We recommend that all money from these special days be placed in the general budget, but be credited to the Board in charge of that special day, and shall count on the percentage income of said Board."

I quote now from the Constitution and By-Laws of Women's Work, page 11:

"The Home Thank-Offering service shall be held during the month of November. The Foreign Thank-Offering service shall be held during the month of February."

These are the only thank-offering services provided for by the General Conference and Board of Missions. The offering counts on the G. C. B. of the local church. It should be sent to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer, 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, N. C.

To get out of the way of our Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home, which is always made in November, our women are planning to hold the Home Thank-Offering service in September.

Orange Charge

August 25, Sunday.—We were with Bro. Williams and his people in two services on this day—Hebron, 11 a. m., and Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m. Bro. Williams had planned for the observance of Annual Conference Day at each of these points. The special emphasis was on the A. C. B. The total allotment for Hebron was assured, most of it being pledged in this service. Pledges were not taken at the Ridge, but the congregation voted in favor of the full budget. The weather was rainy throughout the day, but despite this the congregations were gratifying. Hebron church has been remodeled in recent years, the location of the pulpit being changed, and four Sunday school rooms added. The church is indicated by a large and attractive marker placed on the improved road that runs immediately in front of the building. This church is in the midst of a prosperous farming community, and has a large territory to serve. We venture the confidence that it could be developed into a strong station. Chestnut Ridge is one of our old churches, dating back as it does close to the beginning of our denominational existence. The present building is the third to occupy this site. It is perhaps one of the best known churches in that entire section of country. The congregation is large, though considerably scattered. The five following ministers of our conference have come out of this church, as we understand: D. R. Williams, T. A. Williams, R. C. Stubbins, J. F. Minnis, and M. I. Crutchfield. Great, indeed, is the good that this church has accomplished in the nearly 100 years of its existence. The present building is to be re-covered and painted in the very near future. Most of the money for this purpose is already provided.

We were pained to find the youngest son of Bro. Williams afflicted with rheumatism. We hope and pray for his early and complete recovery. The day on this charge was greatly enjoyed. The pastor is a tactful and persistent worker, and enjoys the highest esteem of his people. We are to visit the remaining churches of this charge on next Sunday.

Rally Day

The Board of Christian Education has provided, through the attractive booklet, "Our Youth in and for the Kingdom," and "Rally Day Supplement," ample and interesting material for helpful and enthusiastic Rally Day services. We urge upon all of our churches, now, the advantage of Rally Day, both to the local church and to the cause of Christian Education. Dr. Stephenson's statement is significant: "The gifts made by our people on Rally Day have been furnishing just one-half of the funds coming to the Board for its work." Let every church in the conference prepare this program and render it as early in the fall as will best suit local conditions. Make the offering large, and take credit on the G. C. B. for the amount. Every charge "on" now for the best Rally Day yet.

Send order for program to Rev. Frank W. Stephenson, D.D., 613 West Diamond St., North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa. There is no charge for these supplies.

Closing Weeks

Can you realize it! Just nine more weeks, and we will be meeting again in our annual session. How rapidly the year has passed! Job's expression, "My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle," becomes more and more real to us. These remaining weeks will go like a morning vapor, and there is much to be done as they pass. Rally Day is to be observed; several revival meetings are yet to be held; much of our finances is to be collected, both on pastor's salary and on budgets; church officers are to be elected and installed; the church register is to be revised; and beside all this the regular work of the church must be carried on and intensified. Surely there is much yet to be done. But with vacation over, we will return to our tasks with renewed zeal and make these closing weeks full of persisting effort and earnest prayer, that all of these things yet to be done may be done and done well. Let no pastor and no charge think of going up to the Annual Conference without being able to say, "We did our best."

This Final Word

About Annual Conference Day. Next Sunday is the day appointed. We do most earnestly hope that much may be made of it. The one definite thing that we wish to accomplish through this day is the raising of our A. C. B. We do not mean necessarily in cash, but in cash and pledges. We just must raise our Annual Conference budget, or suffer serious embarrassments in our work.

Our challenge went forth last week. We repeat it here: "Every dollar of our $26,550 A. C. B. and all of it provided for on Annual Conference Day." We know that this is "hitching our chariot to a star," but we are going to keep it up there until the sixth of November, unless this budget is raised before that time. And we are going to believe that every pastor and every church will say a hearty "Amen" to this purpose.

Do your best, your very best, next Sunday, brethren, for the A. C. B. It's good to believe you will.

P. S.—Hurrah! This encouraging word has just reached us from one pastor: "We are putting on a drive for the Annual Conference budget." Another says in his report, "We shall do our best for Annual Conference."

A PRECIOUS PROMISE

(As thy days, so shall thy strength be.)—Deut. 33:25.)

When adverse winds and waves arise,
And in my heart despondence sighs;
When life her throng of cares reveals,
And weakness o'er my spirit steals—
Grateful, I hear the kind decree,
That, "as my day, my strength shall be."

When, with sad footsteps memory roves
Mid smitten joys and buried loves;
When sleep my tearful pillow flies,
And dewy morning drinks my sighs—
Still to Thy promise, Lord, I flee,
That, "as my day, my strength shall be."

One trial more must yet be past,
One pang—the keenest and the last;
And when, with brow convulsed and pale,
My feeble, quivering heartstrings fail,
Redeemer, grant my soul to see
That, "as my day, my strength shall be."

—Lydia H. Sigourney.

CHRISTIAN DOCTRINES

There is everywhere a tendency to appropriate the results of the Christian faith, but to disparage the faith itself; to praise and rejoice in the feelings that the Christian doctrines awaken, and yet to deny the doctrines. This is unfair. The Christian doctrines ought to be given the full credit that is due them for that which they have inspired and created. It is no sign of a profound mind when any one boasts that he means to promote the causes and the civilization which Christianity has inspired and cultivated, but flouts the great Christian teachings themselves. It would be far nobler and fairer to confess that these efficient causes of Christian culture, the great, distinctive doctrines of the faith, must be true, and are worthy of allegiance because of what they have accomplished. Give the essential teachings of Christianity their due credit for what they have wrought!—Selected.

WHY HAVE A CREED?

In the editorial columns of a recent issue of The Gospel Banner appeared the following appropriate discussion of this vital question. We have noticed in some religious circles a tendency to deny as reasonable and important a creedal statement, sometimes using the slogan "Not Creed, but Christ." This statement might be used with good intention in an effort to try to convince the formally religious that they need more religion than can be kept in a knowledge of Christian doctrine, but even at that it is not a happy use of words. It takes two good facts of faith and appears to set them in opposition. The article follows:

"There are some professing Christians in these days who object to a creed, asserting that Christianity is a life and not a creed. The fact is, it is a life governed by a creed. It is devotion to a Person, but that Person was a divine Teacher. Without the medium of His truth He cannot be revealed to the heart, and no one can possess the motive power that will produce life.

"The Liberalist seems to want to praise Christ as a man and then discard His doctrine. Remember, however, that our Lord was dogmatic. We must choose between a doctrinal Christianity and no Christianity. We must have creed or go without Christ. An attack upon any New Testament teaching is an attack upon Christ Himself. A creed is simply an index to the faith of the New Testament. As S. D. Gordon says: 'Creed and conduct are as Siamese twins. They cannot live apart. Creed controls conduct.'"—Selected.

THE TESTING OF CHARACTER

It is very difficult for a cabinet-maker to find a sound piece of timber. This piece has a knot, and that one a decayed spot, and the other a split. So much lumber is cast aside in searching for that which has no imperfections. It is also difficult to find a man of good sound timber who will stand the test of circumstances, who can not be bought, who has no flaw, and no decayed spots. Three things test a man's character—opportunity, temptation, and importunity. Has he opportunity to enrich himself by some deviation from the straight way, and that without being discovered? Is the temptation pressed upon his heart with all the force of the tempter who is "an angel of light"? Does importunity come to him perhaps in the need of a loved one which could be relieved by his gain? A man who can resist these three tests of character and stand firmly in his integrity—he is a prince among his fellows.—Rev. Warren G. Partridge.

SOME CURIOSITIES OF THE BIBLE

The word "reverend" occurs but once, Psalm 111:9.

The longest verse is Esther 8:9.

The shortest verse is St. John 11:35.

In the 107th Psalm four verses are alike, the 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st.

Ezra 7:21 contains all the letters of the alphabet except J. Every verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike.

No names or words of more than six syllables are in the Bible.

The 37th chapter of Isaiah and 19th chapter of II Kings are alike.

The word "girl" occurs but twice in the Bible, Joel 3:3 and Zechariah 8:5.

There are in the Bible 3,538,483 letters, 773,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 Books.—Selected.

HIS TASK

"Father," said Tommy Harris one day in June, "if I earn some money this summer, may I have it for myself, to do what I want to with?"

"Why, yes, I think so," said his father. "But what are you going to do? How are you going to earn any money?"

"I'm going to mow Mr. Webster's lawn. I heard him say he wished he knew of some boy he could trust to keep the lawn mowed all summer. I'm going to ask him to let me do it. May I have the use of your lawn mower if he gives me the work?"

"Yes, if you will take good care of it, and put it back where it belongs when you are done," Tom promised, and the next day, when Mr. Webster had come from the city, he went over and asked him.

The lawn was a large one, and there were some trees and shrubs on it. Mr. Webster got up from his piazza chair and took Tom down on the lawn. He showed him how he wanted it cut, and how the boy who got the job must be careful not to break the shrubs and must not knock the bark off any of the young trees, and must trim the borders with the grass shears and rake up and carry away the grass.

"Do you think you can do that, and do it right, all summer?" Mr. Webster asked.

Tom thought he could.

"Well," said Mr. Webster, "I want it cut once every week. I don't care what day you cut it, because some weeks, when it rains a good deal, it grows faster than others; but I want it always to look neat on Sundays. You must watch it and cut it whenever it needs it. I will give you fifty cents each time."

Tom went home well pleased. He watched the lawn, and the next Wednesday he cut it very nicely, taking care to trim the edges and to carry away the grass, and not to break any of the shrubbery.

The next week on Wednesday he was going to mow the lawn again, but there was a ball game that afternoon, and the boys wanted him to play first base. The grass did not look so very long anyway, so he played ball, and was going to cut the lawn on Thursday.

But Thursday it rained hard, and he could not work outdoors, so he had to wait till Friday. He cut the grass then, but it was much longer than it had been the week before, and so it did not cut so smooth. When he had finished it there were some rough places where the tall grass had been pressed down by the lawn mower, but had not been cut off. Still, he thought it would not be noticed.

The next time the grass needed cutting, Tom went at it bright and early in the morning. He had got about a quarter of it done when Eddie Ives came along with a bat over his shoulder and a catcher's mitt on one hand. He stopped at the fence and called, "Come on, Tom! We're going to play the White Stars."

"I can't," said Tom. "I must work."

"Oh, you can do that in half an hour. Let it go till afternoon. We want you in the game."

Tom left the lawn mower just where it stood, and went off with his friend Eddie. The boys all said they were glad he was there, too, because in the second inning he caught a high fly that put out the third runner of the Stars.

But just before the end of the game, in trying to stop a hot grounder, he hurt his hand so badly that he had to go home and have it bandaged. It made him forget about Mr. Webster's lawn and where he had left the lawn mower.

He thought of it the next morning, and tried to finish the work, but the mower, being out in the dew all night, had rusted, so that it ran hard—and he could not find the oil can. Besides, his hand hurt him. After a while he called in Jimmy Russell, who was passing, and got him to help. But Jimmy was small, and could not handle the mower very well. In going round one of the shrubs he broke off a big branch; and he also knocked a piece of bark from the trunk of a small white birch tree, and the dark scar showed very plainly.

By the time they had finished, it was too late to rake up the grass and carry it off. Tom kicked it around a little, where it was thickest, so that it would not look quite so bad. He said to himself that next time he would begin early and stick to it and do better. His hand would be well by that time.

But the next time never came. When the grass was long enough to mow again, and Tom went over to Mr. Webster's place, pushing the lawn mower ahead of him, he found the grass all nicely cut, and a short, red-headed boy raking it up.

"Here, Sam Casey!" cried Tom. "What are you doing on my lawn?"

"It isn't your lawn any more. It's my lawn."

"What do you mean?" asked Tom.

"I mean that I'm going to cut it once a week all summer, for fifty cents a time."

"Who told you so?"

"Mr. Webster did—the man who lives here. He said he was tired of having it half done or not done at all, and so I'm going to do it."

There was nothing more to be said. Tom went slowly home and put away his lawn mower. The chance to earn some money during the summer was gone, but he had learned a lesson that in the end was worth a good deal more money; and the next summer, when he got other lawns to mow, he did his work well and faithfully.—Youth's Companion.

A YOUNG DOCTOR'S TEMPTATION

For three months prior to, and for two months following the advent of prohibition, Dr. Walter Barnes had been awaiting the coming of his first patient. The doctor's financial affairs were now fast coming to a crisis. He was two weeks in arrears on his office and room rent, and likewise his board bill. The doctor was now at his wit's end. He was alone in the world; he had no near relatives to whom he could appeal for temporary help. This day in early September he was seated in his office brooding over the serious condition that he was in, when he was aroused from his reverie by a knock at the inner door of his office. Answering the summons, he found his landlord, Mr. Thomas Carter, without.

"There will come this afternoon a patient to see you," was the rather astonishing declaration of Mr. Carter upon entering and taking a seat beside the doctor's table. "In fact, if you treat him right—prescribe the required medicine, your luck will take a decided turn for the better."

"It will be a most welcome change, Mr. Carter, I assure you," replied the doctor. "The fact is that I have worried a great deal of late over money matters. I don't like being in arrears."

"This patient who is coming needs a little tonic, Doctor," chuckled Mr. Carter. "You understand what I mean. Ha-ha! He has a large acquaintance here in town. Before you know it business will be booming with you."

"You mean for me to prescribe liquor?" questioned the doctor, looking straight into the man's eyes.

"Exactly."

"I don't believe I care for that kind of a practice, Mr. Carter," replied the doctor. "Perhaps you had better see him and so save him the trouble of coming."

"Just as you say, Doctor," snorted Mr. Carter, springing to his feet. "I will trouble you to find other quarters within twenty-four hours, and also settlement in full to date. That is all I have to say."

The doctor's affairs were certainly now at an acute stage. For an hour or more after the departure of his landlord he paced the floor. Twenty dollars was due Mr. Carter, and the doctor's assets in ready cash were not far from twenty cents. The time came that he bethought himself of a rather eccentric old farmer whom he had met a month previous while taking a stroll through the country. He recalled the farmer's sizing up of his fellow townsmen. "You'll find folks 'bout here pretty hard-shelled, Doctor. You've got a hard row ahead of you. Once you get a footing, you'll be all right, but pending that time you'll nigh starve to death. If things get too rough with you, Doctor, slip over and see me. You're a pretty husky chap, and I've a notion you wouldn't be above duffing in and doing hard work on a farm in case things come to a pinch."

An hour later the doctor located the above mentioned farmer out in the latter's barn, and here told him the facts leading up to the serious situation in which he found himself.

"Take my horse and go back after your dunnage, Doctor," urged Mr. Nathan Cowdrey. "Here is a month's pay in advance. Settle up with Mr. Carter and come back here a free man. I admire your pluck, Doctor. My home is your home until things break right with you."

There were those about the village who grinned when they saw the doctor driving the heavy farm wagon. There were those who remarked that the doctor had come out of the little end of the horn just as they had predicted. But there were also those who said that they admired the doctor's spunk, and while not knowing the real facts leading up to that rather inglorious exodus from the village. The most surprised man of all was the doctor's landlord, for well knowing the doctor's financial predicament, he had figured upon levying upon the doctor's personal effects.

For six months Dr. Barnes worked for Mr. Cowdrey, and the latter declared that he was the best man he had ever employed, too. Meanwhile the doctor spent his evenings in study. If he could not go ahead, he was bound that he would not go backward. The middle of March he rented a new office down at the village not far from where he had first hung out his shingle. He had saved up about two hundred dollars, and with this to fall back upon he hoped to pull through.

The week that the doctor opened his new office the annual town meeting was held. It so happened that Mr. Thomas Carter was running for the office of selectman, and it was generally believed that he would be elected. It was Mr. Nathan Cowdrey, however, who upset Mr. Carter's "kettle of fish." Mr. Cowdrey's remarks at the town meeting were brief, but very pointed. He told of the temptation which Mr. Carter had placed before the young doctor, and be it said that although Mr. Carter was present, he did not deny the charge. Suffice it to state that Mr. Carter went down to defeat.

The following day arrived Dr. Barnes' first patient, and ere the week was out a half-dozen more or less urgent calls had demanded the doctor's attention. The tide had turned.

THE HISTORIC SYCAMORE

Helen could hardly wait for the time to come when Uncle Jim would take her to the Chamber of Commerce exhibit in Los Angeles. If she had simply come on a visit to California, they would probably have gone at once, but Helen had come there to live, and began going to school at once, so it was necessary to go some Saturday.

"And school isn't a bit more fun in California than it was in Rhode Island," she confided to her uncle, when at last they were on their way. "I could do very nicely if it wasn't for history, but I just can't remember dates of things that happened so many hundred years ago."

Uncle Jim laughed. "The Chamber of Commerce is just the place to go, then."

"For history?" asked Helen. "I thought one went there to see things, like mammoth pumpkins and big fruit of all kinds."

"Wait and see," laughed Uncle Jim.

Helen forgot all about what Uncle Jim had said before she had been in the building five minutes. She saw so many wonderful things that her eyes fairly ached with looking at them. There was a pumpkin that weighed 365 pounds, and there were oranges and grapefruit in glass jars that were so immense Helen thought they could not be real.

They wandered about, looking first at one interesting thing and then another, and they both signed their names in the register where all people who visit the exhibit are supposed to write their names. A notice above told that it was the largest book in the world, and Helen could well believe it. At last they came to a corner where there were different kinds of wood. There was a single slab highly polished, that was more than eight feet long and three feet wide. The card on it said it was a slab of sugar pine.

The next thing was the cross section of the trunk of a tree. It was fully four feet across. Its outer edge was very irregular and its surface was covered with rings that followed the line of the outer edge.

"Read what the card on it says," directed Uncle Jim.

"Oh, my!" gasped Helen, as she read the information that the tree had four hundred and sixty rings. It was a section of a sycamore tree that had been cut down a few years before, to make way for a large building. It stated that according to the rings the tree must be 460 years old.

Helen stood perfectly still and looked at it, unable to take her eyes away.

"You see, the tree must have been over 300 years old when the Revolutionary War began," observed Uncle Jim. "It has been growing since 1450."

"Just think of it!" Helen cried. "And, oh, Uncle Jim, was it here when Columbus discovered America? I can't remember when that was."

"When Columbus discovered America," Uncle Jim replied, "this tree was 42 years old."

"Forty-two and 1450 makes 1492," Helen began. "I'll never forget again when it was that Columbus discovered America. How nice! When I want to remember any date in history, I'll just stop and think how old this sycamore tree 'way out here in Los Angeles was then."

Helen talked of the wonderful tree all the way home. The first book she picked up when she came into the house was the history that had been such a stupid book before. When it came time for tea, she was still reading it.

"That tree was 216 years old at the time of the great fire of London," she announced as she sat down at the table, "and when gold was discovered in California it was 397 years old."

"See where somebody gets high marks in history," laughed Uncle Jim. "I thought you didn't like history."

"I like living history," Helen answered. "This is almost as good as having been there yourself and seen the things happen."

Every day after that Helen had some new piece of information. Her uncle said that she must have started to read clear through the encyclopedia.

"The first Bible was printed at Mentz before that sycamore tree was a year old," she announced one day. A few days later she said, "Elias Howe completed the sewing machine when my tree was 395 years old."

"Your tree," laughed Uncle Jim. "Helen, if you keep on, you will begin to think that you planted that tree yourself 460 years ago!"

"Well," answered Helen, "I feel sometimes as if I would like to plant a sycamore tree now, so that my great-great-grand—oh, ever so many great—grandchildren could have it to study history by!"—Annie Barry, in The Churchman.

FERDIE'S FLEXIBLE FLYER

Ferdie Piper whirled his home-made worsted cap, and yelled with all his might. Down plunged the six-foot double ripper with its load of excited boys and shot past him.

"Go it—go it! That's a good 'un! The best yet!"

The boy brushed the gathering flakes of snow from his cheek, pulled on his cap, and thrust his mittenless fingers into his pockets. His little pinched face glowed with excitement as one sled after another followed in rapid succession down the worn path.

"Heh—her—yuh can't catch him. Keep the road there! Don't yuh know how to steer! Come on, Country—what'll yuh take fer yer old jitney? Here she comes—here she comes!" as the big sled again appeared.

Heedless of the snow, off came the cap again, Ferdie shouted hoarsely. A sudden gust of wind caught the cap from his hand, and carried it across the path of the coasters. With a cry Ferdie grabbed the ropes of his sled. Another coaster was coming but it was still some distance up the hill. Limping across the path as fast as his ankle brace would allow, he tried to pull his sled clear of the oncoming coaster. A runner caught. There was a yell from the ripper—a crash and sticks of split lumber flew in all directions. The boys tumbled off on the other side of the path. A chorus of protests followed.

"Do you know what you're doing? Get that old sled out o' the way. What you trying to do, anyway?"

A shrill cry from Ferdie silenced them.

"My Flex'ble Flyer! Yuh smashed it, yuh did! Yuh smashed my Flex'ble Flyer!"

"Oh, yuh call that a Flex'ble Flyer! Nothin' but a board nailed to an old pair o' runners. Oh, boy!" with a laugh of derision.

"Shut up, Bobb. It's the lame boy," said Brick; then raising his voice, "I say, we'll fix it for you. We can make it better'n 'twas before."

But Ferdie was inconsolable, and gathering up what was left of his precious Flyer, he limped slowly towards his home.

"Gee—that was tough," said Jim. "Why doesn't his mother buy him a decent sled."

"Can't. She's awful poor—goes out washing."

"It doesn't cost much—a little sled like that. Flexible Flyer! That's great!" Bob's eyes followed the little lame figure now almost home. His face grew serious. "See here, fellows, I got a plan!"

The boys gathered around Bob, their heads close together over something quite mysterious. Their faces grew eager. Pockets were turned out, and contents examined. The result was far from satisfactory.

"Pshaw!" said Brick gloomily. Suddenly his face brightened. "Hurrah, boys, I got it! See that snow! Get yer shovels and we'll do it!"

More calculation followed.

"And we'll tie it on the doorknob after dark," suggested Brick.

"Hurrah for Brick," shouted Jim. "Yuh didn't get that red top fer nothing."

The snow was over and Christmas day dawned bright and promising. The light layer of snow had only made the coasting better than before. All four of the boys were on the hill unusually early—so early one wondered if breakfast had been forgotten. Time after time they coasted, hurrying up the hill with unusual speed, fearing to miss a glimpse of the little figure they felt sure would soon appear from the gray cottage.

"Here he comes! No, it isn't. Yes, it's limping; it's he!"

The boys waited excitedly at the top of the hill, watching the little lame lad who tried so hard to hurry.

"Hi, there; wait—wait!" he called. See what I've got! It's a real one—a real Flex'ble Flyer and—painted red!" he added breathlessly.

The boys gathered around and admired it to Ferdie's content.

"It's fine," said Bobb. "Where'd yuh get it?"

"Santa Claus brought it—last night. Hung it on the doorknob. Just wait till you try it! I tell you, that's some Flyer," he cried excitedly.

"Say, Bob," said Brick in an undertone, "I like Christmas, don't you?"—Selected.

SABBATH OPPORTUNITIES

Some one estimates that if a person has twelve years of school life, including high school, he will have 2,400 days of life in school, giving him much of opportunity. But if he lives to be seventy years of age, he will have had 3,640 Sabbaths, giving him a great opportunity for hearing and studying and learning the things best calculated to make him wise. Any one who goes through life properly utilizing the Sabbaths has the privilege and opportunity of being cultured with the highest learning and the finest culture possible to human life.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By Elizabeth Hanner

President C. E. Society, High Point College

SEPT. 1: BEING LOYAL TO OUR WORK

Matt. 16:21-25; Neh. 6:1-3

(Consecration Meeting)

Bible Readings

Monday—Loyal workers. Exod. 35:5, 30-35.

Tuesday—Loyal stewards. Matt. 25:14-30.

Wednesday—Work with your might. Ecc. 9:10.

Thursday—Supreme loyalty. Acts 20:17-24.

Friday—Loyal unto sacrifice. I Cor. 9:11-15.

Saturday—God's promise. Rev. 2:10.

To the Leader

Try to work up a spirit of loyalty among the members so that your society may be doers as well as hearers. It will be easy to talk of loyalty during the meeting but see if you can really accomplish something definite. Stress loyalty to the pledge by reminding the members of their promise to take part in the meetings. It might be well to have the pledge read sometime during the meeting. Make an appeal for loyalty to work as well as loyalty to the football team. Also stress dependability in its relation to loyalty.

By choosing the right hymns you will be aided in maintaining a spirit which will be fitting. Use some of these: "Loyalty to Christ," "True-Hearted, Whole-Hearted," "A Charge to Keep I Have," "To the Work," "If Your Life Rings True," and "Yield Not to Temptation."

If you think it wise to have a debate, try this query: Resolved, That one should not hold a position if he can not be loyal to its responsibilities.

The Leader's Talk

Every day we either speak, think or act in terms of loyalties. There is no escaping this principle—we are either loyal or we are disloyal. Our topic deals with loyalty to work, not in a narrow sense but in the broad meaning of our whole selves. Myers has said that loyalty is more necessary to success than brilliancy. Loyalty and dependability are closely connected. If a person is loyal you may depend on him—if he is disloyal you had better do the task yourself if you expect it to be done.

This spirit of loyalty is a great thing. It has won many victories in various fields of activity. It is just as important, if not more so, that we are loyal in work just as we are in play. The man who reaches the top is the man who has been loyal, who has done more than he had to do, and who worked as well when the boss was away as when he was present. We can't fool folks—sooner or later our true character will be revealed.

Our loyalty must include the little things. It is "he that is faithful in the least" who is made ruler over many things. We are clearly shown by Jesus that the loyal workman will be rewarded. If our Christian Endeavor Society is to succeed each member will have to be loyal, each committee member and each officer. No matter how small the job, it is a cog in the wheel. Do the little things well and soon you will have big things to do.

Be sure that the loyalty you possess is promoted by the right motive. If it is merely instinctive you deserve no credit. It is when you have thoroughly studied the cause and are willing to give yourself wholeheartedly that loyalty comes to mean something. Are we loyal?

Topics

Have a three-minute talk on each of these:

Loyalty to:
Christ and the Church.
Home.
Native Land.
Work.
Yourself.

To Be Answered

1. What is loyalty?
2. How does loyalty to Christ make the Christian life different?
3. How may the spirit of loyalty generally be brought about?
4. When are you disloyal to your work?
5. What loyalty comes first in life? Why?

Lines on Loyalty

He who is loyal to himself venerates loyalty in every way, shape and form; venerates it in a foe and much more in him who never was a foe.—Lavater.

Service gets poor and cold even in the warmest and bravest heart if there be no glow of loyalty to animate it.—Anon.

Any man can fight a battle when he's sure of winning; but give me the man who has pluck to fight when he is sure of losing.—Eliot.

Let me find it in my heart to say when vagrant wishes beckon me astray: "This is my work, my blessing, not my doom; of all who live I am the one by whom this work can best be done in the right way.—Van Dyke.

Poetry to the Point

Just for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat;
Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,
Lost all the others she let us devote;
They, with the gold to give, doled him out silver,
So much was theirs who so little allowed.
—From "Lost Leader," Robt. Browning.

YOUR TASK

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,
I said, "You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out, but He seemed to get along,
But I felt kind o' sneak-in'-like, 'cause I know'd I done Him wrong.
One day I needed the Lord, needed Him myself—needed Him right away—
And he never answered me at all, but I could hear Him say,
Down in my accusin' heart: "Nigger, I've got too much to do;
You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."
Now when the Lord He have a job for me, I never tries to shirk;
I drops what I have on hand and does the good Lord's work,
And my affairs can run along or wait till I get through;
Nobody else can do the job that God's marked out for you.

—Paul Lawrence Dunbar.

DON'T WORRY IF YOUR COMPETITORS SMOKE

One of the professors in Harvard University, George F. Swain, gives this advice to his students in Civil Engineering:

"Let your competitors smoke!"

The most outstanding men in nearly every profession and line of business have done that—William Shakespeare, the greatest writer perhaps of all time; William Cullen Bryant, one of the most renowned poets; Horace Greeley, the famous editor; ex-President Roosevelt, one of the most influential and versatile men the world has ever produced; Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder of the worldwide Christian Endeavor movement, a writer, lecturer and organizer of exceptional ability; Luther Burbank, the plant wizard of Santa Rosa, Calif.; Andrew Carnegie, the first great steel manufacturer; Judge Ben Lindsey, the most successful juvenile court judge in the United States; H. J. Heinz, the great pickle producer; John Wanamaker, the greatest department store man of modern times; Eugene Grace, the present manager of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, receiving the largest salary of any man in the world, according to B. C. Forbes, the financial writer; Houdini, the "self-liberator" who has extricated himself from all sorts of seemingly impossible positions; Jack Dempsey, champion boxer; and so we might go on, until the list would seem tiresomely long.

It may be set down as a rule that the most outstanding men in almost any line are the ones who "let their competitors smoke," while they attend to business. Even Benjamin N. Duke, the famous tobacco man himself, has never used tobacco—he, too, lets his competitors smoke!

The list would be lacking did we not mention Henry Ford. Not only does he not smoke, but permits no smoking in any of his great plants. He lets his competitors and their employees smoke, while he and his attend to business and make money so fast that the others look on in amazement.—Will H. Brown.

JESUS CHRIST IN YOUR SOUL

You are certain to be assailed with troubles. No hurricane can strike a full-rigged ship more suddenly than storms of adversity may burst upon you. But if Jesus Christ is in your soul, you can not suffer wreck. The anchor sure and steadfast will hold you. People do not see what holds a vessel when the gale is sending the billows over her bows. The anchor is invisible, as it lies full many a fathom deep on the solid ground beneath the waves. So when we see a good man beaten upon with heavy adversities and yet preserving a cheerful spirit, we do not discover the secret of his serenity. "But the eye of God sees that there is an interior life hid with Christ in that soul which no storm can touch."

There is many a bereavement, many a trouble that may strip a man of canvas or cordage, but never touch the solid strength of his godly character. I have seen just such fast-anchored Christians.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

—Rev. C. W. Bates preached twice at Rock Creek church last Sunday and then came home and preached in Calvary church in the evening or night service. He returned to Rock Creek on Monday to preach for Bro. Burgess in a meeting of days.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

APPOINTMENTS AND EXPLANATION

(Published at the request of the Finance Committee.)

Soon after the Branch meeting in April the appointments, which consisted of a home and a foreign budget, were published in the "Herald." Since the new organization has been formed we no longer have a home and foreign budget, but a "North Carolina," and a "New Century Service," budget.

The N. C. budget includes all money for the Children's Home, Bethel Home, Student Loan Fund for High Point College, and a branch contingent fund. At the end of each month all undesignated money is distributed on a percentage basis, 55 per cent for Children's Home, 19 per cent for Bethel Home, 19 per cent for Student Loan Fund, and 7 per cent is retained for contingent. Unless there is some particular interest to which you want your money to go, it is hoped that you will send it in undesignated, for then all the interests will receive a share.

The New Century Service budget includes money for Pine Ridge, Pittsburgh Mission, Ohio work, Girls' Home in Baltimore, all foreign work, Christian education, Old People's Home, superannuate fund, and all other General Conference interests. This money is also distributed on a percentage basis by the executive treasurer.

The N. C. budget does not count on the local church budget but the New Century Service money does count on your General Conference budget. The thank-offerings in September and February are to be sent to the branch treasurer, and credit is to be taken for it on the General Conference budget.

The following are the apportionments for the auxiliaries since they have been worked over into an N. C. and a New Century Service budget:

(First amount after name of church is North Carolina budget, New Century Service budget second.)

Asheboro, $130, $345; Asheville, $50, $100; Bethesda (Hal.), $10, $20; Bethesda (N. Dav.), $15, $85; Bethany (Ran.), $10, $10; Bethel (Ala.), $35, $115; Bess Chapel, $25, $25; Burlington, $225, $475; Calvary, $75, $175; Center (Ala.), $5, $25; Charlotte, $35, $165; Chestnut Ridge, $10, $5; Community Church, $90, $185; Concord, $75, $125; Concord (Sax.), $5, $35; Creswell, $10, $5; Effand, $55, $45; Enfield, $55, $40; Fair Grove (Why Not), $10, $25; Flat Rock (Vance), $45, $5; Fountain Place, $15, $35; Friendship (Mt. Her.), $75, $40; Gibsonville, $75, $40; Gillburg (Vance), $20, $10; Glen Raven, $5, $10; Grace, $375, $625; Graham, $10, $65; Harmony (Yar.), $5, $30; Hebron (Or.), $30, $20; Henderson, $200, $450; Hickory Ridge (For.), $20, $40; High Point, $300, $725; Hollister (Hal.), $10, $65; Hope (Chat.), $5, $15; Lebanon, $75, $175; Liberty, $20, $20; Maple Springs (For.), $35, $45; Mebane, $130, $170; Midway (H. R.), $5, $15; Midway (Guil.), $5, $5; Moriah, $80, $140; Mt. Carmel (Gran.), $55, $65; Mt. Carmel

(For.), $25, $15; Mt. Hermon (Mt. H.), $10, $15; Mt. Pleasant (Mt. P.), $65, $140; Mt. Pleasant (N. Dav.), $5, $20; Mt. Lebanon (Randle.), $30, $20; Mt. Zion (Pin.), $25, $15; New Hope (Why Not), $10, $15; New Salem (Randle.), $5, $15; Orange Chapel, $10, $45; Pinnacle, $10, $20; Pleasant Hill (W. For.), $40, $80; Pleasant Union (Mt. Pleas.), $10, $40; Rehoboth (Gran.), $45, $80; Reidsville, $95, $160; Rock Creek (Ala.), $5, $15; Salem (Sax.), $5, $35; Sapling Ridge (Ala.), $5, $30; Shiloh (N. Dav.), $5, $65; Siler City, $20, $30; Spencer, $15, $10; Spring Valley (Vance), $35, $30; State Street, $5, $45; Tabernacle, $80, $130; Union Chapel (Gran.), $75, $115; Union Grove (Or.), $30, $60; West End, $75, $125; Whitakers, $5, $125; Winston-Salem, $225, $225; Weaverville, $35, $20; Welch Memorial, $35, $65; Worthville, $5, $20.

We have had a 20 per cent increase in our New Century Service branch budget and we are asked to organize new societies sufficient to pay this extra 20 per cent.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treas.

MT. LEBANON, RANDLEMAN

The Missionary Society of Mt. Lebanon church met August 11 in the church to elect new officers and to arrange for complying, as near as possible, with the new ruling of the board. Mrs. J. L. Hall was chosen president, Mrs. G. P. Snyder secretary, Miss Nora Hughes treasurer. A number of department secretaries were also appointed.

On August 18 Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheville, accompanied by Mrs. H. W. Walker, visited us in call meeting to help us find our way in the new organization.

Mrs. Pritchard told of the work of the society as carried on in the home church in a most interesting way, also gave a number of helpful suggestions.

Mrs. Walker favored us with a beautiful song which was much enjoyed. We deeply appreciate this kindness.

M. JULIAN, Cor. Sec.

NOTICE, AUXILIARIES

Concerning Thank-Offering Service

At the called branch meeting held in High Point in June the time of the thank-offering service was changed from the month of November to the month of September. Each auxiliary is urged to hold its thank-offering service this year in September, as was formerly held in November. Should there be a church that does not have an auxiliary the pastor or some leader is requested to see that this service is held.

The money received from this service should be sent to our branch treasurer, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, 126 Tate St., Greensboro, N. C. She will in turn forward it to the executive treasurer. This money can be counted on both the auxiliary budget and the General Conference budget of the local church.

Please do not confuse this with the Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home, a day's wages, which is held in November. This will be taken care of through the Sunday school of the local church.

The February thank-offering is to be held as formerly sometime in February.

The following pagant and leaflets may be used at the thank-offering service:

"The Thank-Offering Convention," 5c; "Thanksgiving Ann," 10c; "The Two Boxes," 5c; "Tilly's Thank-Offering Dollar," 2c; "Tithes and Offerings," 5c; "Missionary Arithmetic," 10c (for young people).

A song that is appropriate is "Mite Box Song," 3c.

This material can be had from Miss Pearl McCulloch, 1011 Martin Street, Greensboro, N. C.

We again urge that every auxiliary put forth effort and have a large thank-offering service in September.

MRS. D. S. COLTRANE,

Sec. of Thank-Offering,

MRS. J. M. MILLIKAN,

MISS PEARL McCULLOCH.

ATTENTION AUXILIARIES!

Since I was made secretary of scholarships and native workers at the recent election of branch officers, one of the questions that has come to me is the price of scholarships in the various countries. I am therefore giving a list with amounts needed for support.

India—Girls' School, $35; High School, $125; Teachers Training, Kindergarten Training, Sewing Training and Bible Training, $150; Bible Women, Native Teachers in Birdwood School, $180.

Japan—Girls' School, Yokohama, $75; Kindergarten Training School, Bible Training School, $75; Evangelistic Worker, $240; Teachers in Eiwa Jo Gakko from $240 to $900; Teacher in Primary School, $240; Kindergarten Teachers, $240.

China—Kalgan Girls' School, $50; Middle School, $85; Kalgan School Teachers, $150; Married Women's School Teacher, $120; Kindergarten Teacher, $120; Bible Women, $150.

It will be noticed by referring to the report of scholarships and native workers that in many instances the scholarship has not been fully subscribed. We would be glad to add new pledges to those already partially supported, and thus fill out the full amount where possible.

Will not each secretary take the matter up with her auxiliary at once and write me for pledge blanks which I can now furnish any one desiring them?

Let's have more scholarships to our credit this year than ever before.

MRS. H. G. PASCHAL.

1910 Buena Vista Road,
Winston-Salem, N. C.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY

The ladies of Lineberry M. P. Church have organized a Ladies' Aid Society with the following members: Mrs. Walter Lax, Mrs. W. A. Frank, Miss Kate Frank, Mrs. W. D. Reed, Mrs. Hornes Reid, Mrs. Whit Wood, Mrs. Van Wood, Mrs. T. W. Hall, Mrs. J. P. Elliott and Miss Nora Carroll.

The next meeting is to be with Mrs. W. A. Frank, September 7.

We hope to have a perfect attendance at our meetings each time. May each member do her part. May we all co-operate and live up to our motto.

We hope to have a large number in the near future.

MISS NORA CARROLL.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

Rev. B. M. Williams, $7.75; Rev. O. C. Loy, $1.50; Rev. C. E. Ridge, $1.50; Rev. N. Britton, $4.50; Rev. E. Suits, $1.50; Rev. M. C. Henderson, $13.50.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield Charge.—Our revival meeting at Whitakers Chapel came to a close on Friday evening following the 1st Sunday. Rev. A. D. Shelton was with us and did the preaching throughout the services. He preached the Gospel with power, and the people received the truth with open hearts. Each service grew in interest. Two young ladies gave themselves to Christ on the last night of the services. The church was greatly revived. The people enjoyed Bro. Shelton's preaching so much that they regretted to see the services come to a close. In reality they decided to have another week before conference providing Bro. Shelton could come back and conduct it. As a direct result of the revival services thirty-five came to prayer meeting last Tuesday night instead of eight or ten as heretofore. I sincerely trust that we may be able to keep this rekindled fire burning in our hearts. I feel it will do so if no one pours water on it, but rather added fuel to it from time to time.

The Children's Day services were held at the Enfield church the 2nd Sunday. The program was arranged by Mrs. Cecil Matthews, Mrs. Sam Pierson and Mrs. Eli Bellamy. The children did well and everyone seemed pleased with the services. The offering was $14.00.
J. CLYDE AUMAN, Pastor.

Bess Chapel.—Our special meeting was held last week. Rev. Robt. Short was the helper. We feel that we were greatly helped and the church in general revived; however it wasn't the best revival ever. There were 27 converted, and 17 new members taken in the church. Our pulpit help was paid $37.50 although we would like to have made the gift larger, but we were not able owing to the building of the new church.

Brother Henderson brought us a splendid sermon Sunday. Everyone seems to enjoy his sermons so much and he is a great worker among we people.

Orange Charge, Chestnut Ridge Church.—The revival meeting began here Sunday, August 18, and closed the following Friday.

Rev. J. D. Morris did all the preaching except one sermon by the writer. The sermons by Bro. Morris were plain, forceful and practical. The church was revived, one reclaimed, three converted, and one addition to the church.

Over $600.00 has been received in cash and pledges to paint and cover Chestnut Ridge church. Hope to have the work completed soon.

We were glad to have Revs. T. A. and D. R. Williams, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield and Bro. T. O. Pender assist in the revival services at Chestnut Ridge.

Sincerely,
B. M. WILLIAMS.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—August 18th at 11 o'clock the first sermon in the revival meeting was preached by the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, on the subject "A Great Revelation." The congregation was unusually large and attractive. Eight members were received into the church by letter. In the afternoon Dr. P. E. Lindley delivered a most excellent address on "Building a Better Church."

The six Sunday school rooms were dedicated by the pastor.

The piano was presented by the president of the C. E. and was received by Mr. J. P. Loy, secretary of the board of trustees. The C. E. Society sponsored the movement getting the piano. A committee from that organization collected the money and purchased the piano.

Two of the Sunday school rooms open into the church and increase the seating capacity very much.

Monday afternoon Dr. Fred W. Paschall, of Asheville, came to us and preached twice daily until the meeting closed Friday evening. His sermons were very good; in fact, it has never been our privilege to hear better. The church was revived, a number of backsliders were reclaimed, about 24 souls were born into the kingdom, all young people. Twenty-four joined the church.

Sunday morning, August 25, classes used all six of the Sunday school rooms for the first time. All were very happy. Ours is a progressive school and now that we have more room we hope better work will be done.

We are proud of the C. E. Society. While it is composed of young people the older people are becoming more interested and attend the meetings.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary meets monthly. This organization is yet young, but interested. Perhaps more will be heard from it later.

REPORTER.

Chase City Charge.—We were at Friendship church with Rev. R. S. Troxler doing the preaching. He did it well and we had a good meeting. We had six accessions. The church seemed to be in good working condition and fine spirit prevailed in the meeting from the start until the end.
J. B. O'BRIANT.

Vance Charge.—Our meetings on Vance charge were held as follows:

We began at Spring Valley the fourth Sunday in June. Rev. M. P. Chambliss was our pulpit help. He did good preaching and fine work, and we had a good meeting. Had 7 accessions. First Sunday in July we held a union meeting at New Hope. Our church, the M. E. Church and the Presbyterian Church held this meeting together and Rev. R. L. Hetheox did the preaching. There was a fine spirit prevalent in the meeting. Bro. Hetheox did fine preaching. We had two accessions in our church. The second Sunday in July we were at Harris Chapel, Dabney, N. C. Rev. A. D. Shelton was our pulpit help here. He did good preaching and we had a good meeting. We had six accessions and two or three more are to join.

Third Sunday in July we were at Flat Rock and Bro. Shelton again was our help. He preached in his usual way, hewing to the line with gospel truths.

We had no accessions here but the church seemed to enjoy the meeting, and we believe the church was greatly helped. This concludes four of our meetings on Vance charge, with one more to be held.

The revival meetings are great times for the church if rightly used or entered into. We often hunger and long for the old time revivals such as we used to see in our younger days.
J. B. O'BRIANT.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Harmony Grove were well attended last Sunday morning. The congregation was very attentive to the message of the pastor. Another improvement at this church was noted. The inside of the church was recently painted. The church was painted on the outside last spring and the recent improvement adds much to the appearance of the church on the inside. Mrs. Lillie Vogler, a faithful member of Harmony Grove, was reported sick last Sunday. The pastor and family were invited to two different homes for dinner but could not accept either, as we had already promised to go to Lexington and participate in a community birthday dinner which is an annual affair, sponsored by members of South Lexington church and others. We enjoyed the dinner with the Lexington people.

It was the privilege of the writer to be with the South Lexington church for the evening service last Sunday. We anticipated hearing their youthful pastor preach, but he prevailed upon the writer to deliver the message. It was a pleasure to be with those good people again, as we cherish the memories of our first pastoral work among them five years ago.

Last week was spent with Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of the Randolph charge, in a meeting at Bethel church, near Julian. We thoroughly enjoyed the work and association with the people of Bethel church and learned to love them during the brief stay with them. During the meeting it was the rare privilege of the writer to visit his old home community near Franklinville where our boyhood days were spent roaming the hills and valleys along the banks of Sandy Creek. The scenes of those boyhood days refreshed the sweet memories of those bygone days.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. We are expecting to raise money for the Annual Conference budget at both churches.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mt. Hermon Church.—August 18 was the greatest day in the history of Mt. Hermon church, so says Dr. P. E. Lindley, who delivered the principal address of the day.

The entire day was full of good things. The C. E. Society had just bought a new piano. A large choir furnished part of the music. Two quartets and one solo assisted.

The morning program consisted of songs by the choir, two selections by the White House quartet, a solo by Miss Elva Ausley, of Graham, and a sermon by Pastor Carroll. Miss Vista Garrett assisted in the music with her violin.

The afternoon program was made up of more singing by the choir, two selections by the Saxapahaw quartet, collection, address by Dr. Lindley, and dedication of the Sunday school rooms. The C. E. Society presented the piano to the church. The six rooms have been furnished and the entire structure painted on the outside.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—On July 19th an ice cream supper was given in the church grove. The proceeds went to buy new song books for the church.

Our pastor has been very busy in revival work for the last few weeks. Next Sunday, September 1, our revival meeting will begin at this church. Rev. N. M. Harrison, a former pastor, will conduct the revival. We desire the prayers of all of God's people that we may have one of the greatest revivals in the history of Corinth church.

The third quarterly meeting was held in Littleton church on the second Saturday in August. Mr. Duncan, of Vaughan church, is our delegate to Annual Conference.

Mrs. Hettie Carter, our pianist, was absent from Sunday school yesterday. She was called to Portsmouth, Va., by the illness of her brother.

Mr. John Morris, one of our oldest members, has been very sick for some time.

M. J. MORRIS.

Lincolnton Station C. E. Society.—Our society is moving along nicely in the great work. We have young people who enjoy the work. We had a wonderful lesson last Sunday, August 25. Many interesting talks on mission work in Japan, China, Philippines, India and Africa.

Japan has a small per cent of the population classed as Christians. But still there is a great work going on, for God says where two or three are gathered together in my name I will be in their midst.

The Chinese are gaining ground rapidly, for God watches over his children. They seem to be interested in God's will and working for Him.

The Philippines are loyal to Christ, which should inspire us to be more loyal and more interested in mission work, and give of our best to the Master.

Even darkest Africa has many radiant areas. No tongue can fully tell the changes wrought in communities along the Congo, and in many other parts of Africa.

I think this lesson should inspire every Christian to put more into missions.

REPORTER.

Harmony.—The work of the Sunday school and church is going along nicely. We realize, however, that there is yet much to be done before the close of the conference year.

The revival meeting began at Harmony August 18 and closed August 23. Rev. Mr. Davis, of North Carolina, assisted our pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, in the meeting. Their sermons were well received. The services were not as largely attended as services usually are. We had two young ladies to join our church during the meeting. Every member welcomes the two young ladies into the church. We were very sorry that Mrs. Broome could not be with us during the meeting but were glad to have her with us Sunday.

During Rev. Mr. Davis' stay in the community he visited many homes and made friends wherever he went. We hope to have him visit us again.

The regular 11 o'clock service was held the fourth Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. Broome delivered a very effective sermon.

Our evening service was called off Sunday on account of the revival beginning at Yarbrough's Chapel.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society met Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A very interesting program on "Home Runs for Missions" was rendered. The society had three new members added to the roll. We welcome the new members into the society. As Autumn is approaching and the conference year is coming to an end, let's each one get busy in our work so that a worthy reckoning may be made at the annual conference.

Our church was glad to have Miss Mildred Crawford, a former member of the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor, with us on Sunday.

We were very sorry indeed that Rev. N. M. Harrison could not be with us during our meeting.

The church is sorry to report at this time that one of our loyal members, Mrs. A. K. Hughes, has recently undergone a serious operation at a local hospital in Greenville. We wish for Mrs. Hughes a speedy recovery and hope that she will soon be able to attend church.

Lexington, State Street.—Bro. Bethea is at home this week; returned last Saturday from Mt. Pleasant where he had conducted a very successful meeting for Bro. Millaway.

We had our regular Sunday morning service but no evening service, this being called off so that we might hear Judge Johnson J. Hayes, who gave an address at the First Baptist Church on "Prohibition as an Essential to Righteousness."

The Missionary Society met at the church last Friday afternoon. A very interesting program was given and matters of business discussed.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cox and the children, Fred Jr., and Ella Stuart, back with us after a visit of a few weeks with relatives and friends in Randolph County.

Miss Treva Wakefield, of Guilford College, who spent last week visiting in the home of her uncle, Mr. J. W. Lindsay, was with us in the morning services. We are all very glad that Mr. Lindsay has sufficiently recovered his strength to attend the church services and to be at his place of business part of the time.

There will be a lawn party on the church grounds Thursday evening of this week sponsored by Mrs. H. C. Rodgers and her class of Intermediate girls. Ice cream and cake will be sold.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethea are going to Henderson next Monday for a week's stay, during which time Mr. Bethea will preach in a series of special revival services in Bro. Raleigh Hunter's church here.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—The work is moving along nicely. Bro. Isley filled his regular appointment at our church Sunday morning. Bro. C. B. Way, our former pastor, filled Bro. Isley's appointment at this place Sunday night. We are very glad to have Bro. Way worship with us. Bro. Way always brings us joy in his visits.

Mrs. C. L. Koontz helped to organize the little folk of our congregation Sunday morning in a union or society, "Sunshine Circle." We feel this will mean much to our children who will be the men and women of our church tomorrow. We are very grateful to Mrs. Koontz and her church for the kindnesses rendered us. The Ladies' Aid Society is giving a supper Saturday night at the church. The ladies are doing great things for our church and we are very grateful to them. May we all give them our heartiest co-operation and help them to carry on the good work for our Master.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hedrick delightfully entertained the Ladies' Aid Society and also the Men's Bible Class, of which Mr. Hedrick is teacher, with a watermelon feast last Thursday night. All enjoyed the occasion very much and are very grateful to them for the hospitality shown them. May God help us to do much for Him and His kingdom. Pray for us.

REPORTER.

Draper.—The Christian Endeavor Society is still growing and many are present. Rev. W. T. Totten, our pastor, is preaching good sermons for us. We are to go on a picnic Saturday; expecting to have a fine time.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—Our annual revival services started yesterday. Rev. E. A. Bingham, of Denton, is doing the preaching. His subject at the 11 o'clock service was "Jesus' Prayer for the Christians," and in the afternoon "Prayer for the Sinners." Both sermons were splendid and seemed to contain just the message we needed. We are looking forward to a good meeting this week.

The Junior C. E. Society gave an out-of-date Christmas tree last night. All the juniors brought small gifts—Pencils, tablets and handkerchiefs. These are to be sent to the Children's Home this week. Each junior received a small gift which was a stick of candy in an attractive wrapper. The program included Christmas stories, recitations and the singing of Christmas songs.

We recently held a Sunday school teachers' and officers' meeting for the purpose of making plans for more efficient Sunday school work.

Our annual Sunday school picnic was held at Guilford Battleground on the second Thursday in August. The rain in the early morning kept a good many from going. But those who were able to attend had a good time and a good dinner.

Mr. E. P. Sharpe will represent our church at the Annual Conference this fall.

MRS. J. S. WOOD, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in August with Rev. J. D. Morris as pulpit help. Mr. Morris came Sunday morning and did all the preaching except one sermon by our pastor, and Mr. Williams was at his best.

The sermons preached by Rev. J. D. Morris were helpful and inspiring. He preached plainly and that is just what was needed. We feel that much good was done, and the church greatly revived; four professions, one joined the church, more to join later.

The people learned to like Mr. Morris and enjoyed his stay among us. He has a warm welcome in our hearts and we wish for him to come again. He delivered some wonderful messages.

We were glad to have with us in this meeting Rev. T. A. Williams, D. R. Williams and M. I. Crutchfield. We thank Miss Bert Crutchfield and Mr. T. O. Pender for helping with the music. At the close of the meeting a purse of $36.50 was presented to Mr. J. D. Morris. We were glad to have Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the conference, with us Sunday, August 25. His sermon was well received.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Robertson

Mrs. Elizabeth Robertson, wife of the late Will Robertson, died August 3, 1929, being 73 years 3 months and 21 days old. She has lived her entire life in the Mt. Hermon community and was a member of Mt. Hermon church from her youth to death.

Funeral services were conducted from Mt. Hermon church, August 4, at 4:00 o'clock and interment followed in the local cemetery. The pallbearers were her grandsons and most of the flower bearers were her granddaughters. The people that passed to review the remains would have nearly reached the thousand mark.

Mrs. Robertson is survived by the following children: Dolph and Jack Robertson, Graham; Mrs. Daisy Torrell, Graham; Mrs. Cordia Cox, Mrs. Alice Wood, and Charlie Robertson of the Mt. Hermon section. She is also survived by twenty-nine grandchildren.

Bunton

One by one our Burlington members are answering the roll call. The last one to go was Mrs. Elizabeth Bunton. She was called home August 21, 1929. She had been a member of First Church since 1917 when she was transferred from Siler City during the pastorate of Rev. J. E. Pritchard in Burlington. She was a consistent church member, though she had not been able to attend the services for the past four years because of bodily afflictions. She has been a professed Christian since she was a young girl, having first united with the Lutheran Church with her parents, later transferring to the Belmont Methodist Protestant Church, and then from there to the Siler City Methodist Protestant Church and then back to the First Church in Burlington.

She kept her faith down to the end. Not many days before she passed to her reward she assured her loved ones that she was ready to go, and she gave her pastor the same assurance. Because of this fact the children sorrow not without hope. They have the hope that all Christian people have of meeting their loved ones over in the better land by and by.

Sister Bunton leaves six daughters, Mesdames H. G. Harris of Siler City, W. I. Isley of Greensboro, C. W. Petty, W. H. Buckner, C. C. Durham, and Miss Rachel Bunton of Burlington, one son, W. H. Bunton of Burlington, and 36 grandchildren and 26 great grandchildren. These all have our prayers and sympathy in the loss of her whom they loved.

The funeral service was conducted in the Belmont church Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. The service was in charge of her pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn. Special music was furnished by a quartet and duet and other members of the First Church choir. The large congregation and the many beautiful floral designs testified to the high esteem in which sister Bunton was held. May the children all so live that by and by the family circle will be unbroken in heaven.

Miss Mamie Johnston

It became my sad privilege to assist in the funeral services of this good woman. I first knew her at the Burlington conference which she attended and was made delegate. I was sent to Tar River Circuit from that conference and from then until her death I treasured her among my best friends. Miss Mamie, as she was most familiarly called, was a wonderful woman. She had a tremendous amount of energy, wonderful tact, and loved the church; she just loved to do church work and was a very interesting speaker. Some one remarked to me last week that she could preach a much better sermon than many preachers often preach.

There was no phase of church work she was not interested in. She had served as steward, superintendent of the Sunday school, delegate to the Annual Conference, class leader, member of the Board of Trustees, member of the Advisory Committee, teacher in the Sunday school. In fact, every position of responsibility that is filled by a lay member of the church was filled by her except that she was never elected a delegate to the General Conference. I expect she did more church work and did it better than any two members in most of our churches. She may have done too much, i. e., she may have carried too heavy a burden of responsibility and performed tasks that others should have performed. But be that as it may, she was always faithful, ever cheerful, and never hesitated to do a thing because it was hard or because it was an obscure task which might never be known by the public. I realize her worth more than many who were closer to her because I have seen it in comparison and in contrast with so many others who rank as leaders in their local church and in their general church, but who did not approach the services she rendered the church.

In her death I have lost a personal friend, the general church a staunch friend and lover and the local church one who never knew a limit to the sacrifice she made when the church needed what she could give and do. May the good Lord comfort those loved ones who mourn her departure and may He speedily raise up one or some who shall take her place in the work of the community and of the kingdom.

R. M. ANDREWS.

Swing

Mary Ann Swing, daughter of John and Mary McPherson, peacefully departed this life July 31, 1929, age 74 years, 5 months and 18 days.

She was twice married. Her first husband was Henry N. Coble who departed this life in 1878. To this union were born four children, two of whom still survive, John Edgar of Jacksonville, Fla., and Rev. Thomas S. Coble of Durham, N. C. In 1880 she was married to William H. Swing. To this union were born two children, Lolah, wife of W. C. Carter of Mebane, N. C., and G. Talmadge Swing, who remained at home with her until the end.

Among those most keenly bereaved are her husband W. H. Swing, her sister Mrs. Sallie Patterson of Greensboro, N. C., 7 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

In early youth she made a profession of faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Rock Creek in Southern Alamance county. Sometime after moving to Guilford county in 1898 she transferred her membership to Friendship Episcopal Church, South, where she remained a member until her death.

She said of last Sunday: "This has been the happiest day of my life and I will never see another like it."

In her last affliction and suffering she seemed to fully realize the comforting grace and mercy of God in His forgiving love.

When we consider the poverty, hardship and struggle of our fathers and mothers in the period following the Civil war, we are astonished to think of the amount of work, toil, heartache, struggle and travail of soul in building the New South.

In the early years of her girlhood she learned from her mother the fine arts of cooking, carding, spinning, weaving and making ready-to-wear clothes of that period. She has left us some of the fine fabrics of her loom. Thus she was a woman of marvelous industry and toil.

In her devotion to her family she carried this on into her failing years of strength and thus in a part of her life "Martha" would have seemed an appropriate name. But triumphant through the year of toil, suffering and pain, Mary still leaned on the strength of Jesus' name. In the full strength of her years her home was a preacher's home and she enjoyed sharing hospitality with neighbors and friends.

Three words seem to be the most precious of all, "Mother," "Home" and "Heaven." Jesus only in His love can give full meaning to each. When they said, "Behold your Mother, Sister and Brother," He said, "Behold my Mother, my Sisters and my Brethren are they which hear the word of God and keep it."

So Jesus could give to all families and neighbors His love and presence and fulfill in our lives the full meaning of "Mother," "Home," and "Heaven."

The funeral service was held at Rock Church and was conducted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn, assisted by Rev. Albert Peel of Guilford College, and Rev. R. E. Brown of Durham.

—Mr. Phillips, Greensboro's new superintendent of schools, made an earnest and pleasing address in Calvary church last Sunday morning on "The Challenge of Youth." He believes there should be sympathy and co-operation between the churches and the schools and he hopes to help in bringing this about in Greensboro to an increased extent.

—Mr. Glenn Coble and Miss Irene McCulloch were recently married.

—Painful reports come from Jerusalem and vicinity. Strife with resulting bloodshed has arisen between Jews and Arabs. It seems to be at bottom a religious war. The Arabs are Mohammedans and lack a proper spirit of toleration toward those of other faiths. Among those killed by the Arabs are a number of Americans, and Jews in New York are up in protest. The English by the settlement at the close of the World War hold the mandate over Palestine, and they are expected to bring about an observance of the terms of that settlement.

MARRIED

Crew-Floyd

In Spring church at 1 o'clock p. m. Saturday, August 24, 1929, Mr. John J. Crew and Mrs. Mary Lucy Floyd were united in marriage by the writer. These people are natives of Northampton County but are from Rosemary now. The happy couple soon after the ceremony boarded a train for Norfolk, Va., to spend a few days. They will then be at home in Rosemary, N. C.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Wagoner-Coble

Miss Lelia Wagoner and Mr. Herman Coble were united in marriage at the Mebane Methodist Protestant Church Monday afternoon, August 26, 1929, at 5:30 o'clock. Rev. W. M. Loy, pastor of the church and an intimate friend of the groom, officiated.

Mrs. Coble is the attractive and talented daughter of Mr. W. G. Wagoner, of the Brown Summit section of the state, while Mr. Coble is the second son of Mr. Lewis Coble, Burlington, N. C., Route 7. Mr. Coble is a young man of very excellent qualities.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Coble are graduates of High Point College, and have been teaching in the public schools of this state for several years. They will teach in the schools of Draper and Leaksville-Spray the coming school term, making their home in the latter place.

They are two of our most promising young people of the M. P. Church and for them is hoped and predicted a happy and successful journey together.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few intimate friends of the contracting parties, as follows: Mr. F. R. Garrett, Julian, N. C.; Misses Louise Summers and Laura Thompson, Greensboro, N. C.; Mr. Hartsell and Miss Annie Livegood, Concord, N. C.; Mr. Ralph Vance and Miss Inez Reynolds, High Point, N. C.; Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, Burlington, N. C.; Miss Tora Rudd, Brown Summit, N. C.; Misses Alta Allen, Grace Barnette, Elizabeth Nicholson and Edna Nicholson, Mebane, N. C.

THE DIFFERENCE

The Pessimist lives at "Cypress Lodge,"
With gloom and ugly doubt;
A day or two depresses you,
Stay there and you'll find out.

The Optimist lives at "Sunnyside"
With smiling, radiant face;
Just visit there a week or two,
You'll find it a happy place.

—Grenville Kleiser.

—Bros. Tambllyn and Ashburn conducted the funeral of Mrs. Mary Green at her late home in this city on Tuesday afternoon. She was taken to Fair Grove church for burial. We expect an obituary notice later.

—Bro. C. F. Garrett, of Calvary church, is in St. Leo hospital for treatment. We hope his malady will yield to treatment and that his stay in the hospital will not be protracted. Let our people remember him in their praying.

A NEW BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing Pamphlets in four-page bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithe education without expense or special distribution. Twenty subjects to choose from. Send for free samples and price list.

Please give your denomination, also mention the Methodist Protestant Herald.

LEGS

Legs, legs, legs,
We deplore display of legs!
Legs in print and on the street,
Legs that drag with clumsy feet;
Legs as thin as tallest stork,
Legs that look like fattened pork;
Legs disgrace to human race,
Legs that shriek right in one's face;
Legs that wobble when they dance,
Legs at which one looks askance;
Legs as frail as robin's eggs,
Legs resembling piano legs;
Legs on sofas and on chairs,
Legs that do not look like pairs;
Legs too slim and legs too stout,
Legs quite handicapped with gout;
Legs that summon tears to eyes,
Legs of ugly shape and size;
Legs on taxis, trains and trams,
Legs that look like bloated haws;
Legs made up for obvious show,
Legs that wander to and fro;
Legs about to break in two,
Legs that really are taboo;
Legs too short and legs too long,
Legs misshapen, bowed, all wrong;
Legs puffed up with human pride,
Legs that frankly ought to hide;
Legs of doubtful kind or name,
Legs devoid of sense of shame;
Legs as loud as raucous words,
Legs that congregate in herds;
Legs in air or on the floor,
Legs have now become a bore;
But of all the legs that pall,
Bootlegs are the worst of all!

"THUMBERS"

No automobile driver or passenger today but is annoyed by the increasing number of young beggars who stand by the roadside and impudently hold up their thumbs at the passing cars, thus signifying their desire to be taken in and given a free ride. If I had not the street-car fare, I for one would walk my shoes off before I would make a roadside beggar of myself.

These youngsters do not consider that they may not form an acceptable addition to a family party, but the occupants of the car think of that. Moreover, the latter know perfectly well that a considerable number of men taken in thus—and even boys—have taken advantage of the courtesy and robbed the driver. The most determining factor of the situation, however, is the law making the owner of the car liable for any accident that may happen to a guest in his car. In a list of recent jury awards, for instance, are two, for $12,000 and $12,500 respectively, which the car owners had to pay to their guests. For these reasons motorists are paying less and less attention to "thumbers," and in some States the practice of bumming rides is forbidden by law.—C. E. World.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Bethel, Alamance, $6.25; Pleasant Hill S. S., Spring Church, $10.00; Friendship S. S., Haw River, $5.00; Cid S. S., Denton, $1.00; Siler City, Liberty-Siler City, $3.25; Bethesda, N. Davidson, $6.25; Center S. S., Alamance, $4.20; Charlotte, Richland, clothing child, $5.00; C. E. Society, Shiloh, N. Davidson, supporting child, $10.00; Shiloh S. S., N. Davidson, $14.05; Bess Chapel S. S., $6.92; First Church, High Point, $33.32; C. E. McCulloch, Wilmington, $10.00.

These are all good offerings, and we thank all who have given.

Special mention should be made of two items above which run right together. Each month the C. E. Society on North Davidson sends us $10.00 for the support of a child, and the Sunday school of that same church sends a good monthly offering.

Another offering deserves special mention. Last week we made an appeal for help to purchase fall shoes for the children. This morning we received a letter from Mr. C. E. McCulloch, Wilmington, N. C., saying: "I saw your appeal for money with which to buy shoes for the children. I am enclosing check for $10.00 for this purpose." How prompt, and how thoughtful. We thank him so much. If 24 others will do likewise our shoe problem will be solved.

Then, too, we will have to buy school books and tablets and pencils for about 77 children within a month. Pencils and school tablets sent in packages to the Home will be thoroughly appreciated. However, it is well to remember that we can buy all these at wholesale prices provided we have the money with which to pay.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The ladies of Lebanon church, High Point, 3 cards of biased tape, 11 dresses, 43 dress patterns of print goods, 5 pair socks. This was a fine donation from Lebanon.

The Children's Missionary Society, by Miss Marie Paris, Frankfort, Ind., 10 pencils.

The ladies of New Church, Va., one box of fruit and jelly; also 19 pencils.

Permit me to repeat: If you have in your homes good second-hand clothing which you wish to dispose of, please send it to us soon. It will help in getting our children ready for school. Also remember that we need table linen.

The Octagon coupons keep coming in. That is good. Please keep it up.

Harvest Home Week

Boxes and barrels of canned fruit, bags of wheat or other grains, chickens and anything used about any ordinary home will be of service here. Set your own time, but set a time, and collect goods for the Home. Load a truck and send to us, or drop us a card telling us where to call for your donation. We are asking the good ladies of our churches, especially our country churches, to work this for us.

Mrs. W. S. Kivett and Mr. W. F. Grabbs continue to give us apples. For more than a month now the Home has really had all the apples needed from these two orchards, and we have canned and dried and put up apple butter for winter use.

Today we are getting our strawberry patches ready for next spring.

Made Sad

Our big family was made sad when last week's Herald came, and we learned of the untimely death of Miss Mamie Johnston. Miss Mamie was a very warm friend to the Home. She always sent the monthly offering from Whitakers, and frequently she added her personal offering from the sale of eggs. She was a good woman and a great woman. She will be missed most in the local church in Whitakers, but she will be missed in this Home, and in the entire conference. It has never been my privilege to meet a more consecrated Christian or a more loyal Methodist Protestant. We cannot bring ourselves to think of Miss Mamie as gone from us. May God raise up some one to take her place in Whitakers and in the conference. Our tenderest sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

GREENSBORO, N. C., SEPTEMBER 12, 1929

NUMBER 44

The Same Old World

They sadly say the old world's gone,
A strange new world has taken its place;
But if you closely scan you'll see
The same old world with powdered face.

Don't be fooled! Cosmetic tricks
Cannot make new the vital part.
The world will be the same old world
Until it has a change of heart.

Not all the frills and furbelows
Nor all the paints and perfumes rare
Can make new world of this old world,
They only make the simple stare.

No change of style or outward show
Will ever make this world quite new:
The change must come from inner life
Inbreathed by God in me and you.

At Wrightsville Beach

"He that fights and runs away may live to fight another day." It is said that Napoleon could lie down on a battlefield in the midst of a battle and take a nap. Most of us require quiet and change of scene for rest and recreation. The editor is having a little respite from the daily grind on the little sandy isle of Wrightsville Beach, enjoying the hospitality of his youngest brother, C. E. McCulloch, and his wife, daughter Annie and son Calvin. (The older daughter, Sarah, has struck out on a business career in Washington, D. C., and is forging ahead satisfactorily). My brother is a master of trains for the Atlantic Coast Line and lives in Wilmington, but during the heated season lives in a bungalow on the Beach. He was kind enough to come to Greensboro after me, and so I ran away from home and am here.

Shall I tell you what I am seeing? The biggest thing beneath the sun and sky is the Atlantic Ocean. A man who saw the ocean for the first time pronounced it a decided success. His estimate has never been discounted. The ocean has its moods. It is sometimes angry and makes you tremble with fear. It is never quite at ease and never ceases to inspire respect. I would miss it greatly if I should come to Wrightsville and not find it. I notice as I come year after year that it is encroaching a little upon the land. The ocean built this island out of sand and shells, and it may decide to tear it down. But it will probably give its human people long notice. We say human people because there are many other inhabitants here. The beach swarms with living creatures. There is Mr. Sand Crab. What a lively citizen he is! To look at him you might think him down and out. But you get into an encounter with him and you will be astonished at his display of energy and resources. I do not know how many offensive weapons he carries, but his whole anatomy bristles with them. It may have been that he taught the nations of men the art of war. He is a natural born fighter. And when he finds it the better part of valor to leave the scene of conflict he can depart edgewise or sidewise at great speed. We would advise that your approach to Mr. Sand Crab be made with caution. He may tolerate you as long as you stay in your place, but you must give him room.

Then there is his little brother, Mr. Sand Fiddler. Sand Crab and Sand Fiddler may be related as the rat and the mouse. They resemble, but difference of size fixes a great gulf between them. But Mr. Sand Fiddler makes up in number what he lacks in size. He makes the sandy surface look like honeycomb by his numerous perforations. He is a bashful soul and runs and hides when he sees you coming.

A drove of porpoises passed the other day on one of the highways of the sea, resembling a drove of black mules swinging their heads up and down. They displayed no banners and gave no explanation of their purpose in this procession. It is a human thought that they, like migratory birds, were seeking a more congenial climate.

If you go to the ocean about 4 or 5 p. m. any day in the week you can see a number of mermaids sporting with the waves. Some have long hair, but most of them are bobbed. This was once thought to be an imaginary being, but it now seems very real.

Occasionally I see in the shallow water long-legged birds wading about in quest of fish. They were evidently made for their business and didn't have to go through college to learn it.

Time would fail me to tell of all the kinds of flies and gnats that lie in wait for your blood here, but we have not once heard the cheering song of the mosquito. But I can wait for that till I return to Greensboro.

I saw a strange happening in our human world the other day: I saw a mail-carrier stand and wait for a woman to finish writing a letter.

On my first Sunday here I attended mass in the Roman Catholic chapel, the only place of worship open that day. The priest stood before the altar most of the time with his back to the congregation. He faced the people when he read the Bible lesson, the only part of the service I clearly understood. The people seemed devout and attentive and knew when to kneel, when to stand, and when to sit. There are many good, pious people in the Roman Catholic church. We wish they might escape priestly domination and enjoy true Christian freedom.

We have enjoyed a number of cards from members of Calvary church. We thank each one of these benevolent conspirators.

We hope to be in our accustomed place next week and start the series of essays on "The Country Church," carrying out President Taylor's program.

WHAT ABOUT THE BIBLE?

By REV. CHARLES L. GOODELL

Measured by its friends and enemies, by the criticisms it has received and the encomiums it has evoked, and by its popularity throughout the centuries and throughout the world, the Bible stands pre-eminent above all books ever written.

Interesting as that question would be, I am not now concerned with the question of literary values as set forth by the higher criticism. While I am in hearty sympathy with all scholarly investigation of the Bible, for my purpose I am making my appeal not to the higher criticism, but the highest criticism: namely, to the vindication which the Bible has made for itself in the nature of things, in the course of events, and in the providence of God.

First, the composition of the Book was most unique: Most books are written in one language and by one author, and in a limited period. This Book was written in at least two languages—the rugged Hebrew and the classic Greek. One of the greatest students of the classics has said that Greek came forth from the dead with this Book in its hands. Where other books have one author, this has not far from 50 authors. Other books were written in a year or a decade, this Book was not far from a thousand years in the making. Some of its pages were written in the desert and some by the sobbing sea, some in a palace and some in a sheepfold, and some floated out of a prison window in the cramped handwriting of an old man who was a prisoner for conscience's sake.

We have had many translators of this book into English, and in some cases the translation cost the translator his life. They would have killed Myclif, but he escaped martyrdom by a paralytic stroke. Thirty years after his death, the council of Constance ordered that his bones should be taken up and burned. Tyndale paid the price for his translation with his life. They sent both his translation and himself to the flames. His historian naively says, "They were exceedingly kind to him; for, instead of burning him, they only strangled him and burned his body at the stake."

The popularity of a book is supposed to be indicated by its circulation. The circulation of any other book in the history of the world is infinitesimal in comparison with the circulation of the Book. Last year there were issued by the three great Bible Societies—the American Bible Society, the British and Foreign Bible Society, and the National Bible Society of Scotland—26,566,474 Bibles and portions. When you add to this the product of other Bible societies and of commercial publishers of the Bible, you have at least a round 36 millions of volumes this last year. The product of the three Societies up to 1929 was 694,537,655 volumes. If we may add to this 10 per cent for the product of other publishers—which is far too low—we would have more than 750 millions of volumes. The whole Bible or some part of it has been translated into 886 languages and dialects, and in the last decade portions into some new languages at the rate of one in every five weeks. The combined circulation of a score of the world's greatest classics would not begin to touch the hem of the garment of that circulation. So, you see, when you are saying that the Bible is the most popular book in the world, you are well within the facts.

The greatest sensation that ever happened in book circulation was in connection with this volume. When a revision of it was ready for distribution nearly half a century ago, the longest message, so far as I know, ever sent by telegraph in the history of the world, was not a message of King to Parliament or President to Congress, but a part of this book—Matthew to Romans inclusive—118,000 words, which were telegraphed from New York to Chicago before the days of the telephone, in order that they might reach that city in time for a Sunday newspaper.

Many misunderstand the Bible, because they do not understand its real purpose. In a secular book, the first thing you do is to read the preface, so that you may know the purpose of its author. The Bible has a preface and John wrote it: "These things are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." A great many criticize the Bible as if it were a work on secular history or a work on geology or biology. We do well to remind ourselves that it would not be fair to criticize a drama as if it were a work on history or geology.

I would like to call your attention to the marvelous things which the Bible contains. They are unmatched anywhere in literature. Is it not thrilling to think that the most popular poem in the world today, more quoted than any other, was not written by Homer or Shakespeare, or Browning, but by a Hebrew youth, perhaps in a sheepfold. The greatest poem of the ages begins, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." When they wanted the finest sentence ever written as an epitome of the relation of religion to the thoughts of men, they asked the president of the oldest university to ransack all literature of all the ages to find that best sentence. He found it in the Bible. It was written by a young man named Micah. It has persisted for millenniums and will last till the stars grow weary with their shining: "He hath shown thee, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

I want to call your attention especially to the pragmatic test, to the vindication which the Bible makes for itself in the nature of things and in the course of human events. Prof. Phelps, of Yale, says of it, "It ought to have written on the cover, 'Highly explosive. Handle with care.' It is the book which by the dynamite of its message has lifted empires off their hinges and turned the course of human events. It has put down the mighty from their seats and hath exalted them of low degree." It has overwhelmed nations and institutions whose sins cried out to God, and has overwhelmed evil-doers when they thought to hail the hour of their triumph. It has struck the simple solmn with its inherent power. It has brought naught to the counsel of evil men. The great masterpieces of art and music and literature caught their inspiration from this book. It was the message from this book, "The just shall live by faith," which transformed the face of Germany and the world, through the kindled heart of one man. It was this book which fired the heart of John Wesley on a never-to-be-forgotten night in May, 1738, and, through him, changed the face of England, so that Lecky, the historian, writes, "What happened to John Wesley that night was of greater consequence to England, than all the victories of Pitt by land or sea."

Why is it that for centuries in the courts of justice, as a preventive against perjury and graft, the world has asked the witness to lay his hand on this Book and promise on its stately authority, that he will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth? Why is it that the Presidents of the United States, as the supreme evidence of their devotion to the great task which they have assumed, have laid their hands on this Book and promised by its strength to be true to their obligations?

I never open the Book that a hush of solemn awe does not fill my soul. Every page has, to those who know the facts, the thrilling story of the martyrs, who refreshed their souls when they were like to faint and who cooled their hot lips in a draught of its life-giving waters; who found solace in the midst of all crosses and losses, and who took the Bible with them as a talisman to the scaffold and the stake.

May I now consider a more personal reason why I bring this Book to your attention? It is the message of God to the human soul. Who am I? what am I? whence came I? and what is my future? All these questions are answered here, and no other book ever claimed in the same sense to be planned in heaven and written on earth. Here, and here alone, are to be found the answers to those questions which most disturb the mind and heart of men; and behind those answers lie millions of affirmative human experiences. May I remind you that this Book is fragrant with holy personal memories? It has behind it, not only a long and thrilling history in the passing of the centuries, but it has a more intimate testimony from the lips of those who loved you best and were most deeply interested in you.

When you remember who inspired the Book and who wrote it; when you remember all those who have been sustained by it; when you remember the vindication which the ages have given it, whenever you open this greatest of books, do it with a prayer, and let these be the words of the prayer, "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

HARD BUT NECESSARY TASK FOR THE CHURCH

By DR. WILLIAM F. LOFTHOUSE

*President of the British Wesleyan Conference

As long as I can remember it, this Conference has been concerned with the great issues of our social and industrial life. It would have been false, otherwise, to the spirit of its founder. But it has often been perplexed. It has passed resolutions, fearing now that they were socialistic, now that they were academic. Nor was this to be wondered at. For the whole field of industrial life has long been a scene of confusion. As soon as in this country we passed from the tutelage of the old Manchester school, or of the doctrine of industry unfettered by any state control, and the practice of individual bargaining between master and man, we began to move in perplexity. The church felt herself to be placed between two worlds, or, as Disraeli put it, two nations. The field of industry was divided between two opposing classes, profit-seekers and wage-earners. We had ceased to think of them simply as "fighting it out;" that could no longer be allowed; we knew that the state had its own demands to make, its own elementary conditions to enforce, at least for children and women. But how could we, in the churches, ignorant as we felt ourselves to be, venture to intervene for any further improvement? And how could we, even in appearance, take sides?

So we tried to study the difficult questions, to avoid using harsh terms of one side or the other, to affirm general principles, to recommend what progress we could in the less thorny paths of temperance propaganda. And all the time, labor, and others besides labor, were asking why the organized followers of the Prince of Peace allowed the struggle to go on, within its limits, with hardly a protest. It was natural, pardonable, almost inevitable. It was like the tragic dilemma that faced us all with such terrible suddenness in August, 1914. We did not call for war; we did not desire it; we loathed it, but we had no word, no plan, no device, to drive it from our midst.

Those days, however, are gone. A change is coming over the spirit of industry. A cloud has appeared on the horizon of that brazen sky. Voices which we cannot despise or neglect have begun to proclaim that interests need not clash; that diverse functions do not mean internecine rivalries. Nor have these voices been raised merely in the churches. There, they might have been discounted. They have come from the captains of industry, the spokesmen of labor. The old idea of a relentless warfare between capital and labor begins to be discredited. True, the voices still seem to many to be crying in the wilderness. On the one side we hear of a Melchett-Turner scheme, like an ark in the midst of rather fiercely waving and tempestuous bulrushes, which seems to embody hopes long familiar to some of us; on the other, there are still multitudes who cry "impracticable" or "senseless."

But all this means that the church has now the opportunity for which many have long been praying. Remember, in the first place, that we have no option. We stand for peace and goodwill. We cannot step aside and say that it is none of our business. To the Christian, peace is what his country is to the patriot. We are the soldiers, the champions, of reconciliation. It is reported that Louis XIV once said, "If ever a gun is fired in Europe I must know all about it." The Christian must and will say, "If ever anything is to be done to bring men together, that is something that concerns me."

Nor, secondly, can we now plead ignorance, or tremble lest we should be rushing in where our wisest tread with caution. We are not asked today for experience or for expert advice. What is wanted is an atmosphere; a trade wind to blow with steady and generous fulness toward conciliation and mutual understanding. For that we are responsible, and of that we are, if we choose to be, abundantly capable.

But more can be done than this. For the church is not a body of well-meaning but ignorant people, as harmless as doves in a world of serpents, and as helpless. It is a large and organized body of thinking men and women, containing many who are admirably fitted to influence public opinion and action in a hundred ways. We have men and women among us who can mold the fortunes, for better or worse, of every important movement in the country. The church as such may know nothing of the intricacies of coal mining or shipbuilding or town planning or of German reparations. But there are members of the church, thank God, who know quite as much about each of them as any one else.

For every great reform, two factors are necessary; the general resolve which says, "we will have peace," or justice or sobriety or the chance of leisure; and the expert knowledge which surveys and selects the route from starting point to goal. The church has both; and in these days, when the sheer pressure of events is forcing men to ask whether this is not some way to peace, it is for us—thank God, it is for us—to build up the highway, to repair the desolutions of former generations, till industry shall be come a sacrament of fellowship, and the loom and forge shall be the tools of the Holy Spirit.

It will be clear to you that I may say exactly the same thing about the new-born hopes of world peace, when, after six thousand, ten thousand, years of war, we have now, in these last ten years, with the remarkable advance to high influence made by the League of Nations, begun to conceive that the quarrels of each nation can and must be the concern of all the rest. There is not one of us but can make his weight tell in this dawn, after all the horrors of the Great War of a new age. For the first time, service, or at least lip-service, is being universally offered to the cause of peace. And we rejoice in the firm words uttered now and again by our statesmen. We look to find them still firmer. But who that knows the burning fears of Europe and of the world, does not know that statesmen by themselves are all too weak? As in industry, there must be in international politics a great drive of Christian opinion, resolve and faith. We are the peace-makers; heaven grant that we do not betray our trust.

But I move from this to a subject which I am sure will be in your minds—the world-call that went forth last year from Jerusalem. Some of us can hardly think of Jerusalem, even today, as an actual city, the place of a convention, a railway terminus. We have learned to dream of Jerusalem the golden, with milk and honey blest; or we sing (rather vaguely, it must be confessed) of building Jerusalem in England's green and pleasant land. But you know how within that very Jerusalem, outside whose walls the Holy Lamb of God was slain, Christian men and women from every country met to survey the gains and losses of 20 centuries, since the first Pentecost. They noted the slow changes through these centuries; they stared at the bewildering transformation of the last ten years; they saw the ancient faiths crumbling, not from the impact of the Christian religion but from their own inherent weaknesses. They saw the ambition, the greed, and the recklessness of Europe encompassing sea and land to make their proselytes; they saw the vices of our aged cities corrupting, stimulating, and paralyzing the adolescent populations of the world; and they proclaimed that in every quarter of the globe the cause of Christ is faced by one single foe. At last we know what we have to fight. And we can never miss it, for it is everywhere. "Go ye into all the world." "I will pour out my spirit on all flesh." And wherever we go, after these two thousand years, we find secularism, materialism, the very mind and life of our Western world, of the society at our doors, nay, the evil in our hearts.

The issue is cleared. The battle for our own souls and the battle for the human race are the same. Once we could separate Jerusalem from Antioch, Palestine from Macedonia, London from Bengal, Manchester from Kenya, Plymouth from the Spanish Main or Peking. That time has gone by. The world is one. The victory that is gained in one continent may be lost in another. Here we are fleeing; there we may be routing the foe. But that foe (and this I would have you chiefly remember) is within; that is to say, it is a foe against which every one of us has to draw the sword.

In this warfare there are no neutrals and there are no non-combatants. In the early days of Methodism every member of society was expected to regard himself as a home missionary; then we came to think of the preachers, the officials, as doing the work; or we left it to committees and missions. There are no non-combatants today. No spot is safe from the enemy's attack; no place or region but may be the scene of a deadly disaster or a magnificent triumph.

NEW PARENTS GREATLY NEEDED

We are hearing much in our day about wayward children and "flaming youth." Where does the blame for the present situation lie? Sympathetic as we may be with parents of our acquaintance it will have to be acknowledged that parents in general are much to blame. In The Training of Children in the Christian Family, published by the Pilgrim Press, the author, L. A. Weigle, quotes anonymously this paragraph from a modern educator:

"I do not hesitate to say that in my opinion the children of today do not need vocational guides so much as they need a new set of parents: parents who have spunk enough to climb back upon the thrones in their own households which they have abdicated in favor of their children; parents who have energy enough to get their children out of bed in the morning early enough for them to wash their faces, comb their hair, and lace their shoes without the school's being obliged to give promotion credit for their doing so; parents who, when the shades of night begin to fall, look after their boys with the same degree of care that they give to their bull pup, which they chain up lest he associate with the strange cur on the street. We have State autocracy enough in education; what we need most is authority in the home."—Watchman-Examiner.

TIME WITH JESUS

Time for pleasure—time for business—
Time for reading and for many,
Many things not written here.
Maybe, too, there's time for service—
Service for your Lord and King,
But—just stay and think a moment
How much time is spent with Him?

But, you say, my work is for Him."
True, and Jesus loves it so.
But e'en years like this might vanish,
And your Lord you might not know.
Oh, you need dear one to know Him,
Need in Him to find your Refuge;
Need His guidance all the way.

Time for business—time for pleasure,
Time for alway anything—
Yet so little time with Jesus.
Yes, so little time with Him;
This is why your feet oft stumble
As you tread the rugged way;
If you spent more time with Jesus
In His strength you'd gain the day.

THE REAL MAN

A real man never talks about what the world owes him, the happiness he deserves and the chances he ought by right to have, and all that.

A real man is just as honest in the dark in his own room as he is in public.

A real man does not want pulls and favors. He wants work and honest wages.

A real man does not want something for nothing, so the get-rich-quick people can not use him.

A real man does a little more than he promises.

A real man is loyal to his friends and guards their reputation as his own.

A real man minds his own business. He does not judge other persons beyond sure knowledge, not presuming to "search hearts."

A real man has excuses for others, never for himself. He is patient and charitable to others; to himself he is strict.

A real man does not hunt danger, but never dodges it when he ought to meet it.

A real man is glad to live and not afraid to die.—Exchange.

THE BIBLE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

It is interesting to note what is being done in other countries. The National Board of Education in Mexico has placed a Bible in every school room and in every library in Mexico. Japan has placed Bibles in all of its schools. In this country Florida and Idaho have recently been added to the list of States which require the reading of the Bible in their schools. It is said by those who have investigated the subject that, in schools where the Bible is read, the moral tone of the children is higher than it was in these same schools before the reading of the Bible was begun.—The Presbyterian Standard of the South.

Creswell

September 8, Sunday.—We were in two churches of this charge during the day, preaching at 11 a. m. in historic Rehoboth church and at Mount Hermon at night. The congregation here was large, though not so large at Rehoboth. At each place the manifested interest was very helpful. The ordinance of the Holy Communion was observed at Rehoboth. The pastor, Bro. Hethcox, planned for us to speak in a Sunday school convention in the afternoon. Here we found a large assembly of interested Sunday school workers, and we were glad to see Mount Hermon church receive the banner awarded for the largest average convention attendance. Rehoboth church, located on Highway No. 90, from Raleigh to Columbia, is the mother of Methodist Protestant churches in Washington county. The church was erected in 1857, the work being done by slaves owned by large and influential planters of the community, among them being Swift, Cherry and the Normans. This building, with the gallery for the slaves, is still used by the present congregation. It is in very good repair, though in need of paint. It would be helped in appearance, too, if it were made to front the new highway. This church has suffered the fate of many other rural churches. Changes in community conditions have interrupted its growth. However, we are glad to be informed that the tendencies now are more favorable. We trust that the future may find it enlarging in its usefulness. It still has in its membership some of the splendid citizens of the community.

Mount Hermon in some respects is perhaps the strongest church on the charge. The attractive church building here and its well-kept condition are indications of interest that will keep the church alive and prospering. We were glad to learn that all of the churches on the charge were represented in the service held here. Bro. Hethcox is serving his 11th year on this charge. He has created a demand for his services, both with his own people and the people of other churches throughout that whole section of country. This week he is holding a meeting with an M. E. brother in a neighboring church. We were glad to find him enjoying this esteem and confidence.

Rehoboth church promised the A. C. B. in full. Mount Hermon did not pledge it but voted in favor of the full budget, and will try to raise it. We expect a good ending of the year here, and a good conference report, reflecting both the material and the spiritual success of the work. Our visit to the charge was much enjoyed by us, and we are grateful to all who contributed to our entertainment and comfort.

John Wesley Pulpit

When Mr. Wesley was in America, 1835-38, he visited eastern North Carolina, and preached down there in a log church building known as Harris' Chapel. This building was located in what is now Washington county, and stood near the present site of Rehoboth church. In later years this church became extinct, probably through the reform movement that became deep-rooted in that section, and the present Rehoboth Methodist Protestant church became its successor. When the little log church went out of use, Mr. Joseph Norman, a prominent citizen of the community, and probably a member of the log church, had the pulpit stored in his barn for safe keeping. When Rehoboth church was built in 1857 this pulpit was placed in it and used for a great many years. Bro. Charlie White, one of the oldest members of Rehoboth church, has distinct recollection of seeing William Henry Wills, John Paris, T. J. Pegram, John Michaux, R. H. Michaux, and others of sainted memory, preach from this same pulpit. Some years ago this old pulpit, which was a high box arrangement of the early days of Methodism, was taken out of Rehoboth church and replaced by a modern one. The two large posts and the book-board of the old pulpit, used by Mr. Wesley, were stored in the gallery of the church, and it was there that I found them. There is no written word to confirm what is claimed here, so far as I know. It has come down to the people of this community by tradition, and there is no doubt in their minds about this being the pulpit from which Mr. Wesley preached in the old log church.

They were very generous in turning it over to me and permitting me to bring it to Greensboro. It will be offered to High Point College, to be kept there as a treasured relic of the earliest days of Methodism, and as a vital link between the great founder of the church and the growing hosts of his children who have come after him.

"Every Dollar"

This is our slogan for our A. C. B. The amount is $26,550. From now until the close of the conference year the Budget Council, composed of the president, secretary, and treasurer, will press the collection of every dollar of this assessment. The need is urgent. Obligations must be met, and the only way we have of meeting them is through this budget. And surely the amount, $26,550, is not beyond our ability. Every pastor, now, and every charge, and every church on every charge, right abreast with the Budget Council for this full budget. Let us list your charge and your churches as soon as you have assurance that the allotment will be paid. We now have three whole charges and five other churches that will pay in full. We want to see this list grow. What charge or church will be the next to enroll? We are waiting. Please don't let it be long.

Boundary Committee

This committee is called to meet October 16, Wednesday, at 1:30 P. M. The meeting will be held in the First Church, High Point. All persons having matters to be considered by this committee will please bring them to the attention of the chairman, Rev. G. F. Millaway. His address is Liberty, N. C., R. F. D. The committee will be glad, also, to hear in person any one who is concerned with boundary changes. It is hoped that sufficient information may be secured at this meeting to enable the committee to formulate the report for conference.

Rural Church Contest

Dr. McCulloch is still away on his vacation, and the first paper in this contest may not appear this week for that reason. Just as soon as he returns to his desk he will be ready with the first number in the series of articles already in his hands. We await their appearance with deep interest.

Revivals

Some are in progress now; others will follow later. Let us remember them constantly in our prayers. Nothing that we can possibly do is more pleasing to God than saving the lost and confirming in the faith those who are already saved. That is the purpose of these meetings. Let us pray that God may use them in accomplishing this desire that lies closest to his heart.

Eight More Weeks

Then the conference. They must be full weeks if we accomplish the full measure of our work. We were editorially urged through the HERALD last week not simply to end the year, but to finish the work that has been given us. If we do this—and surely we will—these remaining weeks must be full weeks. Full of tact, zeal, sacrifice, perseverance, and prayer. By these we conquer. Here's a resolve for every pastor and every charge: Not a week, not a day shall pass without an earnest prayer and an earnest effort to close this year in the highest honor to God.

Appointments

September 15, Sunday—St. Paul, 11 a. m.; Draper, 7:30 p. m.

September 22, Sunday.—First Church, Burlington, 11 a. m.; Belmont, in rally, in the afternoon; Fountain Place, 7:30 p. m.

September 25, Wednesday night—Union Ridge, South Winston Chareg.

September 29.—Kernersville Charge, Pine Grove Church in circuit rally and home-coming.

October 5, Saturday.—Vance Charge, preaching at Dahney at 11 a. m., and holding quarterly conference there at 1:30 p. m.

October 6, Sunday.—Vance Charge, New Hope, 11 a. m.; Chase City, 7:30 p. m.

October 11, Friday.—Randleman Charge in quarterly conference at Mt. Lebanon, 7:30 p. m.

October 12, Saturday.—Mocksville Charge, in quarterly conference at Elbaville.

October 19-20, Saturday and Sunday.—Cleveland Charge. "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God."

ANSWERING THE MACEDONIAN CRY

When the Apostle Paul was at Troas, he had a vision of a man of Macedonia who cried, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Paul responded to the call, and presently he was writing letters to churches he had established in that great province of the Roman empire.

There are churches in Macedonia—meaning by that the North Carolina Conference—which need our help. We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. The Board of Church Extension, and the Conference, have recognized certain groups of our people who have desired a church of their own in the towns and cities into which they have moved. The Conference has admitted them as appointments, given them pastoral oversight, and told them they would be helped in the financing of the enterprise. All with the expectation that those who were able would come to the assistance of these churches, and make it possible for the help to be given. The Board of Church Extension has had faith enough in the Church to believe that the assessment for that interest would be raised, and have frequently borrowed money in anticipation of receipts. It appears that their faith has not been fully justified, because the receipts have not been sufficient to meet the obligations that the Board has assumed; nor sufficient to meet salaries promised. The Board faces a crisis; and a number of promising fields are in jeopardy. All because we have not heeded the cry from Macedonia.

The assessment laid on the churches of the Conference for Church Extension this year is $7,000—which is $3,000 less than the amount assessed last year. That amount divided among 29,000 members of the churches in the North Carolina Conference is a pitifully small sum with which to answer the call of our struggling brethren. But unless some extra effort is exerted, the amount received will be far less than $7,000. And unless the full amount is raised, not only will the Board of Church Extension be embarrassed, but some of the churches now being helped will be seriously handicapped.

Shall we help the Board meet its obligations, or shall we say by our refusal to help that our ears are deaf to the Macedonian call?

The answer is: "Raise the assessment for Church Extension in full."

THE BUDGET COUNCIL,

By C. W. BATES.

Jesus and Social Service

Rev Cranston Brenton, of New York, is quoted as follows:

"Christ did not work to reform society, but to change the hearts of men. Our Lord had no social program. He carefully refrained from expressing any definite stand and would not unite with any of the social organizations of the day. He left any changes in the social order to minds other than His own. It is because of the Christian principles planted in the hearts of men that conditions are as good as they are and men are as happy as they are. There is coming a Kingdom of God where there will be no longer social orders but righteousness and happiness."

It cannot be denied that Christ aimed to change the hearts of men, but we believe it should not be asserted that He did not aim to change social life. Out of the heart are the issues of life. Jesus told the story of the Good Samaritan and said: "Go thou and do likewise." Jesus evidently meant for us to be servants of God in the service of men. It is true He did not organize any special orders such as the Red Cross, but He enunciated the principles that are to guide all orders. The second commandment would make of men a brotherhood. The golden rule would rule out offensive inequalities. The injunction to seek first the righteousness of God's Kingdom would transform and glorify the business world. Those who know Jesus as the New Testament presents Him know that He wished to reform society by removing all social vice and developing all social virtues.

FOURTEEN MISTAKES

1. To set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly. God has set the standard.
2. To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.
3. To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
4. To look for judgment and experience in youth.
5. To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.
6. To look for perfection in our own actions.
7. To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.
8. To refuse to yield in immaterial matters.
9. To refuse to help, so far as lies in our power, all that which needs aid.
10. To refuse to make allowances for the mistakes of others.
11. To consider everything impossible which we cannot perform.
12. To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.
13. To expect to be able to understand everything.
14. To live for time alone when any moment may launch us into eternity.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

LITTLE PAUL DALE: A TRUE STORY OF WAGON-TRAIN DAYS

Long, long ago, in the days of the wagon trains, before there were any railroads in the Far West, and while the land beyond the Mississippi was still the Indian country, there lived a famous trapper and trader who was known as Uncle John Smith. His boyhood home was near St. Louis, and all went well until, without a choice in the matter, he became a tailor's apprentice.

The boy soon ran away to live with the Indians. In time he fell in love with a Cheyenne squaw and married her. He was adopted by the Indians of her tribe and became a man of importance. Uncle John Smith lived with the Indians and learned to speak the languages of three tribes besides that of his own folks, the Cheyennes. He also learned to speak French and Spanish.

Thus it came about that Uncle John Smith's services were always in demand as guide and interpreter for the fur companies in the region of the old Santa Fe Trail, and his honorable name appears in many an old-time book about the West.

It is Colonel Inman, however, who repeats the story of little Paul, in his fascinating book called The Old Santa Fe Trail, just as he heard it told by Uncle John Smith himself, away back in 1868.

Colonel Inman had been sent by General Sheridan into the Indian Territory with a supply train for General Custer, who was then in command of troops believed to be lost. Colonel Inman had been ordered to keep fires burning on mountain peaks surrounding the camp as signal fires to guide the lost soldiers to a place of safety.

One evening, Uncle John Smith, who was an old man at this time, delighted the camp by consenting to tell a story. Colonel Inman reports it in the old trapper's language, which was vivid and delightful though most ungrammatical. Indians were always "Ingins" when Uncle John Smith did the talking.

Anyway, it was in 1845 when Uncle John Smith saved little Paul Dale from being taken captive by the Indians. Uncle John, with three friends, had been trapping beaver, otter, and mink for more than three years, and they were on their way to market with their valuable furs.

One hot day when they were in the Pawnee country, the trappers went into camp about four o'clock in the afternoon. Uncle John Smith said they reckoned time by the sun, as they had no watches.

After dinner their mules suddenly stopped eating grass and gave terrible snorts. They couldn't run away because they were hobbled. From the behavior of the mules the traders knew that Indians were near. Mules feared Indians. Sure enough, about five minutes after the mules began to be nervous, shots were heard. Uncle John Smith said that at that time he and his friends were comfortably camped behind the rocks and were about to light their pipes and enjoy the evening. At the sound of shots, though, the trappers snatched their guns and flew down the trail.

There they saw a Mexican wagon train with about sixty Pawnee Indians howling around it, although keeping their distance. Some were waving buffalo skins to scare the oxen, while others were shooting arrow into them. The Mexicans were trying to form a corral with all the wagons but the last one in the train.

That last wagon had been some distance behind the train and so was easily cut off by the Pawnees. Uncle John Smith and his friends reached the trail in time to see a man, woman, and little boy jump from the last wagon. An Indian killed the man instantly, while another snatched the woman, put her on his pony, ran away with her toward the hills, and was straightway out of sight.

The little boy ran toward the wagon train. Just as a big Indian was reaching down from his pony to pick up the child, one of the trappers shot him. When the little boy, who was about seven year old, saw Americans, he ran to them for protection.

The Indians were surprised to see white men, and the Mexicans took courage. One of the four trappers picked up the little boy and put him into the bottom of the wagon for safety. He knew there would be a fight. The Mexicans and Americans together shot so many Indians that the Pawnees soon departed for the hills.

Fortunately, the Mexicans' wagons were empty. They were on their way to Missouri to get a sawmill to take back to New Mexico. The trappers joined their caravan and traveled on till about ten o'clock that night.

A soft bed of blankets was made for the little boy, who slept soundly all night. In the morning, when breakfast was ready, the little fellow awoke, put his arms around Uncle John Smith's neck, and said, "Where's mamma?"

That question distressed the tender-hearted old trapper. Instead of trying to answer, he said he washed the little boy's face and hands and gave him his breakfast. Uncle John insisted that the boy was the "purtiest" child he ever saw. The boy said his name was Paul Dale. And Paul Dale was "awful polite," according to Uncle John.

When he asked for his mother again, Uncle John changed the subject by telling Paul that if he would like to, he could ride on the back of a mule when the train started again. Uncle John walked beside Paul when the train journeyed on; and as he walked the weary miles he tried to learn the boy's story, thinking to turn him over to his kindred when they reached Independence. The boy, though, only knew that he had lived in Santa Fe ever since he could remember, and that his father was a missionary. The family were on their way to "grandma's in the States" and that was all he could tell. The Mexicans in the train knew nothing about the child's father and mother.

As the train moved on, the boy walked part of the time and picked flowers along the trail, always sticking close to Uncle John. At bedtime he cuddled under the blankets close beside his big friend, always saying his prayers first.

Uncle John Smith told the camp circle that when that little boy said his prayers like that, it carried him back to the log cabin in Missouri where he once knelt by his mother's knee and said his prayers too.

At the end of ten days Uncle John Smith loved that little boy with all his heart; and although he was ashamed of himself, he began to hope they would never find Paul's ma.

Near Pawnee Rock the mules smelt "Ingins" again, and there was then a fight with eighty Pawnees. That time little Paul stood in the back of a wagon and watched the entire fight from the hole formed by the gathering of the sheet. When the fight was over, the little boy and Uncle John Smith went fishing in a creek and caught fish for supper.

Ten days later the wagon train reached Independence and the Americans sold their furs for much money in silver and gold.

Naturally, little Paul attracted a great deal of attention. Uncle John could easily have found a home for the child, and there were advisers who said the waif should be taken to St. Louis and placed in an orphanage. Paul's guardian, however, wouldn't give up the boy.

Uncle John Smith told those who listened to his story that he had "kinfolks" in Independence, so he stayed with his aunt while there. A lovely girl, who was living with the aunt, taught Paul "out books" during the two months before Uncle John Smith and his three trapper friends returned to the mountains of New Mexico. They waited that they might travel with a big caravan, having first provided themselves with a new six-mule wagon and outfit.

Meanwhile Uncle John Smith bought a black pony for his beloved Paul. From the choicest deerskin in his pack he had a buckskin suit made for the little boy, with the seams of his trousers trimmed with heavy flapping fringe. A white sombrero completed the costume.

Finally, at the end of August, the long caravan started across the plains, and late in September reached Bent's Old Fort. By this time Uncle John Smith believed that the precious boy belonged to him, and he was happier than he had ever been before.

The wagon train went into camp a little distance from the fort and preparations were made for supper. Knowing that they could get milk at the fort, Uncle John Smith took Paul by the hand and went to the fort kitchen.

The instant Uncle John entered that kitchen he was surprised to see a white woman instead of a squaw cooking supper at the adobe hearth. She looked up when the strangers entered, and then, giving a scream, she made a dive for Paul. Uncle John Smith said she almost upset him and that she "was a-sobbing and taking on dreadful."

Paul, too, was crying and saying, "Mamma, mamma!"

The mother told the little boy that God had heard her prayers. She had prayed and prayed that her little boy would be given back to her, and here he was!

Poor Uncle John Smith walked out and closed the door. From his story, it seems that he nearly fainted. When he recovered the ability to see and walk, he ran to tell his three friends that Paul had found his "ma!"

At last the four trappers returned to the fort kitchen to ask Mrs. Dale how she got away from the Indians. It was a long story. The woman escaped one night on an Indian pony, and after many adventures had reached Bent's Old Fort nearly dead. When Uncle John Smith arrived, she was working as cook to earn money enough to pay her way back to her father's home in Pennsylvania.

That night good Uncle John Smith and his friends collected eight hundred dollars for Mrs. Dale, and the trappers promised to take her, with her small son, back to Independence in their train without charge.

The next morning Uncle John Smith gave his happy little boy two hundred dollars for himself, then said goodby and went on his lonely way into the mountains.

And here we, too, part company with little Paul Dale and his grateful mother.—Frances Margaret Fox, in Zion's Herald.

"STICK TO THE TRUTH"

(A Story of Abraham Lincoln)

It was a bright autumn evening, nearly one hundred years ago. Abraham Lincoln, then a great awkward boy of sixteen or seventeen, looked in at the door of a little log cabin, on the edge of one of the Western prairies, and said pleasantly: "I'm going off into the woods to chop tomorrow, mother; I've got a job over at Laird's, and, as I have to start by daybreak, I quit early this evening, so I could attend to any chores you might like to have done."

"You are a good boy, Abraham, to be always thinking of helping me. If I was your own mother, you could not be better to me, and you will be rewarded for all your kindness in the end, I am sure."

"I have a right to be good to you, mother, for have you not tried most faithfully to take my own dead mother's place? No one who has been blessed with two such mothers as I have had could ever be anything but good to women folks. But you have not told me how I can help you yet, and it is almost dark," he insisted, rubbing the moisture from his eyes with his coarse sleeve.

"Well, as I am going to wash tomorrow, I would be ever so thankful if you would bring me a few buckets of water from the spring, and call the cow up for me to milk. It is hard telling how far out over the prairie she may have strayed. I have not set eyes on her since morning."

"Trust me for finding her! What's the use of my long legs if they can't outtravel a cow? But I reckon I'd best bring the water first. And here is Sally waiting for a ride," he added, placing upon his shoulder his little step-sister, who had come running out the moment she heard the water-buckets begin to jingle.

Back and forth the tall, gaunt, prairie boy hurried, until all the tubs and kettles about the cabin were full to the brim.

"You see, sis, I am going to chop myself out a suit of clothes," he said, in answer to a question from the girl perched upon his shoulder.

"Chop yourself a suit?" laughed the child. "Who ever heard of wooden clothes?"

"We shall see," replied Abraham, as he set down his bucket of water and deposited Sally on the steps, and then started off in his search of the missing cow.

"Bless the boy! I could not get along without him," said his mother, stopping her work for a minute to gaze fondly after him.

"There is no call for you getting along without him, at least for many a year to come," remarked her husband, who had entered the back door in time to catch her words.

"He'll not stay here always, you may set that down. Abraham was born for something better than he'll ever find in the life we are living. You may live to see the day that you'll be proud to call him son."

"Abraham is a good boy, wife, but your ideas about him are somewhat visionary," returned his father, with a smile. "It is not good for boys to get high notions about themselves into their heads, and I hope Abraham will always be content to make an honest living as his father has done."

Early in the morning, before it was clearly light, Abraham was ready to set off for the place where the rails were to be split, but, early as it was, Sally was up, too, determined to keep her big brother company during his long walk across the country.

"Can't I go, Abraham?" she begged, after her mother had refused the desired permission. "Can't I go? Say yes, quick," demanded the impulsive child.

"Just as mother says," replied the big brother, pausing to give the little girl an opportunity to consult her mother. But Sally had no intention of saying anything more to her mother on the subject, and tried to hurry him off down the path before her absence would be noticed.

Abraham would not move a foot, however, until he knew his mother's wishes, which soon came in a positive command for Sally to come back into the house.

It was a very reluctant obedience that Sally accorded, and as soon as her brother was out of sight she determined to follow him, and at once cut across the field, intending to reach the ravine before him, and give him a genuine surprise by jumping out unannounced in the path as he came up.

She carried out her plan successfully, and when she heard his merry whistle in the distance, she climbed up on the bank to be ready to make the spring for his shoulders when the proper moment should arrive.

But the poor child had forgotten all about the sharp ax which he carried, and, although she gained her coveted seat on his shoulder, her little bare foot received a gash from the cruel ax, which changed her merry laugh to a bitter cry without a woman's warning.

"Why, Sally! How did you get here?" was all the boy could say as he placed her tenderly on the bank, and began an examination of the wounded foot.

Finding it to be a deep cut, he gathered some broad plain-tain leaves which grew near, and by their aid soon succeeded in staunching the flow blood, which had at first frightened both himself and Sally.

This accomplished, he tore the sleeve from his shirt, and in his clumsy way bandaged the injured foot as well as he knew how. Then, as he carried the little girl home he drew from her the story of her disobedience. She would have been willing to evade the truth in order to screen herself from her mother's displeasure, but honest, truthful Abraham would not permit this.

"Tell the truth, Sally, no matter what the consequences may be. Better suffer punishment than lie about it. I do not think mother will be hard on you when she sees how sorely punished you are already, but never tell a lie to shield yourself—never."

Sally took his advice, and her mother was very willing to forgive her when she saw how really sorry she was, and from that day forth Sally never forgot how sacred a thing perfect honesty is.—Selected.

BE THE BEST OF WHATEVER YOU ARE

If you can't be a pine on top of the hill;
Be a shrub in the valley—but be,
The best little shrub by the side of the hill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush, be a bit of grass;
And some highway, some happier make;
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass—
But the liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew;
There's something for all of us here:
There's big work to do and there's lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be the sun then be a star;
It isn't by size that you win or fail—
Be the best of whatever you are.

HE BECAME REAL

"I am glad I can say that I love the Word of God. It was the Word of God that set me free. I want to praise God that He became real to me about seven and a half years ago. I was taught to believe in God all my life. I heard much of religion—went to Sunday school all the days of my life. My people were very religious, but I never knew any reality. It never was told me that the Blood of Jesus could save me from sin and give me victory in this present world. But I want to thank God for His mercy to me, that followed me all the days of my life.

"I praise God I was a seeker all my life. I carried the Bible with me when I traveled, always. I came to this country when I was 17 years old, and all that time I carried a Bible; but I very seldom took it out, because I didn't know how to give my life to God. I never found the people that could tell me. I thought this world owed me a good time, and I tried to satisfy myself with the things of the world. But I thank God, after I turned back home, disgusted with everything, God began to deal with me. Such conviction seized me that I just began to seek God. I knew I was wrong; I knew I would land in hell if I didn't repent of my sin. I could see the sin I had committed all my life. I couldn't do anything with it; I couldn't undo it. I thank God, I began to pray, and He answered. One night I gave my life to God. I yielded my stubborn will; and I said, 'God, if You will take that awful condemnation off my heart, I will serve You as long as I live.' He saved me that moment. He made Himself real to me and took the love of the world out of my heart. I thank God for real victory. I can live without sin in this present world. I work among wicked men, but God gives me the victory every day."—Selected.

THE DAISY

Dr. Lyman Abbott once tried his hand at a parable, with the following result: A certain prince went out into his vineyard to examine it, and he came to the peach tree and said, "What are you doing for me?"

And the tree said: "In the spring I give my blossoms and fill the air with fragrance, and on my boughs the fruit which presently men will gather and carry into the palace for you."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And he came to the maple, and the tree said: "I am making nests for the birds, and shelter the cattle with my leaves and spreading branches."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And he went down into the meadow, and said to waving grass: "What are you doing?"

And the grass said: "We are giving our lives for others—for your sheep and cattle, that they may be nourished."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servants, that give up your lives for others."

And then he came to a little daisy that was growing in the hedgerow, and said: "What are you doing?"

And the daisy said: "Nothing! nothing! I cannot make a nesting place for the birds, and I cannot give shelter to the cattle, and I cannot send fruit into the palace, and I cannot even furnish food for the sheep and cows; they do not want me in the meadow. All I can do is to be the best little daisy I can be."—The Christian World.

THE FACE IN THE BIBLE

In the city of Washington there is a unique and remarkable copy of the Constitution of the United States. If one examines it closely it appears simply a chaos of irregular lines and peculiar lettering. But when the visitor steps back and views it in proper perspective he is surprised to see the face of George Washington looking out upon him. The lines are so spaced and the letters are so shaded as to make a good likeness of the Father of our country. And just as Washington's face shines through all our early history, as crystallized and reflected in the Constitution so does the glorious face of Christ look out upon us from the pages of our Bible.—Selected.

SEPT. 15: PUTTING GOD IN THE BUDGET

II Cor. 9:6-8; I Cor. 6:20

Daily Bible Readings

Monday: God's claim to ownership. Psalms 24:1.

Tuesday: Generous giving. Ex. 36:1-7.

Wednesday: Secret giving. Matt. 6:1-4.

Thursday: The spirit of giving. II Cor. 8:1-5.

Friday: Our stewardship. Matt. 25:14-30.

Saturday: Rewards of giving. II Cor. 9:6-8.

To the Leader

If you have a blackboard in reach you might diagram on it a budget. You could use one of the time of your meeting or if you do not wish to do this, use some sort of a budget as an example. In using the time budget see that you stay close to it, for if you do not you will defeat your purpose.

Use some of these hymns: "Take Time to Be Holy," "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," "In the Garden," "I Know Whom I Have Believed," "Faith of Our Fathers."

If you deem it wise to debate, try this query: "Resolved, That the church has failed to train properly its members in giving."

In closing have someone sing "Give of Yourself to the Master," and close with the Mizpah.

The Leader's Talk

Often when people hear the word, budget, mentioned they appear scared of it. Budget simply means a plan laid out ahead for giving. Someone has placed under the word, budget, these six words: buying, using, dividing, giving, earning and tithing. These form an acrostic.

We all need a budget to go by in giving as well as in other things. However, some people who have budgets fail to give God a place in them. People who give in a haphazard way will often say that they give a tenth when if they really knew they would find out how far short they really come. The Jews had a strict system of tithing which not only took in money but other things as well. If more of our people would tithe our mission fields could be filled with missionaries, churches built and paid for and the Kingdom increased.

Some people have objected to a stated plan of giving on the grounds that it gives no room for free-will offerings. The Jews gave free-will offerings and so can we.

We need to guard against giving to the church or missions or to any cause, but to give to God. After we have consecrated our gifts to Him then they may be used for various purposes.

Topics for Discussion

1. God claims all.
2. Our debt to God.
3. Gratitude.
4. Rewards of giving.
5. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

To Be Answered

1. How shall we determine the amount we are to give?

2. Is your offering a gift to God or a payment on a debt?
3. What is the best way to give systematically?
4. Why should we give at all?
5. Why are willing givers blessed more than those who give unwillingly?

Quotations

All giving is not worship. If it is not unto God, if done grudgingly, if done with low conceptions of the duty it may be offensive.—W. F. Beatty.

The widow's mite was the glowing tribute of a selfless love; a great gift because it came out of a great poverty.—Anon.

If we tithe our income, we shall be surprised at the amount we have to give to the Lord's work, surprised at the joy giving yields, and surprised we did not discover this sooner.—Anon.

Not what we take, but what we give;
Not as we pray, but as we live—
These are the things that make for peace,
Both now and after time shall cease.

—Clarence Urmy.

SOMEBODY

Somebody made a weekly pledge,
Testing his purse to utmost edge;
Somebody paid it through the year,
Brightening all with Christian cheer:
Was that somebody you?

Somebody handed cheerfully in Money to help God's cause to win;
Somebody kept his promise to pay,
Writing each check on schedule day:
Was that somebody you?

Somebody let the year slip by,
Heedless of payments piling high;
Somebody said, "No more delay;
Quickly I'll settle that bill today."
Was that somebody you?

Somebody's pledge was only a scrap,
Paper that had no value, mayhap;
Somebody's soul grew very small,
Failing, he grieved the Lord of all:
Was that somebody you?

"OLD YADKIN"

It is now the plan to dedicate the "Old Yadkin" as a part of the program of Founders' Day at High Point College, October 17. But to carry out this plan it is necessary to find a few more contributions. This appeal is going out to the friends and lovers of both Yadkin College and High Point College with the hope that enough will immediately come in to pay for the installation of "Old Yadkin." In next week's issue of the Herald there will appear a complete list of those who have paid and those who have pledged. Come on, dear folks! Let your name appear in the column of the "paid." It is hoped that this matter can be closed out not later than September 30. You will help do that, won't you?

Yours for "Old Yadkin,"
GEO. L. CURRY.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT INCREASING

Approximately 875,000 children will enroll in the public elementary and high schools of the state during 1929-30, according to an estimate made in the office of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction based on the increase to total school enrollments for preceding years.

Figures for preceding school years indicate that there will be approximately 605,000 white children and 270,000 negro children who will either begin or continue their education at the State's public schools. It is estimated that more than 100,000 of these children will make their appearance at the schoolhouse door to get their first insight into the meaning of public education.

It is further estimated that of the total public school enrollment of 875,000 during 1929-30 approximately 120,000 will be in the high school grades, 105,000 white children and approximately 15,000 Negro children. Last year, 1928-29, there were 96,739 white boys and girls and 13,236 Negro children, a total of 109,975, enrolled in the public high schools. The estimate for 1929-30, therefore, is based on the supposition that there will be an increase of about 11,000 in high school. Since 12,145 of the 109,975 high school students graduated this past year, then there will be nearly 25,000 boys and girls who will enter high school for the first time.

According to the educational statistics, the enrollment in the elementary grades will be approximately 500,000, or identical with the past few years, since the enrollment in high school will practically absorb the increase in total school enrollment.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IMPROVING

The public white schools of the state are today 20 per cent better than they were five years ago, according to the current issue of State School Facts, official publication of the Department of Public Instruction. School Facts bases this claim on a composite score on ten educational factors made by these public schools for two given years: 1923-24 and 1927-28.

In 1923-24 the composite score obtained was 56.9 and in 1927-28 it was 68.6, or 20.6 per cent higher, and thus better. Indications, as based on the ten factors used by the departmental publication, are that a gradual improvement is being made from year to year in the public white schools; yet, when the schools were measured by these ten factors for 1927-28 a smaller improvement is noticeable over the preceding year.

"One of the most interesting results of the application of these factors to the white school," the publication points out, "is the 23.2 per cent advancement made by the rural white schools, whereas city white schools improved only 7.3 per cent during the same period—from 1923-24 to 1927-28."

However, as this publication further states, the city schools are still on an average 41 per cent better than the rural schools, when compared on their composite score on the ten educational factors.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle.—Brother Hunter has filled all appointments very ably. Last fourth Sunday night he enlightened everyone present with a sermon on missions.

Our Sunday school is holding up fine considering the extreme hot weather. The membership has just undergone an epidemic of whooping cough; so we hope to have an increase in attendance from this on.

Mesdames Bertha Fowler and Geneva Allen attended a mission study lecture at Maple Springs last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jones are the happy parents of a new baby boy.

Mr. Edgar Lane left this morning for High Point College.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Hollister.—We were very glad to have Rev. J. Clyde Auman with us Sunday evening. He gave us a wonderful message. He used for a subject "Shifting Responsibility." We are all more or less inclined to shift our responsibility upon some one else, especially in the work of the church. There is something for each one of us to do in God's vineyard and to carry on His work successfully we must each one do our part. Mr. Auman talked to us a little while about the needs of High Point College. Several pledges were made for High Point College.

The attendance at Sunday school is very good. There were 68 present Sunday. Our faithful secretary, Mr. Ollie Knight, leaves for High Point College today to resume his studies there. He will be missed in our Sunday school.

Conference will soon be in session and there is much to be done if we accomplish the things we hope to. Miss Winnie Burt of Eden church is our delegate to Annual Conference. I am sure Miss Burt will make us a splendid delegate.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Shelby.—We had a fine service last Sunday evening. Four joined the church. Two have had their letters in their trunk since the domination of the Jingles and the Tingles came back.

Those who have been waiting for a dawning day look with happy anticipation to the future when we will have a church that will have power with God and man.

Some people think that the church will land in tartarus if they quit. If Edison dies inventions will go on just the same. When Luther died the Reformation did not stop, but when some of the swine whiskered Buckwarts died the Reformation moved on with greater power.

If the knockers would quit knocking the preachers and knock the devil, God would think a lot more of them and the people would have more respect for them.

What they have need of at the Methodist Protestant church in Shelby, N. C., is Old Nathan the 2nd who fears neither men nor devils.

Our church has now the brightest prospects for service that she has had since the cornerstone was laid, and if the Conference will stand by us we will build here or blow out a cylinder head. People of the Conference, we need your prayers. Remember us.

W. L. CARSON.

Shiloh, North Davidson.—Another year has passed and another revival meeting has been held at Shiloh. We had two able sermons by our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, on Sunday. At the morning hour he preached from Jer. 4:1-2, also John 12:32. Just a few thoughts from his sermon follow:

The world is over-run with evil and sin. There are lots of causes. One is the inconsistency of people who profess to be Christians. They strain at a gnat and swallow a camel; try to correct the faults of others, but see not their own. Another cause is the lack of law enforcement. This is not all the fault of the officers. Public sentiment is against strict enforcement because we like to do some of the things prohibited. Still another cause is the lack of reading good literature and especially the Holy Bible. We feed our minds on too much crime as published in daily papers and on suggestive fiction, but do not read enough religious literature nor partake enough of God's eternal truth. Another cause is that we rob God. We do not give as we should and therefore hinder God's work. Last of all, the church is not praying enough. Prayer is the church's vital breath, and the church is powerless without it.

The remedy—and there is only one—is Jesus Christ in the hearts of both old and young. He is the great physician and there is none other who can heal.

On Sunday afternoon Rev. Mr. Troxler preached from the text, "Prepare to meet thy God." All nature declares there is a God, he said, so we must be prepared to meet Him. How must we prepare? We must repent, believe, and obey. But when must I prepare? Every lost soul in hell, every redeemed soul in heaven, God our Father, and Jesus our Savior, would all say "Now."

On Monday Brother J. D. Williams of Greensboro came to do the preaching during the week. Monday afternoon his text was Psalm 73:28, "It is good for me to draw near to God." A few thoughts from his sermons follow:

It is possible for us to follow Christ at a distance, to be a sorry Christian. Like a scrub tree growing high on a mountain outside of its native zone, so we may be scrub Christians. How may we draw near? By prayer and by reading God's living Word.

What are the advantages of drawing near to God? It helps us to understand life's mysteries, to fight and overcome temptation, stops envy, and bears us safely over the river of death.

Monday night from Prov. 11:30 and Dan. 12:3 he preached on "Soul-Winning." To win souls we must have been won ourselves, must believe those souls lost, must believe that all may be saved, and must believe that God can use me. How can we win them? That is where the wisdom comes in. We must love them with unfeigned love, and love God above all else. By all means we must draw and not drive. The reward is "to shine as the stars forever and ever."

Tuesday afternoon the text was found in 1st Samuel 17:37, David's victory over Goliath. David had a great confidence in a great God, not in skill or things. The basis of that great confidence was the childhood victories God had given him over the lion and the bear. He was not fighting a selfish battle, but was fighting for God and right.

Tuesday night the text was Zech. 3:1. In this world there are three powers—God, Satan and man. God and Satan both contend for man's soul. The biggest we can think is to conceive of our companionship with God. We each have a good angel to help us on our way. We also have a bad angel or personal devil at our right hand to hinder us. He is ever near to keep us from acting promptly, to accuse, and to preach a false gospel. He tells the backslider that he can't pick up again; he tells the sinner that the Bible is false, that there is no penalty for sin; he tells those who are hungering for God to wait a while, there is plenty of time. But God is mightier than Satan, and is able "to save to the uttermost all that come to him."

Space forbids us making too long a report. More later.

Asheboro.—The services last Sunday were held with about the usual size congregation. In the afternoon the writer baptized May Jane Ross, the fine little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Ross. The baptismal service was held in the home with a few of the family connections present.

Next Sunday evening the Thomasville Male Chorus, an organization of singers from the various churches of Thomasville, will give a program in our church. The hour is 7:30 o'clock and the public invited.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, filled his appointment to a good sized congregation. He delivered an interesting sermon, which he always does.

Sunday school is moving along nicely; a right good crowd was out for Sunday school today.

Among the boys who will leave Monday for school are Lucy Pender, to King's Business College in Greensboro; Sam Pender to High Point. We are praying that they will have a great success.

We are praying that Archie Grav Williams will soon be home again, and that his trip to Hot Springs will soon give him strength back to him again.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Summer is past, autumn is nearly here. Autumn brings with it Promotion Day, which is the last Sunday in September. This means we have to elect our new officers in Sunday school, promote our classes, and reassign our teachers. Each department in our school is expected to show to the others something of what they have learned during the year.

Rally Day is also advancing. We hope to have an increased number present on that day.

The Workers' Council held its monthly meeting at the church on Thursday evening. Circle No. 2 of the Ladies' Auxiliary was lost, Mrs. H. O. Sapp is chairman of this circle. Circle No. 4, the young people's circle, is going to entertain the council next month. Problems of our Sunday school were discussed and settled, a social hour was also enjoyed.

Regular services were held Sunday and a very good number attended both church school and church worship. A duet was given by Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Surratt; this was enjoyed very much. An interesting sermon was given by the pastor on "Know the Lord."

The superintendents of the Cradle Roll, Beginners and Primary departments are anticipating giving the little tots of our Sunday school a social.

The Annual Conference will soon need attention. We hope all our churches will be ready and waiting when it comes.

PAULINE L. BRANSON, Reporter.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—On the evening of August 26, 1929, death claimed Mr. J. S. Crawford, one of our oldest and best members. He had spent his entire life in Orange Chapel community and had been a charter member of our church since early life. He attended the services when health would permit. He was a good man, always ready to help any one who needed help. We are thankful for such a life.

He leaves to mourn their loss a widow, three sons and one daughter. His funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy, and the body was tenderly laid to rest in Orange Chapel cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers. May the God of all grace greatly bless and comfort the bereaved, and most of all, the widow who so tenderly cared for him through his years of affliction. He had lived to the ripe old age of nearly 86 years, and knew the cares of this world, which will make heaven more beautiful.

Our revival meeting began the third Sunday in August and closed the following Friday night, with Rev. Edward Suits as pulpit help. Mr. Suits' preaching was of a very high order, forceful and convincing. He preached the gospel so plain that even the children could understand. There were several conversions and the church was revived. We feel that much good was accomplished, although not all we had hoped for.

M. J. F.

Enfield Charge.—The first Sunday night in the absence of the pastor Rev. A. D. Shelton preached at the Enfield charge. The people appreciated his message very much.

The week following the first Sunday the writer assisted Brother Shelton in his meeting at Pleasant Hill. Some visible results of the meeting were eight converts and five additions to the church. Brother Shelton has some good folks here; we spent most of our time in the home of one of them. If you want to be treated like a king, try the Crews at Pleasant Hill.

On the second Sunday night the writer exchanged pulpits with Rev. C. L. Spencer. Our people here were glad to have Brother Spencer. He brought a helpful message.

Our young people are beginning to leave for school. Misses Katherine and Leona Lawrence have entered High Point College. Miss Elizabeth Lawrence will return to Greenville College to continue her studies. She is leaving the 26th of this month. Misses Ruby Whitaker and Gladys White will soon be returning to school.

A committee from the Enfield church is investigating the possibility of putting in a new heating plant for the church. A committee from the Whitakers Chapel church has been asked to get estimates on having the Whitakers Chapel church roof and walls repaired.

Here it might be added that the Enfield church gave the pastor a vacation during the month of August. The writer enjoyed his vacation and came back more determined than ever to give his best to this kind and thoughtful people.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Lincolnton Station.—Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, has returned from Asheville where he was preaching in a revival meeting. We were glad to have him back home again. The messages Sunday morning and Sunday night were inspiring and soul-stirring.

We are proud of our church work, for it is growing in number and strength by the help of God, for which we are thankful.

We have a young men's evangelistic club and also a young ladies' evangelistic club in Lincolnton, to which many of our members belong. The club members are doing a great work for the Lord, of which we are very proud.

The pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, wife and several members were present at a reunion Sunday afternoon, at which music was rendered by the Lackal Quartet of M. P. church. Thanks.

REPORTER.

Union Grove, South Winston Charge.—We have not sent in a report from our church in a long time, but we are not dead yet.

Our faithful pastor, Brother Kinnaman, has been giving us real soul food in the wonderful messages he brings us from time to time. Our Sunday school has been the largest this year that it has ever been in the history of our church that we have any record of.

Our protracted meeting is to begin next Sunday, September 15. Three services on Sunday. We invite everybody to come and worship the Lord with us. We have been having prayer meetings each week for some time praying that the Lord will give us a mighty revival at this time. We ask the prayers of all Christians who read this, that God will have His way entirely in this meeting.

A MEMBER.

Henderson.—Our annual revival meeting came to a close last Sunday evening. The meeting is considered a success. The attendance was unusually good and the interest splendid. Twenty children made a decision for Christ at the decision service Sunday morning. Five adults have given their names for church membership. All these will be given an opportunity to unite with the church next Sunday morning, September 15.

Rev. N. G. Bethea did the preaching throughout the series. All those who attended the services were highly pleased with his messages. They were strong and forceful, holding the attention of the large congregations who attended, to an unusual degree. The spiritual life of the church was greatly strengthened and many have expressed a desire to do more for the Kingdom.

Brother Asa A. Hardee will be our delegate to the Annual Conference. He as well as the pastor and other officials of the church is anxious to make a good report to that body. If this desire is realized much work must be done during the remaining eight weeks.

Rally Day will be observed Sunday, September 22nd. The children of the Sunday school, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Fox, will render a program during the Sunday school hour and at 11 o'clock Rev. Lawrence Little will deliver the message. We are looking forward to this day with a great deal of pleasure. An effort will be made to have every member of the church present, and all former members are invited to attend.

In many respects this has been the most pleasant year of the present pastorate. While there has been no outstanding accomplishment a good, steady growth has been realized and a spirit of harmony has prevailed throughout the year. We thank all who have co-operated in the work and hope that the remaining few weeks may be the best of all.

R. A. HUNTER.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—The fourth Sunday in August our revival meeting began. Rev. Robert Short, of Roberta, did the preaching. He preached some of the best and most soul-stirring sermons I ever heard. Splendid congregations greeted him at every appointed hour. I feel that every one that heard him went away feeling they were closer to the Lord. We were so glad to have you with us, Mr. Short. Come back when you can.

Rev. Mr. Williams and Rev. Mr. Crutchefield of Orange charge were with us three afternoons of our meeting. Both rendered us an interesting sermon. We were so glad to have them with us. Hope you all can come again.

The Ladies' Aid Society met August 1 with Mrs. P. D. Drye. We were glad to see so many present. An interesting program was rendered, after which refreshments were served.

On Friday, August 30, our hearts were made sad when news came to us of the death of Mrs. A. B. Garmon. She had been a member of our Ladies' Aid Society for some time. She was a faithful member. We will greatly miss her but we feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

On September 6th society met with Mrs. M. L. Stallings, our president. Mrs. P. L. Garmon had charge of the program. Birthday gifts were presented to our president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings. After an interesting program and hour of worship an ice course was served. One new member, Mrs. Arch McCleod, was received. Next meeting will be with Mrs. Carl Stallings October 3rd.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Paul Kerlee is improving after undergoing an operation.

Mr. W. H. Shell was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

Brother Harrison is still giving his faithful services. May God bless him in his work. We cannot find words to express our appreciation of him.

Our Sunday school is moving along very well. Attendance holds the same most every Sunday.

Pray for us that we may go on doing all we can for the upbuilding of God's kingdom here, and when we have done our best we feel that will be little.

MRS. J. E. HARTIS.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—The second Sunday in September Brother Reed preached us another good sermon, one among the best that he has preached. Wish that more of our members could have been out to have heard him. Received two members in the church today, Miss Leora Cook and Master Ray Fine. We hope that they will make useful members. Will we do our part to help them when they need our help?

We are sorry that Mrs. Reed is on the sick list. She is off now and will probably have to have an operation. We hope it will not be a serious one. We have learned to love Mrs. Reed and trust she will soon be back with us again.

After service Sunday Mr. Reed went to Mr. Monk Taylor's to a birthday dinner and then on to Pine Hill in the afternoon.

The year is nearing a close. Only one more service at this church this conference year. We are behind on our preacher's salary, but if all will do their part we will come out all right. The last quarterly conference will be held on Saturday before the third Sunday in October at Chapel Hill.

ABBIGAIL COGGINS, Reporter.

Draper.—The M. P. church of Draper had a nice time at the Battleground last Saturday and had a nice dinner.

Many were present Sunday morning at preaching. Sunday school starts at 9:45 and preaching at 11 o'clock.

Rev. W. T. Totten visited his old home town last week and had a nice time.

MRS. M. A. CHANDLER, Reporter.

High Point.—We were much pleased to greet our pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, and family upon their return Thursday afternoon from a month's vacation spent with relatives and friends in Ohio and Pennsylvania. They report a delightful trip and rest. At the worship hour Sunday morning the message was brought by Rev. Mr. Farmer, who spoke with renewed vigor and fluency on the subject, "Strikes and the Working Man's Christ." This was a timely topic appropriate for Labor Day, and dealt with fundamental principles necessary to the settlement of labor troubles in the South.

At the evening service the discourse was based on the text in Isaiah 45:9, "Voe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou?" or "Adapted to Christian Ends." He said in part that the plan of God may be seen all about us. In the physical world we find law, order, dependence, godlikeness; in our homes we find love, order, co-operation. The sad part of it is that we forget God. It would not say that this age is forgetting God entirely. The desire of every man, woman and child should be to make his life meet the ends and purposes of God. It is an established fact that God has a definite plan and purpose for every life. He surely has the right to rule the person whom He has created. Your life and mine cannot float placidly down the stream of time without conforming to the rules of adaptation. In nature all about us we see examples of organisms fitted to a function. For instance, in the north of England lives a long-wooled sheep which could not survive in the tropics. The squirrel has firm, strong teeth with which he cracks nuts to sustain life; the giraffe with his long neck, the humming bird with its long, keen bill with which to extract the honey from flowers; the porcupine with his sharp quills for protection, these are all examples of the purpose of God who created them, and an evidence of superior, creative intelligence. Dare we take these lives of ours and do what we please, "eat, drink and be merry"? The difficulty of this age of unrest is that men forget that God has a purpose in all lives. Happy is that man who condemneth not himself in the thing that he alloweth, and our nearest approach to God is to be at peace with ourselves. Carlyle said, "Who is he that overcometh the world? He that believeth in God." Owen Meredith in his inimitable poem, "Lucille," has these beautiful lines:

"Honest love, honest sorrow, honest work for the day, honest hope for the morrow,
Are these worth nothing more than the hand they make weary,
The heart they have saddened, the life they leave dreary?
Hush! The seven-fold Heavens to the voice of the Spirit
Echo; He that overcometh shall all things inherit."

In the absence of the church organist, Prof. Ernest B. Stimson, who, with his sister, Miss Kathleen, is taking a vacation at Virginia Beach, Mrs. R. L. Farmer played the pipe organ very beautifully at both these services.

On Monday evening, August 26, the members of the Senior C. E. Society motored to Tar Heel Inn on the Greensboro road, and enjoyed a watermelon feast.

On Friday evening, August 30, about 30 young people from Central Friends church went out to the Archdale playground for games, a picnic supper, and a C. E. service honoring Arnold J. Koonce, state president, and officers of the local union. Miss May Frazier presided over the meeting and introduced the following numbers:

Devotionals, by Marvin Shore.

"Our Guests," by Miss Grace Bulla.

"To Those Who Go Away to College," by Miss May Frazier.

"Plans for the Coming Year," by Luther Medlin.

At the close of this program an interesting and helpful talk was made by Rev. Tom Alderman Sykes, beloved minister of the Friends church. This service was one of a series of out-of-door meetings with which the summer program is being brought to a close by the young people of Friends church.

The executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon with 10 present. The question of trying to interest the women of nearby churches and those in our own city and induce them to form new auxiliaries was discussed at length, but no definite plan was decided on. The general meeting for the month of September will be held in the form of a "covered dish supper" at the church on Wednesday evening, September 11, at 6:45 o'clock, when our September Thank Offering will be observed, and to which the husbands, sons, brothers, and sweethearts of the members are cordially invited. Members of the different circles will donate the supper, and this Thank Offering will be divided between N. C. and New Century Service work.

We were greatly pained and saddened to learn the distressing news of the death of one of our beloved members and a bright and attractive young matron, Mrs. J. B. Sechrest, which occurred last Monday evening in Guilford General Hospital at the result of two serious operations. She was ill only a few days, having been taken to the hospital last Thursday. Born Miss Emma Davis, a sister of Councilman W. A. Davis, she was practically reared in High Point, was an active member of the A. M. Idol Philathea class, and had won many warm friends and admirers by her sweet and lovable personality. A more extended obituary will appear later.

Mrs. W. H. Flots, of McKeesport, Pa., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. I. Farmer, at the parsonage. She accompanied them home from their vacation trip. Mrs. Clinton R. Farmer, sister-in-law of Rev. Mr. Farmer, and her parents are expected to be their guests this week.

Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York have returned home from Chicago, where Dr. York attended clinic lectures.

Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe and daughters and Miss Vera Idol came home Sunday evening from Myrtle Beach, S. C., where they had a cottage for two or three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Ballard, of Baltimore, Md., left Monday for their home after a visit of two weeks to their son, Rev. E. Lester Ballard, and his wife.

Misses Claire Douglas and Rosalie Andrews went to Mebane to spend the past week-end with Misses Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson. Miss Douglas is planning to enter the State University, where she will pursue work leading to the degree of A.M., and Miss Andrews will be a senior in High Point College.

The doors of High Point College will open for the work of the sixth year next Monday, September 9th. There will be a few additions to the faculty, and one or two changes as well. Mrs. Pauleete Rogers Haltom has resigned as bursar, having removed with her young husband to Charleston, S. C. The appointment of her successor has not yet been announced.

The city schools will also open on Monday, September 9th, and teachers from all parts of the state are flocking to the city to attend teachers' meetings and to get settled for the winter. Supt. T. Wingate Andrews and Principal L. R. Johnston are expecting a record attendance, more than 1,000 pupils in the high school. Two hundred teachers will guide the work of the system.

Connelly Springs Charge.—We have been silent through the columns of the Herald, but silence does not indicate that we are on a standstill or idling away the time. We have been very busy. This has been a year filled with labor. Many sacrifices have been necessary. Sorrow has come our way. Our companion went home to God in early spring. In July her brother passed on to his reward. September 2, 1929, her father, Paul F. Widenhouse, passed from labor to reward. Then, too, we have stood by and said the last rites for two of our beloved ministers of the gospel, Rev. W. P. Martin and Rev. H. D. Garmon, both of whom were members of our church here and stood by us in every way. We could lean on them for help and advice. Sorrow has filled our hearts, but they all died in the faith, and their righteous lives have been a source of strength to us. Joy has filled our hearts because we have entered into their labors and have seen the work prosper here.

The fifth Sunday in June the district rally was held at Shady Grove church on this charge. This was well attended by our people and was a great blessing to the charge. The subjects were well chosen and the messages were uplifting and encouraging, and all went away better Methodist Protestants.

The first Sunday in August found us in the midst of our revival meetings. We began first at Burke's Chapel. This little church is located just across Henry river in a prosperous community. Four public highways come together in front of the church there and serve to bring folks from almost every direction. Those are a loyal little band of folks. Much has been added to the building this year, recess pulpit, the front of the church re-worked, porch added, bell tower and bell. This all added to the success of the meeting.

The writer did all the preaching at this church. The interest was good all the way through. We were not able to seat the people at the evening services. While we did not have as many conversions as we had hoped to see, still the meeting was a success. The church was greatly revived. No additions to the church, but some to join later.

The second Sunday found us at Union Grove. This church is located in upper Iredell county, and serves a large and prosperous community. Four Sunday school rooms have been added this year. Just across the road stands the state high school that serves the educational life of the community. The state is now erecting a large brick building, and when completed it will add another asset to the community.

Brother G. H. Hendry was our help there. He did fine preaching. There were no conversions and no additions to the church, but the church was helped greatly.

The third Sunday found us at Shady Grove. This church is one mile from Connelly Springs. The writer did the preaching here until Thursday night when Brother Charlie Grant came and preached till Saturday night. We had a good meeting, eight professions and seven joined the church. The church was greatly revived.

Fourth Sunday we began at Shiloh. This church is five miles northwest of Lenora in the mountain section. Brother Grant went over and preached Sunday and Monday at 11 and returned to take up his school work, and the writer did the preaching until the close of the first Sunday night. This was a great meeting in many respects. All denominations entered into the meeting with no other purpose but to get souls saved. The last service after your humble writer had preached with earnestness of his soul on the last message to man or the last invitation to man, several Adventists came forward and took my hand and said, I have been made to believe in a future punishment for sin.

May God help us as preacher and people to hold up the plan of salvation; to be saved is to be saved from something, and that something according to the eternal Word of God is the eternal burning.

Brothren, pray for us.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Granville Charge, Rehoboth Church.—On September 1 Rev. H. F. Fogleman took for his Scripture lesson a portion of the second chapter of St. Matthew. His text was the second verse of this chapter: "We have seen the star in the east and have come to worship him." As you remember, Three Wise Men were seeking Jesus, the highest object in the universe. They were men of intelligence and they took with them beautiful gifts, expressions of their love for Him. This Star led them to the place where Jesus was born. Only those that had this love for Him could find Him.

Let us seek first the kingdom of God, worship Him in deed and in truth. True worship leads us to a well-rounded life and perfect manhood. Worship is the receptacle principle through which we enrich our souls. Fail to worship, we fail to live. The only way to find God then is through worship. It gives us growth just as food nourishes our bodies.

Two things are very important; namely, the Christian home and the Christian church. Does the Star cease to shine in your home? The church leads men to Jesus Christ and the Christian home leads them, too. Does this Star cease to shine in your own souls? If so, I trust that you may not be satisfied until you find Jesus.

Recently we have divided our missionary society into circles. We trust we may be able to do better work and raise more money.

REPORTER.

Laurel Hill.—Our revival meeting began the second Sunday in August and closed Friday night before the first Sunday. Laurel Hill and Hebron churches held their revival services together under a tent. A large crowd was present at each service. It is felt and thought that this great meeting was a blessing to our two churches, community, and the surrounding communities, as well. We had some of God's greatest servants to help our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan. They were Rev. J. D. Morris, who preached the first week until Friday evening. Then Rev. Mr. Morgan preached until Sunday when Rev. John Green came to his rescue. He preached until the next Sunday, then Rev. Jim Green came and preached until Friday night, when the meeting closed. Many and great things were done in the Lord's name during these three weeks, but we feel that there is much more that could have been done. There were a large number of conversions, but the number is not known by the reporter, neither is it known how many joined different churches.

We learned to like the Revs. Green and Rev. Morris. They gave wonderful messages which told us the facts and they were just the kind of sermons we needed.

Two of the outstanding sermons were preached by Rev. J. M. Morgan. During the second week of the meeting he preached on "The Devil Fishing." The other one was preached on the second Sunday of the meeting.

We have recently bought some new song-books for our church. It is hoped the new songs will be sung in praising the Lord.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely under the leadership of our good superintendent, Mr. A. A. Sain.

We regret very much to give up one of our Sunday school teachers, Miss Pauline Lackey, who is going away to take training as a nurse.

Two of our good Christian ladies are making up money to buy new carpet for our church. May the Lord bless them and may their aim be accomplished.

On each second Sunday morning and third Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Morgan brings us messages. Come and worship with us at these services.

MARRIED

Lovett-Caveness

On Saturday evening, September 7, at about 8 o'clock, the writer united in marriage at the home of the bride, Miss Mittie Lovett and Mr. John M. Caveness, both of Asheboro. Miss Caveness is a daughter of the late Colon Lovett and Louella Hammer Lovett and is a granddaughter of the late Rev. W. C. Hammer. For the past several years she has made her home in Asheboro and is widely known and greatly appreciated here. Mr. Caveness is from the Coleridge community of Randolph county, but has made his home in Asheboro for the past several years. He is a former Clerk of the Superior Court of Randolph county and is actively engaged in manufacturing and banking. The wedding came as a complete surprise to the entire community with the exception of the immediate family of the bride.

UNITED STATES TO CANADA

Elder brother am I,
You are the younger son;
Held by ties of kinship,
We work together as one.

The web-like line between us,
Needs no sentry nor gun;
In mutual understanding,
We work together as one.

Some may boast of warfare,
Of strife we will have none;
In peace and fruitful labor,
We work together as one.

The race now set before us,
Alike with patience we run;
Girded with truth and honor,
We work together as one.

Elder brother am I,
You are the younger son;
Under the guidance of God,
We work together as one.

—Many anxious friends throughout the state will be pained to learn of the death of Mrs. S. M. Hornaday, of Burlington, which occurred this (Thursday) morning at Wesley Long hospital, Greensboro. She had been ill for several weeks, and while her condition had been critical for some time, it had been hoped that she might recover. Funeral arrangements had not been announced at the time of going to press.

Uncle Eli (seeing Scotland by auto)—Say, Mac! Could you tell me if this is Aberdeen? Mac—Weel, if ye gae me saxpence, I'll tell ye.

Aunt Jerusha (who has been in Scotland before)—Drive on, Eli. This must be Aberdeen.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

A Tribute of Love

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of the Women's Auxiliary of West End M. P. church, Greensboro, N. C., record the death of one of our most faithful and consecrated members, Mrs. J. R. Seawell.

In her death we have lost a true friend, one who was interested in all Christian activities and faithful in all the interest of her church.

Therefore be it resolved:

First—That we bow in humble submission to His divine will;

Second—That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father who does all things well;

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Woman's Auxiliary of which she was a member, and a copy be sent to the Missionary Record and the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. P. A. BURNS,

MRS. W. W. CLEMENTS,

MRS. S. H. STAPLETON.

Emma Davis Sechrest

"No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife,
And all life not be purer and stronger thereby."

For the third time in as many months the members of First church, High Point, have been called on to mourn the tragic and untimely passing of a beloved co-worker. Mrs. J. V. Sechrest, of 513 Washington street, succumbed to two serious operations at Guilford General Hospital on Monday evening, September 2nd. She had been ill less than a week.

Born Miss Emma Davis, in Montgomery county, December 2, 1898, she was the daughter of the late Walter C. and Ellen Lee Davis, and moved to High Point with her family when a young girl. She attended the High Point graded school, and was married to Mr. J. V. Sechrest, April 16, 1924. For the past nine years she had been employed in the office of her brother, Ex-Mayor William A. Davis, where she was a faithful and efficient worker. She was an earnest and active member of the First church, and was an unusually loyal and faithful worker in the A. M. Idol Philathea class.

Funeral services were conducted on Wednesday afternoon, September 4, in First church, by her pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of Wesley Memorial M. E. church, Rev. E. L. Ballard and Rev. A. L. Hunter. The last-named minister paid the following lovely tribute to her splendid character: "I have known Emma twelve years, have been her pastor for two years, while she was teacher of the Philathea class. She never refused to do any church work that I asked of her, and I do not think that I ever knew a better Christian." The choir sang two lovely selections, "Thy Will Be Done" and "Come Unto Me When Shad-ows Darkly Gather."

The following friends acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. D. V. Hoskins, S. D. Clapp, James Fagan, A. J. Bolling, R. H. Shaw, W. B. Hall, W. L. Edwards, and A. E. Futrelle. Interment was made in the family plat in Oakwood cemetery. She is survived by her young husband, J. V. Sechrest, three brothers, Wm. A. and McKinley Davis of High Point, and George H. Davis of Thomasville; and two sisters, Mrs. Luther Shipton and Mrs. Bertha Church of High Point. This sweet-spirited young woman has left us in life's fair morning, and countless friends mourn the untimely close of her beautiful and consecrated young life. Her mission on earth was ended, her sun has gone down ere it reached its zenith. God had need of this choice spirit, and translated it to the realms of light.

"O rare, sweet soul, so early passed beyond,
What sights are to thy raptured vision given?
What fruits supernal of thy hopes so fond Are thine in that far country we call heaven?"

How fares it with thee now? 'Tis but a day
Since in these earthly ways thou didst tread;
Now, sudden, thou hast gone so far away
We cannot reach thee. Whither art thou fled?"

B. A. P.

Pearson

In sad but loving remembrance of my devoted husband, George Washington Pearson, who departed this life on July 29th at 10 minutes to 7 p.m., when the Chariot swung low and he stepped on and his spirit was taken to the Great Beyond to join his once happy family who had preceded him many years ago. Surely there must have been a happy meeting while his home was shrouded in gloom of sadness, yet what rejoicing there must have been over in the Glory World.

He was twice married, united in marriage in young womanhood to Miss Sara Williams of this county. To this union were born three children, one boy and two girls. The boy lived to the age of three years, and 32 years last June he lost his wife and both daughters within a period of two years; with three grandchildren only left to constitute his family. Twenty-seven years ago the 13th of last August he was married to Miss Ferguson of Greenville county, Virginia, who with three sons survive him.

He united with Philadelphia M. P. church at the age just a boy 15 years old, and departed this life at the age of 83 years, eight months and 25 days. He was liberal to all church causes and the oldest member of his church. Three years ago last May he was stricken with paralysis, but was only confined to his room three weeks before his death. He was so alive in life until stricken with the above-mentioned and provided so sumptuously for his family, being one of Brunswick's most prosperous farmers, the oldest citizen of his community and of such a noble character, his walk in life was a good example. He was born, reared and spent his entire life in his immediate neighborhood. He was a good husband, father and neighbor. Three ministers were present on this sad occasion and after rendering an appropriate service he was laid to rest at home in the family section in the midst of many relatives and friends. The floral offerings were very beautiful.

Why should we mourn departed friends
Or shrink at death's alarms?

'Tis but a voice that Jesus sends
To call us to His arms.

KATE N. PEARSON.

THE ROAD

The long road, the short road,
The road we all must wend;
The road that leads to Somewhere,
Leads to our journeys end.

The plain road, the vague road,
Where men and women go
With eager, hopeful, rapid pace
Or leaden steps and slow.

The high road, the low road,
The path of joy or pain;
The pilgrimage to Somewhere
That never turns again.

The path of flowers and sunshine,
But few will tread that way;
For most the path is stony,
The sky o'rcast and grey.

By long road or short road,
A road we all must wend;
We'll surely meet at Somewhere
That marks the journey's end.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. J. B. Leonard, Lexington, four sheets.

Mrs. George Wyatt, Mebane, one scarf, six aprons, six towels, three wash-cloths, and six cakes of soap.

The Carolina Tractor and Equipment Company, Salisbury, N. C., one stationary drive attachment for our Caterpillar Fifteen Tractor. This was secured through the solicitation of Mr. W. S. Jobe, of Grace Church, Greensboro. This would have cost us between fifty and sixty dollars.

Special

We asked through the Herald for money with which to buy fall shoes. One ten dollars has already been reported. This week we received a check for $100 from two friends. They wish their names withheld, but they are friends indeed. May the dear Lord bless and continue to prosper them. We also received a check from an "M. P. Philathea Class" from a church which always sends its monthly offering, and this extra check for $7.50 was designated for fall shoes. It heartens us greatly to be getting this extra help just as this season of the year when so many extras are upon us.

The Immediate Extras

Fall shoes for 86 children, school books and supplies for 77 children, two carloads of coal and the freight thereon. These must all be paid at a very early date. Any personal gifts or extra offering will help us greatly.

Quilts

Last fall we made an appeal for quilts for our beds, and they came in so abundantly that we really have all we need for the coming winter. Sounds good, doesn't it?

Table Linen

It has been suggested that we give the dimensions of table linen needed. For one dining room we need eight table cloths, regular width and four yards long. For the other dining room we need 12 tablecloths, regular width and three and one-half yards long. Thank you in advance for your response to this.

The Ministry of Beauty

The following is a clipping from the Progressive Farmer:

"About the first of July some tourists who were returning to Michigan after a winter in Florida stopped at our farm, and while there asked me if I could tell them the name of some flowering shrub they had admired all along the highway. 'It is the most beautiful thing we have seen in the South,' they said. 'It grows as large as a small tree and is simply covered with pink blooms just as pretty as lilac blooms. Can you tell us what it is, and do you think it would grow in Michigan?' I supposed they were talking about some tropical plant with which I was not familiar, but presently one of the tourists discovered the crape myrtle at the end of our scuppernong arbor, and exclaimed, 'That's one of them! Do tell us what it is.'"

We have quoted this to follow it up with this request:

We shall be so glad to get some young crape myrtle trees to plant. We also wish a number of young walnut trees, and cherry trees, especially the morello cherry. Also shrubbery of various kinds that will do to plant in clusters.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OFLOOSE LEAF BOOKS

We are also anxious to get a number of grapevines planted. We also have the promise of some scuppernong and James grapevines from near Enfield. Mr. W. F. Grabs, of King, who has been so liberal with his fruit for us this summer, has also promised to send us some choice grapevines.

When you send anything of the kind, please be sure to label it plainly so we will know what we are planting.

Harvest Home

We know you are remembering our request for wheat and corn and canned fruit and chickens and similar produce. Our country churches especially are asked to work this plan. Gather it together and send in truck to us, or call and we will send for it. Thank you.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

—Mrs. W. D. Reed, wife of Rev. W. D. Reed, pastor of Davidson Charge, is now in St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro. Our Good Shepherd

Our shepherd is the Lord!
The Lord! His very Self!
He leaves us not to those Whose only thought is self.

Through all the nights He watches,
Through all the days He leads.
He saves us from the wolf,
He cares for all our needs.

In pastures green we roam,
By waters cool we lie.
In drought He comforts us,
In want we do not die.

Both wise and good is He,
He knows and loves us all,
He calls us by our names,
He would not let us fall.

If once we stray away,
His love does not grow cold:
How gently would He lead
Us back within the fold!

D. D. or D. N.?

One of these degrees will be conferred at our Annual Conference on each of our pastoral charges. D. D. means Duty Done. D. N. means Duty Neglected. Which will look better to you—Your Own Charge, D. D., or Your Own Charge, D. N.?

A Thought That Grows Upon Us

There are certain thoughts that grow larger and larger the longer we think upon them. One of these evergrowing thoughts is that of sin. The name is short—has only three letters, and has no harsh sound. It is just such a name as we might choose for a pet we like to fondle. But we soon learn that what it stands for is an evil thing. But still it does not seem a great and terrible evil. We see people smile at the mention of certain sins. We see seemingly good people commit what we regard as sins and they seem to have no trouble about it. Yet we can not feel at ease about the matter. A feeling has been aroused within us which we cannot dismiss. We have caught a glimpse of a certain relationship which gives to sin, any sin, a mighty significance. When we follow out the word to the limits of its meaning, we find that it involves the Infinite One, God. Sin is an affront, an offense, against God. As such it deserves the longest and harshest and most hideous-sounding word that could be coined. Perhaps it ought to be an unpronounceable name, to be represented by a gesture significant of the profoundest horror. What a monstrous misfit is sin of any sort or degree in the domain of the All-Righteous and All-Loving God! There can be no small sins.

To deliberately disobey such a God, our Creator, whose we are absolutely, is an unspeakably great offense. When we come to realize the true character of sin, we are grieved profoundly that we were ever so senseless, so witless, as to be willing to commit even the least harmful sin. The thoughtless and habitual sinners we see about us appear to us as morally sleeping men who see not how they walk and know not the destruction that waits for them. The thought excites our pity for them; we wish we could awaken them and warn them. The evil of sin grows greater until it becomes terrible to think of. We do not wonder that it required an infinite sacrifice to put it away.

Our Desert Wanderings

The Israelites used forty years in making a journey they might have made in a little over forty days. Their case illustrates that of many others, ours perhaps. We have been church members for forty years, but our progress in grace might have been realized in forty days. Why were the Israelites so long? "We see that they could not enter in because of unbelief." Why are we so slow? Same reason. We do not believe that there is any higher attainment for us. We are satisfied with what we are. If we believed in a better state of grace and were all on fire with zeal, for its attainment, we would have attained long ago and would today be eagerly longing for and earnestly seeking still higher heights. The climb heavenward, the ascent to perfect character, demands our best undelayed efforts. Life in the spiritual highlands is so much better than life in the spiritual lowlands. Our journey challenges us to speed and untiring pursuit.

—The opening at High Point College is reported as better than a year ago. We have not learned the number of registrations. This increased attendance is encouraging, considering the financial state of the times. Let us hope that the college will have a good year in every respect.

—In our issue of August 22, in an open letter to Dr. Isidor Singer, we referred to Mr. Louis Marshall, described as "the uncrowned King of the Jewish commonwealth of this country." He is further described as "the president of one of the oldest, largest and richest Jewish congregations of the world, Congregation Emanuel of New York, which will, October next, open the portals of its palatial new Cathedral of the One God, bearing in letters of gold over its doors the motto of the Jewish mission: 'And my House,' says the Lord, 'shall be called a House of Prayer for all the nations of the earth.' (Isaiah 56:7)." Mr. Marshall, no doubt, looked forward with intense interest to the opening of this new cathedral, but death intervened. He died in Switzerland September 11 after an operation. Of course there will be sadness in the congregation on the opening day because of the absence of the highly esteemed president, Mr. Marshall.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH

(CONTEST ARTICLE No. 2)

The country church occupies a very conspicuous place in the life of the community. It is a decided factor in the development of the moral and spiritual life.

In the country church we 'most always find the simplest form of worship, free from worldliness, pride and bigotry, often found in city churches; while it has its faults, disadvantages and its discouragements, we always find a pure, wholesome spirit manifest among her people, and one always feels free to express that deep joy and emotion of the heart when his or her cup is full and running over.

It is a well known fact that a large per cent of the leaders in our religious, political, and industrial enterprises come from rural communities. In studying the history of our country we find that the rural community has always produced the highest type of men and women, and the country church has always played an important part in producing these noble characters. It would be hard to imagine what a community would be without a church. We know that it would not be a desirable place in which to live. No one wants a home or a farm in a community that is not convenient to a church.

When we take a retrospective view of the country church, of the blessings, the joys, and the comforts she brings to her people, we are constrained to thank and praise God for such an institution. As rural communities are developing along other lines the opportunities of the country church have never been so great and if the rural community is to continue to develop that high class of boys and girls and men and women, then the church must let her light shine and cause her influence to be felt in the development of her people. I believe one of the greatest needs of the country church today is that of leaders who are capable of teaching and who have the respect and confidence of the people. Another great need is that of getting our church work more systematized. Every branch of the church organization should know just what its duties are and should go about them in a business-like way.

Another outstanding need of the country church is that of pastors. We have lots of good preachers, but not so many good pastors. It seems that parishionering has about gone out of fashion with some of our preachers. I am not saying this to criticize anyone, but because I believe the church needs ministers who will visit in the homes and mingle with people and learn of their needs, of their joys and sorrows. The minister who thus mingles with his people will be better prepared to serve them than the preacher who does not visit his people. Any preacher should be able to get closer to the hearts of his people in their homes than he can in the pulpit.

One of the greatest problems that confront the country church today, is that of getting people to attend church. Of course there are other problems, but most of them would vanish if we could bring about a revival in church attendance. I think we should discourage Sunday motoring and Sunday amusements as much as possible. I also think there should be a greater restriction on the sale of gas and oils on Sundays, as well as the sale of other things. We should do all we could to encourage people to attend church and Sunday School. We can do much to promote our church by boosting them in the right way. If my church is good enough for me, and it is, if I am finding joy and comfort and inspiration in its services, and I do; then I think it is good enough for my neighbors, and it is my duty to boost my church to my neighbors that they may come and share in its joys and comforts and inspirations.

Let us boost our churches, our Sunday Schools and our prayer meetings, until it shall no longer be necessary for a man to say to his brother, know the Lord, for all shall know Him.

LOCATING AND CONSOLIDATING OF COUNTRY CHURCHES

The relocating of public highways, the drift of country people to villages, towns, and cities; and the greater demand for enlarged programs and efficiency in service make necessary in many instances the relocating and consolidating of country churches.

An Age of Consolidation

Almost every daily paper brings news of consolidations of banks, railroads, manufacturing plants and stores. Only a few years ago there was a one or two teacher school in every community. If the present rate of consolidation is kept up it will not be many years until all the small schools will be consolidated. Good roads and truck conveyance has made it possible to consolidate these small schools and give country children the advantage of better schools. The consolidated school provides better equipment; better teachers; and has many other advantages over the small school. The churches seem to be the last to take the advantage of consolidation.

Good Roads

One of the outstanding needs of the country church is good roads. Many of these churches have been left off of the main highways. Often during the winter season these churches are almost compelled to go into winter quarters because the people cannot get to the church. Proper locating of these churches would go a long ways toward solving the good road problem. I am opposed to taking country people to town or city churches. But where the people mingle together in a consolidated school in the open country or small towns and villages, they should have the privilege of worshiping God together.

Buildings and Equipment

Another important need is better church buildings and equipment. A majority of our rural church buildings consist of one auditorium. No church today can properly serve its community in a spiritual way without an educational department providing separate rooms for each Sunday School class and Vacation Bible School classes. As it is today a majority of our country churches feel they are not financially able to build good churches with Sunday School class rooms. But two or three churches only a short distance apart could unite their strength and build a church that would be a credit to the community and for the up-building of the Kingdom of God. And many times these country churches are not properly heated, or it may be that the wind is whistling in at some of the broken out window panes. A warm, comfortable church will help keep up the attendance during the winter season.

Trained Leadership

Still another crying need of the country churches is trained leadership. Many times they are not able to get the pastor they need to organize their young people and take the lead in kingdom service. More often they have difficulty in finding a good Sunday School superintendent; teachers for the classes; a leader for the choir; or some one to play the musical instrument. The consolidated church would stand a much better chance of getting a good pastor with leadership and consecration. The other places of leadership could more easily be filled and others trained to take their places.

Unity and Co-operation

Again there is need of unity and co-operation among our rural people. Many times families or individuals are not friendly with each other and will not work harmoniously together. Sometimes they withdraw and build a church of their own in the same community. And in some of these country communities there are five or six Protestant Churches of different denominations trying to keep up their little churches and not any of them strong enough to pay a pastor or run a good Sunday School. It is high time we sacrifice some of our differences and pray as Jesus did for the oneness of his followers.

Removing Difficulties

We all realize it is much easier to lay plans and advance beautiful theories of how to solve the country church problems, than it is to put these ideals into practice. Is the consolidation of country churches practical? We might ask if the consolidation of rural schools is practical? In many instances I think the consolidation of our country churches would be practical if we could only lead the people to see the many advantages they would gain. But in a democratic church like ours we can only do as the people are led to see and co-operate. There is need of being as, "Wise as serpents and harmless as doves," Matt. 10:15. One of the great difficulties in relocating of rural churches is the sacred memories of "The little brown church in the wild woods." Many of our fathers and mothers were converted at these altars. And in some instances they are connected with camp grounds and the glorious revivals of the past. Many times these neglected country churches are the mothers of our thriving village and city churches. I would not subtract one iota from the sacred memories of the past. But many times these altars that were once aflame with the shouts of the saints, have become cold and almost uninhabited. Parents labor hard and long to feed, clothe, educate and give their children a start in the world; but when they get old it sometimes becomes necessary to leave the old home with all its sacred memories and go to live with their children in their better homes and depend upon them for support. God bless our mother churches that stand on sacred ground; but God forbid that they stand in the way of relocating or consolidating where the Kingdom of God can better be advanced. Christ taught that neither in Jerusalem nor the mountain in Samaria should we worship the Father, but in spirit and in truth.

Another common excuse for not better locating or consolidating of country churches is the cemetery. The custom of holding the funeral service in the church may make it a little inconvenient if the church is removed. But many of our town and city people have to drive quite a distance from the church to the city cemetery. So far as the up-keep is concerned these country cemeteries could be easily endowed and kept in good condition from year to year. The best kept country cemetery I know is in a sparsely settled community where the church has been removed. Which is the more important to provide a church for the dead or for the living?

From what has been said, do not take me to be bewailing the country church. I think church attendance according to population is much better in the country than in the towns and cities. Some of our country churches are coming to the front in every respect. There is no better place to develop character than in prosperous rural sections with good schools and churches. Our town and city churches get many of their best members from the country church. May we all unite our prayers and efforts to make these rural communities the best place in the world to develop boys and girls.

E. A. BINGHAM.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE WHICH HAS NOT BEEN REMOVED

The cigarette trust is spending large sums from its twelve million dollar advertising appropriation to inform the American people that the ancient prejudice against cigarettes has been removed.

On the contrary, there was never a time before when the prejudice against cigarettes was increasing at such a phenomenal rate. For this the cigarette trust is itself responsible.

Millions of the American people, many of them users of tobacco, are rapidly being put into a fighting humor by the advertising methods of the cigarette people.

They object to advertising tobacco which encourages the use of cigarettes by women. They particularly object to it whether it appears in newspapers, magazines, or on billboards.

They object to the outrageous and false claims as to the "healthfulness" of cigarette smoking, claims which are known by any intelligent adult to be false.

They object to the use of the radio to invade the American home with exhortations to children and adolescents to use cigarettes. Dr. William G. Lennox, of the Medical School of Harvard University, voices the sentiment of millions of parents when he says, "I have two adolescent daughters who do not as yet smoke. You are directly contradicting my statements to them concerning the social and physical effects of smoking. You are endeavoring by every means in your power to break down my authority with them and to induce them to smoke. I thoroughly resent this and if I am not mistaken there are many thousands of parents who feel as I do and who are about ready to stand up and say so."

They object to almost every advertising method now being used for the purpose of increasing the sale of cigarettes. The sending of minors who are students in colleges for the purpose of conducting "blindfold tests," the sending of cigarettes through the mails to minors in states which try to protect them by law, the buying of testimonials from athletes who are themselves on record as to the harmful effects of cigarette smoking—all of this is rapidly becoming intolerable.

Senator Smoot has called upon the Congress of the United States to require that the tobacco manufacturers comply with the pure food laws and cease to misrepresent the product in which they deal. The request is reasonable. But the time seems to have come when Congress should go further than this. There are many people who believe that the time has come when Congress should consider the propriety of protecting the American home and reserving to American parents the health education of their children by excluding from the radio and the United States mails all cigarette advertising. There is not the slightest doubt that such proposed legislation would receive the support of millions of Americans who have stood about all that they can stand or intend to stand.

It is not contemplated to deprive the adult users of cigarettes of the opportunity to purchase them. But there is a majority sentiment in at least 300 Congressional districts prepared to demand the protection of American childhood from the atrocious assaults being made upon it.—Selected.

SYMPATHY

Brother J. R. Hutton is bereft of his mother. She was the daughter of one of our early ministers, Rev. Robert R. Prather. His name appears in the roll of our honored dead. Sister Hutton was a beloved and honored citizen of Greensboro, and the oldest member of West Market M. E. Church. She died in her ninety-fifth year. We extend the deep sympathy of the conference to our bereaved brother and his family.

Sister Reed, wife of Brother W. D. Reed, is in St. Leo Hospital recovering from an operation. Rev. W. F. Kennett is sick also at his home and is experiencing considerable discomfort. Each of them has the assurance of our prayers.

Burlington, Belmont, Fountain Place

September 22, Sunday.—This was a day with a full program, and one of marked interest to us. The morning appointment was with the first church. They observed Annual Conference and Home Coming Day, and despite the rain the attendance was large. For many years this church has had a steady and encouraging growth. Last year 73 persons were received into the church, making a net increase for the year of 41. The present enrollment is 720—the largest of any individual church in the conference. They have the distinction, also, of having the largest Sunday School enrollment of any church that we have. Their enrollment at the last conference was 588. They hold first place also in missionary organizations. In fact, this is a 100 per cent church in organization. There is an unusual field here for cultivation, and we are confident of the church's continued growth. Plans are in the making for relocating and a new building. They have outgrown their present building, and we trust that in due time they may have one in keeping with their needs and their opportunities. Brother Gerringer is in his second year there, as pastor, and he and his capable wife are proving themselves earnest and efficient workers. All the interests of the church are receiving their untiring attention. They begin a revival next Sunday, with the pastor as the preacher. We expect a good ending of the year's work, and that the church will take its usual place on all conference Honor Rolls.

In the afternoon we were at Belmont in a rally of the Fourth District, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, the chairman of this district, was present and presided. The rally was well attended. Five of the six charges in the district were represented. Brother Minnis spoke effectively on "All the Men of the Church Behind All the Programs of the Church." It was our privilege to address the meeting on the money phase of the church. We understand that the morning program was taken up, in part at least, with the women's work. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president of the North Carolina Branch, was present as one of the speakers. We were glad to see four of our pastors present. An interesting and important phase of the business session, following at the close of the afternoon program, was the organization of a district board of young people's work, in harmony with the order of the annual conference. It is our opinion that there are worthwhile possibilities in these organizations and we urge their organizations in all the districts. We congratulate the Fourth District upon this splendid rally.

Our appointment at 7:30 was with the Fountain Place church. We missed the pastor, Brother Chambliss. His appointment at Haw River made it necessary for him to be there. This not being the regular appointment, the attendance was probably not up to the normal, though several were present, and we were heard helpfully. But few churches have a more faithful congregation than the one at Fountain Place. They are united, zealous, and untiring in their work. Sixteen new members were added last year, giving them a net gain of twelve. Their per capita payment last year to all purposes runs up far above the average for the conference, being over $31.00. They have a heavy church debt for their membership, but we were glad to find them in a hopeful attitude toward this problem. The church is well organized and a zealous and progressive spirit characterizes the work. Brother Chambliss is dividing his time between this church and Haw River Mission, and is working earnestly to promote the progress of each church. We shall hope for a good closing of the year on this field.

This visit was unusual because of the contact that it gave us with friends and parishioners that we had worked with in delight to us, (and that means our family) to see them again, and to find so many of them still faithful in the work. Some we missed; they have their places in the church above. For the delightful fellowship of the day with pastors and people, and for the kindness and hospitality of friends, we are appreciative and grateful.

We are listing First Church, Burlington, Mt. Herman charge, and Glen Raven Church, with churches that will pay A. C. B. in full.

Good

The following clipping, of a news item of one of our churches was taken recently from one of the leading daily papers of the State: "It was announced today by Rev., the pastor, that a nominating committee had been appointed to nominate the officers for the coming year, and that the committee would make its report to the congregation on the first Sunday in October. The officers will take charge the first of November, when the new conference year begins." This is a good church management. If you have not tried it, do so. It is the best plan for the election of church officers that we know anything about.

And the installation service! This is important. Please do not forget it or neglect it. The form of service created by the last conference is on page 83 of the Journal. It is simple, to the point, and dignified. Please, brethren, magnify the offices of the church by properly installing the officers.

Can't Fill

We have a few orders for, "Know Your Church," leaflet that we can't fill. Our supply is out. Sorry. We had only 5,000 copies printed,—not enough, of course, for anything like a generous distribution to our 93 charges. But our funds were limited and we hesitated to invest more in this project. We are sure that the ends sought by this leaflet are necessary and timely, and we trust that there may be some measure, at least, in which its purpose may be realized. We have been encouraged by some favorable comments.

Rural Church Contest

The Rural Church contest is on. We read the first paper last week with interest, and we are waiting eagerly for No. 2 this week. Ten weeks of reading on the rural church is unusual, but it is well worthwhile. We predict that all readers all over the conference will be watching weekly for the HERALD. Three competent and impartial judges will decide the contest.

Boundary Committee

We are calling attention again to the meeting of this committee, which will be held in First Church, High Point, October 16, at 1:30 p. m. Rev. G. F. Millaway is chairman of the committee. His address is Liberty, N. C., R. F. D. Please write to him regarding your boundary problems. Or better, attend the meeting, and discuss your problems in person with the committee. This applies to both laymen and ministers. We have some important boundary matters that must be considered, and the committee will welcome all the light possible.

That Resolve

It is not necessary to be reminded that this conference year is rapidly closing; we all know that the sands are running fast. Nor do we need to be told that there is much yet to be done before the year closes. Every pastor and every worker who keeps abreast with his church know that. Our only admonition is to keep our resolve: "Not a week, not a day shall pass without earnest prayer and earnest effort to close this year in the highest honor to God." With every pastor and every church true to that resolve for these remaining weeks, we can say in confidence that the conference and God will be pleased with the results. And surely that is the good end that all of us are seeking.

Bible Study

This is one of the first and last essentials of a successful ministry. A minister's knowledge of the Book he preaches gives him the confidence of his hearers as his knowledge in no other field of study will do. What ever he may or may not know, he is expected to know his Bible. There is nothing that a minister can do that will be more enriching to his own soul; that will supply him with more timely and necessary sermon material; and that will make him more increasingly helpful to his congregation, than a daily, systematic, prayerful study of the Bible. The devil does not have much chance with a pastor who knows how to use his Sword.

EVERY DOLLAR

This is our A. C. B. slogan until November 6. We are far from the realization of it now. The Treasurer's report last week shows that we have raised only $2,592.12 on our assessment of $26,550. This means that many charges have paid but little, or nothing to date. However, we are not discouraged with this. It is our practice to postpone the major part of our payments until the close of the year. Not a good practice, to be sure, but since it is our practice, we are building our hopes on it for this budget. One pastor told us yesterday that Twenty-Six Cents per member would pay, in full, all of the financial obligations of his charge, including pastor's salary.

Surely no charge could ask for a less per capita assessment than that; and surely no charge with an assessment as small as that will fail to pay it. We have pressing needs that must be met out of this budget. No church extension pastor has had a cent from the Board this year; an obligation of $1,500, incurred by the Board, by order of the conference, must be met in a very short time. Our dependence for this is in this budget. The very best that we could do last year for our superannuates was a maximum amount of $190. This is certainly not to our credit. Important appropriations have been made in the interest of church extension that can not be met unless this budget provides the money.

High Point College must be maintained, and $10,000 of this amount is for that purpose.

The needs are urgent and worthy, and our only hope for relief is in this $26,550. All together, now, for Every Dollar of this assessment.

ON COMPROMISE

Let the servants of God beware of anything that savors of compromise. To "take the line of least resistance," to yield a single iota of the truth or to consent to maintain silence with regard to it, to "trim one's sails" in order to gain favor with influential persons, is to play into the enemy's hands. It is to listen to the siren words of Satan and to shut oneself out from the scope of the high aim and purpose of God in connection with the service He has entrusted to us. To accept any "help" from the enemy; to endorse the world's methods; to put oneself under its patronage; to undertake "Christian work" under its auspices; all this has within its shell the kernel of compromise, a thing which is nauseous to the Lord and ruinous to the testimony of His servants.

Let us betake ourselves afresh to the Master's feet and learn of Him what He would have us do and how He would have us do it.—H. P. Barker, in the Witness, London, England.

OUR STORY PAGE

TEDDY'S CHERRY PIE

It certainly was delicious pie, and the best of it was that Teddy himself had helped to make it. Every cherry that went into it had been stoned by his chubby little fingers; and, when the top crust had been carefully laid in place, his mother had allowed him to crimp the edges with a fork before putting it in the big hot oven.
